The lists of information given to an asylum seeker differs depending on the area that they are going to be accomodated in. The lists produced by the Reception and Integration Agency appear to contain adequate information on local community and health services avalible to asylum seekers. Information on obtaining legal assistance would have been given at the port of entry. Further information on local groups is provided within the local hostels where the asylum seekers are accomodated.

Q. 18. B. Is the information provided to the asylum seekers, and if yes, in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

*The information is provided in writing and may be given orally by the staff of the reception centre.

Q. 18. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify if possible the list of languages in which it is available.

There is no legislative requirement to provide this information in a language understood by asylum seekers. The Reception and Integration Agency provides written information in the following languages, Albanian, Arabic, Croatian, Czech, French, Farsi, Polish, Romanian, Russian, Serb-Croat. Detailed information on local organisations within a regional area may not be available in all those languages.

Q. 18. D. How many organisations are active in that field in your Member State?

There are 160 organisations (estimate) active in the asylum and refugee community work field.

Q.19. Documentation of asylum seekers (see article 6):

Q.19. A. What kind of document is delivered to the asylum seeker? Explain the legal value of this document (just a certification of the status as asylum seeker or also prove of identity?) (see §1 of article 6 which is a mandatory provision)

Asylum seekers are issued with a Temporary Residence Certificate which is evidence of a person's application for asylum status, but is not evidence of identity. However the Temporary Residence Certificate Card may be identity for the purposes of registering to vote in local elections and a form of identification when receiving a ballot card under Regulation 3 of the Electoral (Amendment) Regulations 2004 (Statutory Instrument No. 175 of 2004). This docukment is issued immediatley upon registration as an asylum seeker.

Q.19. B. Are there situations or specific cases in which another equivalent document or even no document is issued? (in particular is there an exception for "procedures to decide on the right of the applicant legally to enter the territory" as made possible by §2 of article 6)?

Only upon entry into the State and application for asylum will an individual be issued with a document. However, if there is an issue with regard to the identity of the asylum seeker, s/he may be detained wherein although s/he will be admitted to the asylum process, s/he will not get a Temporary Residence Certificate.

Q.19. C. For how long is this document in principle valid and is it necessary to renew it after a certain period?

The document is valid throughout the length of the refugee status determination process and until the person is granted refugee status, subsidiary status, leave to remain or leaves/is removed from the country.

Q.19. D. What is the deadline for the delivery of that document? Is the mandatory deadline of 3 days set by article 6, §1 respected[511]?

The document is given upon the acceptance of the application for refugee status.

Q.19. E. Is it possible for an asylum seeker to get a travel document for serious humanitarian reasons (see §5 of article 6 which is an optional provision)?

Yes. It is for the Minister for Justice, Equality and Law Reform under section 9(4)(a) of the Refugee Act 1996 (as amended) to give permission for a travel document to be issued to allow an asylum seeker leave the country.

Q.19. F. Is there a central system of registration of asylum seekers and is it or not separate from the registration of aliens? If yes, describe it briefly (content) and indicate in particular if it is an electronic database.

There is a central register for asylum seekers maintained by the Office of the Refugee Applications Commissioner. After registration the asylum seeker will receive a registration number in the form of 69/xxx/xx.

Q.20. Residence of asylum seekers :

Q.20. A. Is in principle an asylum seeker free to move on the entire territory of your Member State or only to a limited part of it and in case, which part? (see article 7, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

In principle noting prevents an asylum seeker from moving freely around the country. However, the asylum seeker is obliged to reside at the accommodation centre. In general, if an asylee is to be absent over night, s/he must inform the owner of the hostel, and may not be absent for more than three consecutive nights without informing the hostel/Reception and Integration Agency. If absent for more than three nights without permission, his/her bed is presumed to be abandoned.

Q.20. B. About the place of residence (see §2 of article 7): explain to which extend the person is free to choose her residence and if this depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance processing of application, attribution of reception conditions,…).

The asylum seeker is not entitled to choose his/her residence at any stage of the asylum process. All asylum applicants are (for the most part) dispersed outside the Dublin area and are obliged to stay and remain in the accommodation which the Reception and Integration Agency (RIA) has provided.

Q.20. C. About the place of reception (meaning where the asylum seeker has to stay to benefit from reception conditions) (see § 4 of article 7): explain which are the general rules about the determination of this place (to which extend are the decisions determining the place taken individually and do they take into account the personal situation of the asylum seeker?) and to which extend the person is free to choose it and if it depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance attribution of reception conditions, processing of the application,…).

An asylum seeker is not free to choose either the place or type of reception centre which s/he may be sent to. The Reception and Integration Agency decides where each asylee (and any dependents) may be sent to. An asylum seeker may request to be moved to a different reception centre, however it is for the Reception and Integration Agency in their absolute discretion to accede to this request. Ministerial Circular 04/03 states that direct provision caters for the needs of all asylum seekers including those who are pregnant and those with a disability. If an asylum seeker does not remain in the accomodation centre, then s/he will lose all social support.

Q.20. D. If all asylum seekers are not placed in accommodation centres because of capacity limits, explain how the persons are distributed between accommodation centres and other accommodation facilities (which authority takes the decisions, on the basis of which elements, can that decision be appealed by the asylum seeker,…)

All asylum seekers are currently placed in direct provision accommodation centres. No issues of formal appeals arise at all under the Irish system for reception of asylum seekers.

Q.20. E. How can an asylum seeker ask to leave temporarily the place of residence or of reception or an assigned area? How is the individual AND impartial character of the decision ensured? (see §5 of article 7 which is a mandatory provision)

An asylum seeker may inform the hostel owner that s/he intends to leave the hostel overnight and if absent for more than three consecutive nights without informing the hostel owner/Reception and Integration Agency, then his/her/the family's bed(s) are presumed to be abandoned. UNHCR has expressed concern about the lack of any standard rules and/or information on who the asylum seeker should ask for a leave of absence and feel the system is on a very ad hoc basis.

If an asylum seeker is obliged under the Refugee Act, 1996 (as amended) to stay in a certain place, then only permission from the immigration officer or a judge of the District Court must be received before the asylum seeker can leave the accommodation/area.

Q.21. Q.21. A. Do rules on reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions exist in internal legislation and if yes in which cases (mention in particular if there are cases not foreseen by article 16, § 1 and 2 which are optional provisions)? Distinguish in your answer between cases of reduction and withdrawal and explain which conditions can be reduced and if access to emergency health care is always ensured as requested by article 16, §4, last sentence.

There are no legislative rules for the reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions. These rules exist in practice. If an asylum seeker is absent from his accommodation without permission, then the Reception and Integration Agency may withdraw the right of the asylum seeker to reside within the accommodation centre. Internal appeals mechanisms exist if the asylum seeker seeks to re-enter the accommodation centre. The decisions are usually taken on an individual basis, however this may have detrimental impacts on a family unit who leaves the hostel, where support may be refused for children and partners who were pressurised (or made) leave by their spouse. If an individual seeks to re-enter the accommodation centre and to receive payments, these will usually be restored once an explanation is given for the absence. However, it must be noted that there are no legislative rules which guide this process whatsoever. There have been a number of cases where upon re-entering the accommodation centre, the supplementary welfare allowance is refused. A number of individual cases which have been highlighted by an Irish Non-Governmental Organisation, NASC, The Irish Immigration Support Centre, of families who have been refused any monetary assistance for periods between 6 months and 1 year, even after a written apology/explanation for absence or breach of conditions (i.e. working while legislatively barred from doing so). A lack of fair procedures and natural justice seems to be inherent within this system. A right to free health care cannot be removed.

Q.21. B. Has article 16, §2 dealing with refusal of reception conditions for unreasonably late applications for asylum been transposed by your Member State (or was this case already applicable before transposition)? Are there cases in practice?

There does not appear to be any rules which refuse reception conditions to asylum seekers where there application is deemed to be made later than was 'reasonably practicable.'

Q.21. C. How is it ensured that decisions of reduction or withdrawal are taken individually, objectively AND in particular impartially (for instance through and independent arbitrator) (see article 16, §4 which is a mandatory provision)?

There are some issues surrounding the individual nature of the withdrawal of support. Family units are treated as one and therefore a breach of residence or violation of a conditions for support (i.e. entering employment) by the principle beneficiary will impact harsly on dependents. Standard form letters are often issued asking a person to explain the reason for breaching such conditions. The Reception and Integration Agency is responsible for the withdrawl of the accomodation, and there appears to be no formal and independent structure in place to assess the accurency of any withdrawl. However, it also appears that once an explaination is provided, accomodation is restored. The withdrawal of the supplementary welfare allowance can be made by a superintendent Community Welfare Officer at the HSE. Once again standard form letters are sent to the individual requestion an explaination. Usually, payment is restored after an explaination is provided, however this is very much ad hoc and may not be reflective of the national picture. Indeed a number of cases which have come to the attention of NASC, the Irish Immigrant Support Centre, of families who have been refused any monetary assistance for periods between 6 months and 1 year, even after a written apology/explanation for absence or breach of conditions (i.e. working while legislatively barred from doing so). A lack of fair procedures and natural justice seems to be inherent within this system. The Irish Refugee Council has noted that 'house rules' exist, and UNHCR have expressed their concern about the seemingly ad hoc nature of application of these rules and the different application of these rules from hostel to hostel.

Q.21. D. Is statement 14/03 adopted by the Council at the same moment as the directive respected (see the document attached to our sending)?

Q.21. E. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements on cases of reduction, withdrawal or refusal which have been taken, and if yes, what has been the outcome?

While the Reception and Integration Agency and the Health Services executive have made decisions on reducing/withdrawing/restoring reception conditions, there is no formal published decision on these issues. There have been no cases taken to the High Court in relation to the reducation/withdrawal or restoration of benefits.

Q.22. Q.22. A. Appeal against a negative decision relating to the granting of benefits or based on article 7 (see article 21 which is a mandatory provision): indicate against which decision an appeal can be introduced, describe the system of appeal in general and include in particular in your answer the information given to asylum seekers about possibilities of appealing, deadline for appealing, if the appeal has or not a suspensive effect, if there are different steps (for instance first an administrative appeal and in particular if the guarantee of an appeal before a judicial body in the last instance is respected)?

In relation to article 7 and the right to move freely, an asylum seeker whose movements are restricted may re-apply to the District Court judge who imposed such restrictions to have them lifted/amended etc. If the judge refuses this, the the applicant may appeal by way of judicial review to the High Court.

In relation to appealing the removal of accomodation and/or supplementary welfare allowance : The Reception and Integration Agency is responsible for the withdrawl of the accomodation, and there appears to be no formal and independent structure in place to assess the accurency of any withdrawl. However, it also appears that once an explaination id provided, accomodation is restored. The withdrawal of the supplementary welfare allowance can be made by a superintendent Community Welfare Officer at the HSE. Once again standard form letters are sent to the individual requestion an explaination. Usually, payment is restored after an explaination is provided, however this is very much ad hoc and may not be reflective of the national picture. Indeed a number of cases which have come to the attention of NASC, the Irish Immigrant Support Centre, of families who have been refused any monetary assistance for periods between 6 months and 1 year, even after a written apology/explanation for absence or breach of conditions (i.e. working while legislatively barred from doing so). A lack of fair procedures and natural justice seems to be inherent within this system.

Q.22. B. Explain which are the possibilities for asylum seekers to benefit from legal assistance when they introduce such an appeal (see article 21, §2 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to Member States)?

The ability for the asylum seeker to engage in legal assistance is very limited. The asylum seeker is entitled to legal aid under the Civil Legal Aid Act, 1997 (as there is no citizenship, residence requirement), however with waiting times of over eight weeks to first consultation the adequacy of such a system must be questioned. Furthermore the practice of the Legal Aid Board is to generally refuse asylum seekers any legal advice.

Q.22. C. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

While the Reception and Integration Agency and the Health Services executive have made decisions on reducing/withdrawing/restoring reception conditions, there is no formal published decision on these issues. There have been no cases taken to the High Court in relation to the reducation/withdrawal or restoration of benefits.

Q.22. D. Is a mechanism of complain for asylum seekers about quality of receptions conditions in general (even if they are not personally concerned) organised? If yes, before which authority? Is it linked to the system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions (see below question n° 39)?

A new complaints procedure document was adopted in July 2007- Direct Provision Reception and Accommodation Centre Services, Rules and Procedures*. Where an asylee is not recieving the services which the accommodation centre is obliged to provide, if informal resolution is not possible, she may bring a formal complaint before the Reception and Integration Agency. The Agency can recommend remedial action if the complaint is upheld.*

In relation to the level and adequacy of the cash payments, in general, no recourse is avalible for asylees to argue that they should be increased given that they generally will not have habitual residence status. However UNHCR have stated that asylum seekers have expressed their concerns on the complaints mechanism, in particular complaintants may simply be moved (without choice) to another reception centre.

6. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.23. Family unity of asylum seekers: define how a family is defined in relation with article 2, (d) which is a mandatory provision and explain how housing is provided to a family (see articles 8 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to member States and 14, §2, (a) which is a mandatory provision).

Family members are defined in line with article 2(d) of the Reception Conditions directive. While prior to 2003 asylum seeking families were sometimes catered for in private housing, now all asylum seekers are within direct provision accommodation centres.

Q.24. Q.24. A. How is housing of asylum seekers organised: describe the system in general and indicate in particular what is the most frequently system used (see article 14, §1 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space for Member States; distinguish between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels places or other premises).

There are forty nine direct provision accommodation centres in total. Forty two of these are private and seven are State owned. These centres are hotels, hostels, guesthouses, former convents, former nursing homes, mobile home sites and apartments.

Q.24. B. What is the total number of available places for asylum seekers? Distinguish in your answer between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels or other premises.

It is not possible to answer this question.

Q.24. C. Is this number of places for asylum seekers sufficient in general or frequently insufficient?

The number of places appears to be sufficient as in the last 12 months a number of accommodation centres have been shut due to a lack of demand.

Q.24. D. Are there special measures foreseen in urgent cases of a high number of news arrivals of asylum seekers (outside the case of application of the directive on temporary protection)?

The Reception and Integration Agency has access to 500 extra beds should the need arise.

Q.25. Accommodation centres (important note: all the following questions are about open and not closed centres where asylum seekers are detained which are covered by another question)

Q.25. A Are there different categories of accommodation centres, for instance depending of the stage of the procedure (admissibility and eligibility)?

No.

Q.25. B. Is there a legal time limit for accommodation in a centre after which the asylum seekers have access to private houses or apartments or is this limit linked to a stage of the asylum procedure?

No.

Q.25. C. Is there a general regulation about the internal functioning of those centres and the rights and duties of the asylum seekers? If yes, is this general regulation applicable to public and private centres? If not, are the centres supposed to adopt an internal regulation and does a central authority have or not a kind of control about its content?

The Accomodation Procurement Unit within the Reception and Integration Agency sets criteria for initial determination of suitability of accommodation. There is on-site assessment of suitability of accommodation and inspections of accommodation centres to ensure adherence to contractual obligations in relation to health, safety and minimum standards within the accomodation centre.

The rights and duties of asylum seekers are communicated to them when they first make their asylum claim and are also set out in the 'House Rules' in the document Direct Provision Reception and Accommodation Centre Services, Rules and Procedures . Each accommodation centre is obliged to provide the asylum seeker with the following benefits and services, including inter alia : safe and hospitable accommodation, treating of applicants with dignity and respect , provision of breakfast, lunch and dinner and infant formula and baby foods, to cater for special dietary requirements , to provide a packed lunch for school-going children, to provide a person with tea and coffee making facilities. Furthermore, the Centre is to provide a person with laundry facilities, hygiene products, room cleaning, bed linen and towels, to provide free or at a nominal charge leisure facilities and to treat all complaints seriously and impartially.

There are 23 general 'House Rules' including the obligation to adhere to the rules within Direct Provision Reception and Accommodation Centre Services, Rules and Procedures. Duties include moving to a new room when requested, to treat all persons with dignity and respect, to respect property of others, to keep the bedroom clean and tidy, not to store food or cook food in the centre, not to consume alcohol or illegal drugs on the premises, not to engage in criminal activity, to ensure that their children attend school, to inform management of absences, to notify the manager if you are moving out of the centre permanently, to take care of children and to protect your children.

Where a complaint is made that the asylum seeker is failing to abide by the House Rules, there is first to be an attempt to resolve the matter informally at the accommodation centre. If this is not successful, then a formal procedure will be initiated. If the offending behaviour persists, then the Manager of the accommodation centre is to contact the Reception and Integration Agency. The asylee will be given a chance to respond to the accusations. If a decision is taken to transfer the asylum seeker, she will have two working days to make further representations to the Reception and Integration Agency. In circumstances of 'extreme gravity' the Reception and Integration Agency reserves the right to expel an asylee from the direct provision system. In circumstances of extreme gravity

Q.25. D. Do the regulations foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers in case of breach of the rules? (see article 16, §3) If yes, which sanctions for which rules? Which is the competent authority to decide? How is it ensured that decisions are taken individually, objectively and in particular impartially (for instance through an independent arbitrator) as requested by §4 of article 21 which is mandatory provision*?* Which are the possibilities of appealing against those decisions if the system is different from the general one under question n°22? Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

The system for sanctions for breach of rules is outlined in the house rules above. As stated above, possibilities for appeals are limited to internal reviews; with the only option for an independent review being to the Irish High Court by way of judicial review.

Q.25. E. Are asylum seekers involved in the management of these centres? If yes, how (advisory board, appointment or election of representatives)? (see article 14, §6 which is an option provision)

No.

Q.25. F. Do specific rules exist on work of asylum seekers inside the accommodation centres different from the general ones about employment (see below)? If yes, which ones? Can working inside accommodation centres be considered as a (mandatory) contribution of the asylum seekers to the management of the centres, is it or not paid and considered as implying access to the labour market and subject to the same rules?

No. Asylum seekers do not work inside the accommodation centres. There is a general obligation to keep their personal spaces clean and tidy.

Q.26. Q.26. A. How can asylum seekers communicate with legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGOs? (see article 14, §2, (b) which is a mandatory provision).

Asylum seekers are free to contact their legal representatives, UNHCR and NGOs.

Q.26. B. What are the rules about access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs regarding access to accommodation centres and other housing facilities (see article 14, §7 which is a mandatory provision)

UNHCR and legal advisers can have access to the accommodation centre for the purpose of assisting asylum seekers. There is no legal entitlement for NGOs to access these accommodation centres.

Q.26. C. Can the access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs be limited for security reasons or any other reason (see article 14, §7, last sentence)?

There are no legal limitations in place which purport to prevent access to the UNHCR and/or a legal representative to the accommodation centre for the purpose of assisting asylum seekers.

Q.27. Q.27. A. Is a medical screening organised by the receiving State, is it mandatory or voluntary? Does it include HIV tests? (see article 9 which is an optional provision)

Medical screening is organised by Ireland. This screening is voluntary and includes a HIV test.

Q.27. B. Do the legal provisions on reception conditions ensure that asylum seekers receive at least emergency care and essential treatment of illness as requested by article 15 §1 which is a mandatory provision? Do they have a further access to health care?

Asylum seekers are entitled to receive all types of medical care as that of a citizen/legal resident within the country. Asylum seekers have a medical card which gives them the right to free medical care including the provision of free proscription drugs.

Q.27. C. What is the practice regarding access of asylum seekers to health care and how is it organised? In particular, what is the situation in accommodation centres (are doctors coming to the centres or do asylum seekers go to doctors outside)?

Asylum seekers receive a medical card which entitles them to visit a General Practitioner or a hospital free of charge. Prescription drugs are also free of charge. Asylum seekers must visit doctors in the locality in which the accommodation centre is based.

Q.28. Q.28. A. What is the length of the period determined by the concerned Member State during which asylum seekers have no access to the labour market? (see article 11 which is a mandatory provision)

Under section 9(4)(b) of the Refugee Act 1996 (as amended) an asylum seeker is legislatively barred from entering employment at any time during his/her refugee claim.

Q.28. B. After that period, are asylum seekers or not obliged to obtain a work permit? In case is there a limit for the administration to deliver the permits and how quick are they delivered? What is their length?

Under section 9(4)(b) of the Refugee Act 1996 (as amended) an asylum seeker is legislatively barred from entering employment at any time during his/her refugee claim.

Q.28. C. After that period, what are the conditions for access of the asylum seekers to the labour market? (in particular, are there rules concerning the maximum allowed of working hours or days per week, month or year, limits in terms of type of work or of professions authorised?

Under section 9(4)(b) of the Refugee Act 1996 (as amended) an asylum seeker is legislatively barred from entering employment at any time during his/her refugee claim.

Q.28. D. What are the rules in terms of priorities between asylum seekers on the one hand and nationals, EU or EEE citizens and legally third-country nationals on the other?

Under section 9(4)(b) of the Refugee Act 1996 (as amended) an asylum seeker is legislatively barred from entering employment at any time during his/her refugee claim.

Q.28. E. Do asylum seekers have access to vocational training, does this or not depend of their right to access to the labour market, and in case at which conditions? (see article 12 which is optional regarding §1 and mandatory regarding § 2)

Asylum seekers are barred from entering vocational training in Ireland.

Q.28. F. Are the rules regarding access to the labour market adopted to transpose the directive more or less generous than the ones applicable previously?

The rules within the Directive on 'employment' under article 11 are generally more favourable than Irish law. Irish law has always adopted this restrictive approach towards labour and vocational training for asylum seekers.

Q.29. Are reception conditions subject to the fact that asylum seekers do not have sufficient resources? Are asylum seekers requested to contribute to reception conditions when they have personal resources (for instance if they work) or to refund the authorities if it appears that they have resources? (see article 13 §§ 3 and 4 which are optional provisions)

Reception conditions are not subject to the fact that asylum seekers do not have sufficient resources. Asylum seekers are not requested to contribute to their reception conditions.

7. SPECIAL NEEDS OF PARTICULAR CATEGORIES OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.30.

Q.30.A. Which of the different categories of persons with special needs considered in the directive are taken into account in the national legislation (see article 17, §1 which is a mandatory provision): disabled people, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence? Include in your answer all other categories envisaged in national law.

Prior to May 1st 2003 asylum seekers with special needs, illness, families, nursing mothers were allowed to seek private rented accommodation. However after this date, in Ministerial Circular 04/03 it was stated that the needs of all asylum seekers are now catered for within the direct provision system. There is no system in place other than direct provision for the special needs of particular categories of asylum seekers.

Q.30. B. How is their specific situation taken into account (see articles 13, §2, second indent, 16 §4 second sentence and 17 which are mandatory provisions)?

Since 2003, the the needs of all asylum seekers are now catered for within the direct provision system. There is no system in place other than direct provision for the special needs of particular categories of asylum seekers.

Q.30. C. How and when are the special needs of the concerned persons supposed to be legally identified (see article 17 § 2 which is a mandatory provision and clarify how it has been interpreted by transposition)?

There are no legal measures regarding the identification of special needs in asylum applicants.

Q.30. D. Is the necessary medical and other assistance provided to persons with special needs as requested by article 15, §2 which is a mandatory provision and in particular to victims of torture and violence as requested by article 20 which is a mandatory provision?

Minors, the disabled, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children and persons who have been subjected to torture, rape or other serious forms of psychological, physical and sexual violence are entitled to free medical and if needed psychiatric care on the public health service.

Q.31. About minors:

Q.31. A. Till which age are asylum seekers considered to be minor?

An asylum seeker is considered a minor until s/he is 18 years of age.

Q.31. B. How is access of minor asylum seekers to the education system ensured? Is it at school or in case inside accommodation centres and can it be considered as similar to the conditions for nationals as requested by article 10, §1?

All minors are legal obliged to attend school from the ages of 6 to 16. Asylum seekers are educated along with Irish nationals and other residents.

Q.31. C. Is access to education ensured not later than 3 months as requested by article 10, §2 (or after maximum one year if specific education for asylum seekers is provided) and till an expulsion decision is really enforced?

Access to education is compulsory from the time the minor arrives in the accommodation centre until such time as an expulsion decision is enforced.

Q.31. D. Is specific education (like language classes) available for asylum seekers, in particular to facilitate their effective access to the education system of the reception Member State (see article 10, §2 which is an optional provision)?

Asylum seekers are educated alongside Irish nationals and other residents. Language support provision may be, depending on the number of non-English speaking foreign nationals in the school, provided.

Q.31. E. Are minors in general accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them? (see article 14, § 3)

Yes

Q.31. F. Do minors with special needs enumerated by article 18, §2 which is a mandatory provision, have access to appropriate mental health care and qualified counselling?

Yes

Q.31. G. How and when is organised the representation of unaccompanied minors (guardianship, special organisation) and regularly assessed? (see article 19, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

If a minor arrives within the State and s/he appears to be unaccompanied, the State body, the Health Services Executive is responsible for the care of the child, including making an asylum claim on behalf of the child. The Health Services Executive may place the child with family members, within asylum child specific accommodation, within a foster family or possibly within a general child residential unit. In general, most unaccompanied minors will be placed either with relatives or within an unaccompanied minor's hostel. The Irish Refugee Council has expressed concerns about the system of supervision of unaccompanied minors, where no/little support is available after 5 p.m. on weekdays and over the whole weekend. When placed within child accommodation centres, questions have been raised about the qualifications of staff and the disparity of care in public centres and those run by private enterprise.

Q.31. H. How is placement of unaccompanied minors organised (with adult relatives, a foster family, in special accommodation centres or other suitable accommodation)? (see article 19, §2 which is mandatory provision)

The minor may be placed with adult relatives, a foster family, within residential care, or possibly within a child reception hostel by the Health Services Executive. The decision is to be taken on the basis of the 'best interests of the child' principle.

Q.31. I. How is the tracing of the family members of the unaccompanied minors organised? Are measures taken to protect confidentiality of information when necessary? (see article 19, §3 which is a mandatory provision)

The Irish Red Cross handles family tracing. However it has limited resources, it has no interpreter facilities and no 'detailed child-centred tracing methodology in place'. Tracing is to be avoided if it would be contrary to the best interests of the child or jeopardise the fundamental rights of those being traced. UNHCR has in some ways criticised the methodology of the tracing. The application must be made on behalf of the child and the child is not interviewed directly.

8. EXCEPTIONAL MODALITIES OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.32. Apart from detention covered by the next question, are there exceptional modalities for reception conditions in the following cases and if yes, which ones and for how long are they applicable, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)?

Q.32. A. Persons with specific or special needs, regarding in particular the period of assessment of those needs?

No

Q.32. B. Non availability of reception conditions in certain areas

No

Q.32. C. Temporarily exhaustion of normal housing capacities

No

Q.32. D. The asylum seeker is confined to a border post

No

Q.32. E. All other cases not mentioned in the directive (for instance urgent situation in case of a sudden high number of applicants outside a case of application of the directive on temporary protection).

No

Q.33. Detention of asylum seekers (we do not cover the situation of rejected asylum seekers detained for the purpose of their return) (see articles 6 §2, 7 §3, 13, §2 2nd indent and 14 §8 which implies that the directive is in principle applicable in case of detention):

Q.33. A. In which cases or circumstances and for which reasons[1] (identity verification in particular if the persons have no or false documents, protection of public order or national security, refugee status determination, way of entry into the territory, etc) can an asylum seeker be detained during the asylum procedure till his request has been finally rejected. Quote precisely in English in your answer the legal basis for detention of asylum seekers in national law.

[1] Please specify if article 18 §1 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Member States shall not hold a person in detention for the sole reason that he/she is an applicant for asylum" is or not respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed).

Under section 9(8) of the Refugee Act 1996 (as amended) if an immigration officer of a member of the Irish Police Force (An Garda Siochána) suspects an asylum seeker poses a threat to national security or public order in the State; has committed a serious non-political crime outside the State; has not made reasonable efforts to establish his or her true identity; intends to avoid removal from the State in the event of his or her application for asylum is transferred under the Dublin Convention; intends to leave the Irish State and enter another state without lawful authority; without reasonable cause destroyed his/her identity or travel documents or is in possession of forged identity documents, s/he may be detained. This detention may be authorised for a period of 21 days and must be re-instituted every 21 days.

Q.33. B. Has your member State adopted measures to transpose §3 of article 7 which is an optional provision? If yes, how has this provision been legally understood (is it a case of detention or an obligation to stay in and not leave a certain place?) and for which reasons can an asylum seeker be "confined" in such a place?

Ireland is not a party to the Reception Conditions Directive however under section 9(10a)(b)(ii) of the Refugee Act, 1996 (as amended) instead of committing an asylum seeker to a place of detention, a District Court judge may impose a number of conditions on the asylum seeker including that s/he remain in a particular district/place, that s/he reports to the Irish Police Force (An Garda Siochána) at regular intervals, surrender any passport or travel document which s/he may be in possession of. Ireland respects article 18(1) of the Asylum Procedures Directive.

Q.33. C. Are there legally alternatives to detention, like obligation to report to the authorities, obligation to stay in a place, provision of a guarantor or of a financial guarantee?

Under section 9(10a) (b) (ii) of the Refugee Act, 1996 (as amended) instead of committing an asylum seeker to a place of detention, a District Court judge may impose a number of conditions on the asylum seeker including that s/he remain in a particular district/place, that s/he reports to the Irish Police Force (An Garda Siochána) at regular intervals, surrender any passport or travel document which s/he may be in possession of.

Q.33. D. Which is the competent authority to order the detention of an asylum seeker? Explain if different authorities are involved to first take and later confirm the decision.

An immigration officer or a member of the Irish Police Force (An Garda Siochána) are competent to detain an applicant, however he must be brought before a judge of the District Court as soon as is practicable and the District Court judge will review the decision of the immigration officer or member of An Garda Siochána.

Q.33. E. For how long and till which stage of the asylum procedure can an asylum seeker be detained?

Each period of detention can last no more than 21 days and may be ended at any time during that period if an immigration officer or member of the Irish Police Force (An Garda Siochána) who is of the opinion that section 9(8) does not apply (or no longer applies) may bring the asylee before the District Court and if the judge is of the opinion that article 9(8) does not apply (no longer applies) then the asylum seeker will be released from detention. It may be the case that the asylum seeker can be detained for the whole refugee status determination procedure.

Q.33. F. In which places (can we call them "closed centres"?) are asylum seekers detained (places in a special closed centres reserved only to asylum seekers, together with returnees like illegal aliens or even in a normal prison, in case within separated areas or with the other detainees)? Indicate if a difference has to be made following the location of the "closed centres" at the border or on the territory? Which is the authority managing those places and is it the same as the one in charge of reception conditions?

Asylum seekers are detained in prisons within the State, usually (but not always) segregated from other detainees. There are no 'closed centres' at the border of the territory.

Q.33. G. Does UNHCR and NGOs have access to the places of detention and under which conditions?

The UNHCR can request and will be granted access to the places of detention to visit an asylum seeker (or asylum seekers) in detention. NGOs have no right of access.

Q.33. H. What appeal(s) can asylum seekers introduce against the fact he is detained? Is article 18 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Where an applicant for asylum is held in detention, Member States shall ensure that there is a possibility of speedy judicial review" respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed)?

Article 18(1) of the Procedures Directive is respected. If an asylum seeker believes his detention is unwarranted, and then he may appeal to the High Court to have the decision of the District Court judicially reviewed, alternatively the asylum seeker could initiate haebus corpus proceedings.

Q.33. I. Is the directive on reception conditions considered to be in principle applicable to the places where asylum seekers are detained? In particular which information do they receive about their rights, which access do they have to legal advice and health care?

The Reception Conditions Directive is not applicable within Ireland. Asylum seekers in detention would not be entitled to the supplementary welfare allowance payment however would have access to their legal representative and also to health care.

Q.33. J. Apart from freedom of movement, what are the main differences between normal reception conditions and exceptional modalities for reception conditions in case of detention, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)? If it is about closed centres, are the regulations of those places in line with the requirements of the directive (is article 13, §2, second indent of the directive following which "Member States shall ensure that standards of living is met (…) in relation to the situation of persons who are in detention" respected?).

There are no exceptional modalities of reception conditions within Ireland.

Q.33. K. Are measures taken to avoid detention of asylum seekers with special needs (if yes, which ones?) or are special measures taken because of their needs?

There is no legislation within Ireland which states an obligation to avoid detention of asylum seekers with special needs.

Q.33. L. Can minor asylum seekers be detained together with relatives? Can unaccompanied minor asylum seekers be detained? If yes, are there special measures which take into account that children are concerned?

Minor asylum seekers cannot be detained. Unaccompanied minors cannot be detained.

Q.33. M. In particular is article 10 regarding access to education of minors respected in those places?

Minor asylum seekers cannot be detained. Unaccompanied minors cannot be detained.

Q.33. N. How many asylum seekers are for the moment detained in your Member State? Which proportion does this represent in comparison of the total number of asylum seekers at the same moment?

There are no national figures available to answer this question. UNHCR is not aware of any such figures and believes that people who seek asylum would simply be classed as immigrant detainees who violated immigration law.

9. ORGANISATION OF THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.34. Explain if the system of providing reception conditions is centralised or decentralised (which levels of government do provide practically reception conditions?) (do not confuse this question with question number 3 about the competence to make rules about reception conditions).

The system for providing support is centralised. The Reception and Integration Agency is located within the Department of Justice, Equality and Law Reform and is responsible for sourcing and providing direct provision (bed and board) accommodation to asylum seekers. Asylum seekers receive their monetary allowance from the Health Services Executive. There may still be a small number of asylum seekers in receipt of social assistance payments from the Department of Social and Family Affairs, or who are in private rented accommodation and receiving rent supplement from the Health Services Executive.

Q.35. In case, are accommodation centres public or/and private (managed by NGOs? If yes, are the NGOs financially supported by the State?)

Centres are both publicly and privately managed. NGOs do not manage any accommodation centres in the State.

Q.36. In case, how many accommodation centres are there in your Member State (distinguish in your answer between public and private centres)?

There are forty-nine accommodation centres in Ireland. There are forty two privately run accommodation centres and seven State owned and run centres.

Q.37. Is there in the legislation a plan or are there rules in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory of your Member State to avoid their concentration in some areas like big cities or to share the costs of their reception between central, regional and local authorities?

There is general governmental policy to disperse asylum seekers away from the capital, Dublin, into regional centres. The central government bears the cost of reception conditions.

Q.38. Does a central body representing all the actors (like NGOs) involved in reception conditions exist? Does it play a consultative role for the State authorities, a coordination role for the actors or any other role?

No.

Q.39. Q.39. A. Which is the body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions as requested by article 23 which is mandatory provision? Include in your answer which is the competent ministry (Interior, Social affairs, etc) for reception conditions?

The competent body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions is the Reception and Integration Agency (RIA), in particluar the Operations Unit, located within the Depratment of Justice, Equality and Law Reform.

Q.39. B. Has your Member State (like the Czech Republic did recently) approved quality standards (not necessary legally binding) for housing services (for instance about the number of persons per bedroom on the basis of its size, number of accessible toilets, bathrooms, showers and washing machines per number of persons, existence of common rooms with radio, television, newspapers, books, computers, accessibility of telephone, existence of recreative rooms for children,…) to be respected in particular in accommodation centres?

There are no publicly available quality standards which apply to these accommodation centres. However, Direct Provision Reception and Accommodation Centre Services, Rules and Procedures suggest that certain minimum standards must be observed at the all accommodation centres.

Q.39. C. How is this system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions organised?

According to the Reception and Integration Agency they have a full system for the guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions, with inspections taking place at accommodation centres to ensure consistency and standards.

Q.39. D. Does the body in charge of guidance, control and monitoring produce reports about the level of reception conditions? If yes, how frequently and are they public?

No there are no public reports on level of reception centres.

Q.40. Q.40. A. What is the total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions for the last year for which figures are available (see article 22 obliging Member States to calculate those statistics about which we also asked the Commission to require them from Member States for mid June)?

The final figures available are from 2005, where there were 6,785 people accommodated in direct provision.

Q.40. B. What is the total budget of reception conditions in euro for the last year for which figures are available?

The Reception and Integration Agency's costs for 2004-2006 are as follows:

2004: €83.63 million
2005: €84.38 million
2006: €78.728 million

Normal 'set-up' costs are borne by the commercial operator. This figure does not include the stipend payment which asylum seekers receive. This figure does not quantify the free medical treatment which asylum seekers are entitled to.

Q.40. C. What is the average cost of reception conditions in euro per asylum seeker for the last year for which figures are available?

The average cost of reception conditions per asylum seeker is difficult to ascertain as no figures exist which give us a total figure for the stipend payments which asylum seekers receive, or quantify in a monetary figure the medical treatment which asylees are entitled to.

Q.40. D Are the costs of reception conditions of asylum seekers supported by the central/federal or federated government or are they shared with regional and/or local authorities?

The cost is fully borne by the central Irish government.

Q.40. E. Is article 24 § 2 of the directive following which "Member States shall allocate the necessary resources in connection with the nationals provisions enacted to implement this directive" respected?

Ireland is not a party to the Reception Conditions directive.

Q.41. Q.41. A. What is the total number of persons working for reception conditions?

Within the Reception and Integration Agency there are 65 staff working directly within this agency. The Reception and Integration Agency does not keep definitive records on the numbers of persons employed at direct provision accommodation centres. However, the Reception and Integration Agency reckon this is around 1300-1500 persons work within these accommodation centres.

Q.41. B. How is the training of persons working in accommodation centres organised? Does it take into account specific needs of unaccompanied minors when relevant as well as the gender dimension? (see article 14 §5, 19 § 4 and also 24 §1 which are mandatory provisions)?

From a freedom of information request, the Reception and Integration Agency has provided the following comments on training of persons working within accommodation centres:

"The Staff of the Reception and Integration Agency have access to Training Programmes organised through the Training Unit of the Department of Justice, Equality and Law Reform. In addition the RIA has undertaken a programme of training for the Agency staff and for staff at accommodation centres. The first sessions of training were undertaken as part of a programme of seminars in late 2006 and early 2007. More comprehensive training sessions in relation to conflict resolution and anger management have been undertaken in 2007 for staff of the Agency. It is envisaged that training will be expanded on a regional basis to centre staff in 2007."

Q.41. C. Are there rules about the deontology of persons working in accommodation centres, in particular on confidentiality?

The Reception and Integration Agency has in place a "Code of Practice for persons working in accommodation centres." This Code of Practice states that behaviour or language which discriminates on the grounds of age, disability, family status, gender, marital status, political belief, race, religion, sexual orientation and social status is prohibited. Bullying and harassment, derogatory remarks, destructive criticism, embarrassment, humiliation, favouritism racism, sarcasm and sexual innuendo and harassment are unacceptable. There are then general guidelines which persons working in accommodation services must observe:

- There should be a high standard of personal practice, which relates to safety of asylees, adhering to Child Protection Guidelines and documentation of unusual events. Those working in accommodation centres must not abuse, harm, exploit, abuse trust, discriminate or form inappropriate relationships with asylum seekers (who are described as 'service users' in the Code of Practice);
- Those working in accommodation centres should respect the rights, dignity and worth of every human being and promote the interests of service users. This includes respect for privacy and respecting to the greatest extent possible the views of asylees;
- Must strive to establish and maintain the trust and confidence of the service users. This includes inter alia being honest and trustworthy, respecting confidentiality and being reliable and dependent.
- Promote the independence of the service users;
- Respect the rights of service users while ensuring their behaviour does not harm themselves or other people;
- Being accountable for quality of their work.

In relation to punishment for breaches of these guidelines, this is to be dealt with by the management of the accommodation centre.

10. IMPACT OF THE DIRECTIVE

Legal impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.42. Specify if there are or not big problems with the translation of the directive in the official language of your Member State and give in case a list of the worst examples of provisions which have been badly translated? (please note that this question has in particular been added to the questionnaire concerning the new Member States)

Ireland is not a party to the Reception Conditions Directive.

Q.43. Where there precise legal rules on reception conditions for asylum seekers before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the directive (if yes, specify what the nature of those rules was (legislation, regulation, administrative instructions,…)?

Ireland is not a party to the Reception Conditions Directive.

Q.44. Did the legal rules applicable to reception conditions become more clear, precise, coherent or detailed with the adoption of the transposition norms (for instance do you now have after the transposition one basic text dealing with reception conditions instead of numerous different texts in the past?

Ireland is not a party to the Reception Conditions Directive.

Q.45. Did the transposition of the directive imply important changes in national law or were the changes of minor importance? In case, list the most important changes that have been introduced.

Ireland is not a party to the Reception Conditions Directive.

Political impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.46. Explain briefly if there has been an important debate about the transposition of the directive (in particular in the Parliament, but possibly also in the government, between political parties, including in medias, etc; underline in case the main points which have been discussed or have created difficulties)

Ireland is not a party to the Reception Conditions Directive.

Q.47. Did the transposition of the directive contribute to make the internal rules stricter or more generous? In particular, did your Member State use the occasion of the transposition to abolish more favourable provisions of national law? Does your Member State still have rules more favourable than the provisions of the directive (if yes, try to give the more important examples).

Ireland is not a party to the Reception Conditions Directive.

11. ANY OTHER INTERESTING ELEMENT

Q.48. What are in your view the weaknesses and strengths of the system of reception conditions in your Member State?

Strengths:

The main strength of the direct provision system is having an organisation which can co-ordinate policy regarding the reception of asylum seekers.

Weaknesses :

Unfourtunately, there are many more weaknesses than strengths in the current reception system for asylum seekers. The major weakness with the system within Ireland is the fact that there is no legislative right for asylum seekers to be entitled to such support. When support is withdrawn, an Ad Hoc appeals system is in place to internally review such decisions. The Reception and Integration Agency is located within the Department of Justice, Equality and Law Reform. The question must be posed as to why this agency is not located within the Ministry for Social and Family Affairs which is the central authority which administers traditional social welfare payments. The reception system may be seen as a tool to control immigration and this may reflect the fact that it is a more penal system than the traditional welfare state.

Asylum seekers are legislatively barred from seeking or entering work at means that throughout the refugee determination process, asylum seekers are wholly dependent on the State. Some asylum seekers have been within the direct provision system since the year 2000. Although many of their claims have been dismissed, they may be going through the humanitarian leave to remain process which can take an exceptionally long period of time. The level of cash payment to asylum seekers (€19.10 per adult and €9.60 per each dependent child) has remained the same since the year 2000 and has not increased in line with general inflation. This level of payment is not sufficent to leave with dignity within Ireland.

The lack of a human rights based approach to the reception of asylum seekers, wherein their basic and fundamental needs are seen as lesser than that of the host population does not bode well with Ireland's committments under international human rights law, in particular the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (ICESCR) and the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (ICERD). Indeed the supervisory expert body for ICERD have expressed concerns that the policy of dispersal and direct provision could violate article 3 of the Race Convention relating to segregated racial practices.

Q.49. Mention any good practice in your Member State which could be promoted in other Member States

All asylum seekers are entitled to free medical care. There are no limitations or restrictions on the type of care that an asylum seeker can receive and it is the same as that an Irish citizen would be entitled to receive under the free medical schemes.

Q.50. Please add here any other interesting element about reception conditions in your Member State which you did not had the occasion to mention in your previous answer.

The reception conditions of unaccompanied minors within the State are of some concern. Unaccompanied minors are defined by Irish law as those under the age of 18 years and who do not have anybody to care for them. They are taking into the care of the Health Services Executive (HSE) and the Child Care Act, 1991 then applies. From 1999 to 2005 there were 4,197 unaccompanied minors who presented themselves to the HSE, around half of these remained in HSE care and were, for the most part, put in hostel care. The Irish Refugee Council has deemed the care of unaccompanied minors in hostels to be inappropriate. The report entitled 'Making Separate Children Visible' while noting the positive attributes of the state run child only hostels, was in sharp contrast to the private hostels. The report also noted the lack of an out of hour's service by the HSE to these children. In contrast Irish children who were in the care of the HSE would not be in such a facility but more likely would be placed with a foster family or in residential care.

QUESTIONNAIRE FOR THE NATIONAL REPORT ON THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE DIRECTIVE :
RECEPTION CONDITIONS OF 27 JANUARY 2003

Update 07/11/2007

IN: ITALY
by

DI PASCALE ALESSIA	FAVILLI CHIARA
Doctor, Researcher European Union Law – Law Faculty, University of Milan;	Doctor, Lecturer European Union Law – Law Faculty, University of Florence; Teacher International and European Union Law, Law Faculty, University of Florence

1. NORMS OF TRANSPOSITION

Q.1. Identify the main norm of transposition (indicate the title, date, number, date of entry into force and references of publication into the official journal) and indicate its legal nature (legislative, regulatory, administrative); indicate in your answer if this norm was only devoted to the directive or if it has been included in a more general text and indicate in that case by quoting precisely the numbers of the provisions adopted to transpose the directive.

Decreto legislativo 30 maggio 2005, n. 140 "Attuazione della direttiva 2003/9/CE che stabilisce norme minime relative all'accoglienza dei richiedenti asilo negli Stati membri" in GU n. 168 del 21.7.2005. Date of entry into force 20 October 2005 (art. 15)
http://www.interno.it/legislazione/pages/pagina.php?idlegislazione=714
Legislative Act concerning only the implementation of the directive and adopted by the Government after Parliament delegation (art. 67 Italian Constitution);
Annex I

Q.2. List by order of importance by using numbers (1, 2, 3) the others norms of transposition if there are more than one (indicate for each norm the title, date, number and references of publication into the official journal; include in your answer the administrative measures taken to ensure implementation of the directive and of the transposition norms like regulations, administrative circulars, special instructions,…)

1. Law: Decreto legislativo 30 maggio 2005, n. 140 "Attuazione della direttiva 2003/9/CE che stabilisce norme minime relative all'accoglienza dei richiedenti asilo negli Stati membri" in GU n. 168 del 21.7.2005. Date of entry into force 20 October 2005 (art. 15)
http://www.interno.it/legislazione/pages/pagina.php?idlegislazione=714
Legislative Act concerning only the implementation of the directive and adopted by the Government after Parliament delegation (art. 67 Italian Constitution);

2. Administrative circular: Circolare Ministero interno prot. n. DCS/1/2005 del 17.10.2005 – Oggetto: Modalità di accertamento dei posti in accoglienza per i richiedenti asilo ai sensi dell'art. 6, comma 1, del decreto legislativo 30.5.2005, n. 140, recante "Attuazione della direttiva 2003/9/CE che stabilisce norme minime relative all'accoglienza dei richiedenti asilo negli Stati membri"

http://www.asgi.it/content/documents/dl05102500.circolare.posti.in.accoglienza.doc

3. Administrative circular: Circolare Ministero dell'interno prot. n. 400/C/2005/1170/P/15.1.12 del 22.10.2005 – Oggetto: Decreto legislativo 30.5.2005, n. 140 – "Attuazione della direttiva 2003/9/CE che stabilisce norme minime relative all'accoglienza dei richiedenti asilo"

http://www.asgi.it/content/documents/dl05110900.circ.int.221005.doc

4. Ministerial Decree: DECRETO DEL MINISTERO DELL'INTERNO 28 novembre 2005 (in Gazz. Uff., 5 dicembre 2005, n. 283) - Linee guida, formulario delle domande e criteri per la verifica della corretta gestione del contributo erogato dal Fondo per le politiche e i servizi dell'asilo e loro armonizzazione alle disposizioni del decreto legislativo del 30 maggio 2005, n. 140. Misure e modalità del contributo economico a favore del richiedente asilo che non rientra nei casi previsti dagli articoli 1-bis e 1-ter del decreto-legge 30 dicembre 1989, n. 416, convertito, con modificazioni, dalla legge 28 febbraio 1990, n. 39, così come introdotto dall'articolo 32 della legge 30 luglio 2002, n. 189.
http://www.interno.it/legislazione/pages/articolo.php?idarticolo=702

5. Administrative Circular: Circolare del 27 novembre 2002 sulle Convenzioni tipo e "linee guida" per la gestione di Centri di Permanenza Temporanea e Assistenza (CPT) e di Centri di Identificazione (CId, già centri d'accoglienza)
http://www.interno.it/stampa.php?sezione=1&id=21698

6. Regolamento attuazione 303/2004
http://www.interno.it/stampa.php?sezione=6&id=631

English Version http://www.interno.it/assets/files/7/20050420122845_10-113-232-21.pdf

A. Leaflet: http://www.interno.it/assets/files/10/20051021105725.pdf

B. Verbale declaration of asymul seekers under Geneva Convention
http://www.interno.it/assets/files/7/20050420163440_10-113-232-28.pdf

7. L. 1990 no. 39, as changed by Artt. 31-32 L. 2002 no. 189: Norme urgenti in materia di asilo politico, di ingresso e soggiorno dei cittadini extracomunitari e di regolarizzazione dei cittadini extracomunitari ed apolidi già presenti nel territorio dello stato

http://www.welfare.gov.it/Sociale/immigrazione+ed+integrazione/norme/leggi/1989-12-30DLn.416+.htm

8. Circular 26 May 2006: Provvedimento di determinazione della capacità ricettiva massima del Sistema di protezione per richiedenti asilo e rifugiati

http://www.serviziocentrale.it/pdf/Circolari/Provvedimentocapacitaricettivamassima.pdf

9. Circular 11 April 2007: Direttiva in favore dei minori stranieri non accompagnati richiedenti asilo

www.asgi.it/content/documents/dl07050205.minori.stranieri.non.accompagnati.19.marzo.2007.pdf

Q.3. Explain which level of government is competent to adopt the legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers (specify in particular in case of a federal or regional State, if it is the federal/central power or the components; in case, specify below when it is impossible for you to answer a question because it is about the competence of the components and it is impossible for you to gather reliable information about all of them)

In Italy the competence to adopt legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers is of the central Government according to Art. 117, 2nd par. lett. a) of the Italian Const., that confers to the central Government the exclusive competence on asylum and the legal status of third country nationals. Regional authorities have competence on subjects connected with the reception such as the social services and the services related to migration such as mediation, housing, integration. At the moment this regards mainly the services organisation although there is a wide difference among regions in the standard of social services. The Constitution states that the Government shall fix the "essential levels of social protection" that will establish the minimum standard to be granted in the whole country. After a lot of debates the negotiations between central Government and Regions on this crucial point is at a standstill.

Q.4. Explain the legal technical choices done to transpose the directive (comment on the nature and level of the norms used to do the transposition: legislative, regulatory, administrative like instructions, etc). Add any other element about the technique of transposition of the directive which is interesting for the implementation of Community law.

Since 1989 Italy adopts each year a law, named Legge comunitaria (European Law) in order to implement European law such as Directives, Decisions or ECJ Decisions. The "Legge comunitaria" can: provide directly the norms necessary to conform to the European law (this can happen when only small changes are sufficient); delegate the Government to adopt the norms with an act having the force of law or with a regulation (this is possible when there is already a law but there is not a reserve of law in the Constitution); consider sufficient an implementation through administrative acts. The Legge comunitaria has at least two annexes listing the Directives that the Government is delegated to implement. The difference between the two annexes is that only for one of them is requested the opinion by the competent Parliament commissions before the official adoption of the Legislative Decrees.
Directive 2003/9/EC has been implemented with the most common techniques, the delegation to the Government to adopt an act having the same force of Law (Art. 67 Italian Constitution). This topic is covered by a reserve of law stated by art. 10, 2nd and 3rd par., Italian Constitution. Directive 2003/9/EC was listed in Annex A of L. 31 October 2003, n. 306 recante disposizioni per l'adempimento di obblighi derivanti dall'appartenenza dell'Italia alle Comunità europee – legge comunitaria 2003, so that the opinion of the Parliament was not necessary to adopt the decree (Art. 1, par. 3, L .106/2003).
The Parliament participation in this process of transposition is very modest. This is aggravated by two factors: the draft of the Legge comunitaria is written by the Government and there has not been any act by the Parliament on the Proposal directive. We can affirm that the Parliament has been completely absent from the entire process of adoption and transposition of the Directive.

Q.5. Mention if there is a general tendency to just copy the provisions of the directive into national legislation without redrafting or adaptation them to national circumstances? If yes, give some of the worst examples and explain if there is a risk that those provisions remain unapplied or will create difficulties of implementation in the future.

Although there is not a wide debate on the implementation of the Directive the implementation is not generally only a copy of the Directives, except for the definitions. The Government legislative officials are charged to propose a draft that is generally not so much changed. That draft is written taking account the national law and trying to change it the minimum as possible.

Q.6. Have all the texts necessary to ensure the effective implementation of the new rules of transposition been adopted, prepared or at least foreseen in the future (for example a regulation completing a new law and the necessary instructions telling the administration how to apply the new rules)?

Italy has adopted all the legislative acts and the administrative circulars necessary to implement the European Directive and to enable the administration to apply the norms (see annex II-III-IV)

2. BIBLIOGRAPHY

Q.7. Has an in-depth preparatory study been made public about the changes at the occasion of the transposition? If yes, thanks for trying to provide us a copy (please contact to answer this question adequately the body and person who was responsible for the preparation of the transposition of the directive in the public administration).

As already mentioned there has not been an in-depth preparatory study and there has not any public document related to the changes adopted with the directive transposition. (please contact to answer this question adequately the body and person who was responsible for the preparation of the transposition of the directive in the public administration).

Q.8. Quote any recent scientific book or article published about the directive, the transposition rules or the question of reception conditions for asylum seekers in general (answer even if this literature is only available in your language and provide the complete title in your language (without translation) with all references; indicate author, title, in case name of periodical, year and place of publication).

Amnesty International, Invisibili, Minori migranti detenuti all'arrivo in Italia, 2006, EGA

Censis, Primo rapporto annuale sul Sistema di protezione per richidenti asilo e rifugiati (Anno 2005), 2006, Edizioni Anci Servizi.

D. Consoli e G. Schiavone, Analisi della procedura semplificata, della procedura ordinaria e delle collegate misure di trattenimento dei richiedenti asilo, in Diritto, Immigrazione e cittadinanza, 2005, 2, pp. 13-27

ICS - Consorzio italiano di solidarietà, La protezione negata – Primo rapporto sul diritto di asilo in Italia, Milano, 2005

ICS – Consorzio italiano di solidarietà, Il diritto di asilo in Italia nel 2005, Torino, 2006.

A. E. Matarazzo, Accoglienza e concessione del diritto di asilo - Osservazioni su materie di notevole spessore per una visione europea e internazionale dei fenomeni, scongiurando il rischio dell'adozione di provvedimenti «emotivi», in Lo Stato civile italiano, 2005, fasc. 12, pagg. 953

N. Morandi, La normativa comunitaria sul diritto di asilo, in Diritto, immigrazione e cittadinanza, 2005, 1, pp. 51-67

Rapporto della Commissione presieduta dall'Ambasciatore De Mistura, available on the web site of the Ministry of Interior: www.interno.it/news/articolo.php?idarticolo=23602

M.A. Quiroz Vitale, Richiedenti asilo, Centri di prima accoglienza e politiche pubbliche dell'immigrazione. Alcuni dati sulla realtà milanese, in B.M. Bigotta, F.A. Cappelletti, Il Diritto di asilo, Padova, 2006

M. Sideri, I richiedenti asilo e l'accesso al mercato del lavoro in Italia tra legislazione internazionale, progetti di riforma e prassi quotidiana, in Diritto delle relazioni industriali, 2005, pp. 862 ss.

S. Sonnino, S. Masiello, Politiche europee sull'asilo e i rifugiati, in Gli stranieri, 2005, pp. 113

G. Vitale, La nuova procedura di riconoscimento dello status di rifugiato: dall'audizione avanti la Commissione territoriale all'impugnativa giurisdizionale, in Diritto, Immigrazione e cittadinanza, 2005, 4, pp. 47-65

L. Zagato, a cura di, Verso una disciplina comune europea del diritto di asilo, of next publication

Q.9. Quote any interesting decision of jurisprudence based on the implementation of the new rules of transposition of the directive (indicate references of publication if any)?

There is not at the moment any decision of jurisprudence based on the implementation of the new rules of transposition of the directive

3. GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

The purpose of the following two questions is to help the reader to understand easily and quickly the system of reception conditions in your Member State and also to avoid that you have to repeat general elements in other parts of the questionnaire. Please do not write more than one or maximum two pages and do not include large historical developments.

Q.10. Describe in general the system of reception conditions in your Member State (in particular which are the main actors in charge of reception conditions?)

L. 189/2002 (named Bossi-Fini) has provided three different ways of granting reception to asylum seekers: 1. the National reception system (SPRAS); 2. the reception in the Centre of Identification; 3. the reception in the Centre of Temporary stay.

1. The first one is the reception in centres set up by local authorities through a system modelled on the positive experience tested with the Programma Nazionale Asilo (PNA). Art. 32 L. 189/2002 has now named the scheme "Sistema di protezione per richiedenti asilo e rifugiati" (SPRAS – System of protection of asylum seekers and refugees) and has created the Fondo nazionale per le politiche e i servizi dell'asilo (also with the European Refugee Fund) to support the activities. The administrative body is located in Rome and is named Servizio centrale http://www.serviziocentrale.it/.

The basic idea of the System is the active role of local networks leading by the municipalities. The System is run by ANCI (National Association of Italian Municipalities, www.anci.it) who has signed an agreement with the Interior ministry on 24th July 2003. A subcontract has been signed by ANCI and IOM concerning the activities aiming to find a durable solution for refugees (integration, repatriation or resettlement).

Each year the municipalities who want to be funded must present a project of reception that will be evaluated by the Servizio centrale. With these projects have been offered about 2000 places.

NGOs do not have an official role at national level but are involved in the local networks.

The local office of the Government, Prefettura, is the pivot of the system: it is in charge of admitting the asylum applicant in the reception system and of finding, through the Central system, the available places in one of the centres of the country.

2. The second one is the new one and now most used. The reception in a Centre of identification is granted to those asylum seekers under these conditions: doubts on identity; illegal entry;

3. The last one is for those who after been addressed of a deportation order and detained in a Centre of temporary stay ask for the recognition of the refugee status.

Q.11. A. Explain if you have different types and levels of reception conditions following the different stages of the asylum procedure (this implies that you have to give briefly the necessary explanations about the asylum procedure). Make if relevant for reception conditions a distinction between the following procedural stages: determination of the responsible Member State on the basis of the Dublin II regulation, special procedures at the border (including transit zones in airports), accelerated procedures, admissibility procedures, eligibility procedures and the different possibilities of appeals (suspensive or not) against a refusal tof the asylum request. Indicate what the main differences of reception conditions are between the different stages (if necessary by detailing between the different elements of reception conditions, in particular housing) and explain what the evolution of reception conditions is following the different stages of the procedure.

L. 189/2002 has settled a new procedure to recognise the Refugee status in Italy. That procedure has entered into force on the 21 April 2005 after the entry into force of the Regulation DPR 2004 n. 303.

There are two different procedures for which there are different reception conditions: the standard procedure and the fast one.

In the standard procedure the Police gives the asylum seeker a permit of stay for Asylum application (per richiesta di asilo) and a leaflet with the information about the assistance provided by the SPRAS and the modalities to apply for in order to grant assistance. In this case the Local Office of the Government, named Prefettura, will decide on the admissibility after an evaluation of the needs of the asylum seekers and will provide a place in one of the centre in the country through the Central service. Also in this case the applicant may be detained in an Identification Centre in order to: verify her/his identity; verify the grounds of the application if not immediately available; awaiting the end of the procedure to be admitted in the territory.

After three days the applicant receives a certificate with his name and after twenty days a permit of stay for asylum application lasting three months and renewable until the procedure ends.

In the accelerated procedure the asylum seeker is always detained in a Centre of identification (Centro di identificazione) or in a Centre of temporary stay (Centro di permanenza temporanea CPT). The former has been created with L. 189/2002 in order to detain the asylum seekers for the time necessary to identify him/her and not just to examine the application but only when the asylum seeker: has used false documents and has not declared it to the police; has avoided or trying to avoid border controls; has been stopped after illegally entering or residence in Italy. Once the detention is not necessary anymore the asylum seeker must be released and given a permit of stay until the Local commission has not decided on her/his application. The detention can last maximum for twenty days plus ten days in case of a new exam of the rejection of the application. Although the asylum seekers can not leave the centre without loosing their legal status, the law does not consider that detention as a deprivation of personal freedom and so does not ask the intervention of the judge as requested by Art. 13 and 16 Const.

In case of detention in the CPT (when he/she has an expulsion decree or when is entered and or has stayed in the territory illegally) the asylum seeker must be detained until the application is decided. In this cases the asylum seeker is detained with the other foreigners waiting for the deportation (while the Identification centres are devoted only to asylum seekers).

The praxis shows that the majority of asylum seekers is detained in one of these two centres. This is relevant regarding the reception conditions because in all the cases of the accelerated procedure and detention the reception is granted directly in the Centres. Only when the asylum seeker has left the centre and (if) has got a permit of stay for Asylum application (richiesta di asilo) she/he can be admitted to the national reception system (SPRAR).

The main difference among the three types of reception conditions is that of freedom of movement: in the SPRAR system, asylum seekers are in principle free to move; in the Identification centres they are free to move only during the day, while in the CPT they are forbidden to move with strict controls by police. Moreover, in this last case their conditions are not different from that of the other foreigners.

Q11. B. Indicate precisely for which stage(s) of the asylum procedure the answers on reception conditions you give below are valid.

According to art. 5 d.lgs. 150/2004 the reception starts since the presentation of the application. Some assistance can be granted also before the enrolment of the application according to D.L. 451/1995 (L. 29.12.1995 n. 563 known as L. Puglia) and Regulation of Application Decree 233/1996.
The reception can be granted until the application is not decided (see here under Q15).

4. GENERAL RULES ON RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.12.

Q 12 A. Are material reception conditions provided in kind, in money or in vouchers or in a combination of these elements (see article 13, §5 which is an optional provision)? Distinguish between the different elements (housing, food, clothes, health, transportation, pocket money,…). If reception conditions are provided in money (in general or in some cases, for instance when no places are anymore available in accommodation centres), indicate the precise amount given to the asylum seekers. Indicate in your answer what is provided in general and if there are exceptional cases. Specify in your answer if reception conditions are different from the general system of social aid for nationals or aliens and if yes, if and when (which stage of the asylum procedure) can asylum seekers have access to the general system of social aid?

Generally the assistance is given in kind through a centre of the SPRAS, a centre of identification or a centre of temporary stay (as far as they are detained in these centres they get accommodation, food and clothes as the other foreigners awaiting for deportation).
In the SPRAS or in the Centre of identification the asylum seeker is given accommodation, food, clothes, hygienic products or vouchers to buy them. There is also a sort of pocket money for the daily minor expenses. As far as the SPRAS it is not possible to describe in the detail the modalities of reception because every local network plans a project for which ask for funding: what is common is the provision of accommodation (single buildings or apartments), food (in the same building or through vouchers), clothes (in kind or through vouchers) and generally the pocket money.
When the asylum seeker is sent to a centre of identification located far from the Prefettura where he has applied for the assistance, he is given a ticket to reach that centre.
As far as the assistance in the reception centres (apart from common services such as accommodation, food, clothes) the material assistance can change by region to region and by city to city. Each city council indeed, presents projects of reception different from that of the other cities.
In case there is no available place the applicant can receive monetary assistance: Euro 27,89 per day for a maximum of 35 days, equivalent to maximum Euro 976,15, but it does not happen often.
In order to have access to the reception measures it is necessary not to possess an amount higher than that considered in the decree of the Interior Office in order to obtain the Tourist visa. This means not more than 5226,78 Euro for a period of 6 months.

Q 12. B. Can the reception conditions in kind, money or vouchers be considered as sufficient "to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence" as requested by article 13, §2 of the directive (which is a mandatory provision but leaves a certain space to Member States)? In order to help to assess the respect of this rule when reception conditions are provided in money, include if necessary in your answer points of comparison with the minimum amount of social aid guaranteed for nationals in your Member State.

The assistance given by the SPRAS can considered sufficient as stated the common agreement by NGOs (see the questionnaire sent by Italian NGOs and the report edited by ICS, listed in the bibliography). As far as Identification centres or Centre of temporary stay there is no particular issues raised about the delivery of food, clothes or other material assistance. However the CPT are centres of detention a lot of which with problems of overcrowding and general bad conditions of stay as condemned by several NGOs: while we are writing a Ministerial commission headed by the UN official Staffan de Mistura is in charge of conducting a special inquiry to verify and report about the conditions in the centres (http://www.interno.it/news/articolo.php?idarticolo=22693). According to ICS, during the 2005 NGOs have not been able to enter in the Identification centres.

As far as the reception offered in money, we must compare the 976,15 Euro with the minimum amount of social aid fixed in 381,72 Euro per month (foreigners can benefit of that amount only when they have a long stay permit or when they are recognised as refugee). The amount of E 976,15 is adequate only if the procedure ends shortly days and if she/he has the chance to be hosted for free. In a lot of regions and in particular in the big cities the rent rates are very high also for one room. After that period the asylum seeker finds her/himself without any social assistance and without the chance to work. If the asylum seeker can not eventually find a place in a centre of reception he risks not to have the minimum amount to live. This sort of reception is a residual option that seems applied hardly ever (see the answers given by Parodi Danilo from the Genova Municipality, Q1.B).

5. PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

Q.13. Q 13. A. Does the national legislation specifically provide that a request for international protection is presumed to be under the Geneva Convention unless explicitly requested otherwise? (see article 2, b which is a mandatory provision)

Art. 1, D.lgs. 2005/140 contains the rules on reception conditions of asylum seekers.

Q 13. B. Explain if the scope of application of reception conditions is extended to other asylum seekers than refugees in the sense of the Geneva Convention, in particular to persons asking for subsidiary protection or to other forms of protection like humanitarian statuses (see article 3, § 4 which is an optional provision)? If not, explain briefly which the differences between these special regimes and the directive are.

Art. 1, par. 2, expressly excludes the application in case of temporary measures (D.Lgs. 2003 n. 85 that has implemented Directive 2001/55/EC). According to Art. 2 devoted to definitions, the asylum seeker is only the foreigner who applies for the recognition of the refugee status as defined by the Geneva Convention.
For the other forms of protection there is not a specific reception system. In Italy the right of asylum is recognised by Art. 10, 3rd par. Const., with a definition very much broader than that of Art. 1 of Geneva. However that Constitution Article has not been implemented with a secondary law so that the only legislative framework has been for years that of the Geneva Convention. Since 1997 national Tribunals recognise direct effect to Art. 10 so that it is possible to apply for asylum appealing to a Court (with a lot of differences between courts). The applicant will receive a permit of stay for "jurisdictional grounds" but it does not allow to work. Besides with Law 189/2002 and Art. 15 of Regulation 2004 n. 303, the Local commission can deny the refugee status but ask the Police to issue a permit of stay on humanitarian grounds (Art. 5, par. 6, L. 286/1998) because there are other risks included the breach of Art. 3 ECHR (for the first time expressly mentioned in a legal act concerning foreigner). Those who will get a permit of stay will be able to work.

Q 13. C. Are there specific provisions in national law for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation (see article 3, §2 which is an optional provision)?

Italian Law does not recognise expressly the diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation (article 3, §2). It is not excluded that a sort of protection should be given in exceptional circumstances but not being a rule of general international law Italy is not bound to recognise it or to accept those requests.

Q.14. Are reception conditions available as from the moment one asylum application is introduced? How is article 13, §1 which is mandatory legally understood? Do asylum seekers have to satisfy any other condition in order to get reception conditions?

Art. 5, par. 1, D.Lgs. 2005 n. 140 states that the asylum seeker who is not detained in a centre of identification or in Centre of Temporary Stay, gets the assistance since he gets the Permit of Stay. This is released in 20 days since the application is enrolled. But the following par. 5 specifies that the access to the reception measures is allowed since the moment of the application's enrolment. More over some additional measures and forms of relief can be provided also before according to L. 1995 n. 563 (known as L. Puglia providing the use of armed forces in activities of sea border controls in the Puglia Region).
The asylum seeker who is sent in a Centre of identification or in a CPT will benefit of the reception measures inside the centres and since he starts to stay there.
In order to benefit of the reception measures, the asylum seeker must show the lack of sufficient means for her/his life and that of her/his family. The amount under which the protection is granted is established with the reference to a period of maximum six months and taking as measure the amount requested to get the permit of stay for tourism (Art. 13, par. 3 Directive).
The reception is granted only if the application is presented within eight days since the entry in Italy or, in case of application enrolled during a legal stay for other days, within 8 days since the starting of the persecution. The respect of this temporal condition can be showed with any means included the applicant declaration: the reception can be revoked if the police can demonstrate that the declaration is false (Art. 16, § 2, Directive). This condition appears quite strict and too rigid: it is applicable to all the asylum seekers automatically without the possibility for the authority to take into account the personal situation and so adopting reasonable decisions proportionate to the specific case.

Q.15. Explain when reception conditions end, for instance after refusal of the asylum request (include in your answer the link with the right of appeal against a decision of refusal of the status, in particular the question of its suspensive effect)

According to Art. 5, par. 6, the reception assistance ends with the communication of the decision on the Asylum application. According to Art. 11 if the procedure is not finished in six months since the enrolment of the application, the permit of stay is renewed for other six months and the asylum seeker is allowed to work.
In case of rejection the applicant can appeal but must leave the territory and the recourse has not an automatically suspensive effect. However the applicant can ask the Prefetto to be authorised to stay in Italy until the end of the jurisdictional recourse. In this case the asylum seeker will benefit of reception measures according to Art. 5, par. 7, which states that the asylum seeker "is admitted to the reception system only until is not allowed to work". This is a puzzling rule: it is not clear why the asylum seeker must apply again for the reception instead than going on with the measures already allowed. Moreover, and more critical, it is the provision of the reception's end when he is allowed to work. According to Art. 11, § 1, after six months the asylum seeker is allowed to work. Art. 5, § 7, together with Art. 11, § 1, risks to be interpreted as an automatic lost of the reception measures when the asylum seeker is allowed to work. This is a point of contrast with the directive that at Art. 16, § 5, states that the receptions conditions will not be withdrawn or diminished before a negative decision is taken while Art. 11 States shall allow asylum seekers to work after maximum one year since the application's enrolment without saying anything about the cessation of reception measures.
It is necessary to interpret D.Lgs. 2005 n. 140 in conformity with the Directive and this can be done using its Art.11, § 4, that expressly states that the asylum seeker while working can continue to benefit of the reception conditions but contributing to the costs. This rule must be applied also at those who have appealed a negative decision and are authorised by a Court to stay in Italy. Otherwise the asylum seeker who does not work, despite been allowed and able, risks not to benefit of the reception measures while still in the territory awaiting for the final decision.
According to the law the reception measures end also in case of a positive decision: the problem here is that the refugee is not still able to provide for himself also considering the drastic reduction of the procedures length. Indeed with the new procedures the majority of the application are decided in very short terms. Also in case of standard procedures when the asylum seeker is detained in a Centre of identification the procedure tends to end in thirty days maximum.

This means that also in case of a positive decision it is unlikely that the refugee will be able to find a positive way of integration without personal resources. It is so very important to have strategy of integration of these people and guaranteeing measures also after the positive decision.

Q.16 Are there special rules or practices regarding reception conditions in case of successive applications for asylum introduced by the same person?

Art. 12, par. 1, lett. c), states that the reception measures are revoked in case of previous presentation of an asylum application in Italy. The reception assistance ends with the communication of the decision. The applicant can appeal against this decision to the Regional Administrative Tribunal. The law does not rule expressly about the decision to accord the assistance but by analogy we have to infer that the reception measures are not granted since the beginning in case of a successive application.

Q.17. Information of asylum seekers about their rights and obligations in terms of reception conditions, in particular about established benefits (see article 5 which is too large extend a mandatory provision; do not confuse this question with the information to be provided to asylum seekers about the asylum procedure):

Q 17. A. Are asylum seekers informed, and if yes about what precisely?

According to Art. 3 D.lgs. 2005, n. 140, the applicant is informed about the Health services and reception conditions and the way to ask for them (lett. e); the reference of UNHCR and NGOs and the way to enrol the minors in the school, the access to the reception measures provided by the local authorities, the way to access the training courses lasting not more than the permit of stay.

This leaflet of 7 pages contains also information about the asylum procedure and only a paragraph, the third, contains the information on reception assistance together with the conditions of detention. Despite what provided by the Decree in the leaflet there are not information on enrolment of minors in school. At p. 5 there is written that once in the centre the asylum seeker can ask the NGOs or UNHCR in order to apply to attend Italian language course, legal assistance and other useful information.

Q 17. B. Is the information provided in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

The information are written, giving the applicant a leaflet already mentioned in the Regulation 2004 n. 303, Art. 2, par. 6.

Q 17. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify the list of languages in which it is available

The leaflet is available in Italian, English, French, Spanish and Arab (Art. 6 and 4 Regulation 2004 n. 303).

Q 17. D. Is the deadline of maximum 15 days respected?

According to Art. 3 D.Lgs. 2005 n. 140 the police must give the leaflet in 15 days after the presentation of the asylum application. Circular of 22.10.2005 states that it is recommended to give the leaflet when the application form is filled-in. This is very important because with the new and fast procedures it is not reasonable and risks to be useless to give the information about reception conditions after 15 days.

Q. 18. Information of asylum seekers about the existence of organisations or groups promoting their interest and defending their rights (see article 5 which is to a large extend a mandatory provision):

Q.18. A. Is there a list of organisations dressed by the authorities and if yes is it comprehensive? Is this in particular the case about the possibilities to get legal assistance and health care?

According to Art. 3, par. 6, lett. d), the leaflet aforementioned contains the address and the telephone numbers of UNHCR and the main NGOs specialised on asylum assistance. So at p. 4 of the leaflet there is written the address and telephone number of UNHCR in Rome; an annex contains the address and telephone numbers of relevant national organizations. There is also the number of the Central service in Rome.
In the electronic version of the leaflet there is not the NGOs list.

Q. 18.B. Is the information provided to the asylum seekers, and if yes, in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

The information is written contained in the leaflet. There is no indication in the decree about the opportunity to give information orally, for example in cases of people who are not able to read or write or who speaks languages different from those in which the leaflet is written (see next point).

Q.18.C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify if possible the list of languages in which it is available.

Art. 5 Decree 150/2004 refers to Art. 4 Regulation 303/2004 which states that the information are given in a language understood by the asylum seeker or, if not possible, in Italian, English, French, Spanish and Arab according to the preference expressed by the applicant.

Q.18.D. How many organisations are active in that field in your Member State?

Many organisations work in the field of asylum: some (about ten) are represented in all the territory or play an active role at national level (in particular those located in Rome); others are active only at local level where can play relevant role in the reception being involved in the projects presented by the municipalities. It is impossible to say how many because in each city there can be an NGO working only at that level. Anyway the main NGOs are: CARITAS, ICS, ARCI, CIR, Comunità di Sant'Egidio, Evangelic Churches.

Q.19. Documentation of asylum seekers (see article 6):

Q.19. A. What kind of document is delivered to the asylum seeker? Explain the legal value of this document (just a certification of the status as asylum seeker or also prove of identity?) (see §1 of article 6 which is a mandatory provision)

The police delivers a document with the applicant's name that certifies he has applied for asylum. Art. 4, par. 3, expressly states that the document does note prove the identity but only that the person has asked for asylum. In twenty days the asylum seeker who is not detained will receive also a permit of stay for asylum application (per richiesta di asilo). Also the applicant detained will receive the permit of stay if he is released before the end of the procedure.

Q.19. B. Are there situations or specific cases in which another equivalent document or even no document is issued? (in particular is there an exception for "procedures to decide on the right of the applicant legally to enter the territory" as made possible by §2 of article 6)?

In case of detention the asylum seeker will get a document with her/his name and the specification of the condition of detention. Also this document does not prove the identity of the asylum seeker.
There is nothing about the faculty of States of conferring the applicant a travelling document in case of serious humanitarian reasons for which the applicant must be in another States (see Art. 6, par. 5, of the Directive).

Q.19. C. For how long is this document in principle valid and is it necessary to renew it after a certain period?

There is not a formally expiry date of this document but, for those asylum seeker who are not detained, it will be substituted by the permit of stay for asylum application.

Q.19. D. What is the deadline for the delivery of that document? Is the mandatory deadline of 3 days set by article 6, §1 respected?

According to Art. 4, par. 1, the document is delivered in three days since the presentation of the request. Not all the Police Offices are able to deliver the document on time because of their organisation and staff not sufficient to deal with all the applications.

Q. 19. E. Is it possible for an asylum seeker to get a travel document for serious humanitarian reasons (see §5 of article 6 which is an optional provision)?

There is not a specific norm and it is very unlikely that the police will deliver such a travel document. Anyway in case of very long procedure it is not excluded that the administration will allow it.

Q.19.F. Is there a central system of registration of asylum seekers and is it or not separate from the registration of aliens? If yes, describe it briefly (content) and indicate in particular if it is an electronic database.

The system of registration of asylum seekers is separated from that of aliens. The data concern in particular the permit of stay issued by the Ministry of the Interior who is in charge of holding the permits of stay through the local police offices.
There is also the database related to the asylum seekers hosted in the reception centres or in the Centre of identification or of temporary stay.
NGOs have repeatedly denounced the lack of an efficient database collecting the applications, the rejections and the approval of the asylum requests.

Q.20. Residence of asylum seekers:

Q.20.A. Is in principle an asylum seeker free to move on the entire territory of your Member State or only to a limited part of it and in case, which part? (see article 7, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

In principle the asylum seeker who is not detained is free to move in the entire territory. In order to have an hearing in front of the Commission all the communication are addressed to the declared address so it is very important for the asylum seeker to communicate any change of domicile.
Those who benefit of the reception measures through the SPRAR have to establish their effective residence in the centre where there is the available post. An exception, but limited to residual cases, is when the applicant receives an amount of money until there is not any available post in the centre. When located in a centre, also the competence of the local Commission that must decide on the application can change: if in principle it is the Commission competent for the regions where the application is lodged; in case of transferral to a centre in another region also the competence of the Commission will change.
Therefore the only way to benefit of the reception measures is to stay and have the residence in the centre, that is the hypothesis foreseen by Art. 7, §4, if the Directive.

Q.20.B. About the place of residence (see §2 of article 7): explain to which extend the person is free to choose her residence and if this depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance processing of application, attribution of reception conditions,…).

Those who are not detained and who are not hosted in a centre of reception must communicate their address. There are not specific limitation. They can change also the domicile but they must inform the police of that change, because every communication is done to the declared address.

Q.20.C.About the place of reception (meaning where the asylum seeker has to stay to benefit from reception conditions) (see § 4 of article 7): explain which are the general rules about the determination of this place (to which extend are the decisions determining the place taken individually and do they take into account the personal situation of the asylum seeker?) and to which extend the person is free to choose it and if it depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance attribution of reception conditions, processing of the application,…).

The procedure is managed principally by the Prefettura that must ask to the National service located in Rome the availability of places in the reception centres.

The asylum seeker who applies for reception conditions is sent to the centre where there is an available post taking account of personal conditions such as family members, pregnant women or disability. These special conditions, if present, have to be indicated by the Prefettura when ask to the Central Service the place's availability. In case it is not possible to place the person in one of the local centre managed by the local authority the asylum seeker can be sent to a centre of identification or in a structure set up by L. 563/1995 providing accommodation in case of emergency, for the time necessary to find a post in a centre of reception.
The decision is taken by the Central service and does not involve the applicant.
The reception is offered in the structure and is conditioned to the effective residence of the asylum seeker in that structure except when it is transferred to another after a reasoned decision taken by the Prefettura. The address of the centre is communicated to the police and to the Local commission because every communication of the procedure will be sent to that address.

Q.20.D. If all asylum seekers are not placed in accommodation centres because of capacity limits, explain how the persons are distributed between accommodation centres and other accommodation facilities (which authority takes the decisions, on the basis of which elements, can that decision be appealed by the asylum seeker,…)

The Prefettura sends a written request by fax to the Central service of the Protection system for asylum seekers and refugees. The same request is sent to the Interior Ministry because.
The Central service will inform the Prefettura about the available post in one of the accommodation centres. In the negative option the Interior ministry will provide for a post in a Governmental structure, such as a Centre of Identification or a Centre built by the L. 1995 n. 563, known as Legge Puglia. Then the Prefettura will confirm the reservation of the post and will inform the asylum seeker also giving him the travel ticket to reach the centre.
For logistic reasons for all the 2005 the reception has been granted only in the Governmental structures. The decision about the allocation of the asylum seekers can not be appealed.

In case of there are not places available the Prefettura gives the asylum seeker an amount of 790 Euro until there is not a post in a centre and there is the mandatory condition to communicate the domicile chosen to the Prefettura.

Q.20.E. How can an asylum seeker ask to leave temporarily the place of residence or of reception or an assigned area? How is the individual AND impartial character of the decision ensured? (see §5 of article 7 which is a mandatory provision)

According to Circular 22.10.2005 the reception in a centre of the System of protection is conditioned to the effective stay of the person in that centre. The transferral in another centre can be ordered by the Prefettura only for reasoned grounds such as the family reunion.
According to Art. 9, par. 2, Reg. 2004 n. 303 in case of residence in a Centre of identification the Prefettura Official can allow the asylum seeker to leave temporarily the centre for personal reasons of health, family or related with the asylum procedure. The leaving must always be compatible with the fixed time of the accelerated procedure. There is not any element to affirm that it is an impartial decision except that it must be reasoned and communicated to the applicant.
In case of detention in CPT the asylum seeker can not leave the centre.
In case of residence in an accommodation centre the applicant can temporarily leave under approval of the director.

Q.21. Q.21.A. Do rules on reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions exist in internal legislation and if yes in which cases (mention in particular if there are cases not foreseen by article 16, § 1 and 2 which are optional provisions)? Distinguish in your answer between cases of reduction and withdrawal and explain which conditions can be reduced and if access to emergency health care is always ensured as requested by article 16, §4, last sentence.

D.Lgs. 2005, n. 140 does not state anything about reduction but Art. 12 concerns the withdrawal of reception conditions in the following cases:
a) lack of presentation to the centre or leaving it without previous communication to the Prefettura; b) lack of presentation to the hearing to the Local Commission; previous application of asylum in Italy; c) proof to have economic means to have assistance (in this case the applicant must also refund the director of the centre for the expenses in the period he has been hosted); d) serious violation of the centre rules or violent attitudes.
Some remarks can be done on these rules that result not in conformity with the Directive.
In case of lett. a) the reception conditions can be renewed if the applicant is found or back and the lack pf presentation is due to reasons of force major or accidental event, while the Directive states that there will be a reasoned decision based on the reasons of the absence.

Lett. c) results stricter than Art. 16, § 1, lett. b): this states that the applicant has concealed the financial resources while the Italian law does not take into account the voluntary intention to conceal the financial means.
Lett. d) is contrary to the Directive that allows in the case of breach of the centre rules or violent attitude only sanctions and not the withdrawal of the reception measures.
The decision to withdraw the reception conditions can be appealed to the Regional Administrative Tribunal.
The access to the emergency health care is granted in Italy to everybody included illegal migrants who can have access to urgency measures without the risk to be signalled to the Police (Art. 35, par. 3 D.lgs. 286/1998). Those who are not enrolled in the National Health System should pay unless they lack economic means.

Q.21.B. Has article 16, §2 dealing with refusal of reception conditions for unreasonably late applications for asylum been transposed by your Member State (or was this case already applicable before transposition)? Are there cases in practice?

As already mentioned the reception conditions are rejected if the asylum application is presented later than 8 days since the entry in the territory. The fixed time without the possibility to take in account the specific conditions of each person is too rigid compared to what allowed by Art. 16, par. 2, such as to have presented the application as soon as reasonably possible.

Q.21.C. How is it ensured that decisions of reduction or withdrawal are taken individually, objectively AND in particular impartially (for instance through and independent arbitrator) (see article 16, §4 which is a mandatory provision)?

All the decisions are taken by the Prefettura. Like all the administrative acts they must be reasoned and according to Art. 12 Reg. 140/2005 they are taken considering facts related to the person in question but the Articles does not leave sufficient discretion to the authority to take into account all the personal situation but seems to be too automatic.
It is evident that the Prefettura, that is the local office of the Government, can not be intended as an impartial body. This is also aggravated by the fact that the person is not herd before the measure is taken: for example in the case of violation of the centre rules and violent attitude, Art. 12, par. 3, states that the director of the centre must send to the Prefettura a report within three days since the events took place without any involvement of the person.
The person can appeal against the withdrawal of the measures to the competent Regional Administrative Tribunal.

Q.21.D. Is statement 14/03 adopted by the Council at the same moment as the directive respected (see the documentation pack you received at our meeting in Brussels in April)?

NO

Q.21.E. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements on cases of reduction, withdrawal or refusal which have been taken, and if yes, what has been the outcome?

As far as we are concerned there have not been any decision or judgement on withdrawal or refusal of reception measures.

Q.22. Q.22.A. Appeal against a negative decision relating to the granting of benefits or based on article 7 (see article 21 which is a mandatory provision): indicate against which decision an appeal can be introduced, describe the system of appeal in general and include in particular in your answer the information given to asylum seekers about possibilities of appealing, deadline for appealing, if the appeal has or not a suspensive effect, if there are different steps (for instance first an administrative appeal and in particular if the guarantee of an appeal before a judicial body in the last instance is respected)?

The asylum seeker can appeal against the rejection of the application in 30 days since the notification of the decision. The competent court is the Regional Administrative Tribunal (see the Corte di Cassazione 26 April 2006). The recourse has not a suspensive effect but the judge can authorise the applicant to stay in the territory until the end of the procedure. For this reason circular 22.10.2005 states that the reception measures last until the rejection of the authorisation to stay in the territory the reception measures last maximum 6 months since the presentation of the application. After this period the asylum seeker is authorised to work (Art. 11 d.lgs. 303/2004). While working the asylum seeker can stay in the centre but paying a contribution.

Q.22.B. Explain which are the possibilities for asylum seekers to benefit from legal assistance when they introduce such an appeal (see article 21, §2 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to Member States)?

The asylum seeker can benefit from legal assistance. They are informed of the NGOs who can help them also in this regard with the leaflet above mentioned. When they are in the Centre of Identification they can contact the NGOs who are allowed to go there. Also in case of reception in a Centre of reception they are able to talk and ask for assistance through the NGOs working in the centre.

The legal assistance is free for those who lack of economic means: there is a law that provides the reimbursement for lawyer who assist people in these cases.

Q.22.C. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

As far as we are concerned there have not been any decision or judgement on withdrawal or refusal of reception measures.

Q.22.D. Is a mechanism of complain for asylum seekers about quality of receptions conditions in general (even if they are not personally concerned) organised? If yes, before which authority? Is it linked to the system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions (see below question n° 39)?

There is not a mechanism of complain about quality of receptions conditions.
According to circular 27 November 2002 (see point 4 under Q.2) the reception centres must respect a minimum standard and have to be run following common guidelines. In case there is a breach of those rules the contracts with the subjects managing the centres, or a service within the centres, can be revoked.
The Prefettura is the authority in charge of doing the periodic checks in the centres.

6. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.23. Family unity of asylum seekers: define how a family is defined in relation with article 2, (d) which is a mandatory provision and explain how housing is provided to a family (see articles 8 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to member States and 14, §2, (a) which is a mandatory provision).

In relation to the definition of member of the applicant's family, Legislative Decree 140/2005 recalls the definition contained in article 29 of the Single Text on Immigration law. Such definition has changed further to the implementation of the directive on family reunification. Presently, the following categories fall within the scope of application the Decree: 1) the spouse; 2) minor age children, also of the spouse or born outside wedlock, not married, provided that the other parent, where existing has given his/her consent; dependant children older than 18 years, if they are permanently unable to fulfil their fundamental needs because of their healthy status; dependant parents that o not have an adequate family support in their country of origin or provenance.
It is important to note that the above mentioned members of the family must be on the territory of the State at the time when the application for asylum is filed.
Pursuant to section 9 of Legislative Decree 2005/140, asylum seekers must be accommodated in a centre which ensures the protection of life and of the family unit, when possible.

Q.24. Q.24.A. How is housing of asylum seekers organised: describe the system in general and indicate in particular what is the most frequently system used (see article 14, §1 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space for Member States; distinguish between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels places or other premises).

Accommodation may take place in collective accommodation centres or in private apartments spread all over the national territory. As a general matter, all accommodation structures (centres or apartments) must comply with some minimum common requirements regarding the structure, organisation and management.

Although Legislative Decree 140/2005 does not define in details such requirements, they are described in the Guidelines ("Manuale Operativo per l'attivazione e la gestione di servizi di accoglienza e integrazione per richidenti asilo, rifugiati e beneficiari di protezione umanitaria") issued by the Central Service of the Protection System for asylum seekers and refugees. (Please refer to question 39 below). This document expressly states that such centres must comply with applicable laws and regulations concerning town planning, housing, fire prevention, health and safety matters.

Q.24.B. What is the total number of available places for asylum seekers?[512] Distinguish in your answer between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels or other premises.

For 2007, 2350 places for asylum seekers will be available. Out of this number, 350 places are destined to persons with special needs. No distinction between the types of accommodation is available.
It must also be taken into consideration that three identification centres have been set up:
1) Sicily, Salina Grande (Trapani) – 210 places;
2) Calabria, Crotone – 300 places out of the 1322 places available in the multifunctional centre which also hosts an accommodation centre and a centre of temporary stay /CPT;
3) Puglia, Borgo Mezzanotte (Foggia) – 200 places.
In addition three other centers are used as identification centers even if they do not have such juridical status (they are located in Caltanissetta, Cassibile and Bari Palese)
The UNHCR estimates that approximately 2000 places are available in all these identification centres for asylum seekers.

Q.24.C. Is this number of places for asylum seekers sufficient in general or frequently insufficient?

The number of places for asylum seekers is not considered sufficient to meet their needs. In order to evaluate if these places may be considered sufficient, it must be taken into consideration that in 2005 approximately 10.000 asylum applications were filed.
In addition, as pointed out by ICS in their 2006 report, there are thousands of applications that were filed in recent years under the previous procedure and that are still pending. Taking into account such people, the estimated needs of accommodation amounts to approximately 20.000 places.

Q.24.D. Are there special measures foreseen in urgent cases of a high number of news arrivals of asylum seekers (outside the case of application of the directive on temporary protection)?

In case of special need, the Ministry of Interior may commandeer the propriety of structures, lease areas and premises may build, restructure or maintain premises and in general may undertake all necessary actions in order to create up adequate structures.

[512] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Q.25. Accommodation centres (important note: all the following questions are about open and not closed centres where asylum seekers are detained which are covered by another question)

Q.25.A. Are there different categories of accommodation centres, for instance depending of the stage of the procedure (admissibility and eligibility)?

The law provides for different categories of centres in relation to different situations:
1) Accommodation centres ("Centri di accoglienza"). Asylum seekers who do not have sufficient means that can ensure an appropriate quality of life in relation to health and to his/her own support and of the members of his/her family, are entitled to request accommodation measures. Such measures apply also to the members of the family.
2) Identification centres ("Centri di identificazione"). These centres have been established by section 1-bis of Law decree n. 416/1989. As a general rule, the applicant may not be retained only for the purpose of examining his/her application. However, he/she may be retained for the time strictly necessary to check the authorization to stay on the territory of the State and some specific requirements (Please refer to question 33 for a more detailed description of such relevant requirements);
As mentioned under point 24 B, three identification centres have been set up. Based upon the information contained in the ICS 2006 report, it results that only the centre in Borgo Mezzanone is open during the day, whereas the others are closed and asylum seekers are not allowed to go out.. In the centre located in Salina Grande asylum seekers would be allowed to go out provided that they are so authorised.
In the two other centres that have been set up without a specific status (Bari palese and Cassibile) asylum seekers are not allowed to go out in any case.

Q.25.B. Is there a legal time limit for accommodation in a centre after which the asylum seekers have access to private houses or apartments or is this limit linked to a stage of the asylum procedure?

There is a time limit for the stay in the centres. Such limit depends on the type of measure which is applied.
In relation to accommodation centres, such measure terminates at the time when the decision on the asylum application is adopted and notified.

Q.25.C. Is there a general regulation about the internal functioning of those centres and the rights and duties of the asylum seekers? If yes, is this general regulation applicable to public and private centres? If not, are the centres supposed to adopt an internal regulation and does a central authority have or not a kind of control about its content?

The law expressly provides for the adoption of a regulation in relation to identification centres.
In relation to accommodation centres, there is not a specific provision. The need of establishing an internal regulation may be argued by the provision which states that accommodation can be revoked in case of breach or the centre's internal regulation.

Moreover, the Manuale Operativo contains a sample regulation to be adopted within accommodation centres.

Q.25.D. Do the regulations foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers in case of breach of the rules? (see article 16, §3) If yes, which sanctions for which rules? Which is the competent authority to decide? How is it ensured that decisions are taken individually, objectively and in particular impartially (for instance through an independent arbitrator) as requested by §4 of article 21 which is mandatory provision*?* Which are the possibilities of appealing against those decisions if the system is different from the general one under question n°22? Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

The competent government authority ("Prefetto") of the place where the centre is located may issue a motivated decision of revocation of the accommodation measures in the event that:

a) The applicant has not showed at the accommodation centre or he/she has left such centre, with a prior motivated notice addressed to the competent authority ("Prefettura" – local competent Government office);

Under these circumstances the manager of the centre must promptly inform the competent authority ("Prefettura") that the applicant didn't show off or left the centre. If the applicant is found or voluntary shows off to the police or the centre, the Prefetto may decide to re-establish the accommodation measures. It has to be pointed out that such re-establishment is granted only in the event that the hearing was not attended or the centre was left for a cause of force majeure or accident (caso fortuito)

b) The applicant has not attended the hearing before the competent body for the exam of his/her application, despite the circumstance that the notice of such hearing was communicated to the accommodation centre;

c) The applicant had already applied for asylum in Italy.

d) It is assessed that the applicant already has adequate means of support. In case of revocation, the applicant must reimburse the costs incurred by the centre;

e) The applicant has seriously and repeatedly breached the rules of the accommodation centre or has had serious violent behaviours. Within three days from occurrence, the manager of the centre must send a report on the facts which may imply the revocation to the competent authority ("Prefettura").

It is possible to lodge an appeal before the administrative regional Court ("TAR") against the measure of revocation.

Q.25.E. Are asylum seekers involved in the management of these centres? If yes, how (advisory board, appointment or election of representatives)? (see article 14, §6 which is an option provision)

Asylum seekers are not usually involved in the management of accommodation or detention centres.

Q.25.F. Do specific rules exist on work of asylum seekers inside the accommodation centres different from the general ones about employment (see below)? If yes, which ones? Can working inside accommodation centres be considered as a (mandatory) contribution of the asylum seekers to the management of the centres, is it or not paid and considered as implying access to the labour market and subject to the same rules?

There are not specific rules on work of asylum seekers in the centres.

Q.26. Q.26.A. How can asylum seekers communicate with legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGOs? (see article 14, §2, (b) which is a mandatory provision).

Pursuant to section 9, para. 1, sub b), of Legislative Decree 2005/140, accommodation centres must ensure the possibility of communicating with members of the family, legal advisers, UNCHR and NGOs. In particular, lawyers and representatives of the UNHCR and NGOs, provided that they have acquired a proven experience in Italy for at least three years in this field, may have access to the centres in order to provide assistance to asylum seekers.
Pursuant to article 1-bis, para. 3, of Law Decree 1989, no. 416, as well as the enactment regulation, UNHCR, legal representatives and NGOs authorised by the Ministry of Interior should be given access to identification centres. (Please refer to question 33.G).
However, as indicated by the UNHCR, representatives of the above organisations were not given access to some identification centres (in particular in Puglia and Sicily). Access denial is usually grounded by the competent authority on security reasons.

Q.26.B. What are the rules about access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs regarding access to accommodation centres and other housing facilities (see article 14, §7 which is a mandatory provision).

There are not specific rules. Access of UNHCR and NGOs' representatives is organised with each coordinator of the accommodation centre.

Q.26.C. Can the access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs be limited for security reasons or any other reason (see article 14, §7, last sentence)?

This is not specifically regulated.

Q.27. Q.27.A. Is a medical screening organised by the receiving State, is it mandatory or voluntary? Does it include HIV tests? (see article 9 which is an optional provision)

The law does not provide for a medical screening. The UNHCR points out that medical screening is undertaken upon arrival of newcomers in identification centres.

Q.27.B. Do the legal provisions on reception conditions ensure that asylum seekers receive at least emergency care and essential treatment of illness as requested by article 15 §1 which is a mandatory provision? Do they have a further access to health care?

Applicants are entitled to receive emergency care and essential treatments, also on a continuous basis for illness and accidents, which are provided by the National Health System. It is established that essential medical assistance of a generic nature, for at least 4 hours per day, must be provided in the centres that accommodate more than 100 applicants.
In addition to emergency and essential treatments, applicants for asylum and the members of their family are registered, by the manager of the centre, in the National Health System.

Q.27.C. What is the practice regarding access of asylum seekers to health care and how is it organised? In particular, what is the situation in accommodation centres (are doctors coming to the centres or do asylum seekers go to doctors outside)?

Based upon the information we received from the UNHCR, it results that medical facilities are available in all identification and temporary Stay centres for emergency care and essential treatment of illness. In case of serious pathologies, individuals are taken out to the closest public hospital.

Q.28. Q.28.A. What is the length of the period determined by the concerned Member State during which asylum seekers have no access to the labour market? (see article 11 which is a mandatory provision)

The length of the period during which asylum seekers have no access to the labour market is six months following the filing of the application.

Q.28.B. After that period, are asylum seekers or not obliged to obtain a work permit? In case is there a limit for the administration to deliver the permits and how quick are they delivered? What is their length?

In the event that the decision concerning the application for asylum is not adopted within a deadline of six months following the application and such delay is not attributable to the applicant, the relevant permit for the application for asylum is renewed for six months and the applicant is entitled (and not obliged) to carry out a work activity. Such renewed permit of stay allows the asylum seeker to carry out a work activity until termination of the procedure of review of the asylum seeker's application.
In this respect, it must be pointed out that delay is attributable to the applicant, in particular in the following circumstances:
A) Presentation of false documents and certificates concerning his/her identity or nationality or somehow related to the elements provided in the application;
B) Refusal to provide information which are necessary to ascertain his/her identity or nationality;
C) Failure to attend the hearing before the competent authority, although the notice to attend the hearing was communicated to the accommodation centre or at his/her domicile, for a reason not due to force majeure.
There are not data available as to the length of the procedure to deliver the renewed permit of stay.

Q.28.C. After that period, what are the conditions for access of the asylum seekers to the labour market? (in particular, are there rules concerning the maximum allowed of working hours or days per week, month or year, limits in terms of type of work or of professions authorised?

This is not regulated by the law.

Q.28.D. What are the rules in terms of priorities between asylum seekers on the one hand and nationals, EU or EEE citizens and legally third-country nationals on the other?

This is not regulated by the law

Q.28.E. Do asylum seekers have access to vocational training, does this or not depend of their right to access to the labour market, and in case at which conditions? (see article 12 which is optional regarding §1 and mandatory regarding § 2)

Asylum seekers are entitled to access vocational training, in particular to courses which are organised by the accommodation centre where the applicant is accommodated.

Q.28.F. Are the rules regarding access to the labour market adopted to transpose the directive more or less generous than the ones applicable previously?

The rules adopted further to the implementation of the Directive are more favourable than the previous ones. In particular, under previous legislation asylum seekers were not allowed to work, since such right was acknowledged only after the recognition of the refugee status. After the new law has been enacted asylum seekers are entitled to work in the event that a decision has not been issued by the competent authority after the expiration of a six-month term upon the filing of their application.

Q.29. Are reception conditions subject to the fact that asylum seekers do not have sufficient resources? Are asylum seekers requested to contribute to reception conditions when they have personal resources (for instance if they work) or to refund the authorities if it appears that they have resources? (see article 13 §§ 3 and 4 which are optional provisions)

Accommodation in an accommodation centre is subject to the circumstance that the asylum seeker does not have sufficient resources. As a consequence if they have sufficient resources they must take care of themselves autonomously.
In the event that they carry out a work activity after the elapsing of the six months deadline, they may still benefit from accommodation, provided that they contribute to the relevant expenses. The manager of the centre shall determine the entity and the modalities of collection of such contribution, taking into account the revenue of the asylum seeker and the costs associated to accommodation. Such contribution is not considered as a compensation for the service rendered but is used for the payment of the accommodation expenses of the asylum seeker who has paid the contribution.

In case it is assessed that the asylum seeker who has requested and obtained accommodation measures has, however, sufficient resources he/she shall reimburse the costs incurred by the centre.

7. SPECIAL NEEDS OF PARTICULAR CATEGORIES OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.30. Q.30.A. Which of the different categories of persons with special needs considered in the directive are taken into account in the national legislation (see article 17, §1 which is a mandatory provision): disabled people, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence? Include in your answer all other categories envisaged in national law.

Pursuant to article 8 of Legislative Decree 140/05, the specific needs of applicants and the members of their family must be taken into account for reception. In particular, the following categories are considered: minors, disabled, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons for whom it has been assessed that they have been subject to tortures, rapes and other forms of serious psychological, physical or sexual violence.

Q.30.B. How is their specific situation taken into account (see articles 13, §2, second indent, 16 §4 second sentence and 17 which are mandatory provisions)?

The law provides that special services of reception must be set up in favour of applicants with special needs that must take into account assistance measures which are required in order to deal with their needs. As mentioned above, 350 places are destined to people with special needs.
However, as stressed by the UNHCR, the identification and follow-up of vulnerable cases is an area that needs particular attention. In fact, although psyco-social support should be available in the centres, this is not always the practice.

Q.30.C. How and when are the special needs of the concerned persons supposed to be legally identified (see article 17 § 2 which is a mandatory provision and clarify how it has been interpreted by transposition)?

According to the law, the responsible in charge with centre must set up services guaranteeing a quality of life and health of asylum seekers, taking into account the needs of persons with special needs. The information that we received from NGO's report there are not specific rules that clarify how and when such needs have to be assessed.

Q.30.D. Is the necessary medical and other assistance provided to persons with special needs as requested by article 15, §2 which is a mandatory provision and in particular to victims of torture and violence as requested by article 20 which is a mandatory provision?

The necessary medical and other assistance is provided on condition that the coordinator of the accommodation centre has established a formal agreement with the local health authority (ASL). It has to be noted that such formal agreement is not mandatory.
It has been pointed out by some NGO's that in practice the kind of assistance which is provided depends on the persons in charge of the centre and in some cases access to such assistance may be difficult.

Q.31. About minors:

Q.31.A. Till which age are asylum seekers considered to be minor?

The definition of minors applies until the age of 18 years.

Q.31.B. How is access of minor asylum seekers to the education system ensured? Is it at school or in case inside accommodation centres and can it be considered as similar to the conditions for nationals as requested by article 10, §1?

According to the information we received from NGO's, minors have usually immediate access to the education and they may attend public schools with Italian students.
As pointed out by the UNHCR, when families are kept in identification centres, children do not have access to education outside the centre. Although retention in identification centres should not last longer than 20 days, it may happen that families are retained for a longer period, with children not attending schools

Q.31.C. Is access to education ensured not later than 3 months as requested by article 10, §2 (or after maximum one year if specific education for asylum seekers is provided) and till an expulsion decision is really enforced?

Except for the period in the centre of identification, minors are subject to the school obligation, pursuant to section 38 of the Single Text on immigration. A problem may arise in relation to unaccompanied minors, since the guardianship may require more than 3 months to be authorised.

Q.31.D. Is specific education (like language classes) available for asylum seekers, in particular to facilitate their effective access to the education system of the reception Member State (see article 10, §2 which is an optional provision)?

Minor children are provided with special support, such as language classes. In principle asylum seekers have access to language classes. In practice the situation may be different in each project. Some NGO's have reported that the local municipality tries to facilitate access of foreign students to the education system through specific actions. In other cases, there are specific actions.

Q.31.E. Are minors in general accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them? (see article 14, § 3)

Minors are in general accommodated with their parents.

Q.31.F. Do minors with special needs enumerated by article 18, §2 which is a mandatory provision, have access to appropriate mental health care and qualified counselling?

In general, minors with special needs have access to mental health care and qualified counselling.

Q.31.G. How and when is organised the representation of unaccompanied minors (guardianship, special organisation) and regularly assessed? (see article 19, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

A specific circular on unaccompanied minors asylum seekers has been adopted by the Ministry of Interior in April 2007. It has clarified the modalities to provide assistance to such minors. All public official involved (Border police, accommodation centres, questure) must ensure that unaccompanied minors have actual access to the asylum procedure and may submit an application, providing timely and complete information on the relevant rules. The Questura must involve the social assistance services of the Municipality where the minor is located and shall promptly inform the Juvenile Court ("Tribunale per i Minorenni") that shall appoint a guardian in accordance with applicable provisions contained in the Civil Code, as well as adopt the measures concerning accommodation of the minor. The authority must also inform the Committee for foreign minors at the Ministry of Labour. The appointed guardian must confirm the application for asylum and take immediate contact with the Questura. Pending the appointment of the guardian, assistance and accommodation of the unaccompanied minor is provided by the Comune where he/she is located.
The application is examined by the Commission for acknowledgement of the refugee status that will interview the minor together with the guardian. In case the application is rejected, the minor may ledge an appeal through his/her guardian.

Q.31.H. How is placement of unaccompanied minors organised (with adult relatives, a foster family, in special accommodation centres or other suitable accommodation)? (see article 19, §2 which is mandatory provision)

Pursuant to the recently adopted circular, the Municipality where the minor is located must immediately inform the SPRAR so that he/she can be inserted in the system. The aim of this circular is to ensure that unaccompanied minors are quickly placed in an accommodation centres belonging to the SPRAR.
Placement of unaccompanied minors is organised in compliance with the decision issued by the Juvenile Court ("Tribunale per i minorenni"). The concerned local entities may implement specific programs destined to unaccompanied minors, accessing the resources of the National Fund for asylum policies and services.

Unaccompanied children should not be retained in closed identification centres. If they happen to be transferred upon arrival to such centres, they should be transferred to a special centre as soon as they are identified. However, as pointed out by the UNHCR, there have been some cases where unaccompanied minors were retained for several weeks in identification centres.

Q.31.I. How is the tracing of the family members of the unaccompanied minors organised? Are measures taken to protect confidentiality of information when necessary? (see article 19, §3 which is a mandatory provision)

Taking into account resources available in the national Fund for asylum policies and services, and with the prior advice of the Committee for minors, the Ministry of Interior may enter into specific agreements with the International Organisation for Migration (IOM) as well as the Italian Red Cross, in order to implement programs aimed at tracing the family members of unaccompanied minors. The law requires that such programs are performed in the interest of minors and with the obligation of confidentiality, in order to protect safety of the asylum seeker.

8. EXCEPTIONAL MODALITIES OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.32. Apart from detention covered by the next question, are there exceptional modalities for reception conditions in the following cases and if yes, which ones and for how long are they applicable, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)?

Q.32.A. Persons with specific or special needs, regarding in particular the period of assessment of those needs?

In the period of assessment of the special needs, asylum seekers are hosted in the place is available at that moment as resulting from the National Central Service refer to point E below.

Q.32.B. Non availability of reception conditions in certain areas

Q.32.C. Temporarily exhaustion of normal housing capacities

Please refer to point E below.

Q.32.D. The asylum seeker is confined to a border post

The law does not provides for the possibility to confine asylum seekers to a border post. According to the infoemation we received from the UNHCR, it happened that undocumented asylum seekers have been confined for shorts periods in the international transit zone of the airports, until they were admitted to the territory as asylum seekers. Information centres for asylum seekers and refugees, in Milano Malpensa and Roma Fiumicino, intervene and provide assistance to asylum seekers.

Q.32.E. All other cases not mentioned in the directive (for instance urgent situation in case of a sudden high number of applicants outside a case of application of the directive on temporary protection).

In the event that there are no places available in accommodation or identification centres, the local competent authority ("Prefettura") grants a monetary contribution. Such financial aid is limited to the time strictly necessary to obtain availability of a place within an accommodation centre. The contribution is subject to the condition that the asylum seeker informs that competent authority of his/her domicile.
As pointed out by the UNHCR, in case of sudden high number of applicants, as it is the case during the summer period with increase of arrivals by sea, accommodation is provided in closed reception centres in Puglia (Bari) and Sicily (Cassibile).

Q.33. Detention of asylum seekers (we do not cover the situation of rejected asylum seekers detained for the purpose of their return) (see articles 6 §2, 7 §3, 13, §2 2nd indent and 14 §8 which implies that the directive is in principle applicable in case of detention):

Q.33.A. In which cases or circumstances and for which reasons[513] (identity verification in particular if the persons have no or false documents, protection of public order or national security, refugee status determination, way of entry into the territory, etc) can an asylum seeker be detained during the asylum procedure till his request has been finally rejected. Quote precisely in English in your answer the legal basis for detention of asylum seekers in national law.

It is important to clarify that the law does not provide that asylum seekers may be detained in prisons during the asylum procedure, but he/she may be retained in identification centres or in centres of temporary stay and assistance (these latter are the centres where illegal immigrants subject to an expulsion order are retained).
Pursuant to section 1-bis of Law Decree 30 December 1989, no. 416, as subsequently converted into law no. 39 of 1990, the asylum seeker cannot be retained only for the purpose of examining the asylum application which has been filed.
He/she may however be retained for the time strictly necessary to the definition of authorizations to stay on the territory of the State pursuant to the Single Text on immigration law contained in the Legislative Decree of 25 July 1998, no. 286 in the following cases:

[513] Please specify it article 18 §1 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 which specifies that "Member States shall not hold a person in detention for the sole reason that he/she is an applicant for asylum" is or not respected (even if has not yet to be transposed).

a. to check or assess the nationality or the identity of the asylum seeker, if she/he does not have travel or identification documents, or if he/she has presented false documents upon arrival in the State;
b. to check the elements upon which his asylum application is grounded, in the events that such elements are not immediately available;
c. if the procedure concerning the acknowledgement of the right of being admitted on the territory of the State is pending.

Asylum seeker must be retained in the following cases:

a. Following presentation of an asylum application filed by a foreigner who has been stopped after avoiding or trying to avoid border controls of immediately after, or, in any event, in conditions of irregular stay;
b. Following presentation of an asylum application by a foreigner who has already received an expulsion or refoulement measure.

NGOs point out that although retention in identification centres should take place only under the relevant circumstances listed above, this happens very often. This point is confirmed in the report drafted by the Commission presided by the UN Ambassador, Mr. De Mistura. This Commission was appointed last year by the Ministry of Interior in order to better assess the actual conditions inside identification centres and temporary stay centres. The results were presented early this year and highlight that "although retention of asylum seekers in identification centres (and the application of the simplified procedure) had been conceived as a residual practice to be applied only under very precise circumstances, it has happened that retention has been increasingly applied as a general practice".

Q.33.B. Has your member State adopted measures to transpose §3 of article 7 which is an optional provision? If yes, how has this provision been legally understood (is it a case of detention or an obligation to stay in and not leave a certain place?) and for which reasons can an asylum seeker be "confined" in such a place?

This provision has not been specifically transposed. However, it must be noted that asylum seekers may be retained in accommodation centres or centres of temporary stay and assistance under specific circumstances. (Please refer to questions 25 and 33 for description of such circumstances).

Q.33.C. Are there legally alternatives to detention, like obligation to report to the authorities, obligation to stay in a place, provision of a guarantor or of a financial guarantee?

There are not legal alternatives to detention.

Q.33.D. Which is the competent authority to order the detention of an asylum seeker? Explain if different authorities are involved to first take and later confirm the decision.

Retention is decided by the local police authority ("Questura"). It is the authority with which the asylum seeker must file his/her application for asylum.

Q.33.E. For how long and till which stage of the asylum procedure can an asylum seeker be detained?

The length of the retention period depends on the ground for the retention measure.
In the cases enumerated under point 33, A, 1, the law requires that the maximum length within the centre of the foreigner must be indicated in the retention measure but this can not be longer than 20 days.
In the cases enumerated under point 33, A, 2, (mandatory detention) a special simplified procedure has been established in order to examine the asylum application.
In case a), within two days upon reception of the application, the competent local police authority who has issued a retention measure must send the required documentation to the competent Refugee Commission that, within 15 days upon reception of the documentation, must proceed to the hearing. The decision on the application must be adopted within three days.
In case b), the competent local police authority issues a retention measure in a temporary accommodation centre pursuant to section 14 of the single text. In the event the foreigner is already retained in one of these centres, the police authority must requires a judicial measure extending such retention period for another thirty days in order to carry out the simplified procedure.

Q.33.F. In which places (can we call them "closed centres"?) are asylum seekers detained (places in a special closed centres reserved only to asylum seekers, together with returnees like illegal aliens or even in a normal prison, in case within separated areas or with the other detainees)? Indicate if a difference has to be made following the location of the "closed centres" at the border or on the territory? Which is the authority managing those places and is it the same as the one in charge of reception conditions?

In the cases listed under question 33, A, 1 a), b), c) and 2 a), asylum seekers are retained in an identification centre. Identification centres are reserved only to asylum seekers. Under 33, A, 2 b) they are detained in a temporary accommodation centre established, under the Single Text on immigration law, together with illegal immigrants.
Identification centres are in principle similar to accommodation centres. However, asylum seekers may go out only provided that they are authorized to do so. They are usually authorized to go out between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m., except for those who fall within the scope of application of articles 1-bis, para. 1, point a) [i.e. to check or assess the nationality or the identity of the asylum seeker, if she/he does not have travel or identification documents, or if he/she has presented false documents upon arrival in the State] and para. 2, point a) [following presentation of an asylum application filed by a foreigner who has been stopped after avoiding or trying to avoid border controls of immediately after, or, in any event, in conditions of irregular stay]. In these latter cases, the asylum seeker may be authorised to go out from the centre only for serious and proved health and family reasons or for reasons pertaining to the exam of the asylum application.
The Prefetto may appoint to manage the centre, through specific agreements, public or private entities that operate within the area of assistance to asylum seekers and immigrants, or within the area of social assistance.

Q.33.G. Does UNHCR and NGOs have access to the places of detention and under which conditions?

Article 1-bis, para. 3, of Law Decree 1989, no. 416, expressly states that UNCHR representatives are authorized to access the centre. Such access shall also be ensured in favour of lawyers and associations who act in favour of refugees with a consolidated experience within this sector.
The enactment regulation has established in this respect that the representatives of the associations and organizations for the protection of refugees, provided that they have acquired proven and adequate experience for at least three years within this sector, may be authorised by the competent Prefetto, to access specific areas of the centres for the visits, during working hours. The Prefetto grants the authorization, warning on the need of taking account of confidentiality and safety of asylum seekers.
In practice NGOs point out that access to detention places is extremely difficult.

Q.33.H. What appeal(s) can asylum seekers introduce against the fact he is detained? Is article 18 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Where an applicant for asylum is held in detention, Member States shall ensure that there is a possibility of speedy judicial review" respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed)?

As mentioned above, in the event that the asylum seeker is mandatory detained, a simplified procedure is applied in order to ensure a speedy judicial review.
However, while detention in a CPT must be validated by a judicial authority (including the extension of the 30 days maximum detention term up to 60 days), no specific measure to lodge an appeal against admission to the simplified procedure and consequent transfer to an identification centre is provided for by the law.

Q.33.I Is the directive on reception conditions considered to be in principle applicable to the places where asylum seekers are detained? In particular which information do they receive about their rights, which access do they have to legal advice and health care?

On these issues the conclusions contained in the report of the Commission presided by Mr. De Mistura provide relevant information.

- Except for the centre located in Foggia – Borgo Mezzanone, asylum seekers are in fact retained within structures, with a scarce possibility of going out during the day as it is confirmed by the limited numbers of authorizations granted.
- The circumstance that in the same area there are centres with very different purposes provokes a certain assimilation. In the event that polyfunctional structures are present, there is the concrete risk of a practical assimilation of identification centres with centres of temporary stay;

- Information to asylum seekers on their rights and legal assistance is in fact extremely limited in such centres. It appears that asylum seekers retained in such centres receive a lower assistance than asylum seekers who are inserted in the SPRAR.
- Only a very limited number of asylum seekers who leave the centres of identification (because they are acknowledged as refugees or benefit from another humanitarian protection) ae inserted in the SPRAR in order to benefit from social integration patterns.

As a matter of fact, Decree of the President of the Republic of 16 September 2004, no. 303, has introduced specific regulations concerning identification centres before the adoption of Legislative Decree 140/2005. Asylum seekers retained in such centres should benefit from several rights similar to those that contained in the legislative Decree.
The competent police authority issues in favour of the applicant who is detained in the centre a personal statement attesting his position as asylum seeker. Together with this statement the asylum seeker is informed of the possibility: 1) to contact the UNHCR in every phase of the procedure; and 2) of the rules contained in the DPR in relation to visits and stay in the centre.
The asylum seeker detained in the centre is entitled to health assistance. In the centres that accommodate more than 100 asylum seekers must ensure health services of first assistance for at least 4 hours per day.
The law also requires that the centre provides a service of legal information in the matter of acknowledgement of the refugee status.

Q.33.J. Apart from freedom of movement, what are the main differences between normal reception conditions and exceptional modalities for reception conditions in case of detention, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)? If it is about closed centres, are the regulations of those places in line with the requirements of the directive (is article 13, §2, second indent of the directive following which "Member States shall ensure that standards of living is met (…) in relation to the situation of persons who are in detention" respected?).

In compliance with the instructions received by the Prefettura, local competent authority, the manager of the centre must set up services in order to ensure a quality of life that dignity and health of asylum seekers.
The UNHCR has pointed out that in practice, as the period of stay in identification centres should in principle be very short (20 days), there are in general very little activities to facilitate orientation and future integration.

Q.33.K. Are measures taken to avoid detention of asylum seekers with special needs (if yes, which ones?) or are special measures taken because of their needs?

The Decree of the President of the Republic 303/2004 requires that services are provided taking into account the needs of families, including spouses and first degree relatives, such as minors, disables, old people, pregnant women, persons who in their country of origin where subject to discriminations, abuses and sexual exploitation. Disabled and pregnant women are generally given priority to find appropriate places for them.

Amnesty International points out that the needs of pregnant women are often not adequately addressed. In many cases there is not a translator when they undergo a medical examination and immediately after the birth they are often carried back again to the retention centre.

Q.33.L. Can minor asylum seekers be detained together with relatives? Can unaccompanied minor asylum seekers be detained? If yes, are there special measures which take into account that children are concerned?

Minors are usually detained with their parents. In principle, unaccompanied minors can never be detained.

Amnesty International highlights that there is a general lack of official figures on the number of minors detained in retention centres upon arrival at the border. They indicate that they received indications about 900 minors detained in the period 2002-2005. Moreover, although pursuant to the law unaccompanied minors can never be detained and the other minors can be detained with their family for a maximum of 20 days, in practice these provisions are often not complied with. They also indicate that detention of families is applied as a general practice and not on a case by case basis, without providing the concerned persons with a written and motivated decision along with the information on the modalities of appeal. In many case such detention measures would not be validated by the Court, as required by the law. As a general remark, minors would be subject to an inadequate treatment in such centres, thus breaching the rules contained in the directive that require to take appropriate measures in relation to this vulnerable group (no separation from adults, body searches and seizures during the identification process, long waits during such processes, provision of inadequate legal information etc.)

Q.33.M. In particular is article 10 regarding access to education of minors respected in those places?

Access to education for minors is not provided in identification centres. It must be taken into account that the detention period should not last for more than 25 days.

Q.33.N. How many asylum seekers are for the moment detained in your Member State? Which proportion does this represent in comparison of the total number of asylum seekers at the same moment?

These figures are not available. UNHCR has pointed out that a vast majority of asylum seekers are admitted to the simplified procedure and retained in identification centres. ICS in his 2006 report has estimated that approximately 62% the asylum seekers who have filed an application in 12 months (from 21 April 2005 up to 27 April 2006) have been retained either in an identification centre or in a CPT.

9. ORGANISATION OF THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.34. Explain if the system of providing reception conditions is centralised or decentralised (which levels of government do provide practically reception conditions?) (do not confuse this question with question number 3 about the competence to make rules about reception conditions).

Local and regional government entities (city councils, province etc) provide practically reception conditions. In order to optimize the protection system for asylum seekers, refugees and foreigners with a humanitarian permit of stay, to facilitate coordination, at national level, of services of territorial accommodation, the Ministry of Interior has created, with the involvement of the association of Italian city councils (ANCI) and the UNHCR, a central system ("Servizio Centrale") of information, promotion, consultation, monitoring and technical support of local entities that provide reception conditions. The central system is managed by the ANCI.
The National Commission for the right of asylum (hereinafter referred to as the "National Commission") has been established by Law Decree of 30 December 1989, no. 416, as amended by legislative Decree of 2003. The National Commission is set up within the Department for civil freedoms and immigration of the Ministry of Interior. The National Commission is chaired by a Prefetto (government authority) and is composed by an officer of the Presidency of the Council of Ministers, a diplomatic officer, an officer of the Department for civil freedoms and immigration and an officer of the Department of public safety. A representative of the UNHCR in Italy takes part to the meetings. Where necessary, sections with the same composition may be established.
The National Commission has duties of address and coordination of territorial commissions, of training and updating of members of the same commissions, of collection of statistical data as well as decision powers concerning revocation of the status of refugee.
The Decree of the President of the Republic 303/2004 has specified that the National Commissions's duties are:

- the creation of the documentation centre on the social-political-economical situation of the countries of origin of the asylum seekers;
- the definition of guidelines for the evaluation of the asylum applications;
- the collaboration with the Ministry of foreign affairs, and in particular Italian permanent representations with international organisations in the area of asylum and human rights;
- the collaboration with similar entities of member states of the European Union;
- organisation of training and updating courses for the members of the Territorial commissions,
- the creation and the updating of a electronic database containing useful information for the monitoring of asylum applications;
- the monitoring of asylum seekers flows also for the purpose of proposing the creation of new territorial commissions;
- the provision, where necessary, of information to the Prime Minister for the adoption of measures of temporary protection.

Q.35. In case, are accommodation centres public or/and private (managed by NGOs? If yes, are the NGOs financially supported by the State?)[514]

[514] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Accommodation centres can be managed by NGOs following a convention entered into with the local municipal body (Comune). The State finances 80% of the total amount required for the accommodation of asylum seekers.

Q.36. In case, how many accommodation centres are there in your Member State (distinguish in your answer between public and private centres)?[515]

In 2006, 102 projects have been activated by local and regional government entities. As it has been pointed out by NGO's, the projects are usually managed together by local NGO's and municipalities, although the level of cooperation may be different in each project.

Q.37. Is there in the legislation a plan or are there rules in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory of your Member State to avoid their concentration in some areas like big cities or to share the costs of their reception between central, regional and local authorities?

The law only provides that asylum seekers are spread all over the territory of Italy.
The new system aims at building and managing an accommodation system spread all over the country, avoiding concentration in big cities or in arrival areas. The 102 which have been activated in 2006 are effectively spread all over Italy.

Q.38. Does a central body representing all the actors (like NGOs) involved in reception conditions exist? Does it play a consultative role for the State authorities, a coordination role for the actors or any other role?[516]

According to law 39/90, article 1-sexies, there is a central body named "Servizio Centrale" (Central Service) which coordinates the actors involved in the reception system. NGOs are not represented in the Servizio Centrale.

Q.39. Q.39.A. Which is the body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions as requested by article 23 which is mandatory provision? Include in your answer which is the competent ministry (Interior, Social affairs, etc) for reception conditions?

The Central System carries out functions of coordination on the functioning of the national system, ensuring the necessary technical support, and supervises management of the projects.

Q.39.B. Has your Member State (like the Czech Republic did recently) approved quality standards (not necessary legally binding) for housing services (for instance about the number of persons per bedroom on the basis of its size, number of accessible toilets, bathrooms, showers and washing machines per number of persons, existence of common rooms with radio, television, newspapers, books, computers, accessibility of telephone, existence of recreative rooms for children,…) to be respected in particular in accommodation centres?[517]

[515] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[516] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

The Central Service has approved an operational handbook ("Manuale Operativo") for the setting up and management of accommodation and integration services for asylum seekers, refugees and foreigners benefiting from humanitarian protection. The purpose of the document is to provide the operators with a useful instrument for the realisation of the projects, helping them in programming the activities of social and legal assistance as well as integration.
The handbook contains a comprehensive set of guidelines describing in details structural and organisational requirements of accommodation centres (both for collective centres and private apartments) and the type of assistance to be provided to asylum seekers within the centres.
In practice, the handbook indicates how and where the centres should be located (living areas easily connected through means of transport), hygienic-sanitarian features, subdivision and size of spaces, personnel skills, management team, material reception conditions etc.

Q.39.C. How is this system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions organised?[518]

As mentioned above (please refer to answer no. 34), the Ministry of Interior, with the involvement of the association of Italian city councils (ANCI) and the UNHCR, has set up a central system of information, promotion, consultation, monitoring and technical support of local entities that provide reception conditions. The central system is managed by the ANCI. In particular, such Central System has been charged with the following tasks:

- Monitoring the presence on the territory of asylum seekers, refugees and foreigners with a humanitarian permit of stay;
- Establishing a database of the interventions carried out at local level in favour of asylum seekers and refugees;
- Promoting the diffusion of information on interventions;
- Providing technical assistance to local authorities;
- Promoting and carrying out, together with the Ministry of foreign affairs, of repatriation programs though the international Organisation for migrations or other national or international entities, in the humanitarian field.

In October 2003, ANCI entered into an agreement with the IOM that brought to the creation of the SID ("Sistemi di intervento decentrati e in rete"). SID is aimed at setting up accommodation and integration systems in favour of asylum seekers, refugees and vulnerable persons, as well as cooperation interventions.

Q.39.D. Does the body in charge of guidance, control and monitoring produce reports about the level of reception conditions? If yes, how frequently and are they public?[519]

[517] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[518] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[519] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

In order to analyse the evolution of the system of reception of asylum seekers in Italy, to understand the problems and highlight good practices, the Association of Italian City Councils (ANCI) has started to collaborate with the CENSIS (Italian Institute of statistics) for the purpose of drafting an annual Report on the Reception System for Asylum Seekers. The fist report will be available starting from October 2006. Some figures have been anticipated at the end of June.

Q.40. Q.40. A. What is the total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions for the last year for which figures are available (see article 22 obliging Member States to calculate those statistics about which we also asked the Commission to require them from Member States for mid June)?

Based upon the figures which have been anticipated at the end of June and that will be contained in the first annual report issued by the ANCI, it results that the total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions in 2005 amounted to 4.654. In the first quarter of the year 2006 (January-April 2006) the number amounts to 3.344.

Q.40. B. What is the total budget of reception conditions in euro for the last year for which figures are available?

Activities and interventions in favour of asylum seekers are financed through a National Fund for asylum policies and services, instituted within the Ministry of Interior. This Fund includes:
- Government budget in favour of asylum seekers and refuges;
- Financial contribution from the European Fund for refugees;
- Financial contributions and gifts of private entities, associations and organisations, also at the international level, and made by other entities of the European Union.

Pursuant to article 13 of legislative Decree 140/05, the government budget amounted in 2004 to Euro 5,16 million. In 2005 such amount was increased of Euro 8.865.500 and in 2006 of Euro 17.731.000.
Based upon the 2006 ICS report, it results that the total budget granted to the SPRAR in 2005 amounted to Euro 14.970.354. Out of this amount only Euro 10.604.732 were destined to ensure the activity of the accommodation centres. The residual amount was destined to cover the following costs: 1) activity of the central system of protection; 2) assisted repatriation; 3) contributions of first assistance.

Q.40.C. What is the average cost of reception conditions in euro per asylum seeker for the last year for which figures are available?

Official figures are not available. However, based upon the calculation that has been performed by ICS in their 2006 report, taking into account the funds allocated to accommodation of asylum seekers and the number of asylum seekers who have benefited from such accommodation, it results that in 2005 the average cost per person amounted to approximately 19 Euro.
As ICS points out such amount is all inclusive since it refers to the costs for housing and food, as well as for all the services that are supplied to the asylum seeker and to his/her family.

Q.40.D. Are the costs of reception conditions of asylum seekers supported by the central/federal or federated government or are they shared with regional and/or local authorities?

The approved projects of local government authorities are financed through the National Fund for Refugees.

Q.40. E. Is article 24 § 2 of the directive following which "Member States shall allocate the necessary resources in connection with the nationals provisions enacted to implement this directive" respected?[520]

Legislative Decree of 30.5.2005 that has enacted the directive contains a specific provision in relation to financial resources. In particular, the amount of such financial resources has been remarkably increased in comparison to prior legislation.
However, the amount of financial resources available is not sufficient to cover the requests of asylum seekers. In fact, in 2005 the financial resources made available through the Fund for Refugees have allowed to finance 81 local government entities for a total of approximately 2.200 places, but the applications filed by asylum seekers amounted to 8.000.

Q.41. Q.41. A. What is the total number of persons working for reception conditions?

These figures are currently not available.

Q.41.B. How is the training of persons working in accommodation centres organised? Does it take into account specific needs of unaccompanied minors when relevant as well as the gender dimension? (see article 14 §5, 19 § 4 and also 24 §1 which are mandatory provisions)?

Although the law expressly requires that persons working in accommodation centres must receive appropriate training, it is not specified how such training must be provided. Based upon the information we received from NGO's it appears that training is supplied occasionally and often the responsible in charge of the centres act as mentors for the personnel working in the centres. At the central level, training is not sufficiently provided.

Q.41.C. Are there rules about the deontology of persons working in accommodation centres, in particular on confidentiality?

No there not specific rules on deontology, although the operational handbook sets forth some criteria that should be followed by operators who work in accommodation centres.

10. IMPACT OF THE DIRECTIVE

[520] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Legal impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.42. Specify if there are or not big problems with the translation of the directive in the official language of your Member State and give in case a list of the worst examples of provisions which have been badly translated? (please note that this question has in particular been added to the questionnaire concerning the new Member States)

The translation into Italian has not raised any problems so far.

Q.43. Where there precise legal rules on reception conditions for asylum seekers before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the directive (if yes, specify what the nature of those rules was (legislation, regulation, administrative instructions,…)?

Law 189/2002 reforming partially the Immigration Law 286/1998 contains two Articles on recognition and reception of refugees. Art. 32, in particular, has for the first time foresees at a legislative level the Sistema di protezione per richiedenti asilo e rifugiati. Until then there were only projects funded by European and national funds and ruled by administrative acts.
Art. 32 does not state anything about conditions or standard of reception and also the Regulation of application 2004 n. 303 that, as stated in Art. 21, par. 2, entered into force on 20 April 2005, concerns the procedures rather than reception conditions.
Eventually Legislative Decree 2004/303 has been the first law on reception conditions.

Q.44. Did the legal rules applicable to reception conditions become more clear, precise, coherent or detailed with the adoption of the transposition norms (for instance do you now have after the transposition one basic text dealing with reception conditions instead of numerous different texts in the past?

Having a legislative text concerning only reception conditions has definitely improved the clarity and coherence of the provisions: now we have the law setting the standard and rules on reception with two Administrative circulars dealing with the details of application, the institution of Fund to finance the activities.

The Commission presided by Mr. De Mistura has emphasized that the link between the system implemented by Legislative Decree 140/05 and the legislation concerning identification centres appear in general very confused. Current provisions bring to inconsistent interpretations and favour the spread of different practices all over the territory, cause uncertainty and as a consequence affect the good functioning of the system.

Q.45. Did the transposition of the directive imply important changes in national law or were the changes of minor importance? In case, list the most important changes that have been introduced.

The main changes in national law can be summarised in the following:

The clear statement of duties upon the administration such as information and standard of assistance;
The limitation of the discretion such as in the case of revocation of the measures and of the freedom of circulation;
The new role given to the Prefettura, that plays a very active a crucial role in all the phases of the reception measures since the admission until the revocation.

Political impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.46. Explain briefly if there has been an important debate about the transposition of the directive (in particular in the Parliament, but possibly also in the government, between political parties, including in medias, etc; underline in case the main points which have been discussed or have created difficulties)

As mentioned at the beginning the standard system of transposition of Directives does not ease the debate and the involvement of Parliament on each Directive. Between political parties there has not been any debate at all and so also in media. Only some NGOs have tried to shed lights on the Directive and its transposition but reaching only those very much involved on the subject.

Q.47. Did the transposition of the directive contribute to make the internal rules stricter or more generous? In particular, did your Member State use the occasion of the transposition to abolish more favourable provisions of national law? Does your Member State still have rules more favourable than the provisions of the directive (if yes, try to give the more important examples).

The transposition of the directive has not lowered the level of protection existing before also because, as above stated, there was not before a legislative system and a clear definition of standard. However it is important to stress that the level was already lowered by the reform of the asylum procedure, in particular the provision of a simplified procedure with the detention of asylum seekers in Centre of Identifications or Centre of temporary stay, where asylum seekers can stay with aliens awaiting for deportation. The mix between the new rules on asylum procedure and reception conditions bring to see in complex the level of protection lowered. The reason is not the reception of Directive 2003/9/CE but, considering the relevant changes of rules on procedures, the impact of the Directive's transposition is minimum.

11. ANY OTHER INTERESTING ELEMENT

Q.48. What are in your view the weaknesses and strengths of the system of reception conditions in your Member State?

One of the main problems of the management of the system in Italy is the structural lack of data on the matter of asylum (a similar consideration can formulate about immigration). This reflects on the lack of analyses, reports and evaluation of policies. It is also very difficult to give opinion about the reception system due to the differences that there are in Italy among the different projects realised by the local networks.
Another point of weakness of the system of reception conditions is that with the effect of the new asylum procedures only a large minority of asylum seekers will be able to benefit of them because almost all the asylum seekers will be detained either in a Centre of Identification or in a Centre of Temporary Stay.
The strength is the network of NGOs and local authorities that in last years have worked together granting reception at a local level with some interesting experience.

Q.49. Mention any good practice in your Member State which could be promoted in other Member States

In November 2006, within the framework of the project EQUAL IntegRARsi, the NGO ARCI has started an experimental innovative initiative in favour of asylum seekers. ARCI has set up a call center where asylum seekers and refugees can address their questions on the asylum procedure, on the status of refugee and more in general on every issue that may be related to their position. This initiative is aimed at providing correct and appropriate information to the concerned persons. This initiative also involve local authorities. (Additional information may be found on the website: www.arci.it/news.php?id=7292)

It is important to note that IntegRARsi (the framework) involves the Association of Italian municipalities (ANCI), the IOM and the main NGOs that work in favour of refugees

Q.50. Please add here any other interesting element about reception conditions in your Member State which you did not had the occasion to mention in your previous answers.

QUESTIONNAIRE FOR THE NATIONAL REPORT ON THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE DIRECTIVE :
RECEPTION CONDITIONS OF 27 JANUARY 2003

IN: THE REPUBLIC OF LATVIA

by Gromovs Juris
Mag.iur., dr.cand.iur, Lecture of the University of Latvia, jurisgromovs@yahoo.com
11 NOVEMBER 2007

1. NORMS OF TRANSPOSITION

Q.1. Identify the main norm of transposition (indicate the title, date, number, date of entry into force and references of publication into the official journal) and indicate its legal nature (legislative, regulatory, administrative); indicate in your answer if this norm was only devoted to the directive or if it has been included in a more general text and indicate in that case by quoting precisely the numbers of the provisions adopted to transpose the directive.

The provisions of Directive were transposed by the Asylum Law, which was adopted by the Parliament of Latvia on 7 March 2002 (published in The Official Journal, 48 (2623), 27.03.2002.) and it came into force on 1 September 2002. This Law was subsequently amended on 2 February 2005 (The Official Journal, 18 (3176), 02.02.2005), on 7 June 2006 (came into force on 10 July 2006, The Official Journal, 98 (3466), 27.06.2006) and on 25 October 2007 (came into force on 21 November 2007, The Official Journal, 179 (3755), 07.11.2007.). It contains the special informative reference to the EU Directives, that indicates that "This Law includes legal norms arising from Council Directive 2003/9/EC of 27 January 2003 laying down minimum standards for the reception of asylum seekers".

Technically speaking, most of the provisions of the Asylum Law related to the reception of the asylum seekers were already in compliance with the requirements of the Directive upon its entry into force. Therefore only Para.1 and 2, Article 3 of the Asylum Law were changed in order to ensure compliance with Articles 9 and 15 of the Directive.

Q.2. List by order of importance by using numbers (1, 2, 3) the others norms of transposition if there are more than one (indicate for each norm the title, date, number and references of publication into the official journal; include in your answer the administrative measures taken to ensure implementation of the directive and of the transposition norms like regulations, administrative circulars, special instructions,…)

The provisions of the Asylum Law related to the reception of asylum seekers were implemented by a number of the by-laws – the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of the Republic of Latvia (The Government). It is not possible to number them in order of the importance since they have an equal force and cover the different aspects of the reception (e.g. expenses for acquisition of food, medical examination):

1. The Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 8 February 2005 No 119 "On the amount of expenses for acquisition of food, as well as hygiene and first necessity goods for the asylum seeker and the procedure of cover of these expenses", The Official Journal, 27 (3185) 17.02.2005,

2. The Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 3 September 2002 No 406 "On the asylum seeker's personal identity document and the procedure of its issue" (published in the Official Journal 127 (2702) 06.09.2002.,amended by the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 8 February 2005 Nr.112 « Amendments to the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 3 September 2002 No 406 "On the asylum seeker's personal identity document and the procedure of its issue" (The Official Journal, 24 (3182) 11.02.2005),
3. The Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 14 June 2005 No 413 "Procedure of person's medical and laboratory examination, compulsory and enforced isolation and treatment in the cases of contagious infectious diseases" (The Official Journal, 96 (3254) 17.06.2005.),
4. The Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 9 August 2005 No 586 "On order in which the education is ensured for the minors-children of the asylum seekers or to the minors- asylum seekers", (The Official Journal, 126 (3284) 11.08.2005),

5. The Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 19 December 2006 No 1046 «Procedure of organisation and financing of the medical care», (The Official Journal, 208, 30.12.2006.)

6. The Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 20 January 2004 No 44 "Regulations on he work permits for the foreigners (The Official Journal, 12 (2960) 23.01.2004.), subsequently amended by the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 22 April 2004 No 396 (The Official Journal, 68 (3016) 30.04.2004, by the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 13 September 2005 No 700 (The Official Journal, 147 (3305) 15.09.2005) and by the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 12 December 2006 No 998 (The Official Journal, 200 (3568) 15.12.2006).

In relation to the issues of the state ensured legal aid for asylum seekers:
7. The State Ensured Legal Aid Law (The Official Journal, 52 (3210) 01.04.2005).

8. The Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 6 November 2006 Nr.920 "Regulations on types of the state ensured legal aid, maximum number of hours, order and amount of the payments" (The Official Journal, 181 (3549) 10.11.2006)

The issue of the tracing of families of unaccompanied minor is regulated by:
10. the Law on the Protection of the Rights of the Child (The Official Journal, 199/200 (1260/1261), 08.07.1998.)

The issue of education of the asylum seekers:

11. The Education Law (The Official Journal, 343/344 (1404/1405), 17.11.1998.))

12 The Amendments to the General Education Law (The Official Journal, 99 (3257) 28.06.2005.)

13. The Draft Amendments to the Education Law

The issue of management of the reception centres and the examination of the different complaints of the asylum seekers:
14. The Administrative Procedure Law (The Official Journal, 97 (2672), 28.06.2002.)
15. the State Administration Structure Law (The Official Journal, 94 (2669) 21.06.2002)

Appointment of the guardian for the minor asylum seeker:
16. Law On Orphan's Courts (The Official Journal, 107 (3475) 07.07.2006)

In addition 2 (two) administrative acts cover some practical issues of the work of the only reception centre in Latvia- the issues of the internal order of the reception centre are regulated by the Regulations of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs «On the Internal Order of the Asylum seekers' Reception Centre «Mucenieki»» (The Official Journal, 116 (2881), 22.08.2003.) and by the Order of the Head of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs of 24 July 2003 No 16/08 « On the approval of the Statute of the Asylum seekers' Reception Centre «Mucenieki and of the description of the positions» (not published).

2 Draft Laws in the area of asylum also are currently in the legislative procedure:

1) The Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia.
2) The Draft Amendments to the Asylum Law (the Draft Law of 29.03.2007 nr.VSS-494).

Q.3. Explain which level of government is competent to adopt the legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers (specify in particular in case of a federal or regional State, if it is the federal/central power or the components; in case, specify below when it is impossible for you to answer a question because it is about the competence of the components and it is impossible for you to gather reliable information about all of them)

According to the Constitution the Republic of Latvia is a parliamentary republic. All the major legislative instruments of the asylum policy are adopted in the form of laws. In its turn the Cabinet of Ministers (the Government) is the highest executive body, which may issue the legislative acts in the field of asylum because such a right is specially delegated to it by the Asylum Law.

Q.4. Explain the legal technical choices done to transpose the directive (comment on the nature and level of the norms used to do the transposition: legislative, regulatory, administrative like instructions, etc). Add any other element about the technique of transposition of the directive which is interesting for the implementation of Community law.

Mainly the legislative norms (laws and by-laws) were used in order to transpose the directive. In addition 2 administrative acts were issued as well in order to cover some practical issues of the work of the only reception centre in Latvia- the issues of the internal order of the reception centre are regulated by the Regulations of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs «On the Internal Order of the Asylum seekers' Reception Centre «Mucenieki»» (The Official Journal, 116 (2881), 22.08.2003.) and by the Order of the Head of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs of 24 July 2003 No 16/08 « On the approval of the Statute of the Asylum seekers' Reception Centre «Mucenieki and of the description of the positions» (not published).

In accordance with Para 1 and 2, Section 15 of the Administrative Procedure Law in administrative proceedings, institutions and courts shall apply external regulatory enactments, the legal norms of international law and the European Union (Community), as well as the general principles of law.

Institutions and courts shall observe the following hierarchy of the legal force of external regulatory enactments:

1) the Constitution (Satversme);
2) laws, and the Governmental regulations adopted in accordance with Article 81 of the Constitution (Satversme);
3) the Governmental regulations; and
4) binding regulations of local governments.

Q.5. Mention if there is a general tendency to just copy the provisions of the directive into national legislation without redrafting or adaptation them to national circumstances? If yes, give some of the worst examples and explain if there is a risk that those provisions remain unapplied or will create difficulties of implementation in the future.

In general the methodology of the transposition of the directives in Latvia is flexible and depends very much on the goals, actual content and specifics of the directive in question. In case of the transposition of directive nr.2003/9 it is clear, that its provisions were redrafted and adapted to the circumstances of Latvia, since this directive provides for the variety of choices and at some points contains rather general provisions, that need to be made more clear in the national legal acts (e.g. requirement to have certain procedural provisions in place can not be "copied", but requires the detailed regulation of the subject-matter).

Q.6. Have all the texts necessary to ensure the effective implementation of the new rules of transposition been adopted, prepared or at least foreseen in the future (for example a regulation completing a new law and the necessary instructions telling the administration how to apply the new rules)?

Practically all the legal texts necessary to ensure the effective implementation of the new rules of the transposition were adopted. However based on the analysis of the asylum legislation of Latvia, which is currently in force, it could be also concluded that the legal provisions in relation to the asylum seekers with the special needs and the procedure of their identification, although some work is done by the responsible state institutions in practice.

2 Draft Laws in the area of asylum also are currently in the legislative procedure:

1) The Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia, which is currently being examined before its submission to the Government, will replace the current legal regulation of the asylum system - the above-mentioned Asylum Law and all by-laws issued on its basis. When the Draft Law will be adopted in Parliament in the 2nd reading, the development of 5 by-laws (Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers) for its implementation will start. The Draft Law does not bring any fundamental changes to the existing system of the reception of the asylum seekers. Moreover the existing governmental by-laws covering the issue of the reception will be in force for a maximum of 6 months since the adoption of the Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia. After that they will be replaced by the new by-laws.
2) The Draft Amendments to the Asylum Law (the Draft Law of 29.03.2007 nr.VSS-494) – This Law will change only the way of the appointment of the guardian for an unaccompanied minor. This legal regulation will be in force until the replacement by the above-mentioned future Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia.

2. BIBLIOGRAPHY

Q.7. Has an in-depth preparatory study been made public about the changes at the occasion of the transposition? If yes, thanks for trying to provide us a copy (please contact to answer this question adequately the body and person who was responsible for the preparation of the transposition of the directive in the public administration).

No in –depth special preparatory studies were made in relation to the Asylum Law in force or to the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia.

Q.8. Quote any recent scientific book or article published about the directive, the transposition rules or the question of reception conditions for asylum seekers in general (answer even if this literature is only available in your language and provide the complete title in your language (without translation) with all references; indicate author, title, in case name of periodical, year and place of publication).

- H.Battjes, K.M.De Vries, The Report on Asylum in the EU Member States: Reception of Asylum Seekers and examination of the Asylum Applications, Vrije University of Amsterdam, November 2005,
- J.Gromovs, D.Paegle, Rokasgrāmata darbam ar patvēruma meklētājiem, International Organisation for Migration, Rīga, 2006.

Q.9. Quote any interesting decision of jurisprudence based on the implementation of the new rules of transposition of the directive (indicate references of publication if any)?

For the moment no case-law of the Latvian courts exists on the issues related to the transposition of Directive.

3. GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

The purpose of the following two questions is to help the reader to understand easily and quickly the system of reception conditions in your Member State and also to avoid that you have to repeat general elements in other parts of the questionnaire. Please do not write more than one or maximum two pages and do not include large historical developments.

Q.10. Describe in general the system of reception conditions in your Member State (in particular which are the main actors in charge of reception conditions?)

The procedure of granting the asylum involves the following institutions are involved:

a) Institutions under the Ministry of Interior:

- The Refugee Affairs Department of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs (referred further in the text as the Refugee Affairs Department). It is the first instance for the examination of the asylum seekers' applications.
- The Asylum seekers' reception centre 'Mucenieki' of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs (referred further in the text as the reception centre).
- State Border Guard (person must submit an application for asylum to the State Border Guard at the border control point or its territorial office and after r the application is submitted, officials of the State Border Guard will interview the asylum seeker.)

b) Since 10 July 2006 (entry into force of the amendments to the Asylum Law of 7 July 2006) the district administrative court and the regional administrative court were granted the function of the examination of appeals of the asylum seekers.

Section 13 of the Asylum Law provides for that the State Border Guard shall interview an asylum seeker who has submitted an application and the information obtained as a result of the interviews shall be submitted to the Refugee Affairs Department of the of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs together with the application not later than within three days of the day of submission of the application if there is a reason to believe that any of the following conditions exist:

1) the application is obviously unfounded – does not, according to its substance, conform to the criteria referred by the Asylum Law – or the application obviously lacks credibility – the narrative of the asylum seeker is contradictory, inconsistent or impossible according to substance;

2) the application of an asylum seeker for the granting of refugee status is being examined in another country.

3) the asylum seeker has obtained refugee status in another country and may avail himself or herself of its protection without justified fear of persecution referred to in the Asylum Law;

4) an asylum seeker has the citizenship of a country where the threat referred to in the Asylum Law does not exist;

5) an asylum seeker has submitted an application without a justified explanation in order to prevent expected deportation although he or she has had the opportunity to submit an application earlier; or

6) the asylum seeker, before arriving in the Republic of Latvia, has resided in a country where the following conditions exist:

a) the country has ratified the 28 July 1951 Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees and the 31 January 1967 Protocol Relating to the Status of Refugees:

b) in that country the asylum seeker is not in danger of the death penalty or corporal punishment, torture, or inhumane or degrading treatment; and

c) in that country the asylum seeker could have asked for and received protection.

The Refugee Affairs Department shall examine the received interview materials within two working days of the day of receipt thereof. If the Department considers that the application conforms to the conditions specified above, it shall take a decision to refuse the granting of refugee or alternative status.

The asylum seeker or his or her authorised person may appeal a decision of the Department to the Board within one working day. The Board shall examine such complaint within two working days of the day of receipt thereof. During the period of claim examination the person shall be considered to be an asylum seeker.

If the State Border Guard, the Department or the Board does not comply with the time periods in the Asylum Law for well-founded reasons or if the Board recognises that the application is justified, the application shall be examined in accordance with the procedures prescribed by Section 16, Paragraph two the Asylum Law (The procedure for the examination of applications if submitted by persons located in the Republic of Latvia - The Department shall examine the application and the materials obtained as a result of interviews, and not later than within three months of the day of submission of the application take a decision to grant or to refuse the granting of refugee or alternative status. The State Secretary of the Ministry of the Interior or his or her authorised person may for substantiated reasons extend the time period for examination of an application up to twelve months.)

In accordance with the above-mentioned Amendments to the Asylum Law of 7 July 2006, since 10 July 2006 the functions of the examination of appeals will be transferred to the district administrative court and the regional administrative court. In accordance with Section of the Amendments to the Asylum Law of 7 July 2006 the new Section 19.[1] was included into the Asylum Law, that provides for the following:

The decision of the Refugee Affairs Department on refusal to grant refugee or alternative status made in accordance with the procedure at the border, abridged or the usual procedure, may be appealed in the District administrative court in accordance with the relevant provisions of the Asylum Law and the Administrative Procedure Law. In this case application to the court shall be submitted to the Refugee Affairs Department and the Department shall annex the necessary documents and evidences, which it has in its possession, to it and shall transfer it without its translation to the court during 1 working day. No payment of state fees is required from an asylum seeker in case of the submission of the application to the court.

The Section 19.[2] of the Asylum Law provides for the following procedure of the examination of the application of an asylum seeker in the administrative courts:

1) the case, which proceedings were initiated based on the appeal against the negative decision of the Refugee Affairs Department made in the course of the usual procedure (Section 18 of the Asylum Law) the court shall examine within 3 months,

2) the case, which proceedings were initiated based on the appeal against the negative decision of the Refugee Affairs Department made in the course of the procedure at the border and based on the following reasons provided for in Para.1, Section 13 of the Asylum Law:

- the application is obviously unfounded – does not, according to its substance, conform to the criteria referred by the Asylum Law – or the application obviously lacks credibility – the narrative of the asylum seeker is contradictory, inconsistent or impossible according to substance;
- the application of an asylum seeker for the granting of refugee status is being examined in another country.
- the asylum seeker has obtained refugee status in another country and may avail himself or herself of its protection without justified fear of persecution referred to in the Asylum Law;
- an asylum seeker has the citizenship of a country where the threat referred to in the Asylum Law does not exist;
- an asylum seeker has submitted an application without a justified explanation in order to prevent expected deportation although he or she has had the opportunity to submit an application earlier; or
- the asylum seeker, before arriving in the Republic of Latvia, has resided in a country where the following conditions exist:

a) the country has ratified the 28 July 1951 Convention Relating to the Status of Refugees and the 31 January 1967 Protocol Relating to the Status of Refugees:

b) in that country the asylum seeker is not in danger of the death penalty or corporal punishment, torture, or inhumane or degrading treatment; and

c) in that country the asylum seeker could have asked for and received protection.

(Section 18 of the Asylum Law) the court shall examine within 3 months, or if the negative decision was adopted by the Refugee Affairs Department in the abridged procedure, the case shall be examined within 3 working days since the day, when the decision was made to accept the application and to initiate the case. The court shall assess the compliance of the negative decision of the Refugee Affairs Department with Para 1, Section 13 and Section 19 of the Asylum Law. If for the objective sizing up of the situation the additional evidence will be needed, the court may decide to examine the case within 3 months.

The appeal on the negative decision on the application submitted at the border or considered in the abridged procedure, shall be examined by the court in the written procedure. The appeal on the negative decision on the application submitted considered in the usual procedure, may be considered by court in the written procedure if the court recognizes that there is enough evidence to adjudicate.

The District administrative court's decision shall be final and not subject to appeal. It comes into force upon its announce and it shall be immediately communicated to the asylum seeker, explaining him/her the substance of the decision in a language, which he/she understands or which he/she should understand. The court's decisions adopted in the course of the proceedings for the examination of the application or of the initiated case are not subject to appeal. A person shall be considered to be an asylum seeker during the course of the examination of the application (the case).

If an application is submitted to adjudicate the matters de novo in connection with the newly-discovered facts the Regional administrative court shall examine the case within 20 working days since the day when the application has been received. The decision of the Regional administrative court shall be immediately communicated to the asylum seeker, explaining him/her the substance of the decision in a language, which he/she understands or which he/she should understand.

Concerning the reception centres Para.1-3, Section 20 of the Asylum Law provides for the following provisions:
During examination of the application the asylum seeker shall be accommodated at the accommodation (direct translation of the Latvian legal term used for the equivalent of the term « reception ») centre for asylum seekers where necessary living conditions are provided. The asylum seeker may be transferred from one accommodation centre for asylum seekers to another. An asylum seeker shall not be accommodated at an accommodation centre for asylum seekers unless he or she has a legal basis to reside in the Republic of Latvia. The Accommodation centres for asylum seekers are organisational units of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs.

The only public asylum seekers reception centre in Latvia was established at the end of 1998 (official opening ceremony was held on 17 February, 1999.) This public centre was established in a place in Ropazu municipality called "Mucenieki" near capital of Latvia. The establishment of the centre was supported by the United States government, UNHCR and the Swedish government. The total expenses of the building renovation and development of external communications networks were over 840 000 LVL (approximately 1 200 000 EUR by the today's currency exchange rate). Since its establishment, the Centre has been financed from the state budget. Latvia. At the centre 200 inhabitants can be housed.

It is planned to establish the second public centre near the city of Daugavpils in the future. The Decision about the start of the works for the future construction of this second public centre was adopted by the Government on 8 August 2006. However for the moment the capacity of the only centre allows to cope with the number of asylum seekers successfully (83 asylum seekers stayed in the reception centre since 1998, 1 asylum seeker stayed on 1 May, 2007).

The Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia will not change the above-mentioned reception system:

Section 9 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the general regulation of the reception system:
"(1) During the asylum procedure, an asylum seeker shall be accommodated in an accommodation centre for asylum seekers where household conditions are ensured. An unaccompanied minor shall be ensured the household conditions necessary for his or her physical and mental development. An asylum seeker may be moved from one accommodation centre for asylum seekers to another centre.
(2) Accommodation centres for asylum seekers are units of the Office [of the Citizenship and Migration Affairs].
(3) Asylum seeker shall not be placed in an accommodation centre for asylum seekers while he or she has legal basis to reside in the Republic of Latvia. In case of change of residence, the asylum seeker shall inform the [Refugee Affairs] Department about his or her new residence address.
(4) The Cabinet of Ministers shall provide an amount of expenses stipulated for purchase of food, hygiene and essential articles of an asylum seeker, who is accommodated in the accommodation centre for asylum seekers or at the border control point, or in the territorial unit of the State Border Guard, as well as a procedure for payment for the same."

Section 10 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia regulates specifically the issues of the reception of an asylum seeker during his/her detention at the border or in the territorial unit of the State Border Guard

"(1) The State Border Guard shall be entitled to detain an asylum seeker for a period not more than 10 days in case, if:

1) identity of the asylum seeker has not been established;

2) there is basis to deem that the asylum seeker tries to use the asylum procedure maliciously;

3) there is basis for the competent state authorities, including the State Border Guard to deem that the asylum seeker will not have legal basis to reside in the Republic of Latvia in accordance with the provisions of this Law;

4) there is basis for the competent state authorities, including the State Border Guard to deem that an asylum seeker causes the threat to the interests of the State security and public policy and security of the Republic of Latvia.

(2) The State Border Guard shall detain an asylum seeker and a judge shall make a decision about detention of an asylum seeker in accordance with the procedure provided for in the Immigration Law.

(3) The detention period may be prolonged, however total period of detention must not exceed the period of the asylum procedure.

(4) During detention, an asylum seeker shall be accommodated in special premises in a border checkpoint or territorial unit of the State Border Guard, separately from persons who are under suspicion for committing a criminal offence."

Q11. A. Explain if you have different types and levels of reception conditions following the different stages of the asylum procedure (this implies that you have to give briefly the necessary explanations about the asylum procedure). Make if relevant for reception conditions a distinction between the following procedural stages: determination of the responsible Member State on the basis of the Dublin II regulation, special procedures at the border (including transit zones in airports), accelerated procedures, admissibility procedures, eligibility procedures and the different possibilities of appeals (suspensive or not) against a refusal of the asylum request. Indicate what the main differences of reception conditions are between the different stages (if necessary by detailing between the different elements of reception conditions, in particular housing) and explain what the evolution of reception conditions is following the different stages of the procedure.

A-B Neither the current Asylum Law in force nor the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia does not provide for the different types and levels of reception conditions following the different stages of the asylum procedure. The provision of the reception Directive transposed by the Sections of the Asylum Law are equally applied to all the categories of applicants seeking for refugee status or alternative status, including those, who are in the Dublin procedure. There are some minor differences – those asylum seekers, who stay at the border control or detained in the detention centre receive the benefits in kind (food, as well as hygiene and first necessity goods), which value is equivalent to the sum of financial allowances per day prescribed by the governmental Regulations.

Those asylum seekers, who reside legally in Latvia are not receiving benefits, because in accordance with the general migration legislation they normally shall have the necessary financial means for their stay upon arrival or have a sponsor. However if legal stay in the country expired, they are entitled to receive all the benefits prescribed in the Asylum Law.

The separate procedure is provided both by the Asylum Law and the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia for the persons, who have received the temporary protection:
Section 44 of the Asylum Law provides for that the Government shall issue an order to grant temporary protection to a group of persons, determining their total number, the time period of residence, and accommodation procedures in the Republic of Latvia, and the necessary financing, as well as the procedures according to which persons who has been granted temporary protection shall cross the State border of the Republic of Latvia.
Para 3, Section 45 of the Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the following:
„On the basis of a decision of the Council of the European Union, the Cabinet of Ministers shall issue an order about granting the temporary protection to a group of persons by indicating a total number, procedure of accommodation in the Republic of Latvia, necessary state funding for the reception of this group, as well as procedure, in which a person granted temporary protection, may cross the national border of the Republic of Latvia."

Q 11. B. Indicate precisely for which stage(s) of the asylum procedure the answers on reception conditions you give below are valid.

Please see above answer on Q 11.A.

4. GENERAL RULES ON RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.12. Q 12. A. Are material reception conditions provided in kind, in money or in vouchers or in a combination of these elements (see article 13, §5 which is an optional provision)? Distinguish between the different elements (housing, food, clothes, health, transportation, pocket money,…). If reception conditions are provided in money (in general or in some cases, for instance when no places are anymore available in accommodation centres), indicate the precise amount given to the asylum seekers. Indicate in your answer what is provided in general and if there are exceptional cases. Specify in your answer if reception conditions are different from the general system of social aid for nationals or aliens and if yes, if and when (which stage of the asylum procedure) can asylum seekers have access to the general system of social aid?

Para 1, Section 20 of the Asylum Law provides for that the amount of expenses provided for the maintenance of an asylum seeker, as well as the purchase of hygiene and basic necessities, and the procedures for covering such expenses shall be determined by the Government.

On 8 February 2005 the Regulations No 119 'On the amount of expenses for acquisition of food, as well as hygiene and first necessity goods for the asylum seeker and the procedure of cover of these expenses' were adopted by the Government. They contain the informative reference to the EU Directives, that indicates that "These Regulations includes legal norms arising from Council Directive 2003/9/EC of 27 January 2003 laying down minimum standards for the reception of asylum seekers". However there are no relevant differences from the previous Regulations No. 390 of 27 August 2002 "Amount of Expenditure for Food of Asylum Seekers and Procedures for Covering Such Expenditure". The Regulations nr.119 provides for, that the asylum seeker receives money for both food and hygiene and first necessity goods.

the amount of expenditure for acquisition of food, as well as hygiene and first necessity goods per 24 hours is the following:

- 1,50 LVL (2,14 EUR) – if a person is accommodated in the asylum seekers' reception centre,
- 1,80 LVL (2,57 EUR) – if a person is accommodated at a territorial unit of the State Border Guard or at a border control point.

An asylum seeker is provided with the food, as well as hygiene and first necessity goods in accordance with the amount of money specified for in the above-mentioned Regulations if an asylum seeker:

- is accommodated at a territorial unit of the State Border Guard or at a border control point in premises intended for this purpose;

- is at the asylum seekers' reception centre during the time period between the payments of expenditure for the food, as well as hygiene and first necessity goods;

- has not reached 18 years of age and have arrived in the Republic of Latvia not accompanied by parents.

The expenditure the food, as well as hygiene and first necessity goods shall be paid in cash to asylum seekers who reside in asylum seekers' reception centre in the form of a prepayment once a week for seven days. In order to receive money, asylum seekers shall present a valid personal identity document of an asylum seeker.

If an asylum seeker has not reached 18 years of age and resides in the asylum seekers' reception centre together with the members of his or her family, his or her expenditure in cash shall be received by a family member who has reached legal age. If an asylum seeker has left the reception centre without the permission of the administration of the centre and has been absent for more than 48 hours, the head of the reception centre for asylum seekers has the right to take a decision not to pay expenditure for food to him or her for the time period of his or her absence.

The asylum seekers have to bear the costs of public transport if they want to travel for their personal needs. However if an asylum seeker is ill and he/she needs the medical assistance, the transport is provided either by the medical institution or by the reception centre free of charge.

The clothing for the asylum seekers is provided by the reception centre. The clothes are donated from the different sources but mainly by the Red Cross.

Para.4., Section 9 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the following:

"(4) The Cabinet of Ministers shall provide an amount of expenses stipulated for purchase of food, hygiene and essential articles of an asylum seeker, who is accommodated in the accommodation centre for asylum seekers or at the border control point, or in the territorial unit of the State Border Guard, as well as a procedure for payment for the same." There is no legal regulation in the Draft Law of the exact amounts of expenses. Therefore the Cabinet of Ministers' Regulations will define this amount. As mentioned above, when the Draft Law will be adopted in Parliament in the 2nd reading, the development of the by-laws for its implementation will start.

Therefore the existing Regulations No 119 covering the issue of the reception will be in force for a maximum of 6 months since the adoption of the new Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia. After that they will be replaced by the new by-law.

Q 12. B. Can the reception conditions in kind, money or vouchers be considered as sufficient "to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence" as requested by article 13, §2 of the directive (which is a mandatory provision but leaves a certain space to Member States)? In order to help to assess the respect of this rule when reception conditions are provided in money, include if necessary in your answer points of comparison with the minimum amount of social aid guaranteed for nationals in your Member State.

The Law on State Social Allowances and the relevant governmental Regulations of Latvia provide for, that the following persons are entitled to receive state social benefits – the citizens of Latvia, non-citizens, foreign citizens and stateless persons, who have received personal ID number and who are permanent residents of Latvia. The state social benefits are not granted to persons who have received a temporary residence permit. The state social benefit is not granted to persons who are completely state supported.
Persons are entitled to receive the state social security benefit:

- In case of disability or statutory age – those above-mentioned persons who have continuously lived in Latvia for the last 12 months before claiming the benefit, but in total – no less than 60 months;
- In case of a loss of supporter – those above-mentioned persons who have lost supporter, if their former supporter has lived in Latvia for at least 60 months before the day of claiming the benefit in total and for last 12 months - continuously.

The state social security benefit is granted to a person who is not entitled to receive state pension (except pension for a disabled person in case of losing supporter) or insurance compensation in connection with accident at work or occupational disease, if this person:

- is not employed or self-employed (not regarded as employee or self-employed person according to the Law on State Social Insurance) and has exceeded the old age pension age by 5 years that is defined by Law on State Pensions to person in order to get rights to old-age pension ;
- has obtained the status of a disabled person and has exceeded 18 years of age. These persons are entitled to receive the state social security benefit for determined disability period;
- is still under age but has lost one or both parents and has not entered into marriage. Joint state social security benefit is granted to these persons if it is granted for three or more children that can not be less than 50% of state social security benefit amount per each child in accordance with procedures specified by the Cabinet of Ministers. State social security benefits for these persons are granted for the period until they come of age. The benefit will continue to be paid if the person after coming of age continues studies in a comprehensive or vocational education institution and is not older than 20 years of age, or is a student of the day department of a higher education institution (full-time day department) and is not older than 24 years of age.

If a person receives pension from other state that does not reach an amount of state social security benefit then the granted state social security benefit is reduced to the sum that corresponds to amount of granted pension by other state. A person who receives pension from other state that is equal to amount of state social security benefit or exceeds it, the state social security benefit shall not be granted. If a benefit receiver leaves Republic of Latvia in order to reside in a foreign country, the state social security benefit shall be terminated paying a benefit for the next two months before leave.

An amount of the state social security benefit:

- in general case – 45 LVL (64,28 EUR) per month;
- for disabled since childhood – 50 LVL (71,42 EUR)) per month.

Therefore from the perspective of the amount of the state social security benefit, that could be granted to the citizens of Latvia, non-citizens, foreign citizens and stateless persons, who have received personal ID number and who are permanent residents of Latvia, the asylum seekers are entitled the equivalent amount of the assistance. In addition they are granted housing which is free of charge. As it was indicated by the administration of the asylum seekers' reception centre in addition to the cash, upon arrival to the centre an asylum seeker receives also the bedclothes and the kitchen-ware. They can use the kitchen, laundry, TV room and the nursery room in the centre.

5. PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

Q.13. Q 13. A. Does the national legislation specifically provide that a request for international protection is presumed to be under the Geneva Convention unless explicitly requested otherwise? (see article 2, b which is a mandatory provision)

Yes, Latvia's national legislation specifically provides that a request for international protection is in first place presumed to be under the Geneva Convention. Section 3 of the Asylum Law provides for that a person shall be considered to be an asylum seeker if he or she, in accordance with procedures prescribed by this Law, has submitted an application for granting of refugee or alternative status. Application, from the moment of its submission to the taking of a final decision, shall be examined in accordance with the procedures and time periods prescribed by this Law. Para. 2, Section 18 of the Asylum Law provides for that in examining an application, the Refugee Affairs Department shall first decide on the granting of refugee status to an asylum seeker in conformity with the provisions of this Law. If the conditions of Section 23 of the Asylum Law (the refugee status criteria) do not apply to the asylum seeker, the Refugee Affairs Department shall take a decision on the granting of alternative status in accordance with the procedures prescribed by the Asylum Law.

The situation will not change with the entry into force of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia. Para.1., Section 17 of the Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for identical provisions: "By examining an application, the [Refugee Affairs] Department shall at first make a decision about granting refugee status to an asylum seeker in accordance with the provisions of this Law. In case, if the provisions of Para.1, Section 30 of this Law (the refugee status criteria) do not apply to the asylum seeker, the Department shall make a decision about granting alternative status (national term for the subsidiary protection) in accordance with the procedure provided for in this Law."

Q. 13. B. Explain if the scope of application of reception conditions is extended to other asylum seekers than refugees in the sense of the Geneva Convention, in particular to persons asking for subsidiary protection or to other forms of protection like humanitarian statuses (see article 3, § 4 which is an optional provision)? If not, explain briefly which the differences between these special regimes and the directive are.

In accordance with Section 3 of the Asylum Law a person shall be considered to be an asylum seeker if he or she, in accordance with procedures prescribed by this Law, has submitted an application for granting of refugee or alternative status. As mentioned the Asylum Law specifies the common provisions for reception of both categories of the asylum seekers. The Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia has the identical provisions.

In relation to the reception in cases of the temporary protection Para 2, Section 44 of the Asylum Law provides for that the Government shall issue an order to grant temporary protection to a group of persons, determining their total number, the time period of residence, and accommodation procedures in the Republic of Latvia, and the necessary financing, as well as the procedures according to which persons who has been granted temporary protection shall cross the State border of the Republic of Latvia. Also the Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia Para 3, Section 45 of the Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the following: „On the basis of a decision of the Council of the European Union, the Cabinet of Ministers shall issue an order about granting the temporary protection to a group of persons by indicating a total number, procedure of accommodation in the Republic of Latvia, necessary state funding for the reception of this group, as well as procedure, in which a person granted temporary protection, may cross the national border of the Republic of Latvia."

Q. 13. C. Are there specific provisions in national law for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation (see article 3, §2 which is an optional provision)?

No, there are no specific provisions in the current legislation of Latvia for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation. The Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia also will not introduce such provisions.

Q.14. Are reception conditions available as from the moment one asylum application is introduced? How is article 13, §1 which is mandatory legally understood? Do asylum seekers have to satisfy any other condition in order to get reception conditions?

Yes, reception conditions available as from the moment one asylum application is submitted. No other conditions need to be satisfied in order to get the reception conditions.

Q.15. Explain when reception conditions end, for instance after refusal of the asylum request (include in your answer the link with the right of appeal against a decision of refusal of the status, in particular the question of its suspensive effect)

In accordance with Section 3 of the Asylum Law a person shall be considered to be an asylum seeker if he or she, in accordance with procedures prescribed by this Law, has submitted an application for granting of refugee or alternative status (hereinafter – application). Applications, from the moment of their submission to the taking of a final decision, shall be examined in accordance with the procedures and time periods prescribed by this Law. Para 1, Section 20 of the Asylum Law provides for that during examination of the application the asylum seeker shall be accommodated at the accommodation centre for asylum seekers where necessary living conditions are provided. During examination of the appeal the person shall be considered to be an asylum seeker (Para 3, Section 13 and Para 3, Section 19 of the Asylum Law). Therefore the reception conditions end only after the final negative decision on an asylum seekers' application or its appeal comes into force.

Section 1 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for that an asylum seeker is a person who, in accordance with the procedure provided for in this Law, has submitted an application on granting refugee or alternative status in the Republic of Latvia.Para.1, Section 9 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the general regulation of the reception system: "(1) During the asylum procedure, an asylum seeker shall be accommodated in an accommodation centre for asylum seekers where household conditions are ensured. An unaccompanied minor shall be ensured the household conditions necessary for his or her physical and mental development. An asylum seeker may be moved from one accommodation centre for asylum seekers to another centre."

Para.3, Section 12 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for that "an asylum seeker or his or her authorised representative may appeal a decision made by the Department in the Administrative District Court in cases and in accordance with the procedure provided for in this Law. During examination of an application (case), the person shall be deemed an asylum seeker, with the exception of the case stated in Section 19, Paragraph two of this Law."

Section 19 regulates the issues of the examination of a case in which the final decision was already made. Para.1.-2 of Section 19 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the following:

"(1) In case, if after the final decision has been made in an action, the Department has established new facts or if the asylum seeker has submitted a repeated application to the Department, which contains new information related to granting refugee or alternative status, the Department shall make decision about acceptance of the application for examination or disregarding the application. If the repeated application contains sufficient information to make a previously mentioned decision, interview may also not be held.
(2) Decision made by the Department about acceptance of the application for examination or disregarding the application may be appealed in accordance with the procedure provided for in Section 14, Paragraphs three and four of this Law. Provisions of Section 3, Paragraph two of this Law shall no apply to an asylum seeker during reviewing of a complaint."

This means, that in accordance with the future Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia during examination of an application, the person shall be deemed an asylum seeker, with the exception of the case when, based on Para.1, Section 19, the complaint of a person concerning the rejection of the repeated application is submitted. In case of such complaint a person shall not be deemed an asylum seeker and this complaint will not have a suspensive effect.

Q.16 Are there special rules or practices regarding reception conditions in case of successive applications for asylum introduced by the same person?

No, currently there no such special rules in the Asylum Law.
Please see answer on Q.15 on the provisions of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia related to the exception based on Para.1., Section 19 of the Draft Law.

Q.17. Information of asylum seekers about their rights and obligations in terms of reception conditions, in particular about established benefits (see article 5 which is too large extend a mandatory provision; do not confuse this question with the information to be provided to asylum seekers about the asylum procedure):

Q. 17. A. Are asylum seekers informed, and if yes about what precisely?

In accordance with the Regulations of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs «On the Internal Order of the Asylum seekers' Reception Centre «Mucenieki»» an asylum seeker shall be informed about his obligations and duties within 15 days.

Q. 17. B. Is the information provided in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

He/she receives a booklet, that contains the most important information. He/she is also explained the duties and obligations orally if there is a common communication language.

Q.17. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify the list of languages in which it is available

Section 10 of the Asylum Law provides for, that an asylum seeker has the right to receive all information on the asylum procedure and his or her rights and duties in the course of the asylum procedure. The asylum seeker has the right to receive such information in a language he or she understands or should understand.

Information is available in Russian, English and Arabic.

Clauses 1, 2, 5, Para.1., Section 11 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provide for the following language and information -related rights:

"(1) An asylum seeker shall have the following rights:

1) to submit an application and give explanations during interview in a language he or she should understand and on which he or she is able to communicate. If necessary, the State Border Guard shall invite an interpreter the service of whom shall be covered from the State funds.

2) to receive information about the asylum procedure, his or her rights and obligations during the said procedure, as well as possible consequences if he or she does not fulfil his or her obligations and does not co-operate with institutions involved in the asylum procedure, from the State Border Guard and the [Refugee Affairs] Department. An asylum seeker shall have the right to receive such information in a language he or she should understand and on which he or she is able to communicate.;

5) to receive information about a decision made by the Department and the procedure of appealing thereof in a language he or she should understand, with the exception of cases, if the asylum seeker is represented by an authorised persons or he or she receives free-of-charge legal aid."

The Draft Law establishes more favourite treatment of the asylum seeker, since in relation languages it provides for that "language he or she should understand and on which he or she is able to communicate".

Q. 17. D. Is the deadline of maximum 15 days respected?

Yes, please see answer on point A.

Q.18. Information of asylum seekers about the existence of organisations or groups promoting their interest and defending their rights (see article 5 which is to a large extend a mandatory provision):

Q. 18. A. Is there a list of organisations dressed by the authorities and if yes is it comprehensive? Is this in particular the case about the possibilities to get legal assistance and health care?

Q. 18. B. Is the information provided to the asylum seekers, and if yes, in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

Q. 18. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify if possible the list of languages in which it is available.

Q. 18. D. How many organisations are active in that field in your Member State?

A,B,C,D - For the moment there are no NGOs or similar organisations or groups promoting interests of the asylum seekers and defending their rights in Latvia. The booklet mentioned in answer to Q.17, which is provided to each asylum seeker upon arrival to the reception centre provides for the contact information of 2 institutions – Latvian Red Cross and the International Organisation (the nearest UNHCR Regional Office is in Stockholm), but these institutions are not state designated. Information is available in Russian, English and Arabic.

Q.19. Documentation of asylum seekers (see article 6):

Q.19. A. What kind of document is delivered to the asylum seeker? Explain the legal value of this document (just a certification of the status as asylum seeker or also prove of identity?) (see §1 of article 6 which is a mandatory provision)

In accordance with Section 21 of the Asylum Law an asylum seeker shall hand his or her personal identity and travelling documents over to the State Border Guard until a final decision is taken on granting or refusal to grant refugee or alternative status, except the case where an asylum seeker has another legal basis to reside in the Republic of Latvia. An asylum seeker in the Republic of Latvia shall be issued an asylum seeker personal identity document, the form and issue procedures of which shall be determined by the Government. The asylum seeker personal identity document gives the right to stay at the accommodation centre for asylum seekers. An asylum seeker has the right to reside also outside the accommodation centre for asylum seekers with a permit issued each time by the administration of the accommodation centre for asylum seekers regarding which an entry shall be made in the personal identity document of asylum seeker.

Section 2 of the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 3 September 2002 No 406 "On the asylum seeker's personal identity document and the procedure of its issue" provides for that the documents shall be issued to asylum seeker irrespective of his/her age for a time period until the taking of the final decision regarding the granting of refugee status or alternative status, or a decision regarding a refusal to grant the relevant status. Section 7 of the Regulations specify, that the document shall be issued to an asylum seeker within three (3) days of the receipt of an application.

Section 8 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the following
"(1) An asylum seeker shall deliver his or her identity documents and travel documents to the State Border Guard until a final decision has been made about granting refugee or alternative status or a rejection to grant the same, with the exception of a case when asylum seeker has another legal basis to stay in the Republic of Latvia.

(2) Identity document of asylum seeker shall be issued to an asylum seeker in the Republic of Latvia and a form and procedure of issuance of such document shall be provided by the Cabinet of Ministers.
(3) Identity document of asylum seeker entitles to stay in an accommodation centre for asylum seekers." No detailed provisions are regulated in the Draft Law, since they will be the subject of the governmental by-laws.

Q.19. B. Are there situations or specific cases in which another equivalent document or even no document is issued? (in particular is there an exception for "procedures to decide on the right of the applicant legally to enter the territory" as made possible by §2 of article 6)?

Section 2 of the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 3 September 2002 No 406 "On the asylum seeker's personal identity document and the procedure of its issue" provides for the document may not be issued if an asylum seeker is detained, as well as at the time when the application, which was submitted at the border control point before entry into the Republic of Latvia or in connection with the procedure, where it is being decided whether an applicant has a right to entry into the Republic of Latvia.
Section 8 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the following
"(1) An asylum seeker shall deliver his or her identity documents and travel documents to the State Border Guard until a final decision has been made about granting refugee or alternative status or a rejection to grant the same, with the exception of a case when asylum seeker has another legal basis to stay in the Republic of Latvia.
(2) Identity document of asylum seeker shall be issued to an asylum seeker in the Republic of Latvia and a form and procedure of issuance of such document shall be provided by the Cabinet of Ministers.
(3) Identity document of asylum seeker entitles to stay in an accommodation centre for asylum seekers." No detailed provisions are regulated in the Draft Law, since they will be the subject of the governmental by-laws.

Q.19. C. For how long is this document in principle valid and is it necessary to renew it after a certain period?

In accordance with Section 21 of the Asylum Law an asylum seeker shall hand his or her personal identity and travelling documents over to the State Border Guard until a final decision is taken on granting or refusal to grant refugee or alternative status, except the case where an asylum seeker has another legal basis to reside in the Republic of Latvia. An asylum seeker in the Republic of Latvia shall be issued an asylum seeker personal identity document, the form and issue procedures of which shall be determined by the Government.
Section 2 of the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 3 September 2002 No 406 "On the asylum seeker's personal identity document and the procedure of its issue" provides for that if the time period for the examination of the application of an asylum seeker regarding the granting of refugee or alternative status is extended, but the term of validity of the previously issued document expires prior to the date when the decision is notified, the State Border Guard shall issue a new document.

As mentioned above Section 8 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the following

"(1) An asylum seeker shall deliver his or her identity documents and travel documents to the State Border Guard until a final decision has been made about granting refugee or alternative status or a rejection to grant the same, with the exception of a case when asylum seeker has another legal basis to stay in the Republic of Latvia.

(2) Identity document of asylum seeker shall be issued to an asylum seeker in the Republic of Latvia and a form and procedure of issuance of such document shall be provided by the Cabinet of Ministers.

(3) Identity document of asylum seeker entitles to stay in an accommodation centre for asylum seekers." No detailed provisions are regulated in the Draft Law, since they will be the subject of the governmental by-laws.

Q.19. D. What is the deadline for the delivery of that document? Is the mandatory deadline of 3 days set by article 6, §1 respected[521]?

Section 7 of the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 3 September 2002 No 406 "On the asylum seeker's personal identity document and the procedure of its issue" provides for that the document shall be issued to an asylum seeker within three (3) days from the receipt of an application.

No detailed provisions are provided in the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia, since they will be the subject of the governmental by-laws.

Q.19. E. Is it possible for an asylum seeker to get a travel document for serious humanitarian reasons (see §5 of article 6 which is an optional provision)?

Such possibility is not provided by the Latvia's legislation in force.

Q.19. F. Is there a central system of registration of asylum seekers and is it or not separate from the registration of aliens? If yes, describe it briefly (content) and indicate in particular if it is an electronic database.

The Refugee Affairs Department maintains and operates the local electronic data base for the registration of the asylum seekers. It is planned to further improve it in the future.

Q.20. Residence of asylum seekers :

Q.20. A. Is in principle an asylum seeker free to move on the entire territory of your Member State or only to a limited part of it and in case, which part? (see article 7, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

Q.20. B. About the place of residence (see §2 of article 7): explain to which extend the person is free to choose her residence and if this depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance processing of application, attribution of reception conditions,…).

Q.20. C. About the place of reception (meaning where the asylum seeker has to stay to benefit from reception conditions) (see § 4 of article 7): explain which are the general rules about the determination of this place (to which extend are the decisions determining the place taken individually and do they take into account the personal situation of the asylum seeker?) and to which extend the person is free to choose it and if it depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance attribution of reception conditions, processing of the application,…).

Q.20. D. If all asylum seekers are not placed in accommodation centres because of capacity limits, explain how the persons are distributed between accommodation centres and other accommodation facilities (which authority takes the decisions, on the basis of which elements, can that decision be appealed by the asylum seeker,…)

A-D Section 20 of the Asylum Law provides for that during examination of the application the asylum seeker shall be accommodated at the accommodation centre for asylum seekers where necessary living conditions are provided. The asylum seeker may be transferred from one accommodation centre for asylum seekers to another. An asylum seeker shall not be accommodated at the reception centre unless he or she has a legal basis to reside in the Republic of Latvia. Para. 1, Section 20 of the Asylum Law provides for that an asylum seeker may be transferred from one reception centre to another. However no practice exists- the only reception centre exists and as with the number of asylum seekers up to date it even does not work in full capacity.

Para 3, Section 21 of the Asylum Law provides for, that an asylum seeker has the right to reside also outside the reception centre with a permit issued each time by the administration of the centre for asylum seekers regarding which an entry shall be made in the personal identity document of an asylum seeker (the duration of stay outside the reception centre is indicated in the permit). There are no any additional requirements or restrictions concerning such a residence outside the centre.

Section 9 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia does not provide for the radical changes in the current system. It however does not make anymore the residence outside the reception centre subject to any conditionality (like in the current Asylum Law – a permit shall be given by the administration of the reception centre to the asylum seeker). It provides for the following conditions:

"(1) During the asylum procedure, an asylum seeker shall be accommodated in an accommodation centre for asylum seekers where household conditions are ensured. An unaccompanied minor shall be ensured the household conditions necessary for his or her physical and mental development. An asylum seeker may be moved from one accommodation centre for asylum seekers to another centre.

(2) Accommodation centres for asylum seekers are units of the Office [of the Citizenship and Migration Affairs].
(3) Asylum seeker shall not be placed in an accommodation centre for asylum seekers while he or she has legal basis to reside in the Republic of Latvia. In case of change of residence, the asylum seeker shall inform the [Refugee Affairs] Department about his or her new residence address.
(4) The Cabinet of Ministers shall provide an amount of expenses stipulated for purchase of food, hygiene and essential articles of an asylum seeker, who is accommodated in the accommodation centre for asylum seekers or at the border control point, or in the territorial unit of the State Border Guard, as well as a procedure for payment for the same."
Clause 5, Para.2. Section 11 of the Draft Law provides for the following:
"during his or her stay in an accommodation centre for asylum seekers, observe internal regulations of such a centre. The Cabinet of Ministers shall approve internal regulations of an accommodation centre for asylum seekers." The draft internal regulations with the suggested title "On the internal order of the accommodation centre for the asylum seekers "Mucenieki" will be elaborated when the Draft Law will be adopted in 2nd reading in the Parliament.

Q.20. E. How can an asylum seeker ask to leave temporarily the place of residence or of reception or an assigned area? How is the individual AND impartial character of the decision ensured? (see §5 of article 7 which is a mandatory provision)

Section 20 of the Asylum Law provides for that an asylum seeker shall not be accommodated at the reception centre unless he or she has a legal basis to reside in the Republic of Latvia. Therefore those asylum seekers, who reside legally may choose the place of residence themselves.

Those asylum seekers who do not have any other legal basis to stay in Latvia (e.g. residence permit, studies, stay as a spouse of Latvian citizen etc.), shall stay in the reception centre. In this case Para 3, Section 21 of the Asylum Law provides for, that these asylum seekers have the right to reside also outside the reception centre with a permit issued each time by the administration of the centre for asylum seekers regarding which an entry shall be made in the personal identity document of an asylum seeker..
Section 9 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia does not provide for the radical changes in the current system. It however does not make anymore the residence outside the reception centre subject to any conditionality (like in the current Asylum Law – a permit shall be given by the administration of the reception centre to the asylum seeker). It provides for the following conditions:
"(1) During the asylum procedure, an asylum seeker shall be accommodated in an accommodation centre for asylum seekers where household conditions are ensured. An unaccompanied minor shall be ensured the household conditions necessary for his or her physical and mental development. An asylum seeker may be moved from one accommodation centre for asylum seekers to another centre.

(2) Accommodation centres for asylum seekers are units of the Office [of the Citizenship and Migration Affairs].
(3) Asylum seeker shall not be placed in an accommodation centre for asylum seekers while he or she has legal basis to reside in the Republic of Latvia. In case of change of residence, the asylum seeker shall inform the [Refugee Affairs] Department about his or her new residence address.
(4) The Cabinet of Ministers shall provide an amount of expenses stipulated for purchase of food, hygiene and essential articles of an asylum seeker, who is accommodated in the accommodation centre for asylum seekers or at the border control point, or in the territorial unit of the State Border Guard, as well as a procedure for payment for the same."
Clause 5, Para.2. Section 11 of the Draft Law provides for the following:
"during his or her stay in an accommodation centre for asylum seekers, observe internal regulations of such a centre. The Cabinet of Ministers shall approve internal regulations of an accommodation centre for asylum seekers." The draft internal regulations with the suggested title "On the internal order of the accommodation centre for the asylum seekers "Mucenieki" will be elaborated when the Draft Law will be adopted in 2nd reading in the Parliament.

Both in case of the complaints under the current Asylum Law and in case of the future new Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia the complaints on any decisions of the administration of the reception centre may be appealed, by submission of the complaint the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs, the Ministry of Interior and later – to the administrative court. The procedure of examination of any complaints is governed by the Administrative Procedure Law.

Q.21. Q.21. A. Do rules on reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions exist in internal legislation and if yes in which cases (mention in particular if there are cases not foreseen by article 16, § 1 and 2 which are optional provisions)? Distinguish in your answer between cases of reduction and withdrawal and explain which conditions can be reduced and if access to emergency health care is always ensured as requested by article 16, §4, last sentence.

Section 6 of the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 8 February 2005 No 119 "On the amount of expenses for acquisition of food, as well as hygiene and first necessity goods for the asylum seeker and the procedure of cover of these expenses" provide for that if an asylum seeker has left the reception centre without the permission of the administration of the centre and has been absent for more than 48 hours, the head of the reception centre for asylum seekers has the right to take a decision not to pay expenditure for food to him or her for the time period of his or her absence. No other reductions or withdrawals are possible in accordance with the legislation.

The Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia does not provide for the regulation of the issue of reductions or withdrawals, since it will be subject of the governmental by-law.

Q.21. B. Has article 16, §2 dealing with refusal of reception conditions for unreasonably late applications for asylum been transposed by your Member State (or was this case already applicable before transposition)? Are there cases in practice?

No, this Article was not transposed and therefore there is no practice as well.

Q.21. C. How is it ensured that decisions of reduction or withdrawal are taken individually, objectively AND in particular impartially (for instance through and independent arbitrator) (see article 16, §4 which is a mandatory provision)?

The complaints on any decisions of the administration of the reception centre may be appealed, by submission of the complaint the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs, the Ministry of Interior and later – to the administrative court. The procedure of examination of any complaints is governed by the Administrative Procedure Law.

Section 7 of the State Administration Structure Law provides for that the Government shall implement subordination in the organisation of state administration (institutional subordination) and in the performance of the functions of state administration (functional subordination). The Government shall implement subordination through the intermediation of an particular Minister. The Ministers shall implement subordination directly or through the intermediation of an institution of direct administration, its unit or official. Subordination shall be implemented in the form of control or supervision.

The Ministry of Interior exercises the control over the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs in the form of the supervision. The supervision means the rights of higher institutions or officials to examine the lawfulness of decisions taken by lower institutions or officials and to revoke unlawful decisions, as well as to issue an order to take a decision in case of unlawful failure to act.

That means that any decision of the head of the reception centre can be:

- firstly appealed by an asylum seeker by means of the submission of the appeal to the Head of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs.
- If an asylum seeker is not satisfied with the results of these appeal, he/she may submit the repeated appeal to the Ministry of Interior which, as it was mentioned above, exercises the control over the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs in the form of the supervision.

If an asylum seeker is not satisfied with the Ministry's action in his/her case, he/she may submit a complaint to the Administrative court. All the terms and procedures for the examination of such a complaint are laid down in the Administrative Procedure Law as the special law that regulates any actions concerning the decisions of the state institutions and bodies.

The legal regulation will remain the same after the entry into force of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia.

Q.21. D. Is statement 14/03 adopted by the Council at the same moment as the directive respected (see the document attached to our sending)?

Yes, this principle is respected.

Q.21. E. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements on cases of reduction, withdrawal or refusal which have been taken, and if yes, what has been the outcome?

No judicial or administrative case law exists for the moment.

Q.22. Q.22. A. Appeal against a negative decision relating to the granting of benefits or based on article 7 (see article 21 which is a mandatory provision): indicate against which decision an appeal can be introduced, describe the system of appeal in general and include in particular in your answer the information given to asylum seekers about possibilities of appealing, deadline for appealing, if the appeal has or not a suspensive effect, if there are different steps (for instance first an administrative appeal and in particular if the guarantee of an appeal before a judicial body in the last instance is respected)?

Q.22. B. Explain which are the possibilities for asylum seekers to benefit from legal assistance when they introduce such an appeal (see article 21, §2 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to Member States)?

Q.22. C. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

Q.22. D. Is a mechanism of complain for asylum seekers about quality of receptions conditions in general (even if they are not personally concerned) organised? If yes, before which authority? Is it linked to the system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions (see below question n° 39)?

A-D The complaints on any decisions of the administration of the reception centre or on the issues related to the quality of the reception conditions may be appealed or complained of, by submission of the complaint the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs, the Ministry of Interior and later – to the administrative court.

As it was mentioned above Section 7 of the State Administration Structure Law provides for that the Government shall implement subordination in the organisation of state administration (institutional subordination) and in the performance of the functions of state administration (functional subordination). The Government shall implement subordination through the intermediation of a particular Minister. The Ministers shall implement subordination directly or through the intermediation of an institution of direct administration, its unit or official. Subordination shall be implemented in the form of control or supervision.

The Ministry of Interrior exercises the control over the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs in the form of the supervision. The supervision means the rights of higher institutions or officials to examine the lawfulness of decisions taken by lower institutions or officials and to revoke unlawful decisions, as well as to issue an order to take a decision in case of unlawful failure to act.

That means that any decision of the head of the reception centre can be:

1) firstly appealed by an asylum seeker by means of the submission of the appeal to the Head of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs.
2) If an asylum seeker is not satisfied with the results of these appeal, he/she may submit the repeated appeal to the Ministry of Interrior which, as it was mentioned above, exercises the control over the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs in the form of the supervision.
3) If an asylum seeker is not satisfied with the Ministry's action in his/her case, he/she may submit a complaint to the Administrative court. All the terms and procedures for the examination of such a complaint are laid down in the Administrative Procedure Law as the special law that regulates any actions concerning the decisions of the state institutions and bodies (please see the attachment for the full text of translation of this law in English).

The complaint of an asylum seeker on the quality of the reception conditions shall follow the above-mentioned legal procedure provided by the Administrative Procedure Law as well. Therefore from the legal point of view the mechanism for the complaint of the asylum seekers about quality of receptions conditions does exist. However as it was already mentioned no judicial or administrative case law exists for the moment for such appeals and/or complaints.

From legal point of view for the asylum seekers can benefit from legal assistance when they submit such an appeal. However they probably would need to finance such an appeal from their own financial means, or if a lawyer agrees himself/herself – they can be represented pro bono by him/her (there were such cases in Latvia in the past). Para 4, Section 10 the Asylum Law indicates an asylum seeker's right to invite another person to provide legal assistance, however it does not state that this is the state-paid legal assistance. Only if an asylum seeker is an unaccompanied minor, he/she has the right to receive legal assistance free of charge during the asylum procedure (Para 6, Section 10 of the Asylum Law). The State Ensured Legal Aid Law provides that since 1 January 2007 there is the state-guaranteed financial support for the certain types of the legal aid for the asylum seekers.

Therefore it can be concluded that the asylum seekers may complain about any decision or the reception conditions of the reception centre to the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs (later – to appeal to the Ministry of Interior, but those held in the detention centre for illegal migrants operated by the State Border Guard – to the Ministry of Interior) and finally – to the Administrative court.. The special system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions that would differ for the overall system of guidance, control and monitoring of work of the different bodies of the Ministry of Interior, has not been introduced in the legislation.

The legal regulation of the complaints related to the benefits will remain the same after the entry into force of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia.

6. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.23. Family unity of asylum seekers: define how a family is defined in relation with article 2, (d) which is a mandatory provision and explain how housing is provided to a family (see articles 8 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to member States and 14, §2, (a) which is a mandatory provision).

There is no provision in the current Asylum Law, which persons shall be considered a s a "family of the asylum seeker". However Section 29 of the Asylum Law indicates, that in relation to the refugees, that a person's spouse and his or her minor unmarried children (also adopted), as well as dependent disabled children (also adopted) of legal age, shall be considered to be family.

In practice, depending on the size of the family, the reception centre provides for one or two connected rooms for the family members to be accommodated together. There are rooms with living space about 30 square meters with toilet facilities, that are suitable for families.

Section 1 of the Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the following definition of the refugee family "Family members - the spouse of the refugee or the person granted the subsidiary (alternative) protection; the minor children, who are not married and are dependent, without distinction as to whether they were born in or out of wedlock or adopted, if such family existed already in the country of origin." Para.2. Section 22 of the Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the following: "Information mentioned in Paragraph one of this Section, inter alia, shall be the explanations and documents of an asylum seeker, which are in his or her disposal with regard to his or her age, former activities, including data of his or her family members, father and mother, brothers and sisters, [his or her] identity, nationality, country and place of former residence, previous applications for asylum, travel routes, identity documents and travel documents and reasons why an application is submitted." The wording suggests that the Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia considers as a family of an asylum seeker the following persons - the spouse of the refugee or the person granted the subsidiary (alternative) protection; the minor children, who are not married and are dependent, without distinction as to whether they were born in or out of wedlock or adopted, if such family existed already in the country of origin.

Q.24. Q.24. A. How is housing of asylum seekers organised: describe the system in general and indicate in particular what is the most frequently system used (see article 14, §1 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space for Member States; distinguish between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels places or other premises).

Q.24. B. What is the total number of available places for asylum seekers? Distinguish in your answer between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels or other premises.

Q.24. C. Is this number of places for asylum seekers sufficient in general or frequently insufficient?

There is only public asylum seekers reception centre in Latvia for the moment. There are no any other forms of reception of the asylum seekers. At the centre 200 inhabitants can be housed. It is planned to establish the second public centre near the city of Daugavpils in the future. However for the moment the capacity of the only centre allows to cope with the number of asylum seekers successfully (83 asylum seekers stayed in the reception centre since 1998, 1 asylum seekers stayed on 1 May, 2007.). Therefore it can be concluded that the reception capacity is more than sufficient for the moment.

Q.24. D. Are there special measures foreseen in urgent cases of a high number of news arrivals of asylum seekers (outside the case of application of the directive on temporary protection)?

No special measures are provided by the legislation. No cases exist in practice so far as well.

Q.25. Accommodation centres (important note: all the following questions are about open and not closed centres where asylum seekers are detained which are covered by another question)

Q.25. A Are there different categories of accommodation centres, for instance depending of the stage of the procedure (admissibility and eligibility)?

No, the only public asylum seekers reception centre in Latvia exists for the moment.

Q.25. B. Is there a legal time limit for accommodation in a centre after which the asylum seekers have access to private houses or apartments or is this limit linked to a stage of the asylum procedure?

No, there is no such time limit and there are no alternative accommodation possibilities provided. Those asylum seekers, who reside legally in Latvia may choose freely their place of residence themselves.

Q.25. C. Is there a general regulation about the internal functioning of those centres and the rights and duties of the asylum seekers? If yes, is this general regulation applicable to public and private centres? If not, are the centres supposed to adopt an internal regulation and does a central authority have or not a kind of control about its content?

2 administrative acts cover some practical issues of the internal functioning of the only existing public reception centre in Latvia- the issues of the internal order of the reception centre are regulated by the Regulations of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs «On the Internal Order of the Asylum seekers' Reception Centre «Mucenieki»» and by the Order of the Head of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs of 24 July 2003 No 16/08 « On the approval of the Statute of the Asylum seekers' Reception Centre "Mucenieki" and of the description of the positions».

After the entry into force of the Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia these acts will be readopted, but no drafts were elaborated so far.

Q.25. D. Do the regulations foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers in case of breach of the rules? (see article 16, §3) If yes, which sanctions for which rules? Which is the competent authority to decide? How is it ensured that decisions are taken individually, objectively and in particular impartially (for instance through an independent arbitrator) as requested by §4 of article 21 which is mandatory provision*?* Which are the possibilities of appealing against those decisions if the system is different from the general one under question n°22? Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

Section 6 of the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 8 February 2005 No 119 "On the amount of expenses for acquisition of food, as well as hygiene and first necessity goods for the asylum seeker and the procedure of cover of these expenses" provide for that if an asylum seeker has left the reception centre without the permission of the administration of the centre and has been absent for more than 48 hours, the head of the reception centre for asylum seekers has the right to take a decision not to pay expenditure for food to him or her for the time period of his or her absence. However if an asylum seeker has committed an administrative misdemeanour or a criminal offence, the administrative or the criminal liability may arise.

The complaints on any decisions of the administration of the reception centre may be appealed, by submission of the complaint the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs, the Ministry of Interior and later – to the administrative court. The procedure of examination of any complaints is governed by the Administrative Procedure Law. No judicial or administrative case law exists for the moment.

The Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia does not provide for any regulation of the subject matter, because this regulation will be adopted by the Cabinet of Ministers. Clause 5, Para.2, Section 11 of the Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provide for the following: "An asylum seeker shall have the following obligations:

5) during his or her stay in an accommodation centre for asylum seekers, observe internal regulations of such a centre. The Cabinet of Ministers shall approve internal regulations of an accommodation centre for asylum seekers." No draft Regulations exist so far.

Q.25. E. Are asylum seekers involved in the management of these centres? If yes, how (advisory board, appointment or election of representatives)? (see article 14, §6 which is an option provision)

The asylum seekers are not involved in the management of the centre.

Q.25. F. Do specific rules exist on work of asylum seekers inside the accommodation centres different from the general ones about employment (see below)? If yes, which ones? Can working inside accommodation centres be considered as a (mandatory) contribution of the asylum seekers to the management of the centres, is it or not paid and considered as implying access to the labour market and subject to the same rules?

There are no specific rules on work of asylum seekers inside the accommodation centres. There is duty of an asylum seeker to do his/her room and in accordance with the established schedule – the places of the common use – kitchen and the toilet facilities. The asylum seekers do not receive the payments for the activities.

Q.26. Q.26. A. How can asylum seekers communicate with legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGOs? (see article 14, §2, (b) which is a mandatory provision).

In accordance with Para 1, Section 6 of the Asylum Law a person, who has submitted an application have the right to apply to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees or his or her authorised persons or institutions. Para 4, Section 10 of the Asylum Law provides for that an asylum seeker has the right to invite another person to provide legal assistance. Para 6, Section 12 of the Asylum Law provides for that a minor who is not accompanied by parents has the right to receive legal assistance free of charge during the asylum procedure.

Clauses 2-5,7, Para.1, Section 11 of the Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provide for the following:
(1) An asylum seeker shall have the following rights:
2) to receive information about the asylum procedure, his or her rights and obligations during the said procedure, as well as possible consequences if he or she does not fulfil his or her obligations and does not co-operate with institutions involved in the asylum procedure, from the State Border Guard and the [Refugee Affairs] Department. An asylum seeker shall have the right to receive such information in a language he or she should understand and on which he or she is able to communicate.;
3) to invite a person for receiving legal aid, at his or her own expense. If an asylum seeker does not have the sufficient [financial] resources, he/she shall be entitled to receive free-of-charge legal aid to the extent and in accordance with the procedure provided in the State Ensured Legal Aid Law;
4) to acquaint him or herself with the application- related documents, with the exception of a case, if disclosure of such information or sources might be detrimental the state security of the Republic of Latvia, security of the organisations or safety of persons giving such information, or safety of persons to whom such information refers, or if the interests of the investigations, that are performed by competent authorities related to examination of the application. or international relations might be compromised;
5) to receive information about a decision made by the Department and the procedure of appealing thereof in a language he or she should understand, with the exception of cases, if the asylum seeker is represented by an authorised persons or he or she receives free-of-charge legal aid,

7) to communicate with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees."
If a minor is not accompanied by parents and wishes to submit a submission himself or herself, his or her rights and lawful interests shall be represented during the asylum procedure by the representative appointed by the Orphan's Court. However please see the chapter related to the unaccompanied minors for the full description of the proposed draft regulation of the representation of an unaccompanied minor in the asylum procedure.
Please see also the answers for parts B and C of this question.

Q.26. B. What are the rules about access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs regarding access to accommodation centres and other housing facilities (see article 14, §7 which is a mandatory provision)

The representatives of UNHCR and NGOs may visit the reception centre, also the asylum seekers may visit their offices. There is no legislation that would provide for the restrictions to the access. The same applies to the legal representatives – they shall just inform the administration that they wish visit an asylum seeker and on the preferable date/time prior to their visit.

Q.26. C. Can the access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs be limited for security reasons or any other reason (see article 14, §7, last sentence)?

There is no legislation that would provide for the limitation of the access.

Q.27. Q.27. A. Is a medical screening organised by the receiving State, is it mandatory or voluntary? Does it include HIV tests? (see article 9 which is an optional provision)

Para 8, Section 10 of the Asylum Law provides for, that an asylum seeker has a duty in the interests of public health to undergo a medical examination. The Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 14 June 2005 No 413 "Procedure of person's medical and laboratory examination, compulsory and enforced isolation and treatment in the cases of contagious infectious diseases" provides for the following requirements :

- Section 23.2 provides for that a compulsory lungs' x-ray to diagnose tuberculosis is to be applied to asylum seekers stationed in the reception centres,
- Section 24.6 states that a compulsory medical examination, to diagnose if there are no lice in the clothes and hair of the person, should be carried out for asylum seekers upon the reception in the reception centre.

The HIV test is not included in the compulsory examination.
Clause 4, Para.2, Section 11 of the Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provide for the following:
" An asylum seeker shall have the following obligations:
4) take medical examination for the interests of public health."

Q.27. B. Do the legal provisions on reception conditions ensure that asylum seekers receive at least emergency care and essential treatment of illness as requested by article 15 §1 which is a mandatory provision? Do they have a further access to health care?

Para 5, Section 10 of the Asylum Law provides for, that an asylum seeker has the right to receive emergency medical assistance and primary health care from State resources.

Section 17.3.2. of the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 19 December 2006 No 1046 «Procedure of organisation and financing of the medical care» provides for, that the Ministry of the Interior covers payments for the following medical care services to following persons: asylum seekers, as well as foreigners detained according to the procedure stated in the Immigration law – for the health care services which are necessary during [their reception] and in the place of their reception and according to the legislation are guaranteed to these persons (except emergency medical assistance, child-birth assistance and cases stated in the Law of Epidemiological Security, as well as medicine necessary for the cure of tuberculosis, that are covered by state budget assets for medical care). If the health of these persons is insured, expenses for the medical care are to be covered by the insurer.

Currently the Ministry of Interior covers all payments for the medical care of asylum seekers. Refugees and persons who are granted alternative status have the personal identity number and access to the Latvian medical care system. If the asylum seekers do not have the personal identity number, it is possible to register them as short-term patients.

The Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia does not change the existing system. Clause 6, Para.1, Section 11 of the Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provide for the right of an asylum seeker "to receive the emergency medical aid and the primary health care covered by the state funds".

Q.27. C. What is the practice regarding access of asylum seekers to health care and how is it organised? In particular, what is the situation in accommodation centres (are doctors coming to the centres or do asylum seekers go to doctors outside)?

For the moment in case of the health problems an asylum seeker is delivered for the medical assistance to the health protection institutions outside the reception centre (it shall be taken into account that the centre is located near the capital of Latvia, that means – close to the best medical facilities). However the reception centre has also its own room for medical assistance, and if the number of asylum seekers will increase it will hire its own medical specialist.

Q.28. Q.28. A. What is the length of the period determined by the concerned Member State during which asylum seekers have no access to the labour market? (see article 11 which is a mandatory provision)

1 (one) year. Section 28.[1] of the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 20 January 2004 No 44 "Regulations on the work permits for the foreigners" provides for that if an asylum seeker has not received the decision of the Refugees Affairs Department about the granting of the refugee or alternative status within one year from the submission of the application for the refugee or alternative status and it has not happened because of the fault of the asylum seeker, the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs shall issue a working permit to the asylum seeker (without affirmation of the employer's application in the affiliate of the agency), on the basis of the asylum seeker's personal identity document until the final decision on the granting of the refugee or alternative status.

Q.28. B. After that period, are asylum seekers or not obliged to obtain a work permit? In case is there a limit for the administration to deliver the permits and how quick are they delivered? What is their length?

Please see answer for Q.28 A.

Q.28. C. After that period, what are the conditions for access of the asylum seekers to the labour market? (in particular, are there rules concerning the maximum allowed of working hours or days per week, month or year, limits in terms of type of work or of professions authorised?

Q.28. D. What are the rules in terms of priorities between asylum seekers on the one hand and nationals, EU or EEE citizens and legally third-country nationals on the other?

C-D. There are no such priorities as the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 20 January 2004 No 44 "Regulations on the work permits for the foreigners" do not distinguish between different types of the foreigners. In fact any other category of foreigners needs to prolong his/her work permit after it expires, but an asylum seeker receives it for the indefinite period- till the closure of his/her case.

Q.28. E. Do asylum seekers have access to vocational training, does this or not depend of their right to access to the labour market, and in case at which conditions? (see article 12 which is optional regarding §1 and mandatory regarding § 2)

There are no special provisions on the vocational trainings for the asylum seekers and no practice so far as well.

Q.28. F. Are the rules regarding access to the labour market adopted to transpose the directive more or less generous than the ones applicable previously?

There was no access of the asylum seekers to the labour market previously at all, therefore the rules shall be considered more generous.

Q.29. Are reception conditions subject to the fact that asylum seekers do not have sufficient resources? Are asylum seekers requested to contribute to reception conditions when they have personal resources (for instance if they work) or to refund the authorities if it appears that they have resources? (see article 13 §§ 3 and 4 which are optional provisions)

Upon arrival an asylum seeker submits the declaration about his financial situation. In practice they indicate that they have no such means. There are no legal provisions concerning the contribution or the refund and therefore no such practice as well.

7. SPECIAL NEEDS OF PARTICULAR CATEGORIES OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.30.

Q.30.A. Which of the different categories of persons with special needs considered in the directive are taken into account in the national legislation (see article 17, §1 which is a mandatory provision): disabled people, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence? Include in your answer all other categories envisaged in national law.

Q.30. B. How is their specific situation taken into account (see articles 13, §2, second indent, 16 §4 second sentence and 17 which are mandatory provisions)?

Q.30. C. How and when are the special needs of the concerned persons supposed to be legally identified (see article 17 § 2 which is a mandatory provision and clarify how it has been interpreted by transposition)?

Q.30. D. Is the necessary medical and other assistance provided to persons with special needs as requested by article 15, §2 which is a mandatory provision and in particular to victims of torture and violence as requested by article 20 which is a mandatory provision?

A-D Neither current legislation of Latvia in force nor the Draft Law do not specify any provisions in relation to the asylum seekers with the special needs and the procedure of their identification.

So far there was no any experience in work with the persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence. It is possible that in this case the assistance of the psychologist would be ensured, keeping at the same time all the guarantees provided in the legislation for asylum seekers. Para 5, Section 10 of the Asylum Law provides for, that an asylum seeker has the right to receive emergency medical assistance and primary health care from State resources. Section 17.3.2. of the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 19 December 2006 No 1046 «Procedure of organisation and financing of the medical care» provides for, that the Ministry of the Interior covers payments for the following medical care services to following persons: asylum seekers, as well as foreigners detained according to the procedure stated in the Immigration law – for the health care services which are necessary during and in the place of their stay and according to the legislation are granted for these persons (except emergency medical assistance, child-birth assistance and cases stated in the Law of Epidemiological Security, as well as medicine necessary for the cure of tuberculosis, that are covered by state budget assets for medical care). If the health of these persons is insured, expenses for the medical care are to be covered by the insurer. The Ministry of Interior covers all payments for the medical care of asylum seekers. Refugees and persons who are granted alternative status have the personal identity number and access to the Latvian medical care system. If the asylum seekers do not have the personal identity number, it is possible to register them as short-term patients.

As the administration of the reception centre indicated in its reply, the reception centre is equipped for the disabled persons – there is a ramp and special equipment (wheelchair and other remedies). It is also planned to establish a separate facilities for minors and women. There is an experience in work with the families, that had infants. Taking into account the number of the asylum seekers each person with the special needs it are enough resources to ensure the satisfaction of these groups of the asylum seekers. The special identification of the persons is not performed, but the staff of the centre rely on their experience and on the individual wishes expressed by the asylum seekers.

Q.31. About minors:

Q.31. A. Till which age are asylum seekers considered to be minor?

Section 11 of the Asylum Law provides for, that a minor is a person who has not attained the age of 18 years. Section 1 of the Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia contains the identical regulation.

Q.31. B. How is access of minor asylum seekers to the education system ensured? Is it at school or in case inside accommodation centres and can it be considered as similar to the conditions for nationals as requested by article 10, §1?

Q.31. C. Is access to education ensured not later than 3 months as requested by article 10, §2 (or after maximum one year if specific education for asylum seekers is provided) and till an expulsion decision is really enforced?

Q.31. D. Is specific education (like language classes) available for asylum seekers, in particular to facilitate their effective access to the education system of the reception Member State (see article 10, §2 which is an optional provision)?

B-D. Para. 2, Section 3 of the Law on the Protection of the Rights of the Child provides for that "The State shall ensure the rights and freedoms of all children without any discrimination – irrespective of race, nationality, gender, language, political party alliance, political or religious convictions, national, ethnic or social origin, place of residence in the State, property or health status, birth or other circumstances of the child, or of his or her parents, guardians, or family members.", as well as in the Section 18: "Guarantees for the rights of the child shall be as determined by the Constitution, this Law and other laws and regulatory enactments, as well as international agreements binding on Latvia." The legislative acts of Latvia provide for the principle of equality of all the children, so it concerns also the minor asylum seekers.

In accordance with Para 7, Section 11 of the Asylum Law the minor children of an asylum seeker or minor asylum seekers shall be ensured the acquisition of education in conformity with the laws in force, the Government shall determine the procedures by which education shall be ensured.

Para.6., Section 7 of the Draft Law provides for the similar:
"(6) Minor asylum seekers shall be ensured with opportunities to gain the education, in accordance with the procedure provided for by the normative acts regulating the area of education. The Cabinet of Ministers shall approve the procedure in accordance with which the education shall be ensured."

Para. 4, Section 32 of the Amendments to General Education Law provides for that such institutions as the reception centres, in which students aged up to 18 years permanently reside shall ensure the possibility for the acquisition of the basic education programme. It shall be mentioned that in accordance with the practice established the reception centre proposes the asylum seekers the elementary courses of Latvian language.

The Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 9 August 2005 No 586 "On order in which the education is ensured for the minors-children of the asylum seekers or to the minors- asylum seekers" prescribe the necessary procedures by which education is to be ensured. They provide for that the basic and secondary education shall be ensured for asylum seekers. The education shall be ensured for asylum seekers in accordance with the procedures specified in the Regulations until the day of the granting or a refusal to grant refugee status or alternative status. The commencement of the acquisition of education shall be ensured for an asylum seeker within a period of 3 (three months) from the day when the minor or his or her parents submitted an application for the granting of refugee status or alternative status in accordance with the procedures specified in the Asylum Law. If the asylum seeker needs special education, the commencement of the acquisition thereof shall be ensured within a period of (1) one year. The reception centre for asylum seekers shall inform the Ministry of Education and Science regarding an asylum seeker for whom education shall be ensured not later than 1 (one) month after the placement of the asylum seeker in the centre. If the asylum seeker has a lawful basis for residing in the Republic of Latvia, the accommodation centre for asylum seekers shall inform the Ministry of Education and Science within a period of 1 (one) month from the day when an application regarding the granting of refugee status or alternative status was submitted. In the case referred to in Section 14 of the Asylum Law, a structural unit of the State Border Guard shall inform the Ministry of Education and Science within a period of one month from the day when the asylum seeker or his or her parents submitted an application regarding the granting of refugee status or alternative status.
The accredited educational institutions that implement licensed general education programmes at the relevant educational level and that are located near an accommodation centre for asylum seekers or, in accordance with Section 14 of the Asylum Law, near a structural unit of the State Border Guard shall ensure education. If an asylum seeker is detained in accordance with Section 14 of the Asylum Law, the acquisition of education shall be ensured on the premises of the structural unit of the State Border Guard. The Ministry of Education and Science shall determine, after co-ordination with the founder of an educational institution, the educational institutions that shall provide educational services to asylum seekers. Co-ordination with the founder shall not be necessary if a State educational institution provides educational services. The Ministry of Education and Science shall develop the necessary samples of subject programmes and methodological recommendations for the ensuring of educational opportunities for asylum seekers. The remuneration of teachers and services of the development and publication of teaching aids for the ensuring of education of asylum seekers shall be financed from the resources included in the basic budget of the Ministry of Education and Science for the current year. In order to receive a government grant for the provision of educational services to asylum seekers, an educational institution shall enter into an agreement with the Ministry of Education and Science, including in the agreement the remuneration of teachers in accordance with the regulatory enactments regarding the work remuneration of teachers. The opportunity to acquire secondary education shall also be ensured after an asylum seeker has attained legal age (18 years).

In order to enrol an asylum seeker in an educational institution, the parents or an authorised representative of a minor person (if the minor person is not accompanied by his or her parents) shall submit to an accommodation centre for asylum seekers or, in the case referred to in Section 14 of the Asylum Law, to a structural unit of the State Border Guard a submission that is addressed to the head of the educational institution and a copy of a document certifying the status of the person, presenting the original. The head of the accommodation centre for asylum seekers or the structural unit of the State Border Guard shall send the submission and the copies of documents attached thereto to the head of the educational institution. If the submission regarding the enrolment of the asylum seeker in the educational institution is not submitted by the parents, such submission shall be submitted by the head of the accommodation centre for asylum seekers or the structural unit of the State Border Guard. The originals or copies of documents certifying the previously acquired education (if applicable) and a photograph of an asylum seeker shall be attached to a submission. If such documents do not exist, the parents or an authorised person of a minor person (if the minor person is not accompanied by parents) shall indicate the education previously acquired by the asylum seeker in the submission to the head of an educational institution. In evaluating the submitted documents and the study achievements of an asylum seeker (if necessary, teachers of subjects or other experts shall be invited), the head of an educational institution shall take a decision regarding the admission of the asylum seeker to a specific grade and shall inform the parents or the legal representative of a minor person (if the minor person is not accompanied by parents) regarding such admission. If necessary, the Academic Information Centre shall perform an expert-examination of education documents in accordance with the procedures specified in Section 11.[1] of the Education Law. Within a period of 1 (one month) after the taking of the decision, an educational institution shall develop an individual lesson plan for an asylum seeker, based on methodological recommendations and samples of subject programmes developed by the Ministry of Education and Science, for an adaptation period that shall not be longer than one school year. An educational institution shall co-ordinate a developed lesson plan with the founder of the educational institution and submit such plan for approval to the Ministry of Education and Science. Co-ordination with the founder shall not be necessary if educational services are provided by a State educational institution. Asylum seekers shall be ensured with the acquisition of the native language during the basic education stage in accordance with possibilities.

The children-asylum seekers living in the reception centre firstly have the introductory courses in Latvian language (provided by the centre) and then they study in the usual local school together with the other children living in the district where the centre is located.

Q.31. E. Are minors in general accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them? (see article 14, § 3)

Yes, minors in general are accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them.

Q.31. F. Do minors with special needs enumerated by article 18, §2 which is a mandatory provision, have access to appropriate mental health care and qualified counselling?

There were no such cases so far. In the absence of the special legal provisions for asylum seekers if such case would arise the overall system described in answer for Q.30 would apply.

Q.31. G. How and when is organised the representation of unaccompanied minors (guardianship, special organisation) and regularly assessed? (see article 19, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

Q.31. H. How is placement of unaccompanied minors organised (with adult relatives, a foster family, in special accommodation centres or other suitable accommodation)? (see article 19, §2 which is mandatory provision)

G-H

It shall be firstly mentioned that since the moment of the establishment of the asylum system in Latvia (1 January 1998) Latvia has had only 5 unaccompanied minors in the asylum procedure. Therefore hardly any significant practice, judicial or administrative case law can be use to illustrate the subject.

The situation in the area of guardianship for the unaccompanied minors has rapidly changed during 2006. Until 10 July 2006 the Board of Appeals for Asylum Seekers' Affairs was responsible for the appointment of the guardians before the termination of this state institution. Then the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs had the obligation to provide the representatives for the unaccompanied minor asylum seekers. The supervision of their activities was carried out by the Ministry of Justice. But Section 7 of the Amendments to the Asylum Law adopted on 7 June 2006 (came into force on 10 July 2006, the Official Journal, 98 (3466), 27.06.2006) provided for Para. 3, Section 11 of the Asylum Law to be amended and to be read as the following:

"If a minor is not accompanied by parents and wishes to submit a submission himself or herself, his or her rights and lawful interests shall be represented during the asylum procedure by the representative appointed by the Orphan's Court. The duties of the representative and his/her appointment procedure, the procedure of the granting and payment of the reward and the amount of the reward for the representative, as well as requirements for the representative shall be defined by the Cabinet of Ministers. Section 19 of the Amendments to the Asylum Law provides for the adding of new points 6 and 7 to the transitional provisions of the Asylum Law, that provides for the obligation of the Cabinet of Ministers to adopt the Regulations on the above-mentioned procedures related to the representative of the minor asylum seeker till 30 November 2006. In its turn the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs has the obligation to provide the representatives for the minor asylum seekers till 31 December 2006."

However it was decided by the responsible ministries not to introduce a special new legal procedure and system of guardians for the unaccompanied minors. Instead of the special governmental by-law, that would introduce the specific regulation of the guardianship, it was decided to amend the existing custody and guardianship system. The Amendments to the Asylum Law adopted on October 25, 2007 (entered into force on November 21, 2007) provide for the following changes to the Section 11 of the current Asylum Law:

"Para.3, Section 11 of the Asylum Law to be read as follows:

“(3) If a minor is not accompanied by parents and wishes to submit an application himself or herself, he or she shall be represented in personal and economic relationships during the asylum procedure by the orphan’s court or a guardian appointed by the orphan’s court, or by the head of the child care institution.” These Amendments will regulate the issue until the new Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia will not be adopted and come into force.

Since January 1, 2007 and until November 21, 2007, when the above-mentioned Amendments to the Asylum Law entered into force, the whole procedure of the appointment of a guardian for an unaccompanied minor was regulated in accordance with the Law On Orphan’s Courts. Section 27 of this Law provided for the following:
“(1) If an Orphan's court detects that an orphan or a child who is left without parental care, or another person lacking capacity to act who is not a citizen of Latvia or a non-citizen of Latvia, lives or resides in the territory of the operation thereof, such Orphan’s court shall inform a competent guardianship or trusteeship authority of the State, in which the child or another person lacking capacity to act is a citizen, or a guardianship or trusteeship authority of the previous country of domicile without delay and shall request to evaluate the necessity to establish guardianship or trusteeship and to appoint a guardian or a trustee.
(2) An Orphan's court shall take a decision regarding the taking over of a foreign guardianship or trusteeship case, if a competent foreign guardianship or trusteeship authority has appointed a guardian or a trustee and has requested to take over the guardianship or trusteeship case.
(3) An Orphan’s court shall inform the guardianship or trusteeship authority of the citizenship state or the previous country of domicile of a child or another person lacking capacity to act regarding the taking over of a guardianship or trusteeship case.
(4) If an Orphan's court detects faults, deficiencies, abuse in the behaviour of a guardian or threats to life or health of a child, it shall take a decision regarding the suspension of the guardian from the fulfillment of the duties of a guardian and the appointment of an interim guardian or the placement of the child into a foster family or an institution of long-term social care and social rehabilitation and inform the foreign guardianship authority thereof without delay.
(5) If an Orphan's court detects faults, deficiencies, abuse or actions that harm the interests of a person lacking capacity to act, it shall take a decision regarding the suspension of the trustee from the fulfillment of the duties of a trustee and the appointment of an interim trustee and inform the foreign trusteeship authority thereof without delay.”

Until November 21, 2007 the practical solution was that, in accordance with his/her wish a minor asylum seeker may be accommodated together with his relatives. In case if guardian has been appointed, has guardian is accommodated in the room separate (next room) from unaccompanied minor in the reception centre.

Para.1.1., Article 20 of the Asylum Law inserted by the Amendments to the Asylum Law adopted on October 25, 2007 (entered into force on November 21, 2007) provides for the following, “Decision on the placing of the unaccompanied [by parents] minor in the reception centre for the asylum seekers, with guardian or in the child-care institution shall be taken by the orphan 's court, finding out the opinion of the [Refugee Affairs] Department. The decision shall be adopted, taking into account the interests of the [minor] person and his/her opinion in accordance with this person's age and maturity, and following such conditions:

1) an unaccompanied minor shall be placed together with the adult relatives,
2) children of one family shall not be separated except the cases when it is done in the interests of the children,
3) place of residence of the an unaccompanied minor shall be changed only in cases when it is in compliance with this person's interests."

The transitional period provides for, that until January 1, 2009, the orphan's court while taking the decision on the placing of the unaccompanied [by parents] minor, places the unaccompanied minor with the guardian or in the reception centre for the asylum seekers.

Section 7 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the following:

"(1) Unaccompanied minor shall submit an application in accordance with the procedure provided for in Section 6, Paragraph one of this Law. His or her rights and legal interests during the asylum procedure shall be represented by a representative appointed by the orphan's court. The Cabinet of Ministers shall determine obligations of a representative, the procedure of appointment, the procedure of granting and payment of the remuneration, the amount of the remuneration.

(2) A capacitated citizen of Latvia, non-citizen of Latvia, a citizen of the member state of the European Union, member state of the European Economic Area or of Swiss Confederation, or a citizen of the third country, who is entitled to stay in the territory of Latvia for at least 2 years, if he or she has achieved the age of 25 years, speaks the state language, has at least the basic education.

(3) The following person cannot be a representative:
1) whose child care or custody rights have been removed;
2) who has been sentenced for committing an intentional crime;
3) who has been released from criminal liability, sentence or serving the sentence for committing an intentional crime;
4) who has been held criminally liable for committing an intentional crime against a person, but the criminal proceedings have been terminated due to the limitation period, settlement, clemency or amnesty;
5) who is the convicted, the accused or a suspect in criminal proceedings for committing an intentional crime;
6) who has violated the normative acts regulating the protection of child's rights;
7) who is under trusteeship;
8) who was recognised by the psychiatrist, the expert in narcotics or the family doctor as a person not capable to fulfill the obligation of the representative due to the health reasons.

(4) in order to apply for the status of representative, a person shall produce the personal identification documents and the documents certifying the education, the documents certifying the rights of foreigner or stateless person to stay in the Republic of Latvia to the orphan's court, in which territory the registered place of living of a candidate [is located], and to submit [to the same court], :
1) an application;
2) opinions of the family doctor, with which records of the patients a person is registered and who is in the health care for at least 6 months, of the psychiatrist and of the expert in narcotics regarding the health condition of a person.

(5) The employee specially trained for that task conducts the interview with the unaccompanied minor and prepares the decision on this person.

(6) Minor asylum seekers shall be ensured with opportunities to gain the education, in accordance with the procedure provided for by the normative acts regulating the area of education. The Cabinet of Ministers shall approve the procedure in accordance with which the education shall be ensured."

Q.31. I. How is the tracing of the family members of the unaccompanied minors organised? Are measures taken to protect confidentiality of information when necessary? (see article 19, §3 which is a mandatory provision)

In principle the legislation does not prescribe the provisions for the trace of the parents of minor asylum seekers, but only for the trace of the parents of a minor refugee or a minor person, who was granted the alternative status (subsidiary protection).

Para. 2-3, Section 74 of the Law on the Protection of the Rights of the Child provides for that the Custody Court together with the social assistance institutions of the self-government and the migration authorities carries out measures in order to find the parents of a minor refugee or a minor person, who was granted the alternative status (subsidiary protection) and to find out what possibilities exist for the child to return into the family. If it is not possible to find the parents, the child shall be granted the same care as any other minor, which does not have the care of his/her parents.

Section 29 of the Asylum Law indicates in relation to the refugees indicates that a minor refugee who is not married has the right to take in his or her mother and father (also adopters) who have arrived from a foreign country.

Section 38 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the following:
"(1) A refugee and a person who has obtained alternative status are entitled to unite with family members who are abroad. A person who has obtained alternative status has the said right if he or she has stayed in the Republic of Latvia at least two years from granting of status.
(2) A minor refugee who has not concluded marriage and has not been accompanied by his or her parents shall be entitled to receive his or her mother and father who arrive from abroad.
(3 The Cabinet of Ministers shall provide procedure in accordance with which unification of a family, as stated in Paragraphs one and two of this Section, is performed."

8. EXCEPTIONAL MODALITIES OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.32. Apart from detention covered by the next question, are there exceptional modalities for reception conditions in the following cases and if yes, which ones and for how long are they applicable, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)?

Q.32. A. Persons with specific or special needs, regarding in particular the period of assessment of those needs?

Q.32. B. Non availability of reception conditions in certain areas

Q.32. C. Temporarily exhaustion of normal housing capacities

Q.32. D. The asylum seeker is confined to a border post

Q.32. E. All other cases not mentioned in the directive (for instance urgent situation in case of a sudden high number of applicants outside a case of application of the directive on temporary protection).

A-E – There are no specific modalities of reception conditions provided by Latvia's legislation or practice.

Q.33. Detention of asylum seekers (we do not cover the situation of rejected asylum seekers detained for the purpose of their return) (see articles 6 §2, 7 §3, 13, §2 2nd indent and 14 §8 which implies that the directive is in principle applicable in case of detention):

Q.33. A. In which cases or circumstances and for which reasons[1] (identity verification in particular if the persons have no or false documents, protection of public order or national security, refugee status determination, way of entry into the territory, etc) can an asylum seeker be detained during the asylum procedure till his request has been finally rejected. Quote precisely in English in your answer the legal basis for detention of asylum seekers in national law.

Q.33. B. Has your member State adopted measures to transpose §3 of article 7 which is an optional provision? If yes, how has this provision been legally understood (is it a case of detention or an obligation to stay in and not leave a certain place?) and for which reasons can an asylum seeker be "confined" in such a place?

A-B In accordance with Section 14 of the Asylum Law :

(1) The State Border Guard has the right to detain an asylum seeker up to 10 days if:

1) the identity of the asylum seeker has not been ascertained;

2) there is a reason to believe that the asylum seeker will endeavour to misuse the asylum procedure;

3) there is reason to believe that the asylum seeker will not have, in accordance with the provisions of this Law, a legal basis to reside in the Republic of Latvia; or

3) it is necessary in the interests of State security and public order.

[1] Please specify if article 18 §1 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Member States shall not hold a person in detention for the sole reason that he/she is an applicant for asylum" is or not respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed).

(2) The State Border Guard shall detain an asylum seeker and a judge shall take a decision regarding the detention according to the procedures specified in the Immigration Law.
(3) The State Border Guard may present a submission regarding the extension of the time period of detention repeatedly, however, the total detention time period may not exceed the time period for the examination of an application.
(4) During detention an asylum seeker shall be accommodated in premises provided for this purpose separately from persons who are held on suspicion of committing a criminal offence:

1) at the border control point or at the State Border Guard territorial structural unit if an application in accordance with the procedures prescribed by Section 13 of this Law is being examined; and

2) at the State Border Guard territorial structural unit if an application has been submitted to the State Border Guard territorial structural unit.

Section 10 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the almost identical regulation:
(1) The State Border Guard shall be entitled to detain an asylum seeker for a period not more than 10 days in case, if:
1) identity of the asylum seeker has not been established;
2) there is basis to deem that the asylum seeker tries to use the asylum procedure maliciously;
3) there is basis for the competent state authorities, including the State Border Guard to deem that the asylum seeker will not have legal basis to reside in the Republic of Latvia in accordance with the provisions of this Law;
4) there is basis for the competent state authorities, including the State Border Guard to deem that an asylum seeker causes the threat to the interests of the State security and public policy and security of the Republic of Latvia.
(2) The State Border Guard shall detain an asylum seeker and a judge shall make a decision about detention of an asylum seeker in accordance with the procedure provided for in the Immigration Law.
(3) The detention period may be prolonged, however total period of detention must not exceed the period of the asylum procedure.
(4) During detention, an asylum seeker shall be accommodated in special premises in a border checkpoint or territorial unit of the State Border Guard, separately from persons who are under suspicion for committing a criminal offence.

Article 18 §1 of the Directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 is respected.

Q.33. C. Are there legally alternatives to detention, like obligation to report to the authorities, obligation to stay in a place, provision of a guarantor or of a financial guarantee?

There are no such alternatives.

Q.33. D. Which is the competent authority to order the detention of an asylum seeker? Explain if different authorities are involved to first take and later confirm the decision.

The State Border Guard has the right to order the detention of an asylum seeker. In case of the prolongation of the duration of the detention the court shall decide on this issue (Section 14 of the Asylum Law and Section 10 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia). Please see the answer for A-B for details.

Q.33. E. For how long and till which stage of the asylum procedure can an asylum seeker be detained?

Please see the answer for A-B for details (Section 14 of the Asylum Law and Section 10 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia).

Q.33. F. In which places (can we call them "closed centres"?) are asylum seekers detained (places in a special closed centres reserved only to asylum seekers, together with returnees like illegal aliens or even in a normal prison, in case within separated areas or with the other detainees)? Indicate if a difference has to be made following the location of the "closed centres" at the border or on the territory? Which is the authority managing those places and is it the same as the one in charge of reception conditions?

In accordance with Para.4, Section 14 of the Asylum Law during detention an asylum seeker shall be accommodated in premises provided for this purpose separately from persons who are held on suspicion of committing a criminal offence:

1) at the border control point or at the State Border Guard territorial structural unit if an application in accordance with the procedures prescribed by Section 13 of this Law is being examined; and

2) at the State Border Guard territorial structural unit if an application has been submitted to the State Border Guard territorial structural unit.

In practice if the asylum seekers are detained inside the country they are being placed into the detention centre for illegal migrants "Olaine". This detention centre is managed by the State Border Guard.

Para.4, Section 10 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the almost identical regulation:

"4) During detention, an asylum seeker shall be accommodated in special premises in a border checkpoint or territorial unit of the State Border Guard, separately from persons who are under suspicion for committing a criminal offence."

Q.33. G. Does UNHCR and NGOs have access to the places of detention and under which conditions?

Yes, they have. The Asylum Law does not provide for any conditionalities for the UNHCR or NGOs to visit the asylum seekers in detention.

Q.33. H. What appeal(s) can asylum seekers introduce against the fact he is detained? Is article 18 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Where an applicant for asylum is held in detention, Member States shall ensure that there is a possibility of speedy judicial review"* respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed)?

In accordance with Section 14 of the Asylum Law :

(1) The State Border Guard has the right to detain an asylum seeker up to 10 days if:

1) the identity of the asylum seeker has not been ascertained;

2) there is a reason to believe that the asylum seeker will endeavour to misuse the asylum procedure;

3) there is reason to believe that the asylum seeker will not have, in accordance with the provisions of this Law, a legal basis to reside in the Republic of Latvia; or

3) it is necessary in the interests of State security and public order.

(2) The State Border Guard shall detain an asylum seeker and a judge shall take a decision regarding the detention according to the procedures specified in the Immigration Law.

(3) The State Border Guard may present a submission regarding the extension of the time period of detention repeatedly, however, the total detention time period may not exceed the time period for the examination of an application.

(4) During detention an asylum seeker shall be accommodated in premises provided for this purpose separately from persons who are held on suspicion of committing a criminal offence:

1) at the border control point or at the State Border Guard territorial structural unit if an application in accordance with the procedures prescribed by Section 13 of this Law is being examined; and

2) at the State Border Guard territorial structural unit if an application has been submitted to the State Border Guard territorial structural unit.

Section 10 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the almost identical regulation:

"(1) The State Border Guard shall be entitled to detain an asylum seeker for a period not more than 10 days in case, if:

1) identity of the asylum seeker has not been established;

2) there is basis to deem that the asylum seeker tries to use the asylum procedure maliciously;

3) there is basis for the competent state authorities, including the State Border Guard to deem that the asylum seeker will not have legal basis to reside in the Republic of Latvia in accordance with the provisions of this Law;

4) there is basis for the competent state authorities, including the State Border Guard to deem that an asylum seeker causes the threat to the interests of the State security and public policy and security of the Republic of Latvia.

(2) The State Border Guard shall detain an asylum seeker and a judge shall make a decision about detention of an asylum seeker in accordance with the procedure provided for in the Immigration Law.

(3) The detention period may be prolonged, however total period of detention must not exceed the period of the asylum procedure.

(4) During detention, an asylum seeker shall be accommodated in special premises in a border checkpoint or territorial unit of the State Border Guard, separately from persons who are under suspicion for committing a criminal offence."

As mentioned above, the judicial examination of the detention shall take place according to the procedures specified in the Immigration Law. Para 6-8, Section 55 of the Immigration Law provides for that both initial decision on detention (made on the basis of the above-mentioned automatic submission of the materials by the State Border Guard) and the decision on prolongation of the duration of the detention may be appealed against within 48 hours since the reception of the copy of the judicial decision. The decision on the appeal made by the court is final and not subject to the further appeals. The submission of the appeal is not basis for the release of the person from detention.

Q.33. I. Is the directive on reception conditions considered to be in principle applicable to the places where asylum seekers are detained? In particular which information do they receive about their rights, which access do they have to legal advice and health care?

Yes, directive is applicable, including the information about the asylum seekers' rights.

Q.33. J. Apart from freedom of movement, what are the main differences between normal reception conditions and exceptional modalities for reception conditions in case of detention, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)? If it is about closed centres, are the regulations of those places in line with the requirements of the directive (is article 13, §2, second indent of the directive following which "Member States shall ensure that standards of living is met (…) in relation to the situation of persons who are in detention" respected?).

There is no additional information in my responsibility concerning such differences.

Q.33. K. Are measures taken to avoid detention of asylum seekers with special needs (if yes, which ones?) or are special measures taken because of their needs?

Yes, in practice people with special needs (e.g. mothers with small children) are sent for the accommodation in the reception centre.

Q.33. L. Can minor asylum seekers be detained together with relatives? Can unaccompanied minor asylum seekers be detained? If yes, are there special measures which take into account that children are concerned?

Yes, minors can be detained together with their relatives. The unaccompanied minors can be detained as well. The Law on the Protection of the Rights of the Child shall be taken into account by the authorities. In case of complaints they may also complain to the State Inspection for Protection of Children's Rights, which main tasks will be to supervise and control implementation of the legal standards of child protection.

Q.33. M. In particular is article 10 regarding access to education of minors respected in those places?

Yes. In accordance with Para 7, Section 11 of the Asylum Law the minor children of an asylum seeker or minor asylum seekers shall be ensured the acquisition of education in conformity with the laws in force, the Government shall determine the procedures by which education shall be ensured. Para. 4, Section 32 of the General Education Law provides for that such institutions as the detention places similarly to the reception centres, in which students aged up to 18 years permanently reside shall ensure the possibility for the acquisition of the basic education programme.

Before the implementation of the directive there were a few cases where the detained minors attended the local school near the detention centre. Now the legal procedure is established and therefore the responsibility for such education was shifted from the Ministry of Interior to the Ministry of Education and Science. In 2006 in accordance with the data provided by the Ministry of Education and Science in its letter of 24 August 2006 indicated that for that moment, in accordance with its data, there are no minor children of the asylum seekers or minor asylum seekers that would acquire the education in the detention or in the reception centre. The situation changed a little in 2nd half of 2006 – 1st half of 2007 - the Ministry of Education and Science in its letter of 9 May 2007 indicated that on 1 April 2007 3 former minor asylum seekers from Somalia, who were granted the alternative status (subsidiary protection) in the Republic of Latvia, study in one of the Latvian schools. No minor asylum seekers are studying in Latvia for the moment. In the same letter the Ministry indicated that in 2007 the budgetary line was provided in the state budget for the development of the programmes of the educatory courses and methodological recommendations for work with the asylum seekers in the Republic of Latvia.

Finally it shall be added the Ministry of Education and Science in its letter of 9 May 2007 indicated that it has drafted Amendments to the Education Law, which will replace the current Article 3 and will make the implementation of Article 27 of Directive clearer.

The Draft new Section 3 of the Education Law will be read as follows:

"The equal right to acquire education, regardless of their property or social status, race, nationality, gender, religious or political convictions, state of health, occupation or place of residence shall belong to:

1) citizen of Latvia,
2) non-citizen of Latvia,
3) citizen of the European Union Member States, State of European Economic Area or Swiss Confederation, who resides in the Republic of Latvia,
4) citizen of the third country, who has a valid residence permit,
5) minor child of the asylum seeker, the refugee or the person, who was granted the alternative status,
6) minor asylum seeker, refugee or person, who was granted the alternative status."

Q.33. N. How many asylum seekers are for the moment detained in your Member State? Which proportion does this represent in comparison of the total number of asylum seekers at the same moment?

On 1 May 2007 5 asylum seekers were detained. In total the applications of 8 asylum seekers are in the procedure of the examination for the moment.

9. ORGANISATION OF THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.34. Explain if the system of providing reception conditions is centralised or decentralised (which levels of government do provide practically reception conditions?) (do not confuse this question with question number 3 about the competence to make rules about reception conditions).

Provision of the reception conditions is centralised. The Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs is a supervisory body of the Ministry of Interior of Republic of Latvia responsible for the operation of the reception centre.

Q.35. In case, are accommodation centres public or/and private (managed by NGOs? If yes, are the NGOs financially supported by the State?)

The only existing reception centre "Mucenieki" is public one and is managed by the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs.

Q.36. In case, how many accommodation centres are there in your Member State (distinguish in your answer between public and private centres)?

There is one asylum seekers reception centre in Latvia. It is planned to establish the second public centre near the city of Daugavpils in the future. However for the moment the capacity of the only centre allows to cope with the number of asylum seekers successfully.

Q.37. Is there in the legislation a plan or are there rules in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory of your Member State to avoid their concentration in some areas like big cities or to share the costs of their reception between central, regional and local authorities?

There is no such plan. Taking into account the number of the asylum seekers - 83 asylum seekers stayed in the centre since 1998, 1 asylum seeker stayed on 1 May 2007, such a plan is not necessary for the moment.

Q.38. Does a central body representing all the actors (like NGOs) involved in reception conditions exist? Does it play a consultative role for the State authorities, a coordination role for the actors or any other role?

No such body exists.

Q.39. Q.39. A. Which is the body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions as requested by article 23 which is mandatory provision? Include in your answer which is the competent ministry (Interior, Social affairs, etc) for reception conditions?

The Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs is body under the supervision of the Ministry of Interior of Republic of Latvia responsible for the operation of the reception centre. The special system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions that would differ for the overall system of guidance, control and monitoring of work of the different bodies of the Ministry of Interior, has not been introduced.

Section 7 of the State Administration Structure Law provides for that the Government shall implement subordination in the organisation of state administration (institutional subordination) and in the performance of the functions of state administration (functional subordination). The Government shall implement subordination through the intermediation of an particular Minister. The Ministers shall implement subordination directly or through the intermediation of an institution of direct administration, its unit or official. The subordination shall be implemented in the form of control or supervision.

The Ministry of Interior exercise the control over the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs in the form of the supervision. The supervision means the rights of higher institutions or officials to examine the lawfulness of decisions taken by lower institutions or officials and to revoke unlawful decisions, as well as to issue an order to take a decision in case of unlawful failure to act. Therefore taking into account the above-mentioned law and the fact that there is only 1 public reception centre with the average 8-10 asylum seekers staying there per year this system could be considered as the sufficient one for the moment.

Q.39. B. Has your Member State (like the Czech Republic did recently) approved quality standards (not necessary legally binding) for housing services (for instance about the number of persons per bedroom on the basis of its size, number of accessible toilets, bathrooms, showers and washing machines per number of persons, existence of common rooms with radio, television, newspapers, books, computers, accessibility of telephone, existence of recreative rooms for children,…) to be respected in particular in accommodation centres?

No, there are no quality standards approved for housing services.

Q.39. C. How is this system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions organised?

Q.39. D. Does the body in charge of guidance, control and monitoring produce reports about the level of reception conditions? If yes, how frequently and are they public?

Answer on Q.C-D. The Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs is a supervisory body of the Ministry of Interior of Republic of Latvia responsible for the operation of the reception centre. The special system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions that would differ for the overall system of guidance, control and monitoring of work of the different bodies of the Ministry of Interior, has not been introduced. Therefore there are no special reports about the level of reception conditions.

Q.40. Q.40. A. What is the total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions for the last year for which figures are available (see article 22 obliging Member States to calculate those statistics about which we also asked the Commission to require them from Member States for mid June)?

In total 83 asylum seekers stayed in the centre since 1998 till 1 May, 2007, currently-on 1 May 2007 1 asylum seeker stays in the centre.

In accordance with the information provided by the Refugee Affairs Department of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs, the reception conditions following from the Directive were provided in 2005-2007 to the following numbers of the asylum seekers:

In 2005

Country	In total	Male	Female
Iraq	6	4	2
Belarus	1	1	0
In total	7	5	2

Division by ages

Age	In total	Male	Female
0-4	2	2	0
5-9	1	1	0
10-14	1	0	1
40-44	2	1	1
50-54	1	1	0
In total	7	5	2

In 2006

Country	In total	Male	Female
Tchechnya	4	3	1
Afganistan	1	1	0
Belarus	1	1	0
Kyrgizstan	1	1	0
Georgia	1	1	0
Nationality not identified	7	5	2
In total	15	12	3

Division by ages

Age	In total	Male	Female
5-9	2	2	0
15-19	4	3	1
20-24	1	0	1
25-29	6	5	1
35-39	2	2	0
In total	15	12	3

In first 4 months of 2007 (on 1 May, 2007)

Country	In total	Male	Female
Tchechnya	1	1	0
Armenia	1	1	0
Belarus	1	1	0
Kazakhstan	1	1	0
Ukrain	1	1	0
Iraq	1	1	0
Mongolia	2	1	1
In total	8	7	1

Division by ages

Age	In total	Male	Female
25-29	1	1	0
30-34	1	0	1
35-39	1	1	0
40-44	2	2	0
45-49	1	1	0
60-64	1	1	0
90-94	1	1	0
In total	8	7	1

Q.40. B. What is the total budget of reception conditions in euro for the last year for which figures are available?

In 2005, 2006 and 2007 the annual total budget for the reception system was of the same amount - LVL 87 723 (EUR 125 318, 56).

Q.40. C. What is the average cost of reception conditions in euro per asylum seeker for the last year for which figures are available?

It is not possible to provide the average cost since the budget for the reception does not provide for such a detailed calculation. However please take into account that in 2007 LVL 87 723 (EUR 125 318, 56) are available for the reception centre, where 200 inhabitants can be house and only 1 asylum seekers stayed or continue staying in this centre on 1 May 2007.

Q.40. D Are the costs of reception conditions of asylum seekers supported by the central/federal or federated government or are they shared with regional and/or local authorities?

All the costs are covered from the state budget without involvement of the local self-government.

Q.40. E. Is article 24 § 2 of the directive following which "Member States shall allocate the necessary resources in connection with the nationals provisions enacted to implement this directive" respected?

Yes, Article 24 § 2 of the directive is respected.

Q.41. Q.41. A. What is the total number of persons working for reception conditions?

There are 5 workers in the reception centre and 5 – in the Refugee Affairs Department of the of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs.

Q.41. B. How is the training of persons working in accommodation centres organised? Does it take into account specific needs of unaccompanied minors when relevant as well as the gender dimension? (see article 14 §5, 19 § 4 and also 24 §1 which are mandatory provisions)?

At average per year 3 study visits of the workers of the reception centre to the other EU Member States take place.

Q.41. C. Are there rules about the deontology of persons working in accommodation centres, in particular on confidentiality?

In accordance with the Section 7 of the Asylum Law all the employees of Latvia's institutions involved in asylum procedures do not have the right to disclose information on asylum seekers, except in the cases listed in the Asylum Law. An employee guilty of disclosure of information shall be held liable in accordance with procedures prescribed by law. Information on an asylum seeker may be disclosed if the person concerned has given written consent for disclosure or if law enforcement institutions in accordance with procedures prescribed by law have requested the information. Information regarding asylum seekers shall not be provided to his or her state of citizenship or if the asylum seeker is a stateless person – to his or her previous country of domicile.
Section 5 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the almost identical regulation:
(1) Staff of institutions involved in the asylum procedure shall not be entitled to disclose any information about an asylum seeker including the fact of submitted application, with the exception of the cases stated in Paragraph two of this Section. Employee who is guilty for disclosure of such information shall be held subject of disciplinary, administrative and criminal liability.
(2) Information about an asylum seeker may be disclosed only if the relevant person has given his or her written consent or if such information has been requested by competent law enforcement institutions or foreign institutions, if compliant with the international obligations of the Republic of Latvia.
(3) By gathering information about a person, competent authorities shall not obtain information from persecutors stated in Section 24 of this Law, in such a way in order the persecutors would get informed directly about a fact that the particular person is an asylum seeker, refugee or person who has obtained alternative status, as well as, if such a way would harm the health of the person and his or her dependants or freedom and safety of his or her family members who currently reside in the country of origin.

The issues of the deontology are covered by the general legal acts on the conduct of the civil servants and state employees. There are no specific legal acts, that would target the staff of the reception centre.

10. IMPACT OF THE DIRECTIVE

Legal impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.42. Specify if there are or not big problems with the translation of the directive in the official language of your Member State and give in case a list of the worst examples of provisions which have been badly translated? (please note that this question has in particular been added to the questionnaire concerning the new Member States)

No, there were no such problems encountered so far.

Q.43. Where there precise legal rules on reception conditions for asylum seekers before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the directive (if yes, specify what the nature of those rules was (legislation, regulation, administrative instructions,…)?

Yes, since the reception of the asylum seekers was regulated by the same Asylum Law that was later amended to transpose the provisions of the Directive, and by the governmental regulations issued on the basis of the delegation provided for by the Asylum Law. In addition 2 (two) administrative acts cover some practical issues of the work of the only reception centre in Latvia- the issues of the internal order of the reception centre are regulated by the Regulations of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs «On the Internal Order of the Asylum seekers' Reception Centre «Mucenieki»» and by the Order of the Head of the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs of 24 July 2003 No 16/08 « On the approval of the Statute of the Asylum seekers' Reception Centre «Mucenieki and of the description of the positions».
The current Asylum La will be replaced by the future Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia.

Q.44. Did the legal rules applicable to reception conditions become more clear, precise, coherent or detailed with the adoption of the transposition norms (for instance do you now have after the transposition one basic text dealing with reception conditions instead of numerous different texts in the past?

The legal regulation on some issues, e.g. like expenses for hygiene and first necessity goods, education of minors-asylum seekers etc., become more precise. The number of the legislative acts regulating the reception issues has not decreased, since the number of the governmental regulations, covering the different issues of the reception increased – e.g. The Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 9 August 2005 No 586 "On order in which the education is ensured for the minors-children of the asylum seekers or to the minors-asylum seekers"(The Official Journal, 126 (3284) 11.08.2005), the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 19 December 2006 No 1046 «Procedure of organisation and financing of the medical care», (The Official Journal, 208, 30.12.2006.) and the Amendments to the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 20 January 2004 No 44 "Regulations on the work permits for the foreigners" (The Official Journal, 147 (3305) 15.09.2005) and other legal acts were adopted or the existing ones were amended (pleased see the complete list in the beginning of the questionnaire and in the bibliography).

Q.45. Did the transposition of the directive imply important changes in national law or were the changes of minor importance? In case, list the most important changes that have been introduced.

Technically speaking, most of the provisions of the Asylum Law related to the reception of the asylum seekers were already in compliance with the requirements of the Directive upon its entry into force. Therefore only Para.1 and 2, Article 3 of the Asylum Law were changed in order to ensure compliance with Articles 9 and 15 of the Directive and a few governmental regulations were adopted or amended:

At the same time the substantial new issues were introduced or made more precise:

- order in which the education is ensured for the minors-children of the asylum seekers or to the minors-asylum seekers was approved,
- regulations on the work permits for the foreigners were introduced,
- procedure of organisation and financing of the medical care for asylum seekers was made more precise,
- the amount of expenses for acquisition of hygiene and first necessity goods for the asylum seeker and the procedure of cover of these expenses was defined at the level of the governmental regulations.
- the current text of Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia does not change for the substantial change of the existing reception system in the future with only one exception. In accordance with the future Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia during examination of an application, the person shall be deemed an asylum seeker, with the exception of the case when, based on Para.1, Section 19[522], the complaint of a person concerning the rejection of the repeated application is submitted. In case of such complaint a person shall not be deemed an asylum seeker and this complaint will not have a suspensive effect. The current Asylum Law does not provide for such an exception.

[522] Section 19 regulates the issues of the examination of a case in which the final decision was already made. Para.1.-2 of Section 19 of the Draft Law On the Asylum in the Republic of Latvia provides for the following:
" (1) In case, if after the final decision has been made in an action, the Department has established new facts or if the asylum seeker has submitted a repeated application to the Department, which contains new information related to granting refugee or alternative status, the Department shall make decision about acceptance of the application for examination or disregarding the application. If the repeated application contains sufficient information to make a previously mentioned decision, interview may also not be held."

Political impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.46. Explain briefly if there has been an important debate about the transposition of the directive (in particular in the Parliament, but possibly also in the government, between political parties, including in medias, etc; underline in case the main points which have been discussed or have created difficulties)

There were no such important debates, that probably may be explained by the overall very low number of the asylum seekers and refugees in Latvia (in comparison with the other EU Member States). Since January 1998 till May 2007 10 persons were granted the refugee status and 18 persons were granted the alternative protection in Latvia.

Q.47. Did the transposition of the directive contribute to make the internal rules stricter or more generous? In particular, did your Member State use the occasion of the transposition to abolish more favourable provisions of national law? Does your Member State still have rules more favourable than the provisions of the directive (if yes, try to give the more important examples).

It is hard to evaluate whether transposition of the directive contribute to make the internal rules stricter or more generous. However Latvia still maintain certain elements of the reception conditions, that are more favourable than the Directive allows:

- There are no provisions for refusal of reception conditions for unreasonably late applications,
- In relation to the reductions or withdrawals of the reception conditions Section 6 of the Regulations of the Cabinet of Ministers of 8 February 2005 No 119 "On the amount of expenses for acquisition of food, as well as hygiene and first necessity goods for the asylum seeker and the procedure of cover of these expenses" provide for that if an asylum seeker has left the reception centre without the permission of the administration of the centre and has been absent for more than 48 hours, the head of the reception centre for asylum seekers has the right to take a decision not to pay expenditure for food to him or her for the time period of his or her absence. No other reductions or withdrawals are possible in accordance with the current asylum legislation,
- Asylum seekers are not requested to refund the spent financial means for the reception conditions by the authorities if it appears that they have resources,
- The Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia does not practically change the existing system.

11. ANY OTHER INTERESTING ELEMENT

Q.48. What are in your view the weaknesses and strengths of the system of reception conditions in your Member State?

The strengths:

- good co-operation between the authorities involved in the reception process- the State Border Guard and the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs,
- well –equipped reception centre,
- good theoretical knowledge of the reception standards and best practices by the staff of the reception centre, that is being regularly improved by means of communication with the colleagues from another EU Member States.

The weaknesses:

- the reception system is established, however few issues are not yet tested by practice (e.g. employment of the asylum seekers and the overall system of education of the asylum seekers),
- there is no compulsory mechanism that would require an asylum seeker to observe the rules of the internal order of the reception centre,
- in case of the sudden large increase in numbers of the asylum seekers, the problem may arise concerning hiring the specially qualified staff.

Q.49. Mention any good practice in your Member State which could be promoted in other Member States

The application of the provisions of the reception Directive transposed by the Sections of the Asylum Law and of the Draft Law on Asylum in the Republic of Latvia to those asylum seekers, who are in the Dublin procedure, can be considered as the good practice.

Q.50. Please add here any other interesting element about reception conditions in your Member State which you did not had the occasion to mention in your previous answer.

--

QUESTIONNAIRE FOR THE NATIONAL REPORT ON THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE DIRECTIVE :
RECEPTION CONDITIONS OF 27 JANUARY 2003

IN: LITHUANIA

by
Lyra Jakulevičienė
Associate Professor, Mykolas Romeris University
adriai@takas.lt

12 November 2007

ABREVIATIONS

EFR – European Refugee Fund
FRC – Foreigners' Registration Centre
LRC – Lithuanian Red Cross
MOH – Ministry of Health of the Republic of Lithuania
MOI – Ministry of Interior of the Republic of Lithuania
MSSL – Ministry of Social Security and Labour of the Republic of Lithuania
NGO – non governmental organisation
RRC – Refugee Reception Centre
RSD - refugee status determination
SBGS – State Border Guard Service
SGBV - sexual and gender based violence

1. NORMS OF TRANSPOSITION

Q.1. 1. NORMS OF TRANSPOSITION

Q.1. Identify the main norm of transposition (indicate the title, date, number, date of entry into force and references of publication into the official journal) and indicate its legal nature (legislative, regulatory, administrative); indicate in your answer if this norm was only devoted to the directive or if it has been included in a more general text and indicate in that case by quoting precisely the numbers of the provisions adopted to transpose the directive.

A.1. There is no particular legislative act that has been adopted with the sole purpose of transposing the Directive. The following legal acts contain provisions transposing the Directive:
1) Law on Legal Status of Aliens No. IX-2206 of 29 April 2004 as amended on 28 November 2006 (hereafter – Aliens' Law)[523]. It entered into force on 30 April 2004. The following provisions are relevant for transposition of the Directive: Articles 2(21-22), 2(30-31), 32, 67(3), 68, 71, 73(2), 75, 76(2-3),78, 79, 81(3), 84(7-8), 91(2-3), 112-119, 122-123, 136-140, 142.

[523] Published in „State News" No. 73-2539, 2004.

2) Government Resolution of the Republic of Lithuania No. 103 of 29 January 2001 on Approval of Order and Conditions for Temporary Accommodation of Aliens in the Foreigners' Registration Centre, as amended on 8 April 2003 by the Government Resolution No. 417 (hereafter – Order on Accommodation of Aliens at FRC).[524] The following provisions are relevant for transposition of the Directive: Paragraphs 2.2-2.3, 4.2., 4.5, 9-16, 17.15-17.16, 18, 22-23, 29-30, 35, 40. This document was repealed on 4 October 2007 and replaced by the Order of the Minister of Interior on Approval of the Order and Conditions for Temporary Accommodation of Aliens in the Foreigners Registration Centre No. 1V-340 of 4 October 2007 (hereafter – Order on Accommodation of Aliens at FRC)[525].
3) Order of the Minister of Social Security and Labour No. 20 of 13 February 2002 on Approval of the Order on Conditions and Order of Accommodation of Foreigners in the Refugee Reception Centre, Organisation of Foreigners' Occupancy and Application of Disciplinary Measures, Implementation of Foreigner's Right to Receive Monthly Allowance for Minor Expenses and Compensation for Use of Public Transport (hereafter-Order on Accommodation of Foreigners at RRC).[526] It entered into force on 21 February 2002.

Q.2. List by order of importance by using numbers (1, 2, 3) the others norms of transposition if there are more than one (indicate for each norm the title, date, number and references of publication into the official journal; include in your answer the administrative measures taken to ensure implementation of the directive and of the transposition norms like regulations, administrative circulars, special instructions,…)

A.2.

1. Law on Health Insurance No. I-1343 of 21 May 1996 (new version of the law of 1 January 2003).[527]
2. Order of the Head of the State Border Protection Service at the Ministry of Interior No. 4-719 of 29 December 2005 on Approval of the Statute of the Foreigners' Registration Centre to the State Border Protection Service at the Ministry of Interior.[528]
3. Order of the Minister of Social Security and Labour on Approval of the Statute of the Refugee Reception Centre No. A1-234 of 18 August 2005.[529]
4. Order of the Minister of Social Security and Labour and the Minister of Interior No. 1V-31/A1-28 of 2 February 2005 on Approval of the Order on Accommodation of Unaccompanied Minor Asylum Seekers in the Refugee Reception Centre.[530]
5. Order of the Minister of Interior No. 1V-361 of 15 November 2004 on Approval of Order for Examination of Foreigners' Applications for Asylum, Adoption of Decisions and the Implementation thereof as amended on 4 May 2007.[531]

[524] Published in « State News » No. 11-322, 2001 and No. 35-1472, 2003.
[525] Published in "State News" No. 105-4326, 11/10/2007.
[526] Published in „State News" No. 17-702, 2002.
[527] Published in „State News" No. 123-5512, 21 December 2002.
[528] Published in « State News » No. 3-88, 10 January 2006.
[529] Published in « State News » No. 102-3795, 23 August 2005.
[530] Published in Lithuanian at : « State News » No. 20-641, 11 February 2005.
[531] Published in Lithuanian at : « State News » No. 168-6196, 20 February 2004.

6. Order of the Minister of Health No. V-836 of 28 October 2005 on Hygiene Provisions and Rules in the Foreigners Registration Center.[532]

Q.3. Explain which level of government is competent to adopt the legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers (specify in particular in case of a federal or regional State, if it is the federal/central power or the components; in case, specify below when it is impossible for you to answer a question because it is about the competence of the components and it is impossible for you to gather reliable information about all of them)

A.3. Ministry of Social Security and Labour (MSSL) and Ministry of Interior (MOI) of the Republic of Lithuania are two institutions in the Government that are competent for reception related legislation (orders, circulars, etc.).

Q.4. Explain the legal technical choices done to transpose the directive (comment on the nature and level of the norms used to do the transposition: legislative, regulatory, administrative like instructions, etc). Add any other element about the technique of transposition of the directive which is interesting for the implementation of Community law.

A.4. The directive is transposed through the legislation mainly (Aliens' Law and Orders on accommodation of foreigners in reception centres).

Q.5. Mention if there is a general tendency to just copy the provisions of the directive into national legislation without redrafting or adaptation them to national circumstances? If yes, give some of the worst examples and explain if there is a risk that those provisions remain unapplied or will create difficulties of implementation in the future.

A.5. There is no general tendency to just copy the provisions of the directive according to the author of this Report.

Q.6. Have all the texts necessary to ensure the effective implementation of the new rules of transposition been adopted, prepared or at least foreseen in the future (for example a regulation completing a new law and the necessary instructions telling the administration how to apply the new rules)?

A.6. According to the Government plans, no further legislation is envisaged for the transposition of the Directive. However, certain articles of the directive still need transposition, in particular as concerns ensuring access to employment, treatment appropriate to the needs of vulnerable persons in the FRC and mechanisms for identification of these persons, access to reception conditions for persons staying outside the accommodation centres, as well as establishment of a system for monitoring the implementation of the directive.

[532] Published in Lithuanian at: „State News" No. 135-4863, 2005.

2. BIBLIOGRAPHY

Q.7. Has an in-depth preparatory study been made public about the changes at the occasion of the transposition? If yes, thanks for trying to provide us a copy (please contact to answer this question adequately the body and person who was responsible for the preparation of the transposition of the directive in the public administration).

A.7. No in-depth preparatory study has been made public about the changes at the occasion of the transposition. The Ministry of Interior (Migration Department) has only carried out a short comparative analysis of Lithuanian legislation and provisions of the Directive. However the so called table of conformity is not publicly available.

Q.8. Quote any recent scientific book or article published about the directive, the transposition rules or the question of reception conditions for asylum seekers in general (answer even if this literature is only available in your language and provide the complete title in your language (without translation) with all references; indicate author, title, in case name of periodical, year and place of publication).

A.8. To the knowledge of the author of this Report, no such scientific book or article about the Directive or reception conditions for asylum seekers has been published recently. The author has written herself about the Directive in a very short manner in a recent monograph "Refugee Law" (Vysockienė, Lyra, Pabėgėlių teisė, Baltijos kopija, Vilnius, 2005), as well as in short within the research paper "Main Constrains in Implementing the EU Asylum Acquis in Lithuania" (Jurisprudencija, No. 4(82), Vilnius, 2006, pp. 32-39). Material of international conference that took place on 10 June 2005 in the Parliament of Lithuania ("Refugee Protection: International Standards and its Implementation in Lithuania") are available at: http://www3.lrs.lt/pls/inter/w5_show?p_r=158&p_d=43760&p_k=1

Q.9. Quote any interesting decision of jurisprudence based on the implementation of the new rules of transposition of the directive (indicate references of publication if any)?

A.9. No jurisprudence is yet available on application of reception conditions in Lithuania. However, there has been one case in 2005 when refusal to provide reception conditions at the Foreigners' Registration Centre to a Chechen asylum seeker were appealed to the Ombudsmen. No outcome of this complaint is available to the author of this Report.

3. GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

The purpose of the following two questions is to help the reader to understand easily and quickly the system of reception conditions in your Member State and also to avoid that you have to repeat general elements in other parts of the questionnaire. Please do not write more than one or maximum two pages and do not include large historical developments.

Q.10. Describe in general the system of reception conditions in your Member State (in particular which are the main actors in charge of reception conditions?)

A.10. There are two main bodies responsible for reception conditions of asylum seekers in Lithuania: the Ministry of Social Security and Labour and the Ministry of Interior of the Republic of Lithuania. These bodies supervise the institutional setup of reception and are responsible for adoption of legislative acts in this field. The institutional setup for reception of asylum seekers includes two reception centres, which are subordinate under different government institutions. Article 79 of the Aliens' Law regulates the functions of the both centres. Foreigners' Registration Centre, located some 50 kilometres away from the capital, belongs to the State Border Protection Service under the MOI. It is designed to accommodate asylum seekers from the moment of their arrival to Lithuania until departure. Also, it is used for accommodation and detention of foreigners, who arrive to Lithuania illegally. The maximum capacity of this centre is 200 asylum seekers and 300 illegal migrants. The Centre was established in 1996 and until 2001 was used as detention centre for illegal migrants. The Centre was reorganised in 2001 and since then two internal regimes are applied there:

a) detention regime (for foreigners who entered/stayed in the country illegally, rejected asylum seekers and asylum seekers detained on the basis of court decision);

b) open regime (for asylum seekers (except unaccompanied minors), whose applications are examined in substance (up to 3 months, but period could be extended for addition 3 months). Article 79(4) provides that "The Foreigners' Registration Centre is an agency intended for keeping the aliens detained on the grounds specified in this Law and for accommodating the asylum applicants, carrying out investigation as regards personal identity of aliens detained or accommodated at the Centre, the circumstances of their entry into the Republic of Lithuania, managing record-keeping of aliens, carrying out expulsion of aliens from the Republic of Lithuania. The Foreigners' Registration Centre shall be set up, re-organised and liquidated by the Minister of the Interior ». According to the authorities,[533] the Centre does not meet the requirements for reception of refugees. In particular, this concerns persons with special needs (e.g. female and children). The following issues are mentioned as those in need of improvement in the Centre: development of social infrastructure, especially accommodation premises, services of a psychologist, professional staff who could work with persons with special needs (children, female, and trauma victims), kindergartens, vocational training, and Lithuanian language courses.

[533] Multinanual Programme for European Refugee Fund in Lithuania (2005), approved by the Order No. A1-110 of the Minister of Social Security and Labour of 14 April 2006, paragraph ii. The same is mentioned in the ERF programme for 2007, approved by the Order No. A1-107 of the Minister of Social Security and Labour of 18 April 2007, paragraph ii and v.

Another body – Refugee Reception Centre under the MSSL, located some 120 kilometres from the capital, was previously used to accommodate asylum seekers for the second stage of the asylum procedure, when substantial examination of the claim was taking place. However since 2004 the Centre has been used for:

- accommodation of unaccompanied minors asylum seekers from their entry to Lithuania until departure or transfer to the municipality (should a legal status is granted in Lithuania);
- accommodation of persons granted asylum in order to implement social integration measures during the initial phase of the integration period.

The Centre was established in 1996 with the support of UNHCR and meets high standards of housing according to the author if this Report. The capacity of the Centre is 200 persons, but in emergency situations up to 300 persons could be housed there. Article 79(5) of the Aliens' Law provides that « The Refugee Reception Centre is a budgetary agency providing social services, intended for accommodating aliens who have been granted asylum in the Republic of Lithuania and unaccompanied minor aliens as well as for implementing social integration of the aliens who have been granted asylum. The Refugee Reception Centre shall be set up, re-organised and liquidated by the Minister of Social Security and Labour ».

The FRC is not a social establishment, thus social services are mainly provided by non-governmental organisations (hereafter - NGOs) operating in the centre under special projects (e.g. Caritas, Lithuanian Red Cross), funded by UNHCR and other donors/programmes (e.g. ERF). On the contrary, the RRC is a social establishment thus involves a number of social services provided by the centre itself, while the activities of NGOs are supplementary there.

Both centres mentioned above are government-run ones and there are no private reception centres for asylum seekers in the country. Most of the asylum seekers are accommodated in the reception centres during the asylum procedure; however the legislation envisages a possibility to stay in private (with relatives, friends, etc.) under certain conditions. The authorisation for that is granted by the Migration Department to the MOI (hereafter-Migration Department). In practice, a few asylum seekers stay outside the centres.

Asylum seekers enjoy reception conditions from the moment of arrival until a final decision on their asylum application is reached (however some reception conditions are also provided beyond final decision pending deportation from the country in case of a negative decision). Reception conditions do not differ depending on nature of asylum application (refugee status or complementary protection) and generally include: accommodation and food, primary health care (free of charge, guaranteed by the state), coverage of transportation costs related to examination of asylum claim, legal counselling and legal assistance (free of charge, guaranteed by the state), secondary education (for minors), interpretation services (free of charge, guaranteed by the state), notary services (free of charge, guaranteed by the state), monetary compensation for the use of public transport and monthly allowance for minor expenses. The rights of asylum seekers, including those related to reception are stated in Article 71(1) of the Aliens' Law. It reads as follows:

"During the processing of an asylum applicant's application for asylum in the Republic of Lithuania the applicant shall have the following rights:

1) to be accommodated at the Foreigners' Registration Centre or Refugee Reception Centre and to use the services provided by them;

2) to manage and have notarised documents relating to the processing of the application for asylum;

3) to make use of legal assistance guaranteed by the state;

4) to receive compensation for the use of means of public transport where the use is linked to the processing of the application for asylum;

5) to make use of the interpreter's services free of charge;

6) to receive free immediate medical aid and social services at the Foreigners' Registration Centre or Refugee Reception Centre;

7) to receive a monthly monetary allowance in the manner laid down by the Minister of Social Security;

8) to apply to and meet representatives of the Office of the UNHCR;

9) other rights that are guaranteed under international treaties, laws and other legal acts of the Republic of Lithuania ».

It further provides that « asylum applicants who are minors shall have the right to study at schools of general education and vocational schools » (Art. 71(2)).

However, the Aliens' Law also states the obligations of asylum seekers pending status determination. The obligations include the duty to:

1) observe the requirements of the Constitution, laws and other legal acts of the Republic of Lithuania;

2) fulfil the duties prescribed for the asylum applicant by the decisions of the Migration Department and the court;

3) allow the performance of health screening;

4) during the processing of the asylum application submit all the available documents and realistic full explanation of the motives of the application for asylum, the asylum applicant's personality as well as the circumstances of his entry and stay in the Republic of Lithuania;

5) declare to the Foreigners' Registration Centre, Refugee Reception Centre or territorial police agency in writing in free format the resources and assets owned in the Republic of Lithuania within three days from the granting of temporary territorial asylum and the resources received pending the examination of the application for asylum in the Republic of Lithuania within one day from the receipt thereof.

Q.11. A. Explain if you have different types and levels of reception conditions following the different stages of the asylum procedure (this implies that you have to give briefly the necessary explanations about the asylum procedure). Make if relevant for reception conditions a distinction between the following procedural stages: determination of the responsible Member State on the basis of the Dublin II regulation, special procedures at the border (including transit zones in airports), accelerated procedures, admissibility procedures, eligibility procedures and the different possibilities of appeals (suspense or not) against a refusal of the asylum request. Indicate what the main differences of reception conditions are between the different stages (if necessary by detailing between the different elements of reception conditions, in particular housing) and explain what the evolution of reception conditions is following the different stages of the procedure.

A.11. A. There are no particular differences in applying reception conditions following different stages of the asylum procedure, except that in practice some reception conditions are difficult to guarantee in some places (e.g. at the border or local migration services). However, substantial problems exist for those asylum seekers who arrived to the country legally and are staying in private. According to the legislation, they are not eligible for reception conditions (e.g. monthly allowance) and in practice social authorities refuse access to reception conditions for such persons (e.g. in one case of an asylum seeker from Belarus in spring 2006 the payment of monthly allowance was refused with the motivation that it is paid only to asylum seekers in the reception centres).

The stages of the asylum procedure as they relate to reception conditions are described below:

a) Dublin procedures

If a decision is taken that another EU Member State is responsible for examination of the asylum application, asylum seeker is granted temporary territorial asylum, accommodated in the FRC and issued a registration document. All reception conditions will apply to such a person. This situation lasts until the asylum seeker is transferred to another Member State (Art. 73(2) of the Aliens' Law). Temporary territorial asylum is also granted to an asylum seeker who is returned under the Dublin procedure from another Member State (Art. 76(2) of the Aliens' Law), thus the same regular reception conditions apply.

b) border procedures

Border procedures may be applied before granting of temporary territorial asylum in case of: application of a safe third country of safe country of origin notion or in case of manifestly unfounded claims. Such procedure may take place within 48 hours from submission of asylum application (it may be extended for additional 24 hours in case of a manifestly unfounded claim and application of a safe country of origin notion) (Art. 76(3) of the Aliens' Law). All reception conditions will apply except that in practice there are no proper conditions to accommodate asylum seekers at the border or keep them for a longer period of time and provide with adequate services.

c) accelerated procedures

In case of manifestly unfounded claims' procedure the application shall be examined within 48 hours from the moment of having determined it as manifestly unfounded. The procedure may be extended to 7 days (Art. 81(3) of the Aliens' Law). During accelerated procedures the same reception conditions apply.

d) regular procedures

These procedures last up to three months and may be extended for the same period of time. Usually, the procedure takes approximately the time indicated in the laws and delays are rare due to a small number of asylum seekers.

e) appeals' procedures

During appeals' procedures reception conditions apply under the same rules as during the rest of asylum procedure.

B. Indicate precisely for which stage(s) of the asylum procedure the answers on reception conditions you give below are valid.

B. If not specifically indicated, the reception conditions explained below relate to the whole asylum procedure, i.e. from the moment of submission of the asylum application until the final decision is taken.

4. GENERAL RULES ON RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.12. A. Are material reception conditions provided in kind, in money or in vouchers or in a combination of these elements (see article 13, §5 which is an optional provision)? Distinguish between the different elements (housing, food, clothes, health, transportation, pocket money,…). If reception conditions are provided in money (in general or in some cases, for instance when no places are anymore available in accommodation centres), indicate the precise amount given to the asylum seekers. Indicate in your answer what is provided in general and if there are exceptional cases. Specify in your answer if reception conditions are different from the general system of social aid for nationals or aliens and if yes, if and when (which stage of the asylum procedure) can asylum seekers have access to the general system of social aid?

A.12. A. Material reception conditions are provided in a combination of in kind and money assistance. In kind assistance covers housing, health care, clothes and food. Money is given to compensate for travel expenses that are directly related to the examination of asylum claim (e.g. visit to the migration authorities for interview, etc.), as well as some pocket money is being issued. Asylum seekers are provided with 25 Litas (approximately 7 Euro) as a monthly allowance for minor expenses. Combined assistance in money and in kind is provided with regard to food, which according to the Order on Accommodation of Foreigners at the RRC may be (paragraph 10.5):

- served centrally in the canteen of the reception centre or,
- paid as food allowance or,
- covered through provision of food stuff in the value corresponding to the amount assigned for nutrition.

The inhabitants of the Centre shall be provided with conditions to make their own food individually in self-service kitchens established in the Centre (paragraph 10.6 of the Order). The asylum seekers in this Centre are also provided (depending on possibilities) with clothes and footwear, as well as bedding clothes and personal hygiene items (paragraphs 10.7-10.8 of the Order).

The Order on Accommodation of Foreigners in the FRC provides that adult persons are being provided with food three times per day and children – four times per day in accordance with the standard physiological norms established by the Government (paragraph 42). Also, whenever possibility exists, inhabitants of the Centre may be provided with footwear and clothes (paragraph 43). It happens sometimes in practice that such possibilities do not exist, thus NGOs providing assistance (Lithuanian Red Cross and Caritas) have to complement, but their resources are very limited. There are conditions created in the Centre for various occupational activity, e.g. library, sports' competitions, cultural events and learn about healthy life (paragraph 46). Inhabitants of the Centre are responsible for the maintenance of the living space and the territory of the Centre (paragraph 47).

Reception conditions are different from those applicable to the nationals. Allowances paid to asylum seekers fall out of the general system of social aid, as there are specific rules established for asylum seekers (Para 7 of Art. 7(1) of the Aliens' Law specify that pending examination of their claim asylum seekers have the right to receive monthly financial allowance in accordance with the order determined by the Minister of Social Security and Labour). Asylum seekers can have access to the general system of social aid throughout the period of asylum procedure only as concerns the minimum health care system which is used equally for all.

B. Can the reception conditions in kind, money or vouchers be considered as sufficient "to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence" as requested by article 13, §2 of the directive (which is a mandatory provision but leaves a certain space to Member States)? In order to help to assess the respect of this rule when reception conditions are provided in money, include if necessary in your answer points of comparison with the minimum amount of social aid guaranteed for nationals in your Member State.

A.12. B. The nutrition system is centralised in the Foreigners Registration Centre, it does not always secure religious or cultural dietary requirements. Very limited amount is assigned to nutrition – 4 Litas per day (1.2 Euro). The medical unit, located in the Foreigners Registration Centre, provides only necessary health care services, while access to the hospitals and services of specialists is available only in emergency cases. Neither psychological, nor mental health services are practically available in the Centre. The amount of 25 Litas (approx. 7 Euro) is really modest, thus asylum seekers sometimes are not able to satisfy their basic needs (e.g., proper food, health care, clothing, and school necessities).
Minimum amount of social aid provided monthly to nationals in Lithuania is 90% of state supported income (which is 205 Lt/month (approx. 60 Euro). The average amount paid to an asylum seeker is 25 Lt/month ((approx. 7 Euro).

5. PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

Q.13. A. Does the national legislation specifically provide that a request for international protection is presumed to be under the Geneva Convention unless explicitly requested otherwise? (see article 2, b which is a mandatory provision)

A.13. A. National legislation (paragraph 2(9) of the Order on Examination of Asylum Claims) provides that the request for asylum shall be considered a request in any form to grant refugee status or complementary protection. Thus it covers both forms of protection.

B. Explain if the scope of application of reception conditions is extended to other asylum seekers than refugees in the sense of the Geneva Convention, in particular to persons asking for subsidiary protection or to other forms of protection like humanitarian statuses (see article 3, § 4 which is an optional provision)? If not, explain briefly which the differences between these special regimes and the directive are.

A.13. B. No differences exist, because there is a single asylum procedure and the same reception rules apply to all asylum seekers.

C. Are there specific provisions in national law for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation (see article 3, §2 which is an optional provision)?

A.13. C. There are no provisions in national legislation dealing with requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation. Lithuanian legislation does not envisage submission of asylum application at its diplomatic or consular representation.

Q.14. Are reception conditions available as from the moment once asylum application is introduced? How is article 13, §1 which is mandatory legally understood? Do asylum seekers have to satisfy any other condition in order to get reception conditions?

A.14. Reception conditions are available from the moment of submission of the asylum application. Asylum seekers do not have to satisfy any other condition in order to get reception conditions.

Q.15. Explain when reception conditions end, for instance after refusal of the asylum request (include in your answer the link with the right of appeal against a decision of refusal of the status, in particular the question of its suspense effect)

A.15. Asylum seekers' specific reception conditions end with the adoption of a final decision. However, some reception conditions end with expulsion or departure of the foreigner from the country (e.g. accommodation at the FRC, primary health care). There is a right of appeal against a negative decision on asylum, if adopted under regular procedure it has suspense effect. Reception conditions will apply to the same extent during the appeals' procedure.

Q.16 Are there special rules or practices regarding reception conditions in case of successive applications for asylum introduced by the same person?

A.16. No special rules exist for reception conditions in case of successive applications.

Q.17[534]. Information of asylum seekers about their rights and obligations in terms of reception conditions, in particular about established benefits (see article 5 which is too large extend a mandatory provision; do not confuse this question with the information to be provided to asylum seekers about the asylum procedure):

A. Are asylum seekers informed, and if yes about what precisely?

A.17. A. Leaflets are available for asylum seekers about reception conditions in the FRC and RRC.

B. Is the information provided in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

A.17. B. Information is provided in writing in the form of informational leaflets. Also, they are informed about their rights and obligations in an oral form by the staff of reception centres. Asylum seekers should sign upon the receipt of such information. The Order on Accommodation in the FRC provides that a person, who is being accommodated in the Centre, shall be informed (confirmed by the personal signature) in a language understood by him about the internal rules of the Centre, his rights and obligations (paragraph 16). Order on Accommodation in the RRC provides the same (paragraph 4). Asylum seekers have even to sign the agreement concerning use and maintenance of material goods that are entrusted to them.

C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify the list of languages in which it is available

A.17. C. The rules require it to be provided in a language understood by the asylum seeker. But in practice unofficial interpreters from the asylum seekers themselves are being used in the FRC in order to communicate this information to an asylum seeker. According to the information provided by the administration of the FRC, information is provided in Russian, Chechen, English, French, Pashto, Dari and Arabic languages.

D. Is the deadline of maximum 15 days respected?

[534] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or to be completed on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

A.17. D. The deadline is respected, because an asylum seeker is informed upon arrival to either of the centres.

Q.18[535]. Information of asylum seekers about the existence of organisations or groups promoting their interest and defending their rights (see article 5 which is to a large extend a mandatory provision):

A. Is there a list of organisations dressed by the authorities and if yes is it comprehensive? Is this in particular the case about the possibilities to get legal assistance and health care?

A.18. A. The brochure prepared by the Migration Department in addition to state institutions provides addresses and telephones of Lithuanian Red Cross, UNHCR and IOM. No other lists are available.

B. Is the information provided to the asylum seekers, and if yes, in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

A.18. B. Leaflets issued by the Migration Department are available at the centres, but not clear if the officials regularly hand out these leaflets to asylum seekers. The lawyers of the LRC inform asylum seekers about this during the first meeting.

C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify if possible the list of languages in which it is available.

A.18. C. The brochure prepared by the Migration Department is available in Lithuanian, English and Russian.

D. How many organisations are active in that field in your Member State?

A.18. D. Lithuanian Red Cross provides legal and social assistance, Caritas provides social assistance. No other organisations are active.

Q.19. Documentation of asylum seekers (see article 6):

A. What kind of document is delivered to the asylum seeker? Explain the legal value of this document (just a certification of the status as asylum seeker or also prove of identity?) (see §1 of article 6 which is a mandatory provision)

A.19. A. The legislation provides (Art. 2(30) of the Aliens' Law) that an asylum seeker should be provided with a registration card (certificate), which means "a document certifying the status of the asylum applicant or, in the cases where the identity of the asylum applicant has been established in the manner laid down by the Minister of the Interior, his identity and his right to temporary refuge in the territory of the Republic of Lithuania ». According to the Order on Examination of Asylum Applications such registration document shall be issued within 48 hours from the moment of granting temporary territorial asylum (paragraph 103). All documents of an asylum seeker are being deposited in the personal file pending the examination of asylum application. If the applicant is granted subsidiary protection, identity documents are returned to him. Thus this document replaces identity documents. The document should contain information on whether the identity of the person is established. The registration card is issued to asylum seekers irrespective of age. The validity of the document is 3 months from the moment of issuance of Migration Department decision on temporary territorial asylum. The data in the document are entered on the basis of data from the identity documents of the applicant and in the absence of those, on the basis of data obtained during asylum interview (paragraph 106).

[535] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or to be completed on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

B. Are there situations or specific cases in which another equivalent document or even no document is issued? (in particular is there an exception for "procedures to decide on the right of the applicant legally to enter the territory" as made possible by §2 of article 6)?

A.19. B. Such procedures for deciding on the right of the applicant legally enter the territory exist. During this procedure that may take up to 48 hours (with a possibility of 24 hours extension) no document may be issued.

C. For how long is this document in principle valid and is it necessary to renew it after a certain period?

A.19. C. Up to 3 months from the date of Migration Department's decision on temporary territorial asylum. May be renewed if (paragraph 108 of the Order on Examination of Asylum Claims):
a) not suitable for use;
b) has been lost;
c) expired.
Renewed document may be valid for up to 3 months from the Migration Department's decision to extend temporary territorial asylum (paragraph 110).

D. What is the deadline for the delivery of that document? Is the mandatory deadline of 3 days set by article 6, §1 respected[536]?

A.19. D. 48 hours. The deadline is usually respected.

E. Is it possible for an asylum seeker to get a travel document for serious humanitarian reasons (see §5 of article 6 which is an optional provision)?

[536] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

A.19. E. Only Laisser-passer in case of transfer of an asylum seeker to another Member State under the Dublin procedure, which is meant for single travel to another EU MS (Art. 75(1) of the Aliens' Law).

F. Is there a central system of registration of asylum seekers and is it or not separate from the registration of aliens? If yes, describe it briefly (content) and indicate in particular if it is an electronic database.

A.19. F. Yes, the central system of registration of asylum seekers exists. It is part of the Aliens' Register, which is available electronically. The managing authority of the Register is the Ministry of Interior. The following data is included in the Register about the foreigner when it is related to asylum procedures: personal code (if the foreigner was assigned it), name, surname, citizenship, gender, date of birth and place of birth, place of residence, country of origin, family status, data of submission of asylum application, motives of asylum application, situation of asylum seeker in third countries, belonging to a particular clan (only with the consent of the person), religion (only with the consent of the person), place of residence in the country of origin, mother tongue and other languages known by the foreigner, education, profession, address of last place of residence, data about last workplace, available personal documents, date of crossing state border, date of departure from the country of origin, travel route, all decisions related to the asylum procedure, including court decisions and other information (paragraph 18 of the Statute of the Aliens' Register, approved by the Government Resolution No. 1049 of 4 September 2000).

Q.20. Residence of asylum seekers[537]:

A. Is in principle an asylum seeker free to move on the entire territory of your Member State or only to a limited part of it and in case, which part? (see article 7, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

A.20. A. According to Art. 112 of the Aliens' Law the freedom of movement of foreigners may be restricted on account of state security, public order, health of the population, prevention of criminality or protection of other persons' rights and freedoms. The asylum seeker is in principle free to move on the entire territory of the country, except the border areas where a special regime applies. Asylum seekers are either accommodated at the reception centres or detained there. In the later case asylum seekers' freedom of movement is restricted. Also, asylum seekers accommodated in the Foreigners' Registration Centre without the restrictions on the freedom of movement have to follow the order for leaving the centre and returning to it. This order may be considered as practically restricting the freedom of movement, because asylum seekers can leave the centre only for 24 hours (paragraph 18.3 of the Oder on Accommodation of Aliens in the FRC). Leaving for longer period is not possible. Therefore if an asylum seeker wishes to visit his relatives staying in another part of the country, this becomes not possible due to the very short time limit for leaving the centre. Those who are detained cannot leave.

[537] Nota bene: the case of detention is covered by other questions and should be ignored under this question.

B. About the place of residence (see §2 of article 7): explain to which extend the person is free to choose her residence and if this depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance processing of application, attribution of reception conditions,…).

A.20. B. The person is not free to choose the place of residence irrespective of illegal or legal entry to the country. This is being decided by the Migration Department. Migration Department takes a decision on accommodation of asylum seeker in cases of legal entry after an asylum application has been submitted and after it has been ascertained that Lithuania is the responsible country for the examination of asylum claim. Migration Department would not take a decision on accommodation, if an asylum seeker is detained or an alternative measure to detention is assigned by the court's decision (Art. 79(1) of the Aliens' Law). The Department also takes decision on accommodation, if a court does not find detention grounds in a particular case. In other words, all irregularly coming asylum seekers are first brought to the court, which has 3 options:
1) To issue detention order (accommodation in the FRC under detention regime);
2) To apply alternative measure to detention (accommodation in the FRC under open regime);
In fact, by taking one of the above decisions the court also solves the accommodation issue.
3) To reject the detention request if no detention grounds have been found.
In the last case, the Migration Department takes the decision on accommodation. Return under Dublin is considered in practice as legal entry. Thus, Migration Department also takes the decision on accommodation as concerns this category of asylum seekers.
Furthermore, if a person arrived to Lithuania legally, Migration Department may decide not to accommodate such a person in the FRC, but to allow him stay in the place of the person's choice, if the asylum seeker so requests (Art. 79(2) of the Aliens' Law). The constrain relating to stay in private may be lack of social services for asylum seekers that are concentrated in reception centres. Asylum seekers staying outside the reception centres do not have access to social services and in this respect their treatment is discriminatory.

C. About the place of reception (meaning where the asylum seeker has to stay to benefit from reception conditions) (see § 4 of article 7): explain which are the general rules about the determination of this place (to which extend are the decisions determining the place taken individually and do they take into account the personal situation of the asylum seeker?) and to which extend the person is free to choose it and if it depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance attribution of reception conditions, processing of the application,…).

A.20. C. The place of residence is the same with that of reception in case of stay in the reception centres. While taking the decision on accommodation the Migration Department does not deal with the issue of reception conditions. Decision to allow staying in the place of the asylum seekers' choice does not take into consideration whether reception conditions exist there or not, because it is based on the wish of an asylum seeker to stay there. In practice, there are serious constrains accessing almost all services, while some services are at all not available (e.g. monthly allowance) for those asylum seekers that stay outside the reception centres. Decisions on the place of stay of asylum seekers are taken individually.

D. If all asylum seekers are not placed in accommodation centres because of capacity limits, explain how the persons are distributed between accommodation centres and other accommodation facilities (which authority takes the decisions, on the basis of which elements, can that decision be appealed by the asylum seeker,…)[538]

A.20. D. There have been no situations in practice so far that the capacities of the reception centres have been exceeded, because the number of asylum seekers is rather small. The legislation does not also envisage the situations on how to deal with the number of asylum seekers who are in excess of the reception capacities.

E. How can an asylum seeker ask to leave temporarily the place of residence or of reception or an assigned area? How is the individual AND impartial character of the decision ensured? (see §5 of article 7 which is a mandatory provision)

A.20. E. There is an internal order established by the FRC, which requires that before leaving the centre the asylum seeker needs to inform the head of the centre or a person authorised by him. The person may leave the centre only for a very short period of time and needs to report every 24 hours (which means that they have to physically return to the centre and only after that they are allowed to leave the Centre for another 24 hours). Asylum seekers who are detained may not leave the territory of the centre (paragraph 18.3 of the Order on Accommodation of Aliens' in the FRC).

Q.21. A. Do rules on reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions exist in internal legislation and if yes in which cases (mention in particular if there are cases not foreseen by article 16, § 1 and 2 which are optional provisions)? Distinguish in your answer between cases of reduction and withdrawal and explain which conditions can be reduced and if access to emergency health care is always ensured as requested by article 16, §4, last sentence.

[538] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

A.21. A. The rules on reduction and withdrawal of reception conditions exist in internal legislation. It is regulated by the Aliens' Law and the Order on Accommodation of Asylum Seekers in the RRC. Art. 84(7) of the Aliens' Law provides that: "Suspension of examination of an asylum application shall entail suspension of provision of services and assistance for the asylum applicant in implementing the rights indicated in paragraphs 1 and 2 of Article 71 of this Law (reception conditions; authors' remark). Provision of services and assistance shall be resumed after the disappearance of circumstances on the grounds of which it was suspended ». The Law further provides that « Decisions to suspend and to resume the provision of services and assistance to the asylum applicant in implementing the rights indicated in paragraphs 1 and 2 of Article 71 of this Law shall be taken according to the procedure established by the Minister of Social Security and Labour » (Art. 84(8)). The Order on Accommodation of Asylum Seekers in the RRC provides that the money allowance may be reduced up to 75% for a period of up to 3 months or terminated if the person constantly violates the internal rules of the centre and fails to comply with the duties (the duties include: complying with internal rules and laws, allowing the doctor to inspect the state of health, submit all documents and actively participate in the status determination procedure, manage household and clean the territory of the centre, do not interfere with the rights and lawful interests of other inhabitants of the centre), as well as for unauthorised leave from the centre without the permission of the administration for more than 3 days (paragraph 20 of the Order). Also, the Order on Implementation of the Right to Receive Monthly Subsistence Allowance provides in Paragraph 4 the same rule for reduction of monthly allowance up to 75% or its' withdrawal for a period of up to 3 months if an asylum seeker fails to comply with the duties that are imposed on him; as well as for the violation of internal rules of reception centres; unauthorised leave from the reception centres for a longer period than 3 days.

In addition, there is a possibility to request the asylum seeker to refund the related reception expenses of the state if it transpires that he had sufficient means for reception at the time when these basic needs were being covered for him (Art. 71(5) of the Aliens' Law).

Access to emergency health care is ensured despite the withdrawal of reception conditions.

B. Has article 16, §2 dealing with refusal of reception conditions for unreasonably late applications for asylum been transposed by your Member State (or was this case already applicable before transposition)? Are there cases in practice[539]?

A.21. B. Such provision does not exist in Lithuanian legislation.

[539] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

C. How is it ensured that decisions of reduction or withdrawal are taken individually, objectively AND in particular impartially (for instance through and independent arbitrator) (see article 16, §4 which is a mandatory provision)?

A.21. C. The only guarantee for that the decisions of reduction or withdrawal are taken individually, objectively and impartially is the possibility to appeal against such a decision to the founder of the Refugee Reception Centre (in this case the MSSL). Decisions to suspend and renew provision of reception conditions are adopted in accordance with the order of the MSSL (Art. 84(8) of the Aliens' Law). The right of appeal is provided in Paragraph 22 of the Order on Accommodation in the RRC. No other guarantees exist because the decision is taken by the director of the centre. The Foreigners' Registration Centre also applies sanctions on the basis of the decision by the director of the Centre (Section VI of the Order on Accommodation of Aliens' in the FRC). It may be appealed to the founder of the Centre (SBGS).

D. Is statement 14/03 adopted by the Council at the same moment as the directive respected (see the documentation pack you received at our meeting in Brussels in April)?

A.21. D. The statement is generally respected, but some concerns exists in relation to the treatment of vulnerable persons and their accommodation in the Foreigners' Registration Centre, which is not a social establishment and lacks the features or a reception centre as such. Refer to A.30(B) below for more details.

E. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements on cases of reduction, withdrawal or refusal which have been taken, and if yes, what has been the outcome[540]?

A.21. E. No such administrative appeals have been submitted yet and thus judgements are also not available on reduction, withdrawal or refusal of reception conditions. On one occasion, petition against refusal to provide reception conditions to a Chechen national by the FRC was submitted to the Ombudsmen. The outcomes of the petition are not known to the author of this Report. If the examination of an appeal is suspended (e.g. due to absence from the centre), the services provided in relation to reception conditions, is also suspended. It is renewed when circumstances giving rise to suspension cease to exist (Art. 84(7) of the Aliens' Law). Decisions to suspend or renew provision of reception conditions are adopted in accordance with the order of the MSSL (Art. 84(8) of the Aliens' Law). Paragraphs 18-22 of the Order on Accommodation of Aliens at the RRC regulates these measures.

[540] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Q.22. A. Appeal against a negative decision relating to the granting of benefits or based on article 7 (see article 21 which is a mandatory provision): indicate against which decision an appeal can be introduced, describe the system of appeal in general and include in particular in your answer the information given to asylum seekers about possibilities of appealing, deadline for appealing, if the appeal has or not a suspense effect, if there are different steps (for instance first an administrative appeal and in particular if the guarantee of an appeal before a judicial body in the last instance is respected)?

A.22. A. The Aliens' Law envisages that all decisions taken under this Law may be appealed in accordance with the procedure determined by the laws of Lithuania, unless provided differently in the Law (Art. 136). There is a possibility to appeal to the administrative court against any decision taken on this basis of this Law, including as concerns reception conditions. Also, with regard to decisions taken by the Head of the RRC on reduction or withdrawal of monthly subsistence allowance, such decisions may be appealed to the founder or the centre, the MSSL. The MSSL decision could further be appealed to the administrative court under the general procedure described in the laws.
Foreigners Registration Centre is in the sphere of authority of the State Border Guard Service under the Ministry of Interior. Thus generally asylum seekers might complain to the Head of the State Border Guard Service or to the Minister of Interior. The information on appeals is provided to asylum seekers usually through information leaflets that are available in the reception centres and also through the counselling by lawyers who regularly visit the centres.

B. Explain which are the possibilities for asylum seekers to benefit from legal assistance when they introduce such an appeal (see article 21, §2 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to Member States)?

A.22. B. All asylum seekers have access to legal assistance, which is provided by the Lithuanian Red Cross lawyers and paid by the state. Legal counselling is regularly provided in the reception centres by the LRC lawyers, assistance in preparing and submitting the appeal may be provided, as well as representation in administrative institutions and the courts.

C. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

A.22. C. No such administrative appeals decisions or judgements have been submitted or adopted so far.

D. Is a mechanism of complain for asylum seekers about quality of receptions conditions in general (even if they are not personally concerned) organised? If yes, before which authority? Is it linked to the system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions (see below question n° 39)?

A.22. D. Asylum seekers can write complains to the management of the centres, to the founder institutions of the centres (e.g. MSSL for the RRC and the Head of SBGS for the FRC). However no special procedure for submitting complains exists. Asylum seekers can also complain through UNHCR, the representative of which can always take it up with the administration of the centres or higher authority. Appeals against decisions taken should be submitted within a period of 14 days from the receipt of the decision that is appealed (Art. 138 of the Aliens' Law). Suspension of decision once appeal is submitted is envisaged only by adoption of a separate court's decision (Art. 139(3) of the Aliens' Law).

6. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.23. Family unity of asylum seekers: define how a family is defined in relation with article 2, (d) which is a mandatory provision and explain how housing is provided to a family (see articles 8 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to member States and 14, §2, (a) which is a mandatory provision).

A.23. Family members of the asylum seeker are defined in Article 2(22) of the Aliens' Law, which reads as follows: "family members of an asylum applicant means the spouse of the asylum applicant or the person who has concluded with him registered partnership agreement, the children of the couple or of one of them (adopted children irrespective of whether they have been adopted as defined under the laws of the Republic of Lithuania) below the age of 18 years, on condition that they are unmarried as well as the father, mother or guardian of the minor asylum applicant, in so far as the family already existed in the country of origin and during the examination of the asylum application the family members are present in the territory of Lithuania. » In accordance with the Order on Accommodation of Foreigners in the FRC, whenever possible, the members of the same family are accommodated together in a separate premise (paragraph 4.4).

Q.24. A. How is housing of asylum seekers organised: describe the system in general and indicate in particular what is the most frequently system used (see article 14, §1 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space for Member States; distinguish between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels places or other premises).

A.24. A. Asylum seekers can be housed (accommodated) in the following places on the territory of Lithuania:

- Border control posts until decision authorising entry to the territory is being taken (within first 48 hours from the submission of asylum application). However, the border control posts are not equipped to house asylum seekers or provide any other reception conditions. The same situation is at local migration services. This situation is among the primary priorities of the Government, which established in the Multi-annual Programme for European Refugee Fund (ERF) that it needs to be urgently improved.

- Foreigners' Registration Centre (not a social establishment, but the place where asylum seekers, illegal migrants are housed and also detained. Different regimes of housing are applied in this centre: within the territory of the centre asylum seekers are housed separately from all other foreigners, while detained asylum seekers are housed separately from other asylum seekers and also from other detained foreigners). This centre accommodates all asylum seekers (except unaccompanied minors) for the whole period of the asylum procedure. The capacity of the centre is 500 persons (this includes 200 asylum seekers), but not all of it is used to house the asylum seekers. However, according to the UNHCR assessment, the realistic figure is only 100 asylum seekers as a maximum number that can be appropriately accommodated in the FRC. At times, when around 100 asylum seekers were accommodated in the FRC, the number of persons per room was reaching 10-12, families were separated and no space for separation of children with infectious diseases was available.
- Refugee Reception Centre (it is a social establishment, which hosts only those asylum seekers who are unaccompanied minors). The maximum capacity of the centre is 200 persons (300 persons in emergency situations).
- Private accommodation (this housing is used if an asylum seeker has entered the country legally and is willing to stay in private, in this case he may be allowed to stay in private by the decision of the Migration Department on accommodation).

B. What is the total number of available places for asylum seekers?[541] Distinguish in your answer between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels or other premises.

A.24. B. The total number of available places in state run centres is about 400 persons in normal circumstances (500 in emergency situations). There are no privately owned reception centres, thus no other number can be provided.

C. Is this number of places for asylum seekers sufficient in general or frequently insufficient?[542]

A.24. C. Given the current numbers of asylum seekers arriving annually to Lithuania, the present reception capacities can be considered sufficient, as the maximum capacity of the centres is never filled.

D. Are there special measures foreseen in urgent cases of a high number of news arrivals of asylum seekers (outside the case of application of the directive on temporary protection)?

[541] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[542] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

A.24. D. No such special measures are foreseen in urgent cases of a high number of new arrivals of asylum seekers.

Q.25. Accommodation centres (important note: all the following questions are about open and not closed centres where asylum seekers are detained which are covered by another question)

A. Are there different categories of accommodation centres, for instance depending of the stage of the procedure (admissibility and eligibility)?

A.25. A. No differentiation is made as concerns accommodation during the asylum procedure except the accommodation at border control posts in case of illegal arrival pending authorised admission to the territory (which is to be taken within the 48 hours from the submission of an asylum application). All asylum seekers (except unaccompanied minors) are accommodated in the Foreigners' Registration Centre for the whole period of the asylum procedure. Different treatment is only for asylum seekers who arrived to the country legally – they are allowed to stay in private if they wish so.

B. Is there a legal time limit for accommodation in a centre after which the asylum seekers have access to private houses or apartments or is this limit linked to a stage of the asylum procedure?

A.25. B. No such time limit exists.

C. Is there a general regulation about the internal functioning of those centres and the rights and duties of the asylum seekers? If yes, is this general regulation applicable to public and private centres? If not, are the centres supposed to adopt an internal regulation and does a central authority have or not a kind of control about its content?

A.25. C. Regulation about internal functioning of both reception centres exists. It is regulated by the Statutes of the centres, as well as the Orders on accommodation of asylum seekers in these centres (refer to A.1-2 above). These regulations are applicable only to public centres, while private centres do not exist. The supervising authority or the government adopts the regulations. The Foreigners' Registration Centre in addition adopted the internal rules on order and conditions for temporary accommodation of foreigners in the FRC, approved by the Head of the Centre on 14 January 2004. The author of this Report did not have access to this document.

D. Do the regulations foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers in case of breach of the rules? (see article 16, §3) If yes, which sanctions for which rules? Which is the competent authority to decide? How is it ensured that decisions are taken individually, objectively and in particular impartially (for instance through an independent arbitrator) as requested by §4 of article 21 which is mandatory provision*?* Which are the possibilities of appealing against those decisions if the system is different from the general one under question n°22? Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones? [543]

A.25. D. The regulations do foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers for breach of the rules. Apart from the financial sanctions (reducing or withdrawing reception conditions: monthly subsistence allowance), mentioned above under A.21(A), other sanctions also exist. In accordance with the Order on Accommodation of Foreigners in the FRC, the following sanctions can be applied (paragraphs 25-26):

- Sanctions for violation of laws of Lithuania in accordance with the procedure established by the laws;
- Sanctions for violation of the internal order in the centre may include: assigning repeatedly as a person who maintains order to clean the living premises and the territory; removal from the centre – in case of constant violation of established requirements and persistent violation of internal order; isolation from other persons for a period of up to 24 hours or sending if needed to a special establishment, if the person becomes dangerous due to mental or infectious disease or intoxication with alcohol or narcotics/psychotropic substances. The new Order of 4 October 2007 introduced a possibility to reduce or withdraw the financial allowances paid for minor expenses to asylum seekers.

A protocol is written on violation of the order and a decision on application of sanctions is taken on this basis. The protocol is written and decision on sanction is made up by the Head of the Centre or a person authorised by him. The protocol on violation along with the explanation by the staff of the centre is enclosed to the personal file of the applicant. All the sanctions are registered in the special journal of the centre. If there are grounds, the Head of the Centre or a person authorised by him may repeal or change the decision on sanctions, e.g. in case of illness and other cases unspecified in the Order (paragraphs 28-30 of the Order). The person may appeal the decision on sanctions to the head of State Border Guard Service (paragraph 17.15 of the Order). No appeals have been submitted, thus no administrative decisions or judgements exist.

In accordance with the Order on Accommodation of Asylum Seekers in the RRC, the following sanctions can be applied for violation of the laws of Lithuania and the internal order of the centre:

- Written warning;
- Reduction or withdrawal of monthly subsistence allowance (as described under A. 21(A) above.

In case of violation of an internal order in the centre, the responsible staff member of the centre writes up the protocol on violation, familiarises the person with this protocol and he writes up his explanation. Sanctions are imposed on the basis of the protocol by the Director of the Centre. Decisions on sanctions are in written form and are registered in the centre (paragraph 21 of the Order). The person may appeal the decision on sanctions to the founder of the centre (MSSL) (paragraph 22 of the Order). No appeals have been submitted, thus no administrative decisions or judgements exist.

[543] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

E. Are asylum seekers involved in the management of these centres? If yes, how (advisory board, appointment or election of representatives)? (see article 14, §6 which is an option provision)

A.25. E. Asylum seekers are not involved in the management of the centres.

F. Do specific rules exist on work of asylum seekers inside the accommodation centres different from the general ones about employment (see below)? If yes, which ones? Can working inside accommodation centres be considered as a (mandatory) contribution of the asylum seekers to the management of the centres, is it or not paid and considered as implying access to the labour market and subject to the same rules?

A.25. F. According to the rules of the Centres, asylum seekers have the obligation to maintain the living premises and the territory of the centre, but this is not considered a work, which would be paid for.

Q.26. A. How can asylum seekers communicate with legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGOs? (see article 14, §2, (b) which is a mandatory provision).

A.26. A. According to legislation asylum seekers have a right to communicate with legal advisers and UNHCR. Lawyers of the Lithuanian Red Cross who provide legal counselling are regularly visiting the reception centres and meet with the asylum seekers. UNHCR representative also visits the centres and has unhindered access to all premises in the centre, thus also to asylum seekers. Asylum seekers may also communicate with the legal advisers and UNHCR by mail. No special provision of access by NGOs is provided by the laws, but in practice staff of the LRC and Caritas have access to asylum seekers (though such access is granted on ad hoc basis by the administration, except the implementation of social and legal projects that are going on).

B. What are the rules about access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs regarding access to accommodation centres and other housing facilities (see article 14, §7 which is a mandatory provision).

A.26. B. No special rules exist except that it is provided by legislation that asylum seekers have such a right to meet with lawyers and UNHCR and that UNHCR should have unlimited access to asylum seekers, including those in places of detention and transit zones of airports and sea ports where asylum seekers are kept (the later provision in Art. 91(3) of the Aliens' Law). The RRC should provide access to NGOs, providing assistance to refugees, to contact the unaccompanied minor asylum seeker in the centre and implement social educational and assistance projects (paragraph 8 of the Order on Accommodation of Unaccompanied Minor Asylum Seekers).

C. Can the access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs be limited for security reasons or any other reason (see article 14, §7, last sentence)?

A.26. C. No such restrictions are provided by the laws or applied in practice.

Q.27. A. Is a medical screening organised by the receiving State, is it mandatory or voluntary? Does it include HIV tests? (see article 9 which is an optional provision)

A.27. A. There is medical screening organised by the reception centres upon arrival of the person to the centre. It is the duty of the asylum seeker to allow the performance of health screening under the laws (paragraph 3 of Art. 71(3) of the Aliens' Law). Thus it is mandatory. The screening is performed by the doctor of the centres.

It includes screening from:

- Open form of tuberculosis;
- Sexually transmitted diseases;
- Intestine infections;
- Carriers of infectious diseases.

Paragraph 3 of the Order on Accommodation of Foreigners in the RRC provides that the foreigner upon arrival to the Centre shall submit a certificate from the medical file issued by the FRC. Persons who arrived on their own to the Centre shall allow the doctor to inspect their medical condition.

No HIV tests are envisaged in the legislation. However, as reported by the administration of the FRC, such tests are performed in practice.

B. Do the legal provisions on reception conditions ensure that asylum seekers receive at least emergency care and essential treatment of illness as requested by article 15 §1 which is a mandatory provision? Do they have a further access to health care?

A.27. B. A right to such emergency care and essential treatment is provided by the legislation. Paragraph 1(6) of Article 71 of the Aliens' Law states that an asylum seeker has a right to receive free immediate medical aid and social services at the Foreigners' Registration Centre or Refugee Reception Centre. Also, the Order on Accommodation of Foreigners at the FRC provides that « persons accommodated in the centre are ensured primary health care and immediate medical aid, including a possibility of immunisation in accordance with the National Immunisation Programme (paragraph 31). The Order of the Minister of Health Care No. V-836 on approval of hygiene norms and rules for the Foreigners' Registration Centre of 28 October 2005 regulates the health care services in the centre. According to the Order, health care specialists provide out-patient health care services and if it is not sufficient for treatment, the inhabitants of the Centre are transferred to health care institutions for consultations or in-patient treatment. For such a transfer prescription of the Head of Medical Unit of the Centre or his deputy is required (paragraph 43).

The Order on Accommodation of Asylum Seekers in the RRC also provides for the right of an asylum seeker to make use of health care services in accordance with the order determined by the Ministry of Health of Lithuania (paragraph 10.11.1). Even though such order has not been adopted, the Law on Health Insurance No. I-1343 of 21 May 1996 (new version of the law of 3 December 2002) provides for access to health care services to asylum seekers (Art. 6(5)), but mentions that "the health care [of such persons] is covered from the state budget in accordance with the order established by the Government […]". Unaccompanied minors are explicitly included thus have no problems accessing the services. However, in practice there are access problems for asylum seekers in the FRC to further health care beyond emergency health care.

C. What is the practice regarding access of asylum seekers to health care and how is it organised? In particular, what is the situation in accommodation centres (are doctors coming to the centres or do asylum seekers go to doctors outside)?

A.27. C. In practice, as long as there is no serious danger to the person, in the Centre he is provided with the very basic medicine only. Asylum seekers mostly rely on the doctors who are available in the centres.
According to the Order on Accommodation of Foreigners in the FRC, the health care in the centre is organised in the following way:

- primary health care is delivered by the doctor or other staff of the centre (paragraph 33);
- immediate medical aid is delivered by the health care bodies in accordance with the laws of Lithuania (paragraph 34);
- patients and persons with suspected dangerous or particularly dangerous infectious diseases are hospitalised or/and isolated, examined and treated in accordance with the laws regulating the treatment of these diseases (paragraph 35) ;
- persons, who arrived from the territories contaminated by particularly dangerous infectious diseases, may be taken under quarantine (paragraph 36);
- torture and violence victims, minors, single women and the elderly are entitled to the assistance of the psychologist (paragraph19).

Similarly, the health care services are organised in the RRC.

Q.28. A. What is the length of the period determined by the concerned Member State during which asylum seekers have no access to the labour market? (see article 11 which is a mandatory provision)

A.28. A. No such period is provided by the legislation, because Lithuania does not allow asylum seekers to work during the period of the asylum procedure. In practice, procedure for a few asylum seekers takes longer than one year (e.g. in case of return of the case from appeal to the first instance), while no right of employment exists.

B. After that period, are asylum seekers or not obliged to obtain a work permit? In case is there a limit for the administration to deliver the permits and how quick are they delivered? What is their length?

A.28. B. Question not applicable, because no right to work is provided to asylum seekers in Lithuania.

C. After that period, what are the conditions for access of the asylum seekers to the labour market? (in particular, are there rules concerning the maximum allowed of working hours or days per week, month or year, limits in terms of type of work or of professions authorised?

A.28. C. Question not applicable, because no right to work is provided to asylum seekers in Lithuania.

D. What are the rules in terms of priorities between asylum seekers on the one hand and nationals, EU or EEE citizens and legally third-country nationals on the other?

A.28. D. Question not applicable, because no right to work is provided to asylum seekers in Lithuania.

E. Do asylum seekers have access to vocational training, does this or not depend of their right to access to the labour market, and in case at which conditions? (see article 12 which is optional regarding §1 and mandatory regarding § 2)

A.28. E. Access to vocational training is not ensured as a rule. Also, it does not depend on their right to access to the labour market, but even if it would, asylum seekers are not allowed to work. The Order on Accommodation of Asylum Seekers in the RRC provides that the courses on professional orientation and re-qualification are organised for the inhabitants of the centre whenever possible (paragraph 17 of the Order). However, asylum seekers have a possibility to attend free of charge I category Lithuanian language courses – 96 hours (II category language courses are also available, but not free of charge) (paragraphs 16.1-16.2 of the Order). Given that RRC accommodates only asylum seeking unaccompanied minors, these services are not accessible for the absolute majority of asylum seekers (who stay in the FRC).

F. Are the rules regarding access to the labour market adopted to transpose the directive more or less generous than the ones applicable previously?

A.28. F. Question not applicable, because no right to work is provided to asylum seekers in Lithuania.

Q.29. Are reception conditions subject to the fact that asylum seekers do not have sufficient resources? Are asylum seekers requested to contribute to reception conditions when they have personal resources (for instance if they work) or to refund the authorities if it appears that they have resources? (see article 13 §§ 3 and 4 which are optional provisions)

A.29. Reception conditions in Lithuania are based on the presumption that an asylum seeker does not have sufficient resources. However, the asylum seeker is requested to declare to the FRC, RRC or territorial police authority in writing in free format the resources and assets owned in the Republic of Lithuania within three days from the granting of temporary territorial asylum and the resources received pending the examination of the application for asylum in the Republic of Lithuania within one day from the receipt thereof (Paragraph 3(5) of Article 71 of the Aliens' Law). If it is discovered that the asylum seeker had sufficient means for ensuring the implementation of his rights at the time when these basic needs were being covered for him, he must refund the related expenses of the state (Art. 71(5) of the Aliens' Law).

7. SPECIAL NEEDS OF PARTICULAR CATEGORIES OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.30. A. Which of the different categories of persons with special needs considered in the directive are taken into account in the national legislation (see article 17, §1 which is a mandatory provision): disabled people, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence? Include in your answer all other categories envisaged in national law.

A.30. A. The legislation takes into consideration the following persons with special needs: torture and violence victims, minors, single women and the elderly. However, in practice their needs are not always met.

B. How is their specific situation taken into account (see articles 13, §2, second indent, 16 §4 second sentence and 17 which are mandatory provisions)?

A.30. B. Their situation is taken into account when examining the claim (e.g. specialised asylum personnel needs to be provided, interview should involve a doctor or psychiatrist, etc.). However when providing reception conditions serious concerns exist. Even though these persons are entitled to the assistance of the psychologist while they stay at the Foreigners' Registration Centre (paragraph 19 of the Order on Accommodation of Foreigners at the FRC), the Foreigners

Registration Centre definitely lacks the character of a social institution, neither social nor psychological staff have been employed in the Centre. Once accommodated, asylum seekers with special needs particularly women, children, elderly, the traumatised and the disabled find themselves in a very poor social environment, which is rather traumatizing because they are surrounded by the uniformed border guards next to the detained irregular migrants. Furthermore, as concerns the requirement of second indent of Art. 14(2) of the Directive, no serious prevention measures are being taken against assault in the FRC. The living quarters of women are place in the third floor of the building where many single men are accommodated and no staff is available during the night. The situation is rather different in the RRC, where different living conditions (open centre) exist, as well as very competent psychologist is available.

C. How and when are the special needs of the concerned persons supposed to be legally identified (see article 17 § 2 which is a mandatory provision and clarify how it has been interpreted by transposition)?

A.30. C. Once an asylum seeker arrives to the FRC, he is directed for medical inspection. The doctor is questioning the asylum seeker about his health history. If there are special needs, it is being marked in the history of the person. Other special needs are usually identified during the first interview of the asylum seeker. The Order on Examination of Asylum Claims mentions that the staff working with an asylum seeker having identified any of the special needs should resort to assistance of the specialists (doctor, psychologist, etc.). However, it should be noted, that The Order on Examination of Asylum Claims mostly addresses the refugee status determination (RSD) issues. Thus, the above provision applies to the asylum officers for the RSD purposes only. In the area of material reception conditions or mental health, no real needs assessment mechanism exists.

D. Is the necessary medical and other assistance provided to persons with special needs as requested by article 15, §2 which is a mandatory provision and in particular to victims of torture and violence as requested by article 20 which is a mandatory provision?

A.30. D. Medical assistance to these persons is provided on the same basis as for all other asylum seekers, but in addition they are entitled to the assistance of the psychologist (paragraph 19 of the Order on Accommodation of Foreigners at the FRC). However in practice, no psychologist is employed within the structure of the FRC. Psychological services are available only under the NGO projects funded by the ERF. According to UNHCR, detention-like environment in the FRC furthermore re-traumatises vulnerable asylum seekers.

Q.31. About minors:

A. Till which age are asylum seekers considered to be minor?

A.31. A. A minor in accordance with Lithuanian legislation is a person below the age of 18 years.

B. How is access of minor asylum seekers to the education system ensured? Is it at school or in case inside accommodation centres and can it be considered as similar to the conditions for nationals as requested by article 10, §1?

A.31. B. Access to education system is ensured for minors. For instance, paragraph 2 of Article 32(2) of the Aliens' Law that deals with unaccompanied minors provides that unaccompanied minor aliens, regardless of the lawfulness of their stay in the territory of the Republic of Lithuania, shall have the rights to study at general education schools and vocational schools according to the procedure laid down by the Minister of Education and Science. A more general provision for all minors who are asylum seekers is in Article 71(2) of the Aliens' Law, ensuring the right to study at schools of general education and vocational schools.
Such access to education system may only be restricted in practice, if the family member to whom the minor belongs is detained and there is no easy leave from the FRC. Minors have access to local schools outside the centres. It can be considered similar to the conditions for nationals, except that it might be more difficult to study for children of asylum seekers as they do not know the local language.

C. Is access to education ensured not later than 3 months as requested by article 10, §2 (or after maximum one year if specific education for asylum seekers is provided) and till an expulsion decision is really enforced?

A.31. C. There is no time limit for access to education provided by the national law.

D. Is specific education (like language classes) available for asylum seekers, in particular to facilitate their effective access to the education system of the reception Member State (see article 10, §2 which is an optional provision)?

A.31. D. The Order on Accommodation of Asylum Seekers in the RRC provides that the courses on professional orientation and re-qualification are organised for the inhabitants of the centre whenever possible (paragraph 17 of the Order). In addition, asylum seekers have a possibility to attend free of charge I category Lithuanian language courses – 96 hours (II category language courses are also available, but not free of charge) (paragraphs 16.1-16.2 of the Order), organised in the centre. Given that RRC accommodates only asylum seeking unaccompanied minors, these services are not accessible for the absolute majority of other asylum seekers (who stay in the FRC).

E. Are minors in general accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them? (see article 14, § 3)

A.31. E. Minors in general are accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible for them in case of absence of parents. Unaccompanied minors may be accommodated in the place indicated by the guardian or other legal representative (paragraph 3 of the Order on Accommodation of Unaccompanied Minor Asylum Seekers). Every minor is given access to social workers and, if needed, to a psychologist (paragraph 9 of the Order). 4). The problem exists because of definition of unaccompanied minor - representation by custom is not recognized in Lithuania.

F. Do minors with special needs enumerated by article 18, §2 which is a mandatory provision, have access to appropriate mental health care and qualified counselling?

A.31. F. Minors with special needs should have access only to the psychologist (paragraph 19 of the Order on Accommodation of Foreigners at the FRC), who is not available in practice. In accordance with the Order on Accommodation of Unaccompanied Minors, they should be provided with access to social worker and if needed – to services of the psychologist in the RRC. The RRC shall ensure the access of NGOs, providing assistance to refugees, to the minors in the Centre in order to implement social education and assistance projects (paragraph 8 of the Order on Accommodation of Unaccompanied minors).

G. How and when is organised the representation of unaccompanied minors (guardianship, special organisation) and regularly assessed? (see article 19, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

A.31. G. Unaccompanied minors regardless of the lawfulness of their stay in Lithuania shall be taken into temporary guardianship/curator ship for the period of the stay in Lithuania. Temporary guardianship shall be assigned to the minor immediately upon submission of the asylum application (Art. 67(3) of the Aliens' Law). The temporary guardian/curator of an unaccompanied minor alien shall represent the interests of the unaccompanied minor alien (Art. 32(1) of the Aliens' Law). Such representation is not being regularly assessed. If unaccompanied minor is accommodated in the RRC, the centre will be assigned as a temporary guardianship institution for the minor (paragraph 8 of the Order on Accommodation of Unaccompanied minors). In practice, problems exists in implementing these provisions to unaccompanied minors who have not yet formalised their asylum application, because responsible institutions refuse to take care of them if they are not asylum seekers. However, special assistance should be provided to them, because in practice the migration authorities have concerns that minors are not able to formulate their asylum applications.

H. How is placement of unaccompanied minors organised (with adult relatives, a foster family, in special accommodation centres or other suitable accommodation)? (see article 19, §2 which is mandatory provision)

A.31. H. Unaccompanied minors are accommodated in the Refugee Reception Centre and they do not need to stay in the FRC, unless for 48 hours of initial stay before they are transferred to the RRC. Also, they may be allowed to stay with the person who takes care for the child. If there are adult relatives, they would be allowed to stay together in the RRC. According to information of the RRC (16 April 2007), unaccompanied minors are accommodated in the RRC in separate premises, equipped to meet their specific needs.

I. How is the tracing of the family members of the unaccompanied minors organised? Are measures taken to protect confidentiality of information when necessary? (see article 19, §3 which is a mandatory provision)

A.31. I. Having received information about an unaccompanied minor alien, the Migration Department must together with non-governmental organisations and the temporary guardian/curator of the minor alien immediately organise search for the minor's family members (Art. 32(3) of the Aliens' Law). Article 32(3) of the Aliens' Law envisages that the Migration Department having received information about unaccompanied minor, must together with the NGOs and international organisations and the temporary guardian of the minor organise family tracing without delay. Lithuanian Red Cross is the competent organisation for tracing of family members in and outside Lithuania. National rules on confidentiality apply also in tracing procedures.

8. EXCEPTIONAL MODALITIES OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.32. Apart from detention covered by the next question, are there exceptional modalities for reception conditions in the following cases and if yes, which ones and for how long are they applicable, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)?

A. Persons with specific or special needs, regarding in particular the period of assessment of those needs?

A.32. A. There are no provisions concerning exceptional modalities for reception conditions.

B. Non availability of reception conditions in certain areas

A.32. B. Reception conditions are lacking at border control posts and local migration services, thus if an asylum seeker is not detained, efforts are taken to transfer him as soon as possible to the FRC.

C. Temporarily exhaustion of normal housing capacities

A.32. C. There are no provisions concerning exceptional modalities for reception conditions.

D. The asylum seeker is confined to a border post

A.32. D. Reception conditions are lacking at border control posts and local migration services, thus if an asylum seeker is not detained, efforts are taken to transfer him as soon as possible to the FRC.

E. All other cases not mentioned in the directive (for instance urgent situation in case of a sudden high number of applicants outside a case of application of the directive on temporary protection).

A.32. E. There are no provisions concerning exceptional modalities for reception conditions.

Q.33. Detention of asylum seekers (we do not cover the situation of rejected asylum seekers detained for the purpose of their return) (see articles 6 §2, 7 §3, 13, §2 2nd indent and 14 §8 which implies that the directive is in principle applicable in case of detention):

P. In which cases or circumstances and for which reasons[544] (identity verification in particular if the persons have no or false documents, protection of public order or national security, refugee status determination, way of entry into the territory, etc) can an asylum seeker be detained during the asylum procedure till his request has been finally rejected. Quote precisely in English in your answer the legal basis for detention of asylum seekers in national law.

[544] Please specify it article 18 §1 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 which specifies that "Member States shall not hold a person in detention for the sole reason that he/she is an applicant for asylum" is or not respected (even if has not yet to be transposed).

A.33. A. Lithuanian legislation does not distinguish between detention of asylum seekers and detention of all other foreigners (e.g. those arriving illegally), except one provision that asylum seekers cannot be detained on the mere ground of illegal entry/stay in the country (Art. 113(2) of the Aliens Law). The Aliens' Law (Art. 113) states the following grounds on which foreigners (including asylum seekers) can be detained:

- in order to prevent the alien from entering into the Republic of Lithuania without a permit;
- if the alien has illegally entered into or stays in the Republic of Lithuania;
- when it is attempted to return the alien to the country from where he has come if the alien has been refused entry into the Republic of Lithuania;
- when the alien is suspected of using forged documents;
- if a decision on the expulsion of the alien from the Republic of Lithuania has been taken;
- in order to stop the spread of dangerous and especially dangerous communicable diseases;
- when the alien's stay in the Republic of Lithuania constitutes a threat to public security, public policy or public health.

The Law further stipulates that the foreigners are detained by court order (for more than 48 hours) at the Foreigners' Registration Centre (Art. 114(1-2)). As concerns minors, they may be detained only as a last resort, when the alien's best interests are the main consideration (Art. 114(3)). There is no provision in the laws stating that the asylum seeker should not be detained for the sole reason of being an applicant for asylum. In practice, the situation of detention differs depending on the courts in the regions. Some courts interpret the provision on detention narrowly, while some less experienced with asylum seekers authorise detention regularly. Particular concern exists also with initial detention for 48 hours, because in practice asylum seekers approaching local migration services having entered the country illegally are usually detained (including families with children) and kept in regular police custodies with all other persons arrested for a variety of reasons.

Q. Has your member State adopted measures to transpose §3 of article 7 which is an optional provision? If yes, how has this provision been legally understood (is it a case of detention or an obligation to stay in and not leave a certain place?) and for which reasons can an asylum seeker be "confined" in such a place?

A.33. B. According to the author of this Report, the provision is unlikely understood as detention, but as a restriction on the freedom of movement, which in accordance with Lithuanian legislation may be applied to asylum seekers on the same grounds as for other foreigners only in the interests of state security or public policy, or public health or morals, for crime prevention purposes or seeking to protect the rights and freedoms of other persons (Art. 112 of the Aliens' Law). At the same time, it can be mentioned that no discussions have taken place in the country so far as concerns the application of this provision.

R. Are there legally alternatives to detention, like obligation to report to the authorities, obligation to stay in a place, provision of a guarantor or of a financial guarantee?

A.33. C. There are alternatives to detention provided in the Aliens' Law. Alternatives are applied by the court when in view of the fact that the alien's identity has been established, he constitutes no threat to public security and public policy, provides assistance to the court in determining the alien's legal status in the Republic of Lithuania as well as other circumstances (Art. 115(1) of the Aliens' Law). In the event of failure to implement the measures alternative to detention imposed by the order of the court the territorial police authority shall apply to the court with a motion to detain the alien (Art. 115(3)). When taking a decision to impose a measure alternative to detention, the deadline for its application must be set (Art. 115(4)). The following alternatives could be mentioned (Art. 115(2) of the Aliens' Law):

- requiring that the alien regularly at the fixed time report at the appropriate territorial police authority;
- requiring that the alien communicate his whereabouts at the fixed time by communication means to the appropriate territorial police authority;
- entrusting the care of an unaccompanied minor alien to a relevant social agency;
- entrusting the care of the alien, pending the resolution of the issue of his detention, to a citizen of the Republic of Lithuania or an alien legally resident in the Republic of Lithuania who is related to the alien, provided that the person undertakes to take care of and to support the alien;
- accommodating the alien at the Foreigners' Registration Centre without subjecting him to restriction of freedom of movement. According to the Law, such measure can only be applied to asylum seekers and not to other foreigners (supplement to the Aliens Law of 28 November 2006).

The Order on Examination of the Asylum Claims mentions that a person who is granted temporary territorial asylum and who has arrived to Lithuania legally, may be allowed by a decision of the Migration Department to stay in the place of his choice, if the asylum seeker so wishes, indicates the data about the place of living and the legal ground for residence in that particular place (paragraph 24).

S. Which is the competent authority to order the detention of an asylum seeker? Explain if different authorities are involved to first take and later confirm the decision.

A.33. D. The competent authority to order the detention of an asylum seeker is police or any other law enforcement institution, but only for the period of up to 48 hours. Ordering detention over 48 hours is an exclusive jurisdiction of the court (general competence court in the district).

T. For how long and till which stage of the asylum procedure can an asylum seeker be detained?

A.33. E. There is no time limit and differentiation depending on the stage of the asylum procedure that would be stated in the law. The time limit is set by the court in each individual case. There is also a possibility to reconsider the decision to detain an asylum seeker. Article 118(1) of the Aliens' Law provides that upon the disappearance of the grounds for the alien's detention the alien shall be entitled to, whereas the institution which initiated the alien's detention shall immediately apply to the regional court of the locality of his residence with a request for reconsideration of the decision to detain the alien. The court shall within 10 days from the date of acceptance of the application reconsider the decision concerning detention and shall pass one of the following decisions:

- to uphold the decision to detain;
- to reverse the decision to detain;
- to quash the decision to detain.

Also, detention may be terminated upon the disappearance of the grounds for detention. Asylum seeker shall then be immediately released based on the effective court's decision. The same applies if the alien's detention period expires - he must be immediately released from the place of detention (Art. 119 of the Aliens' Law).

U. In which places (can we call them "closed centres"?) are asylum seekers detained (places in a special closed centres reserved only to asylum seekers, together with returnees like illegal aliens or even in a normal prison, in case within separated areas or with the other detainees)? Indicate if a difference has to be made following the location of the "closed centres" at the border or on the territory? Which is the authority managing those places and is it the same as the one in charge of reception conditions?

A.33. F. Asylum seekers are detained in the Foreigners' Registration Centre, which is a closed centre under the State Border Guard Service supervision and which also serves as a reception centre with the less restricted area for asylum seekers who are not detained. Detained asylum seekers are separated from other asylum seekers and also other detained foreigners. There are no other special detention centres at the border areas or elsewhere. But if there is a need to detain an asylum seeker temporarily (mainly within first 48 hours) once apprehended at the border or on the territory of the state, police custodies may be used for this purpose, before he is transferred to the FRC. In practice, because of lack of accommodation facilities at the border, the border authorities take effort to perform such transfer at earliest time possible.

V. Does UNHCR and NGOs have access to the places of detention and under which conditions?

A.33. G. UNHCR has access to all places of detention, including also regular prisons (e.g. in case the asylum seeker whose application is being examined has committed a crime and is isolated in pre-trial detention), transit zones of airports and sea ports. This right of UNHCR flows from Article 91(3) of the Aliens' Law. It reads as follows: "Representatives of the Office of the UNHCR shall be allowed to immediately contact the asylum applicants. The Office of the UNHCR shall be entitled to receive information connected with the asylum applications » (paragraph 2). Further on, it reads that « Representatives of the Office of the UNHCR shall be granted access to places of detention and transit zones of airports and sea ports where asylum applicants are kept » (paragraph 3 of Art. 91 of the Aliens' Law). Also, Order of the Head of State Border Guard Service to the MOI on Approval of the Statute of the FRC envisages in paragraph 7.19 that the centre ensures the conditions for detained and accommodated foreigners to make use of legal assistance guaranteed by the state and for asylum seekers possibility to contact and meet with the representatives of UNHCR in Lithuania. NGOs do not as a rule have access to detained asylum seekers, unless they provide legal assistance/legally represent the person (in case of the Lithuanian Red Cross) or provide social assistance under the agreement with the body running the place.

W. What appeal(s) can asylum seekers introduce against the fact he is detained? Is article 18 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Where an applicant for asylum is held in detention, Member States shall ensure that there is a possibility of speedy judicial review" respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed)?

A.33. H. Appeal against detention of an asylum seeker may be submitted to the Supreme Administrative Court of Lithuania, according to the procedure established by the Law on Administrative Proceedings (Art. 117(1) of the Aliens' Law) against the district court's decision to detain him or to extend the detention period or to apply measures alternative to detention. The appeal may be submitted through the Foreigners' Registration Centre. The FRC shall transfer the appeal to the Supreme Administrative Court of Lithuania. Decision shall be taken within 10 days from the date of acceptance of the appeal by the court. This time limit may be considered to comply with the requirement for a speedy judicial review. However in practice, the process sometimes takes even up to 3 months. Therefore, another procedure is usually resorted to by the lawyers representing asylum seekers to ensure speedy review of detention. This procedure is provided in Article 118 of the Aliens' Law (review of detention decision) and works very well in practice, as reported by the lawyers.

X. Is the directive on reception conditions considered to be in principle applicable to the places where asylum seekers are detained? In particular which information do they receive about their rights, which access do they have to legal advice and health care?

A.33. I. The directive is applicable in places of detention of asylum seekers (specially designed for that, not in case of regular prisons where asylum seeker may be detained in case of commission of a crime in the asylum country). Detained asylum seekers receive information about their rights and obligations, as well as internal rules of the centre upon the placement in the centre and have to sign upon receiving such information (Paragraph 16 of the Order on Accommodation of Aliens in the FRC). They have access to legal advice and health care on the same conditions as all other asylum seekers who are staying in the FRC and are not detained. However, some constrains may exists as concerns access to this right when asylum seekers are temporary (for 48 hours) placed in the police custodies, where legal assistance may not be available, as well as information on the asylum procedures and contacts of lawyers.

Y. Apart from freedom of movement, what are the main differences between normal reception conditions and exceptional modalities for reception conditions in case of detention, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)? If it is about closed centres, are the regulations of those places in line with the requirements of the directive (is article 13, §2, second indent of the directive following which "Member States shall ensure that standards of living is met (…) in relation to the situation of persons who are in detention" respected?).

A.33. J. Apart from the freedom of movement there are not many differences in the situation of detained asylum seekers in comparison with those who are not detained. They may have limited chances of education (in case of minors to go to regular school), access to lawyers and social workers, etc. However, the same standards of treatment as concerns reception conditions are provided to them. In case of detention at the border control post, there might be limited possibilities to provide food, legal and social counselling, services of an interpreter, because these places are not specifically equipped to accommodate asylum seekers who are detained. In police custodies, there might be limited possibilities of separating detained asylum seekers from other persons suspected in having committed a crime. If detained at the border or at police custodies, asylum seekers are kept not in places specially arranged for asylum seekers, but in common wards where people suspected of crimes are being kept temporarily.

Z. Are measures taken to avoid detention of asylum seekers with special needs (if yes, which ones?) or are special measures taken because of their needs?

A.33. K. Article 114(3) of the Aliens' Law provides that minors may be detained only as a last resort. However, no provisions or special guarantees/measures exist in the legislation as concerns other vulnerable asylum seekers with special needs. The court may assign an alternative to detention in their case.

AA. Can minor asylum seekers be detained together with relatives? Can unaccompanied minor asylum seekers be detained? If yes, are there special measures which take into account that children are concerned?

A.33. L. Minor asylum seekers may be detained together with relatives, but in this case the best interest of the child principle would be applied to determine what is better for the minor. In practice, the authorities avoid separating the minors from their parents who are detained. Unaccompanied minors may be detained only as a last resort, when no other (alternative) measures may be taken. However, the practice of courts differs and a few minors were ordered detention.

BB. In particular is article 10 regarding access to education of minors respected in those places?

A.33. M. Access to education for minors who are detained is constrained, even if they enjoy the right to education as a general rule under legislation. They are not allowed to leave the centre while detained. Some schooling possibilities are available within the accommodation centre.

CC. How many asylum seekers are for the moment detained in your Member State? Which proportion does this represent in comparison of the total number of asylum seekers at the same moment?

A.33. N. In 2005 less than 10% of asylum seekers were kept in detention (6 of them were detained in the FRC) out of a total of 146 asylum seekers accommodated in the Centre during the year. No updated statistics is available to the author of this Report.

9. ORGANISATION OF THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.34. Explain if the system of providing reception conditions is centralised or decentralised (which levels of government do provide practically reception conditions?) (do not confuse this question with question number 3 about the competence to make rules about reception conditions).

A.34. The system of reception is centralised. The central government and not municipal government is responsible for provision of reception conditions.

Q.35. In case, are accommodation centres public or/and private (managed by NGOs? If yes, are the NGOs financially supported by the State?)[545]

A.35. There are no private reception centres in Lithuania, as well as public reception centres that would be run by NGOs.

Q.36. In case, how many accommodation centres are there in your Member State (distinguish in your answer between public and private centres)?[546]

A.36. Two accommodation centres exist in Lithuania, both of them are public centres. But only one centre (the FRC) is used to accommodate all asylum seekers pending the final decision on asylum claim. While another centre (RRC) is used for accommodation of unaccompanied minors' asylum seekers only.

Q.37. Is there in the legislation a plan or are there rules in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory of your Member State to avoid their concentration in some areas like big cities or to share the costs of their reception between central, regional and local authorities?

A.37. There are no such plans, because the current number of asylum seekers is not big and the capacities of the existing reception centres are hardly filled. Thus dispersal of asylum seekers in various places would have security and economical implications, therefore unlikely to be pursued by the authorities.

Q.38. Does a central body representing all the actors (like NGOs) involved in reception conditions exist? Does it play a consultative role for the State authorities, a coordination role for the actors or any other role?[547]

A.38. There is no central body representing all the actors.

Q.39. A. Which is the body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions as requested by article 23 which is mandatory provision? Include in your answer which is the competent ministry (Interior, Social affairs, etc) for reception conditions?

A.39. A. There is no single body responsible for supervision, as two ministries: the Ministry of Interior and the Ministry of Social Security and Labour carry out the responsibility for supervision of the system of reception conditions. The Department of Supervision of Social Services to the MSSL is directly responsible for supervision of the reception conditions in the Refugee Reception Centre. However there is no special monitoring system in place.

[545] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[546] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[547] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

B. Has your Member State (like the Czech Republic did recently) approved quality standards (not necessary legally binding) for housing services (for instance about the number of persons per bedroom on the basis of its size, number of accessible toilets, bathrooms, showers and washing machines per number of persons, existence of common rooms with radio, television, newspapers, books, computers, accessibility of telephone, existence of recreative rooms for children,…) to be respected in particular in accommodation centres?[548]

A.39. B. Such normatives exist in both reception centres. For instance, on 28 October 2005 the Minister of Health Care approved the normatives for hygiene in the FRC, which regulate all quality standards mentioned above. There is also a Government Resolution on approval of physiologic nutrition norms for persons accommodated in the Foreigners Registration Centre.[549] This Resolution was implemented by the Order of the Minister of Interior No. 1V-229 of 24 June 2003 on approval of the average norms of nutrition for persons accommodated in the FRC.

C. How is this system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions organised?

A.39. C. No such system exists in practice. There is a regular supervision/guidance system that is usually applied between the Ministry/another government institution and the body that it is attached to it (in this case – reception centres). This relationship is realised through the Ministry approving essential by-laws for the operation of the centre, as well as planning budgets, performing audits, as necessary and general guidance. But this is not something established particularly for reception conditions' monitoring.

D. Does the body in charge of guidance, control and monitoring produce reports about the level of reception conditions? If yes, how frequently and are they public?[550]

A.39. D. No such analytical reporting system exists in practice. Only statistics is collected and available to the public through internet.

Q.40. A. What is the total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions for the last year for which figures are available (see article 22 obliging

[548] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[549] Resolution of the Government of the Republic of Lithuania No. 418 of 8 April 2003 on Approval of physiologic nutrition norms for persons accommodated in the Foreigners Registration Centre, published in "State News" No. 35-1473, 11 04 2003.
[550] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Member States to calculate those statistics about which we also asked the Commission to require them from Member States for mid June)?

A.40. A. The total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions in the centres for 2005 was 154. By 1 May 2006, 26 of these persons were staying in the Foreigners' Registration Centre, including 1 of them in detention. During the year, a total of 146 asylum seekers were accommodated in the FRC (6 of them in detention regime). Approx. 105 foreigners were staying in the FRC on 14 May 2007, out of whom 62 were asylum seekers. Table 2. below presents the breakdown according to country of origin, age and gender. No detailed updated statistics for 2006 is yet available. The breakdown of this number according to country of origin, gender and age is provided in the Table 1. below:

Table 1. Asylum seekers accommodated in the FRC during 2005

Country of origin	Male	Female	Children	Total number
Afghanistan	7	-	1	8
Algeria	1	-	-	1
Azerbaijan	1	-	-	1
Belarus	4	-	-	4
Egypt	1	-	-	1
Georgia	3	-	2	5
Iraq	-	1	2	3
Cameroon	2	-	-	2
Kyrgyzstan	2	1	-	3
Lebanon	1	-	-	1
Liberia	2	-	-	2
Nigeria	6	3	-	9
Pakistan	6	-	-	6
Russia	41	24	32	97
Syria	1	-	-	1
Somalia	1	-	-	1
Togo	1	-	-	1
TOTAL	80	29	37	146

Table 2. Asylum seekers accommodated in the FRC as of 14 May 2007

Country of origin	Male	Female	Children	Total number
Angola	1	-	-	1
Armenia	1	-	-	1
Belarus	1	-	-	1
Ghana	1	-	-	1
Georgia	5	1	-	6
Cameroon	-	1	-	1
Liberia	2	0	-	2
Nepal	1	0	-	1
Nigeria	5	2	1	8
Pakistan	3	-	-	3
Russia	15	7	14	36
Ukraine	1	-	-	1
TOTAL	36	11	15	62

6 asylum seekers (minors) stayed in the Refugee Reception Centre in 2005. The following Table 3. provides a breakdown of numbers according to country of origin of asylum seekers.

Table 3. Asylum seekers accommodated in the RRC during 2005

Country of origin	Children
Afghanistan	1
Nigeria	1
Pakistan	1
Russia	1
Stateless	2
TOTAL	6

As of 14 May 2007, 63 foreigners were living in the Refugee Reception Centre, of whom 7 were unaccompanied minors.
According to the information of the Migration Department, no asylum seekers were allowed to stay in private during 2005. No updated statistics for 2006 is yet available.

B. What is the total budget of reception conditions in euro for the last year for which figures are available?[551]

A.40. B. There are no numbers available as to the total budget specifically for reception conditions, thus only the data on expenses for accommodation of asylum seekers in the reception centres could be presented. Furthermore, the financial data was only available for 2004 for the FRC. Total budget for reception of foreigners in the Foreigners' Registration Centre in 2004 was 850,295 Euro, fully covered from the state budget. Asylum seekers' reception constituted 323,538 Euro. It covered health care, nutrition, heating and electricity costs, monthly allowances, etc. The budget for reception at the Refugee Reception Centre in 2004 (also fully funded from the state budget) was 469,156 Euro. In 2005, the budget of the RRC was approximately 481,159 Euro. In 2006, the total budget of the RRC was approximately 480,435 Euro (this covered both reception at the Centre and also integration conditions).

C. What is the average cost of reception conditions in euro per asylum seeker for the last year for which figures are available?[552]

A.40. C. No such calculations are available. However, for instance reception of one unaccompanied minor in the RRC costs approximately 437 Euros.

D Are the costs of reception conditions of asylum seekers supported by the central/federal or federated government or are they shared with regional and/or local authorities?

[551] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[552] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

A.40. D. The costs of reception conditions of asylum seekers are supported by the central government.

E. Is article 24 § 2 of the directive following which "Member States shall allocate the necessary resources in connection with the nationals provisions enacted to implement this directive" respected?

A.40. E. Yes, this article is implemented in practice.

Q.41. A. What is the total number of persons working for reception conditions?

A.41. A. The total number of persons in both reception centres working on reception conditions is not clear. As the FRC accommodates and serves also illegal migrants and no special social staff is at all available, it is difficult to distinguish the exact number of those related to reception. 29 persons work in the RRC, which also serves persons who were granted asylum. In the RRC, 8 persons work with unaccompanied minors (information of the Centre of 16 April 2007). 2 lawyers of the Lithuanian Red Cross are providing legal assistance and 2 social workers from LRC and Caritas are providing social assistance.

B. How is the training of persons working in accommodation centres organised? Does it take into account specific needs of unaccompanied minors when relevant as well as the gender dimension? (see article 14 §5, 19 § 4 and also 24 §1 which are mandatory provisions)?

A.41. B. The national legislation requires the persons dealing with unaccompanied minors to have knowledge about their special needs. A few years ago, all relevant asylum and border guard officials, as well as reception staff received substantial training on treatment of unaccompanied minors. Trainers of training have been prepared within institutions. According to the information of the RRC (16 April 2007), the staff of the Centre participated in 16 trainings related to a variety of issues (including on guardianship and custody of children, gender issues, provision of psychological support to children, social work and others) in 2006-2007.

C. Are there rules about the deontology of persons working in accommodation centres, in particular on confidentiality?

A.41. C. In accordance with the laws, the file of an asylum seeker is made secret. The principle of confidentiality is stated in Article 68(2) of the Aliens' Law and is binding upon all institutions and officials involved in the asylum procedure. Furthermore, confidentiality is ensured in the RRC by the provisions of the Code of Ethics of Employees of the Centre, approved by the Director of the Centre on 29 April 2004 (No. 42-V) (information of the RRC of 16 April 2007, the author of this Report had no access to this document).

10. IMPACT OF THE DIRECTIVE

Legal impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.42. Specify if there are or not big problems with the translation of the directive in the official language of your Member State and give in case a list of the worst examples of provisions which have been badly translated? (please note that this question has in particular been added to the questionnaire concerning the new Member States)

A.42. There are no particularly serious translation problems of the directive.

Q.43. Where there precise legal rules on reception conditions for asylum seekers before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the directive (if yes, specify what the nature of those rules was (legislation, regulation, administrative instructions,…)?

A.43. The reception conditions have been regulated previously by the Law on Refugee Status (2002 version) and orders on accommodation of asylum seekers in the reception centres. Also, the provisions of the directive have been taken into account by the drafters of new national legislation (e.g. when revising the Aliens' Law in 2004) as part of Lithuania's accession to the EU obligations to align its' national legislation, institutions and administrative practice with the EU acquis on asylum. Thus a number of reception standards were already incorporated in the legislation before the official transposition.

Q.44. Did the legal rules applicable to reception conditions become more clear, precise, coherent or detailed with the adoption of the transposition norms (for instance do you now have after the transposition one basic text dealing with reception conditions instead of numerous different texts in the past?

A.44. The legal rules did not change much and there is no one basic text dealing with transposition of reception conditions.

Q.45. Did the transposition of the directive imply important changes in national law or were the changes of minor importance? In case, list the most important changes that have been introduced.

A.45. The reception norms had a significant influence for introduction of free legal aid for asylum seekers paid by the state. At the moment, it reflects more favourable conditions than those stated in the directive. It also impacted on introduction of good access to education and facilitated better access to health care system.

Political impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.46. Explain briefly if there has been an important debate about the transposition of the directive (in particular in the Parliament, but possibly also in the government, between political parties, including in medias, etc; underline in case the main points which have been discussed or have created difficulties)

A.46. According to the information available to the author of this Report, no important debate about the transposition of the directive has taken place in Lithuania in 2005-2006. However, in the end of 2006, the Social Affairs and Labour Committee of the Parliament of Lithuania has started examination of the reception conditions of asylum seekers in the Foreigners Registration Centre, prompted by letters of concern from UNHCR. The members of this Committee paid a visit to the FRC on 21 March 2007. As a result of this visit, the discussion was organised in the Parliament, while the Committee decided to approach the Government for allocation of additional budget for the FRC in 2008 in order to meet the implementation of certain reception requirements in the Centre (e.g. concerning new working places for social workers and psychologists).

Q.47. Did the transposition of the directive contribute to make the internal rules stricter or more generous? In particular, did your Member State use the occasion of the transposition to abolish more favourable provisions of national law? Does your Member State still have rules more favourable than the provisions of the directive (if yes, try to give the more important examples).

A.47. More favourable rules exist as concerns free legal aid for asylum seekers. The rules were made stricter due to transposition as concerns asylum seekers' contribution to their reception conditions.

11. ANY OTHER INTERESTING ELEMENT

Q.48. What are in your view the weaknesses and strengths of the system of reception conditions in your Member State?[553]

A.48. The strengths of the system of reception conditions in Lithuania according to the opinion of the author of this Report is that the system allows a combination of both central accommodation of the asylum seekers and also staying in private; also that proper legal assistance and counselling is provided during all stages of the asylum procedure, etc.

Also, several aspects are considered as strengths of the system by the NGOs (Lithuanian Red Cross), including:

- 28 October 2005 Minister of Health Security Order on Hygiene Provisions and Rules in the Foreigners Registration Centre[554] might be regarded as a positive development, because it establishes detailed hygiene requirements for the premises, the distribution of hygiene items to foreigners, the nutrition and the health assistance systems in the Centre.

[553] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

[554] 28 October 2005 Minister of Health Security Order No. V-836 on Hygiene Provisions and Rules in the Foreigners Registration Center, published in State News No. 135-4863, 2005.

- The flexibility of the authorities who allow NGOs to fill in the social gaps in the system. For instance, in 2005-2007 the Lithuanian Red Cross has been implementing the social assistance project to asylum seekers in the Foreigners Registration Centre funded by the European Refugee Fund and the Ministry of Internal Affairs, which aimed to fill the gap of social assistance and help to satisfy basic social, medical and psychological needs of asylum seekers.[555]

As concerns weaknesses, little integration of social services into the general system exists, as well as access problems to the health care beyond emergency health care; non-availability of reception conditions at the border and local migration services; discrimination of asylum seekers, who entered legally and stay in private (basically no access to reception conditions); extensive decision making powers vested to the administration of the reception centres and little independent control; treatment of vulnerable individuals is problematic; hosting of asylum seekers in the FRC for the whole period of the procedure (except unaccompanied minors), which is not a social establishment (previous reception system, which existed until 2004, whereby asylum seekers stayed in the FRC only for the first stage of the asylum procedure and were then transferred to the RRC, which is a social establishment, was much better in view of the author of this Report).
In addition, the main aspect considered as weaknesses of the system by the NGOs (Lithuanian Red Cross) is that the Foreigners Registration Centre is granted with a status of the only accommodation facility for all asylum seekers except for unaccompanied minors. This, in view of the Red Cross, is problematic in view of the requirements of the Directive due to the following reasons:

1. The FRC definitely lacks the character of a social institution; neither social nor psychological staff has been employed in the Centre.
2. Once accommodated in the Centre, asylum seekers with special needs particularly women, children, elderly, the traumatised and the disabled find themselves in a very poor social environment surrounded by the uniformed border guards next to the detained irregular migrants.
3. The nutrition system is centralised in the FRC, it does not always secure religious or cultural dietary requirements.
4. The medical unit, located in the FRC, provides only necessary health care services, while access to the hospitals and services of specialists is available only in emergency cases. Neither psychological, nor mental health services are available in the Centre.
5. The amount of 25 Litas (approx. 7 Euro) is really modest, thus asylum seekers sometimes are not able to satisfy their basic needs (e.g., proper food, health care, clothing, and school necessities).

[555] Description of the Project at www.redcross.lt

Also, the existing system is not encouraging housing in private, as a result of which asylum seekers are frequently forced to live in the FRC because of financial reasons (7 Euro pocket money is clearly not sufficient to survive outside the Centre).

Q.49. Mention any good practice in your Member State which could be promoted in other Member States[556]

A.49. Provision of legal assistance during all stages of the asylum procedure; housing of unaccompanied minors.

Q.50. Please add here any other interesting element about reception conditions in your Member State which you did not had the occasion to mention in your previous answers.

A.50. Four issues could be mentioned here:

1) DNA Testing for family reunification purposes.

Article 122 of the Aliens' Law provides in paragraph 3 that the expenses related to the performance of the DNA test (in connection with the issuance of residence permit on family reunification grounds to confirm kinship) shall be covered by the alien except for the asylum applicants whose DNA test expenses shall be covered by the Republic of Lithuania.

2) Age Determination Test.

Article 123(1) of the Aliens' Law provides that if there are reasonable grounds to doubt the alien's age, the Migration Department may oblige the alien who is applying for the issue of a residence permit or for the granting of asylum to undergo an age determination test. Paragraph 5 of the Article provides that the expenses related to the performance of the age determination test shall be covered by the alien except for the asylum applicants whose test expenses shall be covered by the Republic of Lithuania.

3) Asylum statistics.

The number of asylum applications submitted in 2006 was 459, while in 2005 there were 410 (in comparison, 458 asylum applications submitted in 2004). 3 unaccompanied minors submitted applications during 2006 (in comparison with 9 in 2005 and 11 in 2004). 12 persons were granted refugee status in 2006 (while 15 were recognised in 2005, constituting 4% of all decisions) and 385 persons were granted subsidiary protection (in comparison with 328 in 2005, 85% of all decisions).

[556] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

4) Reception at the Foreigner Registration Centre.

According to UNHCR, the MOI, including the Border Guards Service, (to which the FRC (in fact, the only real reception facility) belongs) lacks ownership of the reception function, while the Social Ministry is reluctant to consider asylum seekers as clients of social assistance system. The staff of the FRC is not properly trained to deal with special needs of asylum seekers, in particular as concerns vulnerable groups. Social infrastructure of the FRC is extremely poor and potentially productive for SGBV attacks. With this background, trained staff, social infrastructure and expertise of the RRC are not used to address the clear gaps in the reception process.

QUESTIONNAIRE FOR THE NATIONAL REPORT ON THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE DIRECTIVE :
RECEPTION CONDITIONS OF 27 JANUARY 2003

IN: GRAND DUCHY OF LUXEMBOURG

by
Olivier LANG
Avocat à la Cour olivier.lang@barreau.lu

10 October 2007

1. NORMS OF TRANSPOSITION

Q.1. Identify the main norm of transposition (indicate the title, date, number, date of entry into force and references of publication into the official journal) and indicate its legal nature (legislative, regulatory, administrative); indicate in your answer if this norm was only devoted to the directive or if it has been included in a more general text and indicate in that case by quoting precisely the numbers of the provisions adopted to transpose the directive.

La loi du 5 mai 2006 relative au droit d'asile et à des formes complémentaires de protection, publiée le 9 mai 2006 au Mémorial A, journal officiel luxembourgeois (A 2006, N°78, p.1401), et entrée en vigueur le 13 mai 2006, est la principale norme de transposition (ci-après, la loi du 5 mai 2006) (annexe 1).

Selon l'exposé des motifs de la loi, celle-ci a deux finalités, la première est de doter l'Etat luxembourgeois des moyens de participer à la mise en œuvre de la première phase du régime d'asile européen commun engagée par le Conseil européen de Tempere des 15 et 16 octobre 1999, la deuxième est d'accélérer la procédure d'examen des demandes de protection internationale.

Ainsi, outre la transposition dans l'ordre juridique luxembourgeois de la directive 2003/9/CE du 27 janvier 2003, cette loi a encore pour vocation de transposer les trois autres directives « asile » ;

- la directive 2004/83/CE du 29 avril 2004 concernant les normes minimales relatives aux conditions que doivent remplir les ressortissants des pays tiers ou les apatrides pour pouvoir prétendre au statut de réfugié ou les personnes qui, pour d'autres raisons, ont besoin d'une protection internationale, et relative au contenu de ces statuts,
- la directive 2001/55/CE du 20 juillet 2001 relative à des normes minimales pour l'octroi d'une protection temporaire en cas d'afflux massif de personnes déplacées et à des mesures tendant à assurer un équilibre entre les efforts consentis par les Etats membres pour accueillir ces personnes et supporter les conséquences de cet accueil.
- la directive relative à des normes minimales concernant la procédure d'octroi et de retrait du statut de réfugié dans les Etats membres,

La loi a 74 articles répartis sur 4 chapitres. Outre les dispositions du chapitre 1er (Objet, définitions et compétence), on en trouve neuf dans le chapitre 2 (de la procédure relative à l'examen d'une demande de protection internationale), qui abordent la transposition.

Q.2. List by order of importance by using numbers (1, 2, 3) the others norms of transposition if there are more than one (indicate for each norm the title, date, number and references of publication into the official journal; include in your answer the administrative measures taken to ensure implementation of the directive and of the transposition norms like regulations, administrative circulars, special instructions,…)

1. Le règlement grand-ducal du 21 juillet 2006 déterminant les conditions dans lesquelles les demandeurs de protection internationale ont accès à la formation prévue à l'article 14 de la loi 5 mai 2006 relative au droit d'asile et à des formes complémentaires de protection (ci-après, le règlement formation) (annexe 2).

2. Le Règlement grand-ducal du 1er septembre 2006 fixant les conditions et les modalités d'octroi d'une aide sociale aux demandeurs de protection internationale. (annexe 3).

3. Des circulaires et/ou directives internes au Ministère des Affaires Etrangères et de l'Immigration, au Ministère de la Famille et de l'Intégration et au Ministère de l'Éducation nationale et de la Formation professionnelle. Depuis l'entrée en vigueur de la nouvelle législation, le rapporteur a connaissance de deux de ces circulaires. La première est celle du Ministère des Affaires Etrangères et de l'Immigration, élaborée le 14 juillet 2006 et concernant l'octroi d'une autorisation d'occupation temporaire (annexe 11). La deuxième est une note de la Commissaire du Gouvernement aux étrangers du 11 juillet 2006 (annexe 13) concernant l'aide sociale à apporter aux personnes détentrices d'une autorisation d'occupation temporaire et qui disposent d'un revenu.

Q.3. Explain which level of government is competent to adopt the legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers (specify in particular in case of a federal or regional State, if it is the federal/central power or the components; in case, specify below when it is impossible for you to answer a question because it is about the competence of the components and it is impossible for you to gather reliable information about all of them)

Les normes sont adoptées au niveau national et sont applicables sur tout le territoire. La Chambre des Députés a adopté la loi qui a été promulguée et sanctionnée par le Grand-Duc, avant d'être publiée le 9 mai 2006 au Mémorial, journal officiel du Grand-Duché de Luxembourg.

L'article 36 de la Constitution prévoit que Le Grand-Duc prend les règlements et arrêtés nécessaires pour l'exécution des lois (les deux prédits règlements).

L'article 9 du règlement aide sociale prévoit que le Ministre de la Famille et de l'Intégration est chargé de l'exécution de ce règlement, alors que l'article 11 du règlement formation dispose que le Ministre de l'Éducation nationale et de la Formation professionnelle est chargé de l'exécution de ce dernier. Ce sont ces deux ministères qui ont par ailleurs préparé les deux règlements.

Q.4. Explain the legal technical choices done to transpose the directive (comment on the nature and level of the norms used to do the transposition: legislative, regulatory, administrative like instructions, etc). Add any other element about the technique of transposition of the directive which is interesting for the implementation of Community law.

L'Etat luxembourgeois s'est doté de la loi du 5 mai 2006 pour transposer dans un premier temps les principes arrêtés par la directive. Pour ceux de ces principes qui nécessitaient une réglementation plus précise et technique d'exécution, le législateur a laissé le soin au Grand-Duc de prendre les règlements nécessaires à cette fin. Ainsi, l'article 6 (7) de la loi la loi du 5 mai 2006 dispose que l'attestation qui est en principe remise au demandeur au moment de la présentation de sa demande « (…) confère le droit à une aide sociale suivant des modalités à fixer par règlement grand-ducal » et l'article 14 (9) de la prédite loi prévoit que « les demandeurs ont accès à la formation selon les conditions à fixer par règlement grand-ducal qui sera pris sur avis du Conseil d'Etat. »

Toute autre question qui nécessiterait une réglementation plus précise d'exécution que celle se trouvant dans la loi ou même dans les règlements, sera en principe abordée par le biais de directives ou circulaires internes écrites ou orales au sein des Ministères chargés de l'exécution de la loi et des règlements. Le rapporteur n'a connaissance que d'une seule circulaire en ce sens (annexe 11) et rappelle que la loi et les règlements d'exécution sont très récents.

Q.5. Mention if there is a general tendency to just copy the provisions of the directive into national legislation without redrafting or adaptation them to national circumstances? If yes, give some of the worst examples and explain if there is a risk that those provisions remain unapplied or will create difficulties of implementation in the future.

Alors que la loi du 5 mai 2006 n'aborde pas exclusivement les normes minimales d'accueil mais s'inscrit dans une refonte générale du droit d'asile au Luxembourg, il était difficile de procéder dans ce texte par simple copie des dispositions de la directive. L*a loi du 5 mai 2006* se veut cohérente, même si certaines de ses dispositions ne concernant pas le sujet du présent rapport, sont le fruit d'un recopiage textuel des autres directives transposées.

Cependant, cette même remarque ne peut être faite en ce qui concerne le règlement aide social qui est quant à lui pour partie le fruit d'une presque parfaite copie des dispositions concernées de la directive. Cette méthode de transposition crée sans aucun doute des situations qui seront difficilement résolubles. Ainsi, par exemple, l'article 16. (1) a) de la directive étant transposé quasiment mot à mot à l'article 4. (4) c) du règlement, il y est fait état de l'hypothèse d'une autorisation à demander à l'autorité compétente pour pouvoir quitter le lieu de résidence. Le règlement reprend que le fait de quitter le lieu de résidence sans cette autorisation peut avoir pour conséquence la limitation ou le retrait de l'aide sociale mais ne définit à aucun endroit l'autorité compétente à qui cette autorisation devrait être demandée, ni même n'envisage les hypothèses dans lesquelles cette autorisation devrait être demandée.

Q.6. Have all the texts necessary to ensure the effective implementation of the new rules of transposition been adopted, prepared or at least foreseen in the future (for example a regulation completing a new law and the necessary instructions telling the administration how to apply the new rules)?

Il subsiste quelques lacunes dans les textes de transposition pour que cette dernière réponde parfaitement aux exigences de la directive mais nous verrons qu'en pratique, à part deux exceptions (l'absence de réglementation quant à la recherche des membres de la famille du mineur non accompagné de l'article 19 § 3 de la directive et l'absence de disposition quant à la formation appropriée des personnes travaillant dans les centres d'hébergement de l'article 14 § 5 de la directive), le recours à des normes juridiques luxembourgeoises préexistantes plus générales ainsi que la garantie de recours juridictionnels efficaces, devraient permettre d'atteindre les objectifs fixés par la directive.

D'ores et déjà, il convient de préciser dans ce contexte que si aucune disposition spécifique de transposition n'a été élaborée dans ces trois domaines précis, la pratique au Luxembourg répond aux exigences désormais formelles de la directive.

Il est à relever que l'absence d'une réglementation du contenu de la formation des personnes travaillant dans les centres d'hébergement prive dans certains cas les demandeurs de certains centres d'un encadrement et d'un suivi socio-éducatifs appropriés.

Il reste également des vides qui sont prévus d'être rapidement comblés. Particulièrement, le Luxembourg construit actuellement un centre de rétention pour étrangers en situation irrégulière et pour demandeurs d'asile faisant l'objet d'une mesure de placement en structure fermée et la réglementation à venir des conditions des rétention, devra également permettre de se conformer aux exigences de la directive, en particulier à celles tenant aux conditions minimales d'accueil des demandeurs placés en structure fermée.

2. BIBLIOGRAPHY

Q.7. Has an in-depth preparatory study been made public about the changes at the occasion of the transposition? If yes, thanks for trying to provide us a copy (please contact to answer this question adequately the body and person who was responsible for the preparation of the transposition of the directive in the public administration).

Il n'y a pas eu de réelle étude approfondie mais beaucoup d'institutions ont eu à se prononcer sur le projet de loi (qui est à l'origine de la loi du 5 mai 2006) ou se sont autosaisies de la question par le biais d'avis, parfois assez fouillés qui ont tous été publiés dans les documents parlementaires (documents parlementaires 5437).

Par ailleurs, trois présentations PowerPoint intitulées : La nouvelle loi d'asile en quelques mots ont été réalisées par le SESOPI –Centre Intercommunautaire (annexe 4). Elles ont été présentées lors d'un débat au festival de l'Immigration, dans un centre d'accueil pour demandeurs d'asile et dans une ONG travaillant avec les demandeurs d'asile.

Q.8. Quote any recent scientific book or article published about the directive, the transposition rules or the question of reception conditions for asylum seekers in general (answer even if this literature is only available in your language and provide the complete title in your language (without translation) with all references; indicate author, title, in case name of periodical, year and place of publication).

Il n'y a pas eu de publication scientifique proprement dite, sous forme d'ouvrage ou d'article.
Un guide pratique du citoyen a été publié fin 2005 par le CLAE Comité de Liaison et des Associations d'Etrangers services asbl. Ce guide traite dans trois chapitres (Demandeurs d'asile : quels statuts ?, La demande d'asile, Asile : droits et aides) de la problématique de l'asile[557]. Il tient compte des principaux changements de la nouvelle loi alors que celle-ci n'avait pas encore été adoptée. Il n'aborde cependant pas encore la transposition opérée par les règlements aide social et formation.

La préparation et l'adoption de la loi du 5 mai 2006 ont par ailleurs suscité beaucoup de réactions qui se sont matérialisées par le biais d'articles de presse, fruits de communiqués ou d'échos de conférences.

On peut citer en particulier :
Le communiqué de presse LFR (Collectifréfugiésluxembourg-lëtzebuergerflüchtlingsrot) intitulé dialogue et rétention du 5 avril 2005, publié dans les journaux Zeitung du 6 avril 2005 et Luxemburger Wort du 23 avril 2005 ;
Le communiqué de presse LFR intitulé Trouver des alternatives à la rétention, publié dans les journaux La voix du Luxembourg du 18 novembre 2005, page 3, et Luxemburger Wort du 15 octobre 2005, page 5 ;
Le communiqué de presse LFR intitulé Pour une procédure et un accueil respectueux de la dignité humaine, publié au Zeitung du 14 octobre 2005, page 3.

Les échos de la conférence de presse du LFR du 15 mars 2005 ; Avis du LFR sur le projet de loi relatif au droit d'asile in : Zeitung du 16 mars 2005, page 2, La Voix du Luxembourg, page 5, Luxemburger Wort page 3, Q page 5, J page 4.

Les échos de la conférence de presse organisée par la Commission consultative des droits de l'Homme par la presse lors du 1er et 2ème vote parlementaire :
- "Menschenrechte sind gefährdet" : par Raymond Klein dans "Woxx", le 22 04 2005.
- "Kleines Ja und grosses Aber für die Asylgesetzgebnung" par Dani Schumacher dans le "Luxemburger Wort" du 21 04 2005.

[557] CLAE services asbl : Bonjour Luxembourg. Guide Pratique du Citoyen. CLAE Services, Luxembourg, 2005

- "Umstrittene Asylpolitik" d' Alex Fohl dans le "Tageblatt" du 21 04 2005,
- "Liberté mal ordonnée" de Sophie Kieffer dans la "Voix du Lxembourg" du 21 04 2005.
- "Question de dignité et de justice" par Cédric Evard dans le "Jeudi" du 21 04 2005.
- "Innovatives Aslyrecht mit Schuss" dans le "Journal" du 21 04 2005.
- "Des demandeurs d'asile à protéger" par Jérôme Quiqueret dans le "Quotidien" du 21 04 2005.
- "Asylgesetz kontra Menschenrechte" dans "Zeitung vum Letzebuerger Vollek" du 21 04 2005.

On peut également citer deux autres articles davantage analytiques :
Josée Hansen : Réforme du droit d'asile. Difficile partage du travail, publié au Lëtzebuerger Land du 9 septembre 2005, page 5
Josée Hansen : Réforme du droit d'asile. C'est pas un métier, publié Lëtzebuerger Land du 4 novembre 2005, page 5

Q.9. Quote any interesting decision of jurisprudence based on the implementation of the new rules of transposition of the directive (indicate references of publication if any)?

Les normes de transpositions concernant les conditions d'accueil sont trop récentes pour qu'une jurisprudence ait à l'heure actuelle pu se dessiner.

3. GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

The purpose of the following two questions is to help the reader to understand easily and quickly the system of reception conditions in your Member State and also to avoid that you have to repeat general elements in other parts of the questionnaire. Please do not write more than one or maximum two pages and do not include large historical developments.

Q.10. Describe in general the system of reception conditions in your Member State (in particular which are the main actors in charge of reception conditions?)

La personne qui dépose au Luxembourg une demande en octroi d'un statut de protection internationale se verra attribuer dans les 3 jours de sa demande par les services du Ministère des Affaires Etrangères et de l'Immigration une pièce (article 6(5) de la loi du 5 mai 2006) attestant de sa demande et lui conférant le droit à une aide sociale suivant des modalités à fixer par règlement grand-ducal (article 6. (7) de la loi du 5 mai 2006), à condition qu'elle ne dispose pas des moyens suffisants à sa subsistance (article 2 du règlement aide sociale).
- Muni de cette attestation, le demandeur de protection internationale présentera sa demande d'aide sociale au Ministre ayant le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux étrangers dans ses attributions (Ministre de la Famille et de l'Intégration), la simple détention de cette attestation ouvrant droit à l'aide sociale (article 2, & 4 du r*èglement aide sociale*).

Si l'attestation ne peut être délivrée au demandeur immédiatement, dès la présentation de sa demande, les services de police judiciaire (premières autorités luxembourgeoises avec lesquelles le demandeur d'asile sera en contact et à qui il présentera en fait sa demande de protection internationale), délivrent au demandeur une convocation qui tient lieu provisoirement et pendant une durée limitée de trois jours maximum de pièce donnant droit à l'aide sociale (article 6 (5) de la loi du 5 mai 2006).

L'article 3 & 4 du règlement aide social dispose que « le droit à l'aide sociale prend effet à partir de la remise de l'attestation, respectivement de la convocation, visée aux articles 6, 22 et 62 de la loi (précitée) du 5 mai 2006) »

Ainsi, le demandeur de protection internationale pourra, dès l'accomplissement des modalités pratiques de l'enregistrement de sa demande, avoir droit à l'aide sociale telle que prévue par le règlement aide sociale.

Le demandeur de protection internationale devra par ailleurs être informé des avantages dont il peut bénéficier et des obligations qu'il doit respecter eu égard aux conditions d'accueil et se verra remettre une liste des organisations susceptibles de l'aider pendant son séjour au Luxembourg au moment où il présentera sa demande d'aide sociale au Ministre de la Famille (article 3, § 2 et 4 du règlement aide sociale. D'un point de vue pratique, le Ministre des Affaires Etrangères et de l'Immigration et le Ministre de la Famille remettent au demandeur une information écrite conjointe sur ses droits et obligations relatifs à la procédure d'asile, d'une part et, d'autre part, sur ceux relatifs à l'aide sociale.

Le droit à la formation naîtra variablement en fonction des prévision du r*èglement formation* soit immédiatement dès l'instant où le demandeur est en possession de l'attestation de l'article 6 de la loi du 5 mai 2006 (article 2 du règlement formation), soit à partir du neuvième mois qui suit ce dépôt, selon des exceptions tenant à l'âge (majeur/mineur) du demandeur et à la nature de la formation (le règlement formation (article 1er) prévoit quatre types de formations). La Ministre de l'Education nationale et de la formation professionnelle est chargée de l'exécution du règlement formation.

Le droit au travail (pour les adultes) ne naît qu'à compter du neuvième mois qui suit le dépôt de la demande de protection internationale (article 14 (1) de la loi du 5 mai 2006).

Q.11. Q11. A. Explain if you have different types and levels of reception conditions following the different stages of the asylum procedure (this implies that you have to give briefly the necessary explanations about the asylum procedure). Make if relevant for reception conditions a distinction between the following procedural stages: determination of the responsible Member State on the basis of the Dublin II regulation, special procedures at the border (including transit zones in airports), accelerated procedures, admissibility procedures, eligibility procedures and the different possibilities of appeals (suspensive or not) against a refusal of the asylum request. Indicate what the main differences of reception conditions are between the different stages (if necessary by detailing between the different elements of reception conditions, in particular housing) and explain what the evolution of reception conditions is following the different stages of the procedure.

L'article 6 (5), 2ème § de la loi du 5 mai 2006 prévoit que l'attestation donnant droit à l'aide sociale ne sera pas délivrée au demandeur faisant l'objet d'une mesure de rétention administrative, ni à celui qui aura déposé une nouvelle demande de protection internationale (cf. Q.11B et Q.16) Mises à part ces deux exceptions, aucun texte ne prévoit de différence quant à la nature, la qualité ou la quantité des prestations de conditions d'accueil en fonction du stade de la procédure d'examen de la demande d'asile.

Q 11. B. Indicate precisely for which stage(s) of the asylum procedure the answers on reception conditions you give below are valid.

Dès qu'un demandeur de protection internationale est en possession de l'attestation prévue à l'article 6 de la loi du 5 mai 2006, il devra pouvoir bénéficier des conditions d'accueil.

Aux termes de l'article 3, 5ème § du règlement aide sociale, « le droit à l'aide sociale prend fin :
- en cas de restitution de l'attestation au ministre ayant l'asile dans ses attributions,
- en cas d'expiration de la validité de l'attestation,
- dès l'obtention d'une autorisation de séjour,
- dès l'obtention d'un permis de travail »
- dès l'obtention du statut de réfugié ou du statut conféré par la protection subsidiaire.

Pratiquement, la restitution de l'attestation au ministre des Affaires Etrangères et de l'Immigration (1ère hypothèse), sera exigée par l'autorité du Ministère chargée de la prolonger lorsqu'une décision définitive rejetant la demande de protection internationale sera intervenue.

Ni la loi ni le règlement ne prévoient de distinction quant à la nature même de l'aide sociale qui diffèrerait en fonction des différentes procédures ou stades de procédure selon lesquelles la demande de protection est analysée.

Dans le cadre d'une procédure d'examen d'une demande de protection internationale qui suit le cours « normal » prévu par la loi du 5 mai 2006, après avoir entendu le demandeur et lorsqu'il s'estimera en possession de tous les éléments exigés par cette même loi, le Ministre des Affaires Etrangères et de l'Immigration statuera sur le bien-fondé de cette demande. En cas de décision négative, et dans le délai d'un mois qui suivra la notification de cette décision, le demandeur pourra soit saisir à nouveau le Ministre d'un recours gracieux, soit[558] saisir le Tribunal administratif d'un recours au fond (de pleine juridiction où le Tribunal substituera sa décision à celle du Ministre).
Le délai d'un mois pendant lequel le demandeur de protection international pourra déposer son recours devant le Tribunal administratif étant suspensif, tout comme le recours en tant que tel introduit dans le délai (article 19 (3) de la loi du 5 mai 2006), le demandeur devra toujours pouvoir être en possession de l'attestation lui donnant droit aux conditions d'accueil pendant ces délais.
En cas de décision négative du Tribunal, le demandeur pourra encore saisir comme dernière voie de recours la Cour administrative qui statuera comme juge de l'annulation (article 19 (4) de la loi du 5 mai 2006) dans le délai d'un mois qui suivra la notification du jugement. Le prédit article prévoyant que le délai d'appel et l'appel introduit dans le délai on un effet suspensif, le demandeur devra toujours être en possession de l'attestation lui donnant droit aux conditions d'accueil pendant ces délais.

[558] L'article 19.(2) de la loi du 5 mai 2006 prévoit expressément que les recours gracieux n'interrompent pas les délais de recours.

Les deux seules exceptions prévues par la loi du 5 mai 2006 au principe du droit à la délivrance immédiate de l'attestation donnant droit aux conditions d'accueil sont, aux termes de son article 6. (5) § 2, lorsque le demandeur fait l'objet d'une mesure de placement (rétention) ou lorsqu'il dépose une nouvelle demande de protection internationale « tant que cette nouvelle demande n'a pas été déclarée recevable ». Il est à noter qu'il est cependant très improbable qu'une telle décision de recevabilité soit prise à un moment ou un autre par le Ministre compétent, alors qu'aucune obligation n'existe en ce sens dans la loi (cf. la réponse sous la question 16).

L'article 15 de la loi du 5 mai 2006 dispose que « (1) Si, en vertu d'engagements internationaux auxquels le Luxembourg est partie, un autre pays est responsable de l'examen de la demande, le ministre surseoit à statuer sur la demande jusqu'à la décision du pays responsable sur la prise respectivement reprise en charge.
(2) Lorsque le pays responsable accepte la prise en charge, le ministre se déclare incompétent pour l'examen de la demande de protection internationale par une décision motivée qui est communiquée par écrit au demandeur. Les informations relatives au droit de recours sont expressément mentionnées dans la décision. Le demandeur est transféré vers le pays responsable de l'examen de sa demande. »

Pendant la phase de détermination de l'Etat compétent dans le cadre de l'application de DUBLIN II, le demandeur a accès aux conditions d'accueil. Nous relèverons particulièrement qu'entre le moment où le Luxembourg constatera qu'un autre Etat est compétent et celui où cet Etat acceptera la prise/reprise en charge du demandeur, le Ministre surseoira à statuer, laissant ainsi la possibilité au demandeur de rester en possession de son attestation et de profiter des conditions d'accueil pendant ce temps. Il est cependant nécessaire de relever que si cette disposition se veut généreuse, le Luxembourg n'a pas étendu cette générosité jusqu'au jour de l'éloignement effectif du demandeur vers l'Etat membre compétent.
La loi n'octroie par ailleurs aucun effet suspensif à l'exercice des voies de recours contre une décision d'incompétence.

Si la demande de protection internationale est examinée selon la procédure accélérée organisée par l'article 20 de la loi du 5 mai 2006, le demandeur devra pouvoir être en possession de l'attestation dès la présentation de la demande et ainsi avoir accès à l'aide sociale pendant toute la procédure, alors que la loi ne prévoit aucune exception dans ce contexte. Cependant, si le demandeur fait, dans le cadre de cette procédure, l'objet d'une mesure de rétention (Il existe 13 cas d'ouverture de cette procédure accélérée et le demandeur pourra faire l'objet d'une mesure de placement dans 7 de ces cas), il n'aura pas droit à l'attestation, conformément aux termes de l'article 6 (5) §2.
Contre une décision prise dans le cadre de la procédure accélérée, le demandeur pourra toujours présenter un recours gracieux au Ministre comme dans le cadre de la « procédure normale » et il est à noter que si les délais de recours ainsi que le recours devant le Tribunal administratif introduit dans le délai, sont suspensifs (article 20 (4) de la loi du 5 mai 2006) et permettent donc la prolongation de l'attestation, la loi exclut formellement tout appel contre la décision du Tribunal administratif prise sur recours contre la décision du Ministre (article 20 (4) in fine de la loi du 5 mai 2006).Dans le cadre de la procédure accélérée, le droit à l'aide social se terminera pour le demandeur avec la décision du Tribunal.

4. GENERAL RULES ON RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.12. Q 12. A. Are material reception conditions provided in kind, in money or in vouchers or in a combination of these elements (see article 13, §5 which is an optional provision)? Distinguish between the different elements (housing, food, clothes, health, transportation, pocket money,…). If reception conditions are provided in money (in general or in some cases, for instance when no places are anymore available in accommodation centres), indicate the precise amount given to the asylum seekers. Indicate in your answer what is provided in general and if there are exceptional cases. Specify in your answer if reception conditions are different from the general system of social aid for nationals or aliens and if yes, if and when (which stage of the asylum procedure) can asylum seekers have access to the general system of social aid?

L'article 1er du règlement aide sociale dispose que l'aide sociale comporte les prestations suivantes :

- l'hébergement, assorti d'une pension complète ou bien d'une fourniture de repas respectivement de denrées alimentaires,
- l'allocation mensuelle,
- les soins médicaux d'urgence,
- la prise en charge des cotisations à titre de l'assurance volontaire prévue par l'article 2 du code des assurances sociales pour la durée de maintien de l'aide sociale,
- les moyens de transport publics du réseau du Grand- Duché de Luxembourg,
- la guidance sociale,
- l'encadrement des mineurs non- accompagnés,
- les soins et suivis psychologiques gratuits pour les personnes en ayant besoin, notamment les victimes de traumatismes ;
- les conseils en matière sexuelle et reproductive.
- des aides ponctuelles en cas de besoin

L'allocation mensuelle est déterminée en fonction de la composition de ménage, de l'âge de ses membres et du type d'hébergement (article 5 du règlement aide sociale).

- En cas d'hébergement en pension complète avec fourniture de repas ou de denrées alimentaires, le bénéficiaire touche une allocation mensuelle en espèces de :

107,9.- € par personne adulte
26,9.- € par enfant âgé de 2 à11 ans
48,45.-€ par adolescent âgé de 12 à 18 ans
133,5.-€ par enfant âgé moins de 2 ans
86,3.- € par mineur non accompagné âgé de 16 à 18 ans

- Lorsque la fourniture de repas n'est pas possible, le bénéficiaire de l'aide sociale touche une allocation mensuelle de :

294.- € par personne adulte
534,15.- € par ménage de deux personnes

214,3.-€ par adulte supplémentaire
174,45.-€ par adolescent âgé de 12 à 18 ans
133,5.-€ par enfant âgé de moins de 12 ans
294.- € par mineur non accompagné âgé de 16 à 18 ans
L'allocation mensuelle peut être remplacée en partie par des bons d'achats.
Le bénéficiaire de l'aide mensuelle a également droit à un titre de transport gratuit par année et aux aides ponctuelles en cas de besoin.

Il est à noter que le règlement prévoit encore que les montants ci-dessus correspondent au nombre 652,16 de l'indice pondéré du coût de la vie au 1er octobre 2005 et sont adaptés suivant les modalités applicables aux traitements et pensions des fonctionnaires de l'Etat.

On relèvera qu'en pratique, le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers n'attribue en principe pas de logement sans fourniture de repas et que les demandeurs sont systématiquement logés et nourris. Les exceptions concernent essentiellement les personnes connaissant des problèmes de santé et qui ont de ce fait besoin d'une alimentation bien spécifique. Dans cette hypothèse, ils sont en général placés dans des structures collectives possédant une cuisine dans laquelle ils prépareront leurs repas avec la nourriture qu'ils auront achetée avec l'allocation mensuelle.

L'hébergement est en toute hypothèse systématiquement fourni et il n'existe, à la connaissance du rapporteur, pas de situation où un demandeur recevrait une aide sociale globale exclusivement en argent, censée couvrir et les besoins de logement et ceux de nourriture.(Il est à noter que le règlement aide social ne prévoit d'ailleurs pas une telle situation qui se révèlerait illégale)

Selon les informations du 25 mai 2007 de Madame la Commissaire du Gouvernement aux étrangers, l'hébergement est attribué en fonction de la composition du ménage et des disponibilités du moment en tenant compte dans la mesure du possible des besoins spécifiques comme par exemple ceux de personnes à mobilité réduite.

Aucune disposition formelle ne prévoit cependant le droit à l'habillement, et donc l'accès à l'une des composantes des conditions d'accueil au sens de la définition de l'article 2 j). de la directive.
Depuis peu, il a pu être constaté que malgré l'absence de réglementation en ce sens, l'habillement est cependant fourni en pratique aux demandeurs de la manière suivante :
- dans une première phase, à leur arrivée, ils reçoivent du Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers, en plus de l'allocation mensuelle, un montant forfaitaire par famille ou individu de 100.-€ en liquide qui est censé couvrir leurs besoins en vêtements pendant six mois.
Ensuite, tous les six mois, à la demande expresse du demandeur, il pourra encore recevoir la somme de 50.- € s'il est adulte et celle de 100.-€ pour chaque enfant, à la discrétion du Ministre (!)
Les ONGs interviennent également et organisent la collecte et la distribution de vêtements.

Au titre des aides ponctuelles prévues au dixième tiret de l'article 1er du règlement aide sociale, Madame la Commissaire du Gouvernement aux étrangers explique le 25 mai 2007 que ces aides sont en espèces ou en nature et accordées sur proposition d'une assistante sociale, d'une éducatrice graduée ou de l'infirmière diplômée qui font partie du personnel du commissariat du Gouvernement aux étrangers, en cas, par exemple, de grossesse, naissance, rentrée scolaire, décès, invalidité, maladie grave ou chronique.

A titre de comparaison, les résidents luxembourgeois, les ressortissants européens, ainsi que tout autre étranger personne autorisée à résider au Luxembourg depuis plus de 5 ans ont droit, en cas de ressources mensuelles inférieures à 1.070,92.-€, à un revenu minimum qui est ainsi fixé:

- 1.070,92.-€ pour une personne seule,
- 1.606,41.-€ pour une communauté domestique composée de deux adultes,
- 306,39.-€ pour chaque adulte supplémentaire vivant dans la communauté domestique
- 97,44.-€ pour chaque enfant ayant droit à des allocations familiales qui vit dans la communauté domestique.

Comme pour l'allocation mensuelle, ces montants sont indexés et correspondent au nombre 652,16 de l'indice pondéré du coût de la vie actuel et sont adaptés suivant les modalités applicables aux traitements et pensions des fonctionnaires de l'Etat.

Par ailleurs, il existe au Luxembourg des foyers d'accueil pour personnes sans abris mais aucune législation afférente n'existe dans ce domaine. Ces foyers sont conventionnés avec le Ministère de la Famille et de l'Intégration qui fixe les modalités et les conditions d'accueil. Ainsi, d'un point de vue pratique, ces foyers accueillent à titre provisoire les Luxembourgeois majeurs dans le besoin mais il arrive qu'en fonction de la situation, certaines personnes se trouvant dans des situations critiques y restent à plus ou moins long terme. Elles y reçoivent notamment un soutien et une aide pour la stabilisation de leur état de santé et pour l'accès au travail. Tout étranger en possession d'une autorisation de séjour et dans le besoin sera en général accepté d'urgence dans un de ces foyers pour une nuit en semaine et 3 jours pendant le week-end.

Il est à noter qu'actuellement, beaucoup de demandeurs de protection internationale déboutés et sans aucun titre de séjour au Luxembourg, continuent à résider dans les foyers d'accueil pour demandeurs de protection internationale et continuent à bénéficier des conditions d'accueil.

Q 12. B. Can the reception conditions in kind, money or vouchers be considered as sufficient "to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence" as requested by article 13, §2 of the directive (which is a mandatory provision but leaves a certain space to Member States)? In order to help to assess the respect of this rule when reception conditions are provided in money, include if necessary in your answer points of comparison with the minimum amount of social aid guaranteed for nationals in your Member State.

Les conditions d'accueil pour les demandeurs de protection internationale peuvent être qualifiées d'acceptables, alors qu'elles leur permettent de survivre le temps de la procédure. On regrettera cependant le délai de 9 mois pendant lequel les demandeurs n'ont pas accès au marché du travail ainsi que la grande différence existant entre le montant de l'allocation mensuelle et celui du revenu minimum garanti pour Luxembourgeois ou résidants autorisés pour lesquels l'Etat a su faire preuve de générosité. Le système de l'affiliation à la sécurité sociale (identique à celui des résidents) garantit aux demandeurs une prise en charge de leurs soins de santé. Seulement, et alors que comme les résidents, les demandeurs doivent avancer le paiement de certaines prestations de médecins, en cas de grand problème médical, l'avance pour le paiement des factures peut poser des difficultés. Par l'intermédiaire des assistants sociaux du Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers, le Ministre de la Famille a cependant la possibilité d'intervenir par le moyen d'une aide ponctuelle dont la décision d'octroi ou de refus, échappe cependant à tout contrôle. En pratique, aucune dérive n'a pour l'heure été constatée, alors que le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers reste très attentif aux demandeurs connaissant de graves problèmes de santé.

5. PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

Q.13. Q 13. A. Does the national legislation specifically provide that a request for international protection is presumed to be under the Geneva Convention unless explicitly requested otherwise? (see article 2, b which is a mandatory provision)

L'article 2 (g) de la loi définit la « «demande de protection internationale», (comme étant) la demande de protection présentée par un ressortissant d'un pays tiers ou un apatride, qui peut être comprise comme visant à obtenir le statut de réfugié ou le statut conféré par la protection subsidiaire, le demandeur ne sollicitant pas explicitement un autre type de protection hors du champ d'application de la présente loi et pouvant faire l'objet d'une demande séparée », l'article 2 (c) de la Loi définit le « «réfugié», (comme étant) tout ressortissant d'un pays tiers qui, parce qu'il craint avec raison d'être persécuté du fait de sa race, de sa religion, de sa nationalité, de ses opinions politiques ou de son appartenance à un certain groupe social, se trouve hors du pays dont il a la nationalité et qui ne peut ou, du fait de cette crainte, ne veut se réclamer de la protection de ce pays ou tout apatride qui, se trouvant pour les raisons susmentionnées hors du pays dans lequel il avait sa résidence habituelle, ne peut ou, du fait de cette crainte, ne veut y retourner et qui n'entre pas dans le champ d'application de l'article 34 » et
l'article 2 (e) de la Loi définit la « «personne pouvant bénéficier de la protection subsidiaire», (comme étant) tout ressortissant d'un pays tiers ou tout apatride qui ne peut être considéré comme un réfugié, mais pour lequel il y a des motifs sérieux et avérés de croire que la personne concernée, si elle était renvoyée dans son pays d'origine ou, dans le cas d'un apatride, dans le pays dans lequel il avait sa résidence habituelle, courrait un risque réel de subir les atteintes graves définies à l'article 37, l'article 39, paragraphes (1) et (2), n'étant pas applicable à cette personne, et cette personne ne pouvant pas ou, compte tenu de ce risque, n'étant pas disposée à se prévaloir de la protection de ce pays » et

La combinaison de ces trois dispositions légales nous permet d'affirmer qu'un ressortissant de pays tiers qui présentera une demande de protection internationale au Luxembourg, verra sa demande analysée dans un premier temps au regard des critères de qualification du statut de réfugié et, au cas ou il ne répond pas à ces critères, selon ceux du statut dela protection subsidiaire.

Q. 13. B. Explain if the scope of application of reception conditions is extended to other asylum seekers than refugees in the sense of the Geneva Convention, in particular to persons asking for subsidiary protection or to other forms of protection like humanitarian statuses (see article 3, § 4 which is an optional provision)? If not, explain briefly which the differences between these special regimes and the directive are.

Nous avons vu que le la loi luxembourgeoise définit la demande de protection internationale comme étant celle qui peut être comprise comme visant à obtenir le statut de réfugié ou le statut conféré par la protection subsidiaire (article 2 g)). Les conditions d'accueil sont par la suite systématiquement abordées dans le cadre d'une demande de protection internationale sans autre précision ni restriction, de telle sorte que le champ d'application des conditions d'accueil au Luxembourg s'étend aux personnes sollicitant le statut de la protection subsidiaire.

Il n'existe au Luxembourg pas de statut humanitaire légal ni, par la force des choses, de procédure légale le concernant.

Les demandeurs de protection internationale déboutés pour lesquels l'exécution de l'éloignement vers leurs pays d'origine est impossible en raison de circonstances de fait, peuvent, à la discrétion du ministre des Affaires étrangères et de l'Immigration, obtenir un statut de tolérance (article 22 (2) à (11) de la loi du 5 mai 2006). Ce statut est temporaire et renouvelable tant que les circonstances de fait sont données. Ce statut leur donne droit aux mêmes prestations que les demandeurs de protection internationale reçoivent dans le cadre des conditions d'accueil.

En pratique, Madame la Commissaire du Gouvernement aux étrangers précise encore que les bénéficiaires de protection internationale en attente de devenir indépendants, reçoivent encore certaines prestations, tout comme les déboutés en attente d'un retour volontaire, et les déboutés en possession d'une « autorisation de séjour provisoire » en attente de trouver un logement et un emploi.

La loi du 5 mai 2006 prévoit encore que le champ d'application des conditions d'accueil, couvre les personnes dont le statut de protection temporaire a été reconnu.

Q. 13. C. Are there specific provisions in national law for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation (see article 3, §2 which is an optional provision)?

A la connaissance du rapporteur, il n'existe pas de telles règles.

Q.14. Are reception conditions available as from the moment one asylum application is introduced? How is article 13, §1 which is mandatory legally understood? Do asylum seekers have to satisfy any other condition in order to get reception conditions?

Les conditions d'accueil sont théoriquement applicables dès le dépôt de la demande de protection internationale à partir de l'instant où le demandeur est en possession de l'attestation ou de la convocation (cf. les réponses aux questions 10 et 11).

Q.15. Explain when reception conditions end, for instance after refusal of the asylum request (include in your answer the link with the right of appeal against a decision of refusal of the status, in particular the question of its suspensive effect)

Aux termes de l'article 3, 5ème § du règlement aide sociale, « le droit à l'aide sociale prend fin :

- en cas de restitution de l'attestation au ministre ayant l'asile dans ses attributions,
- en cas d'expiration de la validité de l'attestation,
- dès l'obtention d'une autorisation de séjour,
- dès l'obtention d'un permis de travail »
- dès l'obtention du statut de réfugié ou du statut conféré par la protection subsidiaire.

(cf. réponses à la question 11)

Au Luxembourg, un demandeur définitivement débouté pourra en pratique encore bénéficier, à la discrétion du Ministre compétent, de la totalité ou d'une partie seulement des conditions d'accueil jusqu'à son éloignement du territoire. Cette pratique s'est instaurée parallèlement à la notion légale de statut de tolérance consacrée par l'article 22 de la loi du 5 mai 2006[559].

[559] Art. 22. (1) Si le statut de réfugié est refusé au titre des articles 19 et 20 qui précèdent, le demandeur sera éloigné du territoire.
(2) Si l'exécution matérielle de l'éloignement s'avère impossible en raison de circonstances de fait, le ministre peut décider de tolérer l'intéressé provisoirement sur le territoire jusqu'au moment où ces circonstances de fait auront cessé.
(3) Une attestation de tolérance est remise à l'intéressé. Elle précise sa durée de validité qui ne sera prorogée que si la pièce a été visée par l'administration communale du lieu de séjour de l'intéressé, visa qui comprendra l'indication de l'adresse de l'intéressé. L'administration communale du lieu de séjour de l'intéressé a l'obligation de viser l'attestation. L'attestation ne donne pas droit à la délivrance d'un certificat de résidence. Par dérogation, l'attestation tient lieu de certificat de résidence pour les formalités requises en vue de la célébration du mariage suivant les dispositions du code civil.
(4) L'attestation confère le droit à une aide sociale suivant les modalités à fixer par le règlement grand-ducal prévu à l'article 6 (7) qui précède.
(5) Le ministre délivre, sous réserve des paragraphes qui suivent, une autorisation d'occupation temporaire pour la période de validité de l'attestation. L'autorisation d'occupation temporaire est valable pour un employeur déterminé et pour une seule profession.
(6) L'octroi et le renouvellement de l'autorisation d'occupation temporaire peuvent être refusés pour des raisons inhérentes à la situation, à l'évolution ou à l'organisation du marché de l'emploi, compte tenu de la priorité à l'embauche dont bénéficient les citoyens de l'Union européenne, les citoyens des Etats liés par l'accord sur l'Espace économique européen, les ressortissants de pays tiers en vertu d'accords spécifiques ainsi que les ressortissants de pays tiers en séjour régulier qui bénéficient d'allocations de chômage.
(7) A l'appui de la demande en obtention d'une autorisation d'occupation temporaire, le bénéficiaire de la tolérance doit présenter à l'Administration de l'emploi une copie certifiée conforme de l'attestation visée au paragraphe (3) qui précède.
(8) Le bénéfice de l'autorisation d'occupation temporaire ne donne pas droit à un permis de séjour.
(9) L'autorisation d'occupation temporaire perd sa validité soit à l'échéance de son terme, soit au moment de la résiliation de la relation de travail par une des parties au contrat de travail, soit au moment où l'exécution matérielle de l'éloignement devient possible.

Q.16 Are there special rules or practices regarding reception conditions in case of successive applications for asylum introduced by the same person?

La loi du 5 mai 2006 prévoit expressément que lorsqu'un demandeur dépose une nouvelle demande de protection internationale après qu'une première demande ait été définitivement rejetée, l'attestation ne lui sera plus délivrée « tant que cette nouvelle demande n'a pas été déclarée recevable » (article 6. (5) § 2).

Il est à noter qu'il est très illusoire de penser qu'avec la pratique, et selon les prévisions de la loi du 5 mai 2006, une telle décision déclarant une nouvelle demande recevable puisse être à un moment prise, indistinctement d'une décision au fond qui elle interviendrait après le temps d'un nouvel examen de la demande. En effet, l'article 23 de la loi du 5 mai 2006 qui traite de la question d'une nouvelle demande de protection internationale, ne prévoit nullement la possibilité pour le Ministre des Affaires Etrangères et de l'Immigration, de prendre une telle décision de recevabilité ni d'obligation dans son chef de la prendre dans un certain délai, éventuellement avant une décision au fond, alors que cet article n'aborde que les seules conditions dans lesquelles le Ministre pourra déclarer la nouvelle demande irrecevable ou fondée. Ainsi, le demandeur de protection internationale qui aura présenté une nouvelle demande risque fort de se voir dépourvu de toute condition d'accueil, à défaut d'être en possession de l'attestation nécessaire à cet effet, à moins que le Ministre ne consente très vite à statuer sur l'éventuel caractère recevable de sa nouvelle demande.[560]

En plus, l'article 4. (4) c, dernier tiret du règlement aide sociale dispose que « le Ministre (de la Famille et de l'Intégration) peut limiter ou retirer le bénéfice de l'aide sociale dans les cas suivants :
(...) – lorsqu'un demandeur d'asile (...) a déjà introduit une demande dans le même Etat membre. »

A noter qu'il ne s'agit dans cette dernière hypothèse que d'une possibilité qui est laissée à la seule appréciation du Ministre, qui, si cette hypothèse est réalisée, a le choix entre soit ne rien faire, soit limiter, soit retirer le bénéfice de l'aide social.

---

(10) L'autorisation d'occupation temporaire est retirée lorsque son bénéficiaire travaille dans une autre profession que celle autorisée. Elle est retirée lorsque son bénéficiaire a eu recours, dans une intention frauduleuse, à des pratiques malhonnêtes ou à des déclarations inexactes pour l'obtenir.
(11) Le contrat de travail prend automatiquement fin lorsque l'autorisation d'occupation temporaire perd sa validité ou est retirée.

[560] Article 23 (1) de la loi du 5 mai 2006 : « Le ministre considérera comme irrecevable la nouvelle demande d'une personne à laquelle la protection internationale a été définitivement refusée ou d'une personne qui a explicitement ou implicitement retiré sa demande de protection internationale, à moins que des éléments ou des faits nouveaux apparaissent ou sont présentés par le demandeur et qu'ils augmentent de manière significative la probabilité que le demandeur remplisse les conditions requises pour prétendre au statut de réfugié ou au statut conféré par la protection subsidiaire, à condition que le demandeur concerné a été, sans faute de sa part, dans l'incapacité de les faire valoir au cours de la précédente procédure, y compris durant la phase contentieuse.

A noter cependant également que théoriquement, dans l'hypothèse où une nouvelle demande est présentée, même si le Ministre des Affaires Etrangères et de l'Immigration prenait une décision de recevabilité, le Ministre de la Famille et de l'Intégration pourrait malgré tout décider de suspendre ou limiter l'aide sociale.

Q.17. Information of asylum seekers about their rights and obligations in terms of reception conditions, in particular about established benefits (see article 5 which is too large extend a mandatory provision; do not confuse this question with the information to be provided to asylum seekers about the asylum procedure):

Q. 17. A. Are asylum seekers informed, and if yes about what precisely?

Le Ministère des Affaires Etrangères et de l'Immigration et le Ministère de la Famille et de l'intégration distribuent un écrit commun qui informe de manière détaillée le demandeur de protection internationale, d'une part, du contenu de la procédure de protection internationale, de ses droits et obligations pendant cette procédure et des conséquences possibles en cas de non-respect de ses obligations et de non-coopération avec le ministre (article 6 (3) de la loi du 5 mai 2006) et, d'autre part, des avantages dont il peut bénéficier et des obligations qu'il doit respecter eu égard aux conditions d'accueil, y compris l'accès à l'enseignement et à la formation, l'accès au soins médicaux et l'accès au marché de l'emploi (article 3, § 2 du règlement aide social).

Cette brochure d'information est disponible en douze langues (français, anglais, allemand, espagnol, portugais, serbe, albanais, russe, chinois, turc, arabe et farsi) et est distribuée à chaque nouveau demandeur. Les chapitres de cette brochure sont :

- Dépôt de la demande de protection internationale (la définition du statut, l'enregistrement de la demande, l'aide sociale, les mineurs non accompagnés, l'autorisation d'occupation temporaire)
- Instruction de la demande (l'audition, la prise de décision)
- Contenu de la protection internationale
- Perte de la protection internationale
- Retour dans le pays d'origine

Q. 17. B. Is the information provided in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

Cf. Q.17 A.

Madame la Commissaire du Gouvernement aux étrangers explique encore que chaque demandeur de protection internationale se voit attribuer un assistant social pour la durée de la procédure, chargé d'informer le demandeur sur ses droits et obligations pendant la procédure « lors de son arrivée ».

Avant l'entrée en vigueur de la loi, les demandeurs étaient informés par écrit de leur droit d'être assistés gratuitement par un avocat et par un interprète[561]. Cette information était donnée le jour de l'enregistrement de la demande. Ensuite les assistants sociaux du Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers leur expliquaient oralement le contenu de l'aide sociale.

Pour pallier aux insuffisances de cette information orale, L*'Association de Soutien aux Travailleurs Immigrés* (ASTI) avait édité et distribué, il y a quelques années, un guide d'information qui contenait des chapitres sur le Luxembourg en général, et des explications spécifiques sur la procédure d'asile et l'aide sociale à laquelle avaient droit les demandeurs pendant la procédure. Ce guide a été rédigé en français, anglais, allemand, albanais, russe et yougoslave.

Il est encore intéressant de signaler qu'un guide spécial sur l'accès aux soins de santé (en français et en anglais) a été élaboré par Médecins sans frontières en collaboration avec la Croix Rouge, la Caritas Luxembourg et l'ASTI (annexes 5 et 6). Il était prévu qu'il soit distribué par les assistants sociaux du Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers automatiquement à chaque nouveau demandeur d'asile. Malheureusement ceci n'a jamais été mis en pratique et ce sont les ONGs qui le distribuent dans le cadre de leurs activités.

Q.17. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify the list of languages in which it is available

Le règlement aide social ne prévoit pas spécifiquement la langue dans laquelle les informations seront données, en pratique, elles sont données par écrit en douze langues (français, anglais, allemand, espagnol, portugais, serbe, albanais, russe, chinois, turc, arabe et farsi)).

Q. 17. D. Is the deadline of maximum 15 days respected?

Selon le système qui vient d'être décrit, le délai de 15 jours sera respecté, alors que l'information sera donnée au demandeur au moment de la présentation de sa demande.

Q.18. Information of asylum seekers about the existence of organisations or groups promoting their interest and defending their rights (see article 5 which is to a large extend a mandatory provision):

[561] Article 5 de la loi abrogée du 3 avril 1996 portant création d'une procédure relative à l'examen d'une demande d'asile disposait que « Le demandeur d'asile est informé de son droit de se faire assister à titre gratuit d'un interprète et de son droit de choisir un avocat inscrit au tableau de l'un des barreaux établi au Grand-Duché de Luxembourg ou de se faire désigner un avocat par le bâtonnier de l'ordre des avocats. Le fait que ladite information a été donnée au demandeur d'asile devra ressortir du dossier. »

Q. 18. A. Is there a list of organisations dressed by the authorities and if yes is it comprehensive? Is this in particular the case about the possibilities to get legal assistance and health care?

L'article 3, § 3 du règlement aide social prévoit que « une liste des organisations susceptibles de l'aider (le demandeur de protection internationale) pendant son séjour au Luxembourg lui sera remise. »

La brochure d'information évoquée sous la question 17 A contient à sa dernière page la liste des ONGs actives dans le domaine des réfugiés.

Les informations relatives à l'assistance juridique apparaissent dans la brochure évoquées sous la question 17 A, l'article 7 (1) de la loi du 5 mai 2006 disposant que « le demandeur est informé de son droit de se faire assister à titre gratuit d'un interprète qui maîtrise une langue dont il est raisonnable de supposer qu'il la comprend et de son droit de choisir un avocat inscrit au tableau de l'un des barreaux établis au Grand-Duché de Luxembourg ou de se faire désigner un avocat par le bâtonnier de l'ordre des avocats. » et l'article 7(2) précisant que « le fait que ladite information a été donnée au demandeur doit ressortir du dossier. »

Les informations relatives aux soins de santé apparaissent également dans la brochure, comme l'article 3, § 2 du règlement aide social le prévoit (cf. question 17. A).

Q. 18. B. Is the information provided to the asylum seekers, and if yes, in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

Cf. supra

Q. 18. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify if possible the list of languages in which it is available.

cf. Q. 17 B

Q. 18. D. How many organisations are active in that field in your Member State?

Le Collectifréfugiésluxembourg-lëtzebuergerflüchtlingsrot (LFR) est une plate forme qui réunit 14 ONG oeuvrant dans le domaine des réfugiés.

Les ONG les plus actives qui travaillent directement avec le public cible sont : L*'Association de Soutien aux Travailleurs Immigrés* (ASTI), la Caritas Luxembourg, le Comité de Liaison et des Associations d'Etrangers services asbl (CLAE), la Croix Rouge, Amnesty International et l'ACAT (Action des Chrétiens pour l'abolition de la torture) qui fournissent beaucoup de documents sur les pays de provenance des demandeurs et sur des sujets spécifiques à l'asile au Luxembourg.

La brochure évoquée sous les questions précédentes donnent le coordonnées de neuf ONGs (ACAT, ALLIANZ PROTESTANISCHER KIRCHEN LUXEMBURG, ASTM, CENTRE CULTUREL ISLAMIQUE DU G.D. DE UXEMBOURG, PAX CHRISTI, A.I, ASTI, CARITAS, CLAE ET CROIX ROUGE.)

Q.19. Documentation of asylum seekers (see article 6):

Q.19. A. What kind of document is delivered to the asylum seeker? Explain the legal value of this document (just a certification of the status as asylum seeker or also prove of identity?) (see §1 of article 6 which is a mandatory provision)

Le document délivré au demandeur de protection internationale est le même qui lui donne droit à l'aide sociale (cf. questions 10 et 11). Aux termes de l'article 6 (5) de la loi du 5 mai 2006, cette attestation a pour principale vocation d'attester l'enregistrement de la demande de protection internationale. Par ailleurs, l'article 6 (6) de la loi du 5 mai 2006 prévoit que « l'attestation ne donne pas droit à la délivrance d'un certificat de résidence. Par dérogation, l'attestation tient lieu de certificat de résidence pour les formalités requises en vue de la célébration du mariage suivant les dispositions du Code civil. »
La loi ne prévoit pas que l'attestation tienne lieu de document d'identité de telle sorte qu'il faut en déduire que si le demandeur de protection international ait à prouver son identité dans le cadre d'une quelconque procédure, il pourra lui être opposé que l'attestation n'a pas cette vocation.

Par contre, l'article 6 (11) de la loi du 5 mai 2006 dispose que « sauf exception accordée par le ministre, le demandeur a l'obligation de demeurer sur le territoire. Sans préjudice de l'article 10 de la présente loi (placement du demandeur dans un centre de rétention)*, il a le droit d'y circuler librement pendant l'instruction de sa demande de protection internationale par le ministre. Ce droit ne constitue pas un permis de séjour conformément à la législation concernant l'entrée et le séjour des étrangers. ».

Ainsi si le document ne constitue pas en tant que tel un quelconque titre de séjour, il donne au demandeur un droit de demeurer sur tout le territoire au sens de l'article 6, § 1 de la directive.

En pratique, si ce document ne peut valoir document d'identité du demandeur (sauf pour la procédure un vue du mariage), il certifiera cependant de son statut de demandeur.

Q.19. B. Are there situations or specific cases in which another equivalent document or even no document is issued? (in particular is there an exception for "procedures to decide on the right of the applicant legally to enter the territory" as made possible by §2 of article 6)?

L'article 6 (5) § 2 de la loi du 5 mai 2006 dispose que « l'attestation n'est pas délivrée au demandeur faisant l'objet d'une mesure de placement arrêtée par le ministre conformément à l'article 10 de la présente loi, ainsi qu'à la personne qui dépose une nouvelle demande de protection internationale conformément à l'article 23 de la présente loi tant que cette nouvelle demande n'a pas été déclarée recevable. »

(cf. la remarque sous la question 16. quant à l'absence d'obligation dans le chef du Ministre de prendre une telle décision de recevabilité dans un certain délai[562]).

Q.19. C. For how long is this document in principle valid and is it necessary to renew it after a certain period?

Il n'existe pas de prévisions spécifiques quant à une durée de validité de principe de l'attestation. L'article 6 (5) § 2 de la loi du 5 mai 2006 prévoit que « l'attestation précise sa durée de validité qui ne sera prorogée que si elle a été visée par l'administration communale du lieu de séjour du demandeur. L'administration communale du lieu de séjour du demandeur a l'obligation de viser l'attestation. Le demandeur a l'obligation de se présenter auprès du ministre en vue de la prolongation de l'attestation au plus tard au jour de l'expiration de sa durée de validité. » Ainsi, tant que le demandeur sera en cours de procédure et qu'il répondra aux prévisions de la loi la concernant, la validité de son attestation devra être régulièrement prolongée par le Ministre des Affaires étrangères et de l'immigration à chaque jour auquel il aura convoqué le demandeur à cette fin, pour une période dont il déterminera l'échéance et à laquelle le demandeur devra se présenter au plus tard devant le Ministre.

Q.19. D. What is the deadline for the delivery of that document? Is the mandatory deadline of 3 days set by article 6, §1 respected[563]?

L'article 6 (5) de la loi du 5 mai 2006 prévoit que « une pièce attestant l'enregistrement de la demande de protection internationale est remise dans les trois jours après le dépôt de la demande au demandeur. Si cette pièce ne peut être remise immédiatement, la convocation établie par le service de la police judiciaire tient lieu provisoirement et pendant une durée limitée de trois jours maximum de pièce donnant droit à l'aide sociale immédiate. »

L'attestation prévue par l'article 6 (5) de la loi devra être remise dans un délai maximum de trois jours.

[562] Il est à noter qu'il est très illusoire de penser qu'avec la pratique, et selon les prévisions de la loi du 5 mai 2006, une telle décision déclarant une nouvelle demande recevable puisse être à un moment prise, indistinctement d'une décision au fond qui elle interviendrait après le temps d'un nouvel examen de la demande. En effet, l'article 23 de la loi du 5 mai 2006 qui traite de la question d'une nouvelle demande de protection internationale, ne prévoit nullement la possibilité pour le Ministre des Affaires Etrangères et de l'Immigration, de prendre une telle décision de recevabilité ni d'obligation dans son chef de la prendre dans un certain délai, éventuellement avant une décision au fond, alors que cet article n'aborde que les seules conditions dans lesquelles le Ministre pourra déclarer la nouvelle demande irrecevable ou fondée.

Il est à noter qu'au cas où l'attestation ne peut être remise au demandeur immédiatement au moment de la présentation de sa demande, la convocation (dont il a déjà été fait état sous la question 10) ne tient lieu que de pièce donnant droit à l'aide social et, à défaut de prévision légale en ce sens, n'a pas d'autre valeur juridique.

Q.19. E. Is it possible for an asylum seeker to get a travel document for serious humanitarian reasons (see §5 of article 6 which is an optional provision)?

La loi du 5 mai 2006 ne réserve pas la possibilité au Ministre des Affaires Etrangères et de l'Immigration de délivrer au demandeur un document de voyage pour des raisons humanitaires graves. L'article 6. (11), première phrase, de la loi dispose cependant que « sauf exception accordée par le ministre, le demandeur a l'obligation de demeurer sur le territoire. (...)» Ainsi, le Ministre aura la possibilité d'accorder une telle autorisation exceptionnelle selon des motifs dont l'appréciation relèvera de son pouvoir discrétionnaire.

Q.19. F. Is there a central system of registration of asylum seekers and is it or not separate from the registration of aliens? If yes, describe it briefly (content) and indicate in particular if it is an electronic database.

Il existe un fichier central électronique regroupant les identités de tous les demandeurs d'asile du nom de MJDA, géré par le Centre Informatique de l'Etat, distinct de celui des étrangers.

Q.20. Residence of asylum seekers :

Q.20. A. Is in principle an asylum seeker free to move on the entire territory of your Member State or only to a limited part of it and in case, which part? (see article 7, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

En principe, le demandeur d'asile est autorisé à circuler sans restriction sur tout le territoire (article 6. (11), deuxième phrase, de la loi du 5 mai 2006. Le règlement aide social (article 1er) prévoit même que les moyens de transports publics sur tout le territoire du Grand-Duché de Luxembourg sont une des composantes de l'aide sociale dont le demandeur doit bénéficier

Q.20. B. About the place of residence (see §2 of article 7): explain to which extend the person is free to choose her residence and if this depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance processing of application, attribution of reception conditions,…).

Il n'existe aucune disposition écrite prévoyant la possibilité pour un demandeur de choisir son lieu de résidence. D'expérience, le rapporteur peut cependant dire qu'en pratique, lorsque un demandeur manifeste expressément et formellement sa volonté de choisir un hébergement particulier (ce sera toujours plus facile par l'intermédiaire de son conseil qui s'adresse directement par écrit au Commissaire du Gouvernement aux Etrangers) et que cette volonté se veut conforme à la finalité des conditions d'accueil, le Commissaire de Gouvernement aux Etrangers fait preuve de bonne volonté pour attribuer parmi les logements disponibles, celui le plus adapté à la situation particulière du demandeur.

En pratique, les demandeurs connaissant des problèmes de santé seront généralement orientés vers un centre près de Luxembourg-Ville et les femmes célibataires ou seules avec enfants vers un centre géré par une ONGs.

On relèvera cependant dans ce contexte l'existence de problèmes ponctuels qui se sont révélés pour avoir échappé à la vigilance hiérarchique du ministère et où certains demandeurs étaient orientés vers tel ou tel foyer (voire dans un camping) dans un but non dissimulé de sanction, en dehors de toute prévision légale ou règlementaire. A titre d'exemple, il est arrivé qu'en se basant sur son lieu de provenance et sa situation familiale (hommes célibataires), certains demandeurs ont été dans un premier temps orientés vers un foyer (entre-temps fermé pour cause d'insalubrité), avec instructions précises au gestionnaire du centre, de loger le demandeur dans la cuisine du centre. Ces situations sont cependant exceptionnelles et ne sont le fait que d'une seule personne.

Il n'existe pas non plus de critères écrits concernant la nature du logement à attribuer en fonction du stade de la procédure d'examen de sa demande.

Dans le contexte de l'article 7. § 2 de la directive, il nous paraît encore important de reproduire l'article 6, paragraphes (8) et (10) de la loi du 5 mai 2006 qui dispose que :
« (8) Le demandeur a l'obligation d'élire domicile au pays pour les besoins de la procédure d'asile. Il a l'obligation de communiquer le domicile élu au ministre dans les cinq jours suivant le dépôt de sa demande de protection internationale. Toute modification du domicile élu doit être communiquée au ministre contre récépissé. A défaut d'élection de domicile, le demandeur est réputé avoir élu domicile au ministère. Lorsque le demandeur fait l'objet d'une mesure de placement conformément à l'article 10 de la présente loi, il est réputé avoir élu domicile au lieu où il est placé.
(9) (…)
(10) Lorsque le demandeur est réputé avoir élu domicile au ministère conformément au paragraphe (8) du présent article, le ministre procède à une notification par affichage public. A cette fin, le ministre procède à l'affichage d'un avis au ministère pendant une durée de trente jours. L'affichage de l'avis par le ministre est constaté par le service de police judiciaire. L'avis mentionne la date de l'affichage et la nature de l'acte à notifier. Il indique en outre l'endroit où le demandeur peut se faire remettre l'acte. La notification est réputée valablement faite trente jours après le premier jour de l'affichage public.

Q.20. C. About the place of reception (meaning where the asylum seeker has to stay to benefit from reception conditions) (see § 4 of article 7): explain which are the general rules about the determination of this place (to which extend are the decisions determining the place taken individually and do they take into account the personal situation of the asylum seeker?) and to which extend the person is free to choose it and if it depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance attribution of reception conditions, processing of the application,…).

La détermination du lieu de résidence est à la discrétion du Ministre de la Famille et de l'Intégration. Ces décisions sont prises en son nom par les assistants sociaux du CGE, au cas par cas et les directives ou circulaires orales et/ou écrites, internes au Ministère et dont le rapporteur n'a pas connaissance du contenu, prennent en considération la situation individuelle du demandeur.
Madame la Commissaire du Gouvernement aux étrangers explique que 90% des primo arrivant sont logés dans un foyer d'accueil géré par la Croix-Rouge luxembourgeoise.

Q.20. D. If all asylum seekers are not placed in accommodation centres because of capacity limits, explain how the persons are distributed between accommodation centres and other accommodation facilities (which authority takes the decisions, on the basis of which elements, can that decision be appealed by the asylum seeker,…)

L'article 6 (1), avant dernière phrase, du règlement aide sociale dispose que « lorsque les capacités de logement normalement disponibles sont temporairement épuisées, le bénéficiaire de l'aide sociale peut être logé dans une structure d'accueil d'urgence. »

D'un point de vue pratique, la situation ne s'est présentée qu'avec l'afflux massif de demandeurs d'asile qui fuyaient la guerre du Kosovo. A cette époque, les structures d'Etat ayant été rapidement saturées, certains demandeurs de sexe masculin célibataires ont été logés dans des campings.

Ces décisions sont prises par le Ministre de la Famille et elles ne sont pas susceptibles de recours spéciaux. Cependant, elles constituent des décisions administratives qui devront pouvoir faire l'objet d'un recours de droit commun devant les juridictions administratives.

Par ailleurs, dans certaines situations et selon les circonstances, une telle décision pourrait également théoriquement constituer une décision de limitation du bénéfice de l'aide sociale au sens du règlement aide sociale. Dans ce cas, le règlement aide social prévoit une procédure précise que le Ministre est tenu de respecter, avant même la prise de décision (cf. infra).

Q.20. E. How can an asylum seeker ask to leave temporarily the place of residence or of reception or an assigned area? How is the individual AND impartial character of the decision ensured? (see §5 of article 7 which is a mandatory provision)

La législation luxembourgeoise ne prévoit pas d'obligation pour le demandeur de solliciter une autorisation pour quitter temporairement le lieu de résidence. Il n'y a donc pas non plus de critère ni de procédure prévus à cet effet.
Nous rappelons à cet endroit que le principe reste la liberté de circulation du demandeur sur tout le territoire luxembourgeois.
Nous rappellerons également que le règlement aide social étant en partie le fruit d'un recopiage de la directive, il reprend à son article 4. (4) c), premier tiret, la possibilité de limiter ou supprimer l'aide sociale au cas où un demandeur « abandonne le lieu de résidence fixé par l'autorité compétente sans en avoir informé ladite autorité ou si une autorisation est nécessaire à cet effet, sans l'avoir obtenue »
Des problèmes d'interprétation et d'application de ce texte combiné, ne manqueront vraisemblablement pas de se présenter dans la pratique lorsqu'un demandeur quittera temporairement son lieu de résidence sans, pour le moins, avoir informé l'autorité qui le lui avait assigné.

Q.21. Q.21. A. Do rules on reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions exist in internal legislation and if yes in which cases (mention in particular if there are cases not foreseen by article 16, § 1 and 2 which are optional provisions)? Distinguish in your answer between cases of reduction and withdrawal and explain which conditions can be reduced and if access to emergency health care is always ensured as requested by article 16, §4, last sentence.

Le Ministre de la Famille et de l'Intégration a la possibilité de limiter ou de retirer le bénéfice de l'aide sociale dans les hypothèses suivantes, sans distinction selon qu'il s'agit d'une limitation ou d'un retrait (article 4. (4) du règlement aide sociale) :

« a. Lorsque le bénéficiaire de l'aide a dissimulé ses ressources financières et a indûment bénéficié de l'aide sociale (...).

b. Lorsque le bénéficiaire de l'aide sociale ou un membre de sa famille qui l'accompagne s'est à plusieurs reprises comporté de manière violente ou menaçante envers les personnes assurant l'encadrement des bénéficiaires de l'aide sociale ou bien envers des personnes exerçant des activités de gestion dans un centre d'hébergement ou envers d'autres personnes hébergées dans les centres.

c. Lorsqu'un demandeur
- abandonne le lieu de résidence fixé par l'autorité compétente sans en avoir informé ladite autorité ou si une autorisation est nécessaire à cet effet, sans l'avoir obtenue, ou
- ne respecte pas l'obligation de se présenter aux autorités, ne répond pas aux demandes d'information ou ne se rend pas aux entretiens personnels concernant la procédure de protection internationale dans un délai raisonnable, ou
- a déjà introduit une demande dans le même Etat membre (...).

d. lorsque le bénéficiaire de l'aide sociale ou un membre de sa famille qui l'accompagne a commis un manquement grave aux règlements des logements. »

Le règlement aide sociale prévoit cette possibilité de retrait ou de limitation sans préciser la nature de l'aide sociale à retirer ou à limiter.
Il est à noter que les hypothèses prévues sous les points b. et d. ne sont pas énumérées par la directive comme cause justifiant le retrait ou la limitation de l'aide sociale. Il est encore à noter que la limitation ou le retrait de l'aide sociale ne sont, dans toutes ces hypothèses que des possibilités qui sont laissées à la seule appréciation du Ministre (sous le contrôle des juridictions administratives), qui, si une de celles-ci se réalise, a le choix entre soit ne rien faire, soit limiter, soit retirer le bénéfice de l'aide social.

L'article 4. (6) in fine du règlement aide sociale prévoit formellement que « L'accès aux soins médicaux d'urgence reste assuré en toutes circonstances. »

Q.21. B. Has article 16, §2 dealing with refusal of reception conditions for unreasonably late applications for asylum been transposed by your Member State (or was this case already applicable before transposition)? Are there cases in practice?

Cet article n'a pas été transposé en droit interne luxembourgeois. Il est à noter que la situation de fait prévue par l'article 16 § 2 de la directive, est abordée à l'article 20 h) de la loi du 5 mai 2006 en ce qu'une demande tardive peut être sanctionnée par l'examen de la demande de protection internationale sous le régime de la procédure accélérée.

Q.21. C. How is it ensured that decisions of reduction or withdrawal are taken individually, objectively AND in particular impartially (for instance through and independent arbitrator) (see article 16, §4 which is a mandatory provision)?

Afin d'assurer au bénéficiaire de l'aide sociale qu'une décision de limitation ou de retrait de l'aide sociale sera prise individuellement, objectivement et impartialement, le règlement aide social prévoit une procédure spéciale préalable (article 4. (5) du règlement aide sociale) dans le cadre de laquelle le Ministre est tenu d'informer le demandeur de son intention de limiter ou de retirer l'aide sociale (sauf s'il y a péril en la demeure).
Cette procédure impose que la possibilité soit donnée au demandeur de présenter ses observations dans un délai de 8 jours qui suit l'envoi de la lettre du Ministre l'informant de ses intentions (à son domicile élu, cf. la reproduction de l'article 6, § (8) et (10) de la loi du 5 mai 2006 sous la question 20. B).
Finalement, au cas où de telles décisions sont prises, l'article 4. (6) du règlement aide social impose que « les décisions portant limitation ou retrait du bénéfice de l'aide sociale doivent être motivées et sont fondées sur la situation particulière de la personne concernée, compte tenu du principe de proportionnalité et prennent en considération le comportement individuel de cette dernière. »

Par ailleurs, comme toute décision administrative, de telles décisions peuvent par la suite être soumises au contrôle des Juridiction de l'Ordre administratif qui statueront dans le cadre d'un recours en annulation (voir également la réponse sous la question 22. A)

Q.21. D. Is statement 14/03 adopted by the Council at the same moment as the directive respected (see the document attached to our sending)?

En ce qui concerne l'article 16. § 2 de la directive, abordé par le rapport 14/03 du Conseil, nous pouvons dire que les invitations du Conseil sont respectées, alors que l'Etat luxembourgeois n'a pas transposé la possibilité que lui laisse le prédit article de refuser l'aide sociale en cas de demande tardive.

En ce qui concerne l'article 16 § 4, la réponse doit être plus nuancée, alors que l'article 4 (6) du règlement aide sociale dispose que « les décisions portant limitation ou retrait du bénéfice de l'aide sociale doivent être motivées et sont fondées sur la situation particulière de la personne concernée, compte tenu du principe de proportionnalité et prennent en considération le comportement individuel de cette dernière. L'accès aux soins médicaux d'urgence reste assuré en toutes circonstances ». Ainsi, l'Etat luxembourgeois n'a pas repris la circonstance explicitement prévue par la directive imposant la prise en considération spécifique de la personne concernée en sa qualité de personne vulnérable, mais nous pouvons facilement imaginer que tant le ministre compétent que, le cas échéant, les juridictions administratives, prendront en considération cette particularité en appliquant les prévisions du règlement qui imposent que de telles décisions soient fondées sur la situation particulière de la personne concernée, compte tenu du principe de proportionnalité.

En ce qui concerne l'article 16 § 4 in fine de la directive, les recommandations du Conseil sont respectées.

Q.21. E. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements on cases of reduction, withdrawal or refusal which have been taken, and if yes, what has been the outcome?

A la connaissance du rapporteur, il n'existe à l'heure actuelle pas de telles décisions.

Q.22. Q.22. A. Appeal against a negative decision relating to the granting of benefits or based on article 7 (see article 21 which is a mandatory provision): indicate against which decision an appeal can be introduced, describe the system of appeal in general and include in particular in your answer the information given to asylum seekers about possibilities of appealing, deadline for appealing, if the appeal has or not a suspensive effect, if there are different steps (for instance first an administrative appeal and in particular if the guarantee of an appeal before a judicial body in the last instance is respected)?

Le principe général est que toute décision administrative doit pouvoir faire l'objet d'un recours, sauf disposition contraire de la loi. Ainsi, à défaut de disposition légales contraires ou spéciales, les décisions négatives concernant l'octroi des avantages ou celles basées sur l'article 7 de la directive peuvent faire l'objet d'un recours administratif gracieux (facultatif) et d'un recours juridictionnel devant les Juridictions de l'Ordre Administratif.

Dans le délai de trois mois qui suit la notification de la décision négative, la personne concernée (ou toute autre personne ayant un intérêt direct et actuel) peut demander au Ministre qui a pris la décision de la revoir. Si le Ministre confirme sa première décision, un nouveau délai de trois mois commence à courir au jour de la notification de la nouvelle décision pendant lequel la personne concernée pourra saisir le Tribunal administratif d'un recours en annulation. Contre la décision du Tribunal, la personne concernée peut relever appel dans un délai de 40 jours. Les délais ne sont pas suspensifs. En ce qui concerne les informations quant aux voies et délais de recours, celles-ci doivent apparaître dans la décision, à défaut de quoi, aucun délai de forclusion ne pourra être opposé au demandeur, même si son recours intervient après les trois mois qui ont suivi la notification de la décision attaquée.

Il est à noter que le recours administratif gracieux n'est que facultatif et qu'au cas où la personne concernée choisit de saisir directement le Tribunal administratif, elle devra le faire dans le délai de 3 mois qui suit la notification de la décision (voir également la réponse sous la question 21. C).

Q.22. B. Explain which are the possibilities for asylum seekers to benefit from legal assistance when they introduce such an appeal (see article 21, §2 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to Member States)?

L'article 7 de la loi du 5 mai 2006 dispose qu'au moment du dépôt de sa demande, « le demandeurs est informé de son droit de se faire assister à titre gratuit d'un interprète qui maîtrise une langue dont il est raisonnable de supposer qu'il la comprend et de son droit de choisir un avocat inscrit au tableau de l'un des barreaux établis au Grand-Duché de Luxembourg ou de se faire désigner un avocat par le bâtonnier de l'ordre des avocats. »

Par ailleurs, l'article 2 (1) de la loi du 10 août 1995 dispose que « le bénéfice de l'assistance judiciaire peut également être accordé à tout autre ressortissant étranger dont les ressources sont insuffisantes, pour les procédures en matière de droit d'asile, d'accès au territoire, de séjour, d'établissement et d'éloignement des étrangers. »

Ainsi, pratiquement, le demandeur d'asile sera informé de son droit d'être assisté d'un avocat dans le cadre de la procédure en examen de sa demande dès le dépôt de celle-ci et devra donc pouvoir également bénéficier de cette assistance pour les recours à introduire contre les décisions négatives concernant l'octroi des avantages ou celles basées sur l'article 7 de la directive.

Il est à noter que la représentation par le ministère d'avocat est obligatoire devant les Juridictions de l'Ordre Administratif.

Q.22. C. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

A la connaissance du rapporteur, il n'existe à l'heure actuelle aucun jugement ou décision concernant l'octroi des avantages ou basés sur l'article 7 de la directive.

Q.22. D. Is a mechanism of complain for asylum seekers about quality of receptions conditions in general (even if they are not personally concerned) organised? If yes, before which authority? Is it linked to the system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions (see below question n° 39)?

La législation luxembourgeoise ne prévoit aucun mécanisme spécifique de plainte pour les demandeurs d'asile sur la qualité des conditions d'accueil en général. Cependant, au cas où un demandeur aurait une telle plainte à formuler, il pourra toujours s'adresser au Ministre de la Famille et de l'Intégration en lui demandant de prendre une décision en réponse à cette plainte. Cette décision sera susceptible de recours au même titre que toute décision administrative.

Il est à noter qu'au cas où le Ministre saisi ne répondrait pas à une telle plainte, son silence pendant plus de trois mois équivaudrait à une décision négative mais qu'aucun délai ne court pour attaquer celle-ci, à défaut de décision matérielle formelle.

6. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.23. Family unity of asylum seekers: define how a family is defined in relation with article 2, (d) which is a mandatory provision and explain how housing is provided to a family (see articles 8 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to member States and 14, §2, (a) which is a mandatory provision).

L'article 2 (e) de la loi du 5 mai 2006 dispose qu' « aux fins de la présente loi, on entend par : (…) «membres de la famille», dans la mesure où la famille était déjà fondée dans le pays d'origine, les membres ci-après de la famille du bénéficiaire du statut de réfugié ou du statut conféré par la protection subsidiaire qui sont présents au Luxembourg en raison de la demande de protection internationale:
a) le conjoint du bénéficiaire du statut de protection internationale ou son (sa) partenaire non marié(e) engagé(e) dans une communauté de vie reconnue par le pays d'origine de l'un des partenaires;
b) les enfants du couple visé au premier tiret ou du bénéficiaire du statut de réfugié ou du statut conféré par la protection subsidiaire, à condition qu'ils soient non mariés et à sa charge sans tenir compte du fait qu'ils sont légitimes, nés hors mariage ou adoptés; »

Si la définition semble reprendre celle de l'article 2 (d) de la directive en l'adaptant au droit national luxembourgeois, force est cependant de constater que la famille n'est ici définie qu'en tant que famille d'une personne bénéficiaire du statut de réfugié politique ou du statut conféré par la protection subsidiaire, à l'exclusion de la famille d'un demandeur d'asile ou de celle d'un demandeur dudit statut !

Ainsi, force est de constater que la famille du demandeur d'asile n'est pas définie par la législation luxembourgeoise, malgré le fait que cette notion soit reprise à plusieurs endroits dans les différents textes applicables à la matière. On peut supposer qu'il s'agit là d'une malheureuse omission ou confusion, alors que l'exposé des motifs de la loi nous informe que « cet article (l'article 2 de la loi du 5 mai 2006) donne les définitions de certains termes utilisés dans le projet de loi. Ces définitions sont toutes reprises des directives à transposer. » (documents parlementaires n° 5437 du 10 février 2005 (dans annexe 10 « projet de loi, arrêté grand-ducal de dépôt ») et que la même définition devra être «transposée » dans la pratique à la famille d'un demandeur d'asile.

Par ailleurs, l'article 6 § 1 in fine du règlement aide sociale dispose que « le ministre prend les mesures appropriées pour préserver dans la mesure du possible l'unité de la famille qui est présente sur le territoire du pays. » et en pratique, nous avons pu observer qu'en pratique, les demandeurs appartenant à la même famille sont logés ensembles.

Q.24. Q.24. A. How is housing of asylum seekers organised: describe the system in general and indicate in particular what is the most frequently system used (see article 14, §1 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space for Member States; distinguish between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels places or other premises).

L'article 1er du règlement aide social dispose que « L'aide sociale comporte les prestations suivantes : - l'hébergement, assorti d'une pension complète ou bien d'une fourniture de repas respectivement de denrées alimentaires. »

Par ailleurs, l'article 6 (1) du prédit règlement dispose que « le bénéficiaire de l'aide sociale est logé dans une des structures d'hébergement suivantes :

(a) centres d'hébergement publics,
(b) centres d'hébergement privés,
(c) hôtels, auberges privées ou autres locaux adaptés. »

En pratique, le système de logement le plus fréquemment utilisé est celui du logement en centre d'hébergement (publics ou privés). Il a été constaté que certains demandeurs de sexe masculin pouvaient être provisoirement logés dans des campings !

Q.24. B. What is the total number of available places for asylum seekers? Distinguish in your answer between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels or other premises.

Les nombres de places sont approximatifs et il est important de relever qu'au jour de la rédaction du présent rapport, elles ne sont pas toutes occupées. Les chiffres qui suivent ont été communiqués par les ONGs actives dans le domaine des conditions d'accueil des demandeurs de protection internationale.

- Centres d'accueil publics: 1150 places,
- Hôtels/pensions privés : 850 places,
- Centres d'accueil gérés par des ONGs (Croix-Rouge, Caritas) : 370 places.

Le gouvernement fait quant à lui état d'un nombre de places ainsi réparties pour le mois d'août 2006 :

- Centres d'accueil publics: 955,
- Hôtels/pensions privés : 371,
- Centres d'accueil gérés par des ONGs (Croix-Rouge, Caritas) : 301

Q.24. C. Is this number of places for asylum seekers sufficient in general or frequently insufficient?

Etant donné que le nombre de demandeurs d'asile est actuellement décroissant, les places sont momentanément suffisantes (contrairement à la situation en 1999 ou 2003/2004).

Q.24. D. Are there special measures foreseen in urgent cases of a high number of news arrivals of asylum seekers (outside the case of application of the directive on temporary protection)?

A part la législation fruit de la transposition de la directive protection subsidiaire, l'article 6, § 2 du règlement aide social prévoit encore que « lorsque les capacités de logements normalement disponibles sont temporairement épuisées, le bénéficiaire de l'aide sociale peut être logé dans une structure d'accueil d'urgence » sans autre précision.

Q.25. Accommodation centres (important note: all the following questions are about open and not closed centres where asylum seekers are detained which are covered by another question)

Q.25. A Are there different categories of accommodation centres, for instance depending of the stage of the procedure (admissibility and eligibility)?

Il n'existe aucun lien légal entre un quelconque stade de la procédure et une catégorie spécifique de centre de logements. Les demandeurs y sont placés selon l'appréciation discrétionnaire du Ministre de la Famille et de l'Intégration.
Madame la Commissaire du Gouvernement aux étrangers explique que 90% des primo arrivant sont logés dans un foyer d'accueil géré par la Croix-Rouge luxembourgeoise

Q.25. B. Is there a legal time limit for accommodation in a centre after which the asylum seekers have access to private houses or apartments or is this limit linked to a stage of the asylum procedure?

Aucune règle en ce sens n'est prévue.
Pendant toute la procédure d'asile les demandeurs sont hébergés dans des structures collectives mises à disposition par l'Etat ou par les ONGs.
Si le demandeur d'asile dispose de moyens propres ou est accueilli par un membre de sa famille résidant légalement au Luxembourg, il pourra, en pratique, se loger dans un appartement privé. Actuellement il n'existe que très peu de demandeurs d'asile logeant dans des appartements privés.

Q.25. C. Is there a general regulation about the internal functioning of those centres and the rights and duties of the asylum seekers? If yes, is this general regulation applicable to public and private centres? If not, are the centres supposed to adopt an internal regulation and does a central authority have or not a kind of control about its content?

Le jour où ils se présentent au Ministère de la Famille pour la première fois après avoir déposé leur demande d'asile auprès du Ministre des Affaires Etrangères et de l'Immigration, ils signent un règlement d'ordre interne qui est valable pour toutes les catégories d'hébergements ne disposant pas d'un règlement propre. Les centres d'accueil gérés par les ONGs ont un règlement interne qui peut varier légèrement de celui du Ministère.

Q.25. D. Do the regulations foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers in case of breach of the rules? (see article 16, §3) If yes, which sanctions for which rules? Which is the competent authority to decide? How is it ensured that decisions are taken individually, objectively and in particular impartially (for instance through an independent arbitrator) as requested by §4 of article 21 which is mandatory provision*?* Which are the possibilities of appealing against those decisions if the system is different from the general one under question n°22? Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

L'article 4 (4) d) du règlement aide sociale dispose que « le Ministre (de la Famille et de l'Intégration) peut limiter ou retirer le bénéfice de l'aide sociale dans les cas suivants :(…)
d) lorsque le bénéficiaire de l'aide sociale ou un membre de sa famille qui l'accompagne a commis un manquement grave au règlement des logements. »

Ainsi, seule « l'incrimination » des manquements graves au règlement des logements est prévue par un texte et les sanctions alternatives de ces manquements sont les deux seules prévues dans le règlement, la limitation ou le retrait de l'aide sociale. « Les manquements graves au règlements des logements » ne sont pas, au sens de la directive, des situations prévues pour justifier ces sanctions. Avant de prendre ces sanctions, le Ministre devra suivre la procédure de l'article 4 (5) et (6) du règlement aide social (voir réponse sous la question 21. C). Par la suite, une telle décision devra pouvoir faire l'objet de recours administratif et/ou juridictionnels de droit commun (voir la réponse sous la question 22)

En pratique et avant l'entrée en vigueur du règlement aide sociale, une des sanctions très fréquente était le transfert du bénéficiaire de l'aide sociale dans un autre logement moins favorable (p.ex. plus loin de la capitale ou dans un camping). Désormais, le règlement précité dispose en son article 6 (3) que « le Ministre veille à ce que le bénéficiaire de l'aide sociale ne soit transféré d'un logement à un autre que lorsque cela est nécessaire. (...) » et nous pouvons légitimement espérer qu'une telle sanction disparaisse avec l'application du prédit règlement.

Q.25. E. Are asylum seekers involved in the management of these centres? If yes, how (advisory board, appointment or election of representatives)? (see article 14, §6 which is an option provision)

En général les demandeurs d'asile ne sont pas impliqués dans la gestion des centres
Il n'existe aucune prévision légale ou règlementaire en ce sens. Cependant des réunions de résidents ou bien avec des représentants de résidents peuvent se tenir et se font sporadiquement et de manière irrégulière.

En pratique, il a pu être constaté que dans les centres publics gérés directement par le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers et dans les centres gérés par les ONGs, les demandeurs pouvaient être impliqués à divers degré dans la gestion des centres.

Q.25. F. Do specific rules exist on work of asylum seekers inside the accommodation centres different from the general ones about employment (see below)? If yes, which ones? Can working inside accommodation centres be considered as a (mandatory) contribution of the asylum seekers to the management of the centres, is it or not paid and considered as implying access to the labour market and subject to the same rules?

Il n'est pas prévu que les demandeurs d'asile puissent spécifiquement travailler au sein des centres d'accueil. La participation non rémunérée au nettoyage des lieux commun est cependant exigée.

Q.26. Q.26. A. How can asylum seekers communicate with legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGOs? (see article 14, §2, (b) which is a mandatory provision).

L'article 6 (2) b) dispose que « les gestionnaires des centres d'hébergement veillent à ce que (...):
b) le bénéficiaire de l'aide social ait la possibilité de communiquer avec sa famille, ses conseils juridiques, les représentants du Haut-Commssariat des Nations-unies pour les Réfugiés

(UNHCR) et les organisations non gouvernementales reconnues. » Aucune modalité pratique n'est cependant abordée et il est à relever que l'Etat n'assure pas formellement cette garantie dont l'accomplissement est délégué aux gestionnaires des centres, sans autre précision.

Q.26. B. What are the rules about access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs regarding access to accommodation centres and other housing facilities (see article 14, §7 which is a mandatory provision)

Les représentants du l'UNHCR et des ONGs ont un accès facilité aux centres d'accueil pour demandeurs d'asile. Avant l'entrée en vigueur de la loi du 5 mai 2006, cette pratique relevait d'un état de fait non règlementé que l'article 13 a) de la prédite loi consacre désormais « le Haut Commissariat des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés (HCR), les membres du Comité luxembourgeois des droits de l'enfant (ORK) ainsi que toute organisation disposant d'un agrément sont autorisés:

a) à avoir accès aux demandeurs »

Il est à noter que l'article 13 (2) de la prédite loi prévoit que « L'agrément peut être délivré aux organisations qui
a) justifient d'une activité d'information et de soutien régulière et durable au profit des demandeurs de protection internationale;
b) remplissent les conditions d'honorabilité, tant dans le chef des membres des organes dirigeants de l'organisation, que dans le chef des personnes physiques chargées de ces missions;
c) s'engagent à garantir aux demandeurs la protection de leur vie privée et le respect de leurs convictions philosophiques et religieuses. »

Q.26. C. Can the access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs be limited for security reasons or any other reason (see article 14, §7, last sentence)?

De telles limitations n'ont pas été constatées à ce jour et aucune disposition dans l'ordre juridique luxembourgeois n'existe quant à ce point.

Q.27. Q.27. A. Is a medical screening organised by the receiving State, is it mandatory or voluntary? Does it include HIV tests? (see article 9 which is an optional provision)

Lorsqu'une personne dépose sa demande de protection internationale, elle est soumise, dans le cadre de la médecine préventive, à un examen de dépistage de la tuberculose pulmonaire effectué par la Ligue luxembourgeoise de prévention et d'action médico-sociale. Le test HIV n'est pas pratiqué mais il peut être effectué à la demande de l'intéressé, gratuitement et anonymement.

Q.27. B. Do the legal provisions on reception conditions ensure that asylum seekers receive at least emergency care and essential treatment

of illness as requested by article 15 §1 which is a mandatory provision? Do they have a further access to health care?

L'article 4 (6) in fine du règlement aide sociale dispose que « L'accès aux soins médicaux d'urgence reste assuré en toutes circonstances »

Q.27. C. What is the practice regarding access of asylum seekers to health care and how is it organised? In particular, what is the situation in accommodation centres (are doctors coming to the centres or do asylum seekers go to doctors outside)?

L'article 1er, 3ème et 4ème tiret dispose que « l'aide sociale comporte les prestations suivantes : (...)
- les soins médicaux d'urgence,
- la prise en charge des cotisations à titre de l'assurance volontaire prévue par l'article 2 du code des assurances sociales pour la durée de maintien de l'aide sociale (...) »

La pratique est décrite dans le Guide d'accès aux soins médicaux pour demandeurs d'asile, déboutés du droit d'asile et clandestins au Luxembourg (annexes 5 et 6). Ainsi, pendant les trois premiers mois qui suivent la présentation de la demande :
« L'accès aux soins est gratuit et organisé sous forme de bons, valables pendant un mois et renouvelables jusqu'à trois mois. Un bon « général » est distribué au demandeur d'asile lors du premier entretien avec le CGE (Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers) pendant la première semaine d'arrivée. Le bon général couvre le demandeur ainsi que sa famille.
Avec ce bon général, il peut accéder, selon ses besoins, aux prestations suivantes:
- consultations chez le médecin généraliste ou spécialiste ;
- fourniture de médicaments à la pharmacie suivant prescription médicale ;
- analyses médicales suivant prescription médicale ;
- consultations chez le dentiste dans le cadre d'une urgence directe, c'est à dire pour algies (douleurs physiques) et infections.
En ce qui concerne certains soins médicaux, il faut faire une demande auprès du CGE pour recevoir un « bon spécial ». Il existe deux sortes de bons spéciaux qui couvrent en principe la totalité des frais selon les dispositions tarifaires2 de la Caisse de Maladie.
a) bon spécial pour hospitalisation
b) bon spécial pour appareillage médical: concerne la fourniture de lunettes et d'autres appareillages médicaux.

Pour tout montant dépassant les dispositions tarifaires de la Caisse de Maladie, le demandeur d'asile devra payer lui-même les frais restants. »

A partir du quatrième mois, et pendant toute la durée de la procédure, le demandeur est couvert par l'assurance maladie facultative auprès de la Caisse de maladie des Ouvriers dont le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers paye les cotisations.

En pratique, et selon le Guide d'accès aux soins médicaux pour demandeurs d'asile, déboutés du droit d'asile et clandestins au Luxembourg (annexes 5 et 6) :

« A partir du quatrième mois, la couverture médicale du demandeur d'asile est effective sous le système de l'assurance-maladie facultative luxembourgeoise. En effet, le CGE a effectué dès le premier contact avec le demandeur d'asile les démarches nécessaires pour l'affiliation du demandeur d'asile et de sa famille auprès de la Caisse de Maladie des Ouvriers (CMO) et paie les cotisations mensuelles pendant toute la durée de la procédure d'asile.
Après l'affiliation effective à la Caisse de Maladie (après trois mois de stage, période durant laquelle la CMO ne rembourse pas les frais occasionnés), la personne reçoit une carte avec un numéro de matricule.
Celle-ci est à garder sur soi en permanence et est à présenter lors de chaque consultation médicale. Lors d'une visite médicale, l'assuré devra payer la totalité de la facture; il se dirige ensuite vers la CMO pour se faire rembourser la participation tarifaire de la Caisse de Maladie.
Le montant du remboursement varie selon les soins mais il y a toujours une partie personnelle à payer par le demandeur d'asile (environ 20% mais fortement variable). Pour se faire rembourser, il faut présenter la facture acquittée du médecin ou la facture avec une preuve de paiement (ex: copie du versement ou du virement bancaire) au bureau de la CMO du lieu de résidence ou au siège social, soit par courrier, soit en se présentant au guichet. La durée de traitement des remboursements est d'environ deux semaines. (…)

En ce qui concerne les frais de médicaments prescrits, il ne faut payer que la partie personnelle en pharmacie, c'est à dire celle qui n'est pas remboursée par la Caisse de Maladie. Cette partie personnelle peut fortement varier selon le médicament prescrit, il vaut donc mieux en parler au médecin qui peut souvent prescrire des médicaments nettement moins chers (génériques). »

Q.28. Q.28. A. What is the length of the period determined by the concerned Member State during which asylum seekers have no access to the labour market? (see article 11 which is a mandatory provision)

L'article 14 (1), première phrase dispose que « Les demandeurs n'ont pas accès au marché de l'emploi pendant une durée de neuf mois après le dépôt de leur demande de protection internationale. »

Q.28. B. After that period, are asylum seekers or not obliged to obtain a work permit? In case is there a limit for the administration to deliver the permits and how quick are they delivered? What is their length?

La deuxième phrase du prédit article prévoit que « Toute demande de permis de travail présentée par un demandeur est irrecevable » en ce sens que l'autorisation d'occupation temporaire dont les conditions de délivrance sont décrites dans les développements qui suivent, qui sera délivrée au demandeur, ne peut être considérée comme « un permis de travail », la délivrance d'un tel permis tel qu'il est prévu pour les étrangers en situation régulière, étant ainsi implicitement mais sûrement interdite par la loi.

Q.28. C. After that period, what are the conditions for access of the asylum seekers to the labour market? (in particular, are there rules concerning the maximum allowed of working hours or days per week, month or year, limits in terms of type of work or of professions authorised?

Après cette période de neuf mois, le demandeur obtient une occupation d'occupation temporaire selon les conditions suivantes [564] :

- l'absence de décision ministérielle à la demande d'asile dans le délai précité, à condition que ce retard ne puisse être imputé au demandeur,
- la possession, dans le chef du demandeur de l'attestation lui donnant droit à l'aide sociale,
- la nécessité de faire la demande d'occupation temporaire.

Il est encore à relever que l'autorisation d'occupation temporaire, une fois délivrée, est limitée à un employeur déterminé et pour une seule profession.

Q.28. D. What are the rules in terms of priorities between asylum seekers on the one hand and nationals, EU or EEE citizens and legally third-country nationals on the other?

L'article 14 (3) de la loi du 5 mai 2006 prévoit que « l'octroi et le renouvellement de l'autorisation d'occupation temporaire peuvent être refusés pour des raisons inhérentes à la situation, à l'évolution ou à l'organisation du marché de l'emploi, compte tenu de la priorité à l'embauche dont bénéficient les citoyens de l'Union européenne, les citoyens des Etats liés par l'accord sur l'Espace économique européen, les ressortissants de pays tiers en vertu d'accords spécifiques ainsi que les ressortissants de pays tiers en séjour régulier qui bénéficient d'allocations de chômage. »

[564] Article 14 de la loi du 5 mai 2006 : « (1) (…).
(2) Lorsque le ministre n'a pas pris de décision sur la demande de protection internationale neuf mois après la présentation de celle-ci et que ce retard ne peut être imputé au demandeur, le ministre délivre, sous réserve des paragraphes qui suivent, une autorisation d'occupation temporaire pour une période de six mois renouvelable. L'autorisation d'occupation temporaire est valable pour un employeur déterminé et pour une seule profession. (3) (…)
(4) A l'appui de la demande en obtention d'une autorisation d'occupation temporaire, le demandeur doit présenter à l'Administration de l'emploi une copie certifiée conforme de l'attestation visée à l'article 6 (5) qui précède.
(5) Le bénéfice de l'autorisation d'occupation temporaire ne donne pas droit à un permis de séjour.
(6) L'autorisation d'occupation temporaire perd sa validité soit à l'échéance de son terme, soit au moment de la résiliation de la relation de travail par une des parties au contrat de travail, soit au moment où la demande de protection internationale est définitivement rejetée.
(7) L'autorisation d'occupation temporaire est retirée lorsque son bénéficiaire travaille dans une autre profession que celle autorisée. Elle est retirée lorsque son bénéficiaire a eu recours, dans une intention frauduleuse, à des pratiques malhonnêtes ou à des déclarations inexactes pour l'obtenir.
(8) Le contrat de travail prend automatiquement fin lorsque l'autorisation d'occupation temporaire perd sa validité ou est retirée.
(...) »

Q.28. E. Do asylum seekers have access to vocational training, does this or not depend of their right to access to the labour market, and in case at which conditions? (see article 12 which is optional regarding §1 and mandatory regarding § 2)

L'article 14 (9) de la loi du 5 mai 2006 dispose que : « Les demandeurs ont accès à la formation selon les conditions à fixer par règlement grand-ducal qui sera pris sur avis du Conseil d'Etat. »

Le règlement formation dispose en son article premier que : « Par formation au sens du paragraphe (9) de l'article 14 on comprend :

1) la formation des adultes organisée par le ministre ayant l'Éducation nationale et la Formation professionnelle dans ses attributions, désigné ci-après par « le ministre », sur base de la loi du 19 juillet 1991 portant création d'un Service de la Formation des Adultes et donnant un statut légal au Centre de Langues Luxembourg [565] ;

2) les cours de formation professionnelle organisés dans le cadre de la loi modifiée du 4 septembre 1990 portant réforme de l'enseignement secondaire technique et de la formation professionnelle continue, régime professionnel[566] ;

3) les cours de formation professionnelle continue organisés conformément aux articles 46 et 47 (1) et (4) de la loi modifiée du 4 septembre 1990 portant réforme de l'enseignement secondaire technique et de la formation professionnelle continue, à l'exclusion des cours organisés à l'intention des demandeurs d'emploi indemnisé ou non[567] ;

---

[565] Article 1er de la loi modifiée du 19 juillet 1991 : « Il est créé un Service de la formation des adultes placé sous l'autorité du ministre de l'Education nationale, dénommé ci-après «le ministre».Ce service a pour mission:
a. de coordonner la formation offerte aux adultes en cours du soir par l'enseignement secondaire, l'enseignement secondaire technique,l'Institut supérieur de technologie et le Centre universitaire ainsi que la formation offerte par le Centre de langues dont question aux articles 10 à 19;
b. d'organiser un régime adultes ouvrant au moyen de cours du soir l'accès aux diplômes et certificats délivrés par l'enseignement du jour;
c, d'assurer l'instruction de base des adultes résidant au Luxembourg qui en expriment le désir;
d. d'organiser des cours d'intérêt général dans les domaines dits de formation générale et de promotion sociale, soit directement, soit par l'intermédiaire d'organismes dont question à l'alinéa e);
e. d'établir et de gérer les contrats conventionnant des cours pour adultes organisés par des communes ou des associations sans but lucratif suivant les critères de l'article 2 ci-dessous;
f. de définir les programmes des cours d'intérêt général et des cours conventionnés pour adultes;
g. de gérer, ensemble avec les directeurs des établissements scolaires respectifs, la mise à disposition de locaux à des tiers;
h. de diffuser les informations sur les cours dont question dans le présent article et de conseiller les intéressés;
i. d'entretenir des relations suivies avec les services de la formation des adultes d'autres pays. »

[566] Article 7 de la loi modifiée du 4 septembre 1991 : « Les études du cycle moyen ont pour objet l'apprentissage d'un métier ou d'une profession ainsi que la préparation aux études du cycle supérieur. Les programmes d'études des classes du cycle moyen comportent obligatoirement des branches de formation générale ainsi que des branches de formation professionnelle théorique et pratique. »

[567] Articles 46 de la loi modifiée du 4 septembre 1990 : « La formation professionnelle continue a pour objectifs
- d'aider les personnes titulaires d'une qualification professionnelle à adapter celle-ci à l'évolution du progrès technologique et aux besoins de l'économie, à la compléter ou à l'élargir;

4) l'apprentissage pour adultes organisé conformément au règlement grand-ducal modifié du 17 juin 2000 portant organisation de l'apprentissage pour adultes. »

L'accès à la formation prévue au point 1) est autorisé pour tout demandeur dès le dépôt de la demande d'asile (article 2 du règlement formation), Les demandeurs mineurs ont par ailleurs accès aux cours de formation professionnelle (apprentissage) prévus au point 2) à condition d'être en possession d'une attestation de dépôt d'une demande de protection internationale valable (article 3 du règlement formation).

Les demandeurs mineurs pourront encore avoir accès aux cours de formation professionnelle continue prévus au point 3), y compris les stages en entreprise, « aussi longtemps qu'une mesure d'éloignement n'est pas exécutée contre eux » (.article 6 du règlement formation) En ce qui concerne les majeurs, ceux-ci ont accès aux cours prévus au point 3) du règlement formation « dès le dépôt de leur demande de protection internationale jusqu'au moment où la demande de protection internationale est définitivement rejetée » et n'auront accès à l'apprentissage pour adultes prévu au point 4) ainsi qu'aux stages en entreprise, qu'après l'écoulement du délai de neuf mois prévu pour l'obtention de l'autorisation d'occupation temporaire (article 8 du règlement formation). Il est à noter que pour l'apprentissage, (point 2), « l'accès reste acquis aux demandeurs mineurs qui en cours d'apprentissage deviennent majeurs. » (article 3 in fine du règlement formation).

Il est encore à noter qu'outre les conditions qui viennent d'être décrites, l'article 12 du règlement formation prévoit que « L'admission aux différents cours professionnels concomitants prévus aux points 2) 3) et 4) de l'article 1er du présent règlement se fait en fonction des connaissances linguistiques dont dispose le candidat.
Le ministre peut organiser des tests de contrôle des connaissances des candidats en question.
Si les connaissances linguistiques s'avèrent insuffisantes, une mise à niveau de celles-ci doit précéder la formation professionnelle.
Le cas échéant, la même procédure s'applique aux connaissances en mathématiques. **»

Enfin, il est important de relever que l'article 10 du règlement formation prévoit que « les indemnités et primes d'apprentissage touchées sur la base d'un contrat d'apprentissage ne sont pas cumulables avec d'autres aides financières accordées par le ministre ayant la Famille et l'Intégration dans ses attributions ». Ainsi, le demandeur qui pourra bénéficier d'un apprentissage rémunéré, ne pourra plus prétendre pendant cet apprentissage à l'aide sociale pour demandeur de protection internationale.

- d'offrir aux personnes exerçant une activité professionnelle, soit salariée, soit indépendante, ou à des chômeurs l'occasion de se préparer aux diplômes et aux certificats visés par la présente loi et d'obtenir une qualification professionnelle dans un système de formation accélérée;
- d'appuyer et de compléter, sur proposition des chambres professionnelles concernées, l'apprentissage pratique dispensé en entreprise. »
Article 47 (1) et (4) de la loi modifiée du 4 septembre 1990 : « La formation professionnelle continue au sens de l'article précédent peut être organisée par 1. le ministre de l'Education nationale; (...) 4. les associations privées agréées individuellement à cet effet par le ministre.»

Q.28. F. Are the rules regarding access to the labour market adopted to transpose the directive more or less generous than the ones applicable previously?

Avant la transposition de la directive dans l'ordre juridique luxembourgeois, les demandeurs d'asile n'avaient pas accès au marché du travail au Luxembourg.

Il est à noter que l'article 14 de la loi du 5 mai 2006 ne prévoit pas formellement que l'accès n'est pas refusé pendant les procédure de recours ou que l'accès reste acquis en cas de recours avec effet suspensif. La rédaction du prédit article « Lorsque le ministre n'a pas pris de décision sur la demande de protection internationale neuf mois après la présentation de celle-ci (…), le ministre délivre (...) une autorisation d'occupation temporaire(…) » pourrait même amener à conclure qu'une fois que le Ministre aura pris une décision négative avant l'expiration du délai de neuf mois, aucune obligation de délivrer l'autorisation pendant les délais suspensifs de recours et pendant l'exercice des recours suspensifs jusqu'à la décision définitive, ne pourrait lui être imposée. La loi transposant cette disposition étant très récente, aucune jurisprudence n'a pu à l'heure actuelle se développer quant à ce point. La note interne au Ministère des Affaires Etrangères du 14 juillet 2006 (annexe 11), relative à l'octroi d'une autorisation d'occupation temporaire, précise cependant que « la demande (en occupation temporaire) peut être introduite tant que la décision du ministre n'est pas coulée en force de chose jugée » ce qui peut raisonnablement laisser présager que l'accès au marché de l'emploi ne pourra être refusé au demandeur pour le seul motif qu'il existerait une décision de refus du ministre, et ce malgré le fait que les délais de recours ne soient pas épuisés ou qu'une voie de recours ait été introduite.

Q.29. Are reception conditions subject to the fact that asylum seekers do not have sufficient resources? Are asylum seekers requested to contribute to reception conditions when they have personal resources (for instance if they work) or to refund the authorities if it appears that they have resources? (see article 13 §§ 3 and 4 which are optional provisions)

L'article 2 du règlement aide sociale prévoit que « l'aide sociale est accordée à toute personne détentrice de l'attestation ou de la convocation visée aux articles 6, (…) de la loi relative au droit d'asile et à des formes complémentaires de protection, à condition de ne pas disposer de moyens d'existence suffisants à sa subsistance.

L'article 4 in fine du règlement aide social prévoit que « Le droit à l'aide sociale est revu dès l'obtention d'une autorisation d'occupation temporaire.»

L'article 10 du règlement formation prévoit par ailleurs que « les indemnités et primes d'apprentissage touchées sur la base d'un contrat d'apprentissage ne sont pas cumulables avec d'autres aides financières accordées par le ministre ayant la Famille et l'Intégration dans ses attributions », de telle sorte que le demandeur qui pourra bénéficier d'un apprentissage rémunéré, ne pourra plus prétendre pendant cet apprentissage à l'aide sociale pour demandeur de protection internationale.

Ainsi, en pratique, Madame la Commissaire du Gouvernement aux étrangers, par accord donné par Madame la Ministre de la Famille et de l'Intégration, a arrêté selon une note du 11 juillet 2006 (annexe 13) les modalités de retenues et d'adaptations de certaines conditions d'accueil des demandeurs de protection internationale qui bénéficient d'une autorisation d'occupation temporaire et qui ont un revenu. Ces modalités varient en fonction de la composition du ménage et de son revenu.

Enfin, l'article 4 (4) a) 2ème § du règlement aide social dispose que « Les aides indûment touchées, suite à une fausse déclaration ou suite à l'omission par le bénéficiaire de l'aide sociale de déclarer le changement intervenu dans la composition de son ménage, respectivement suite à l'allégation de faits inexacts, seront récupérées à charge du bénéficiaire. » Pour rappel, le fait de dissimuler ses ressources dans le chef d'un demandeur, entraîne, aux termes de l'article 4 (4) a) 1er §, la possibilité pour le Ministre de limiter ou retirer le bénéfice de l'aide social.

7. SPECIAL NEEDS OF PARTICULAR CATEGORIES OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.30.

Q.30.A. Which of the different categories of persons with special needs considered in the directive are taken into account in the national legislation (see article 17, §1 which is a mandatory provision): disabled people, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence? Include in your answer all other categories envisaged in national law.

Les personnes vulnérables prises en considération dans la législation nationales sont :

- les mineurs non accompagnés (articles 2 i) et 12 de la loi du 5 mai 2006, articles 1er 7ème tiret, 2 et 7 du règlement aide social
- les mineurs (article 4 (1) du règlement aide sociale),
- les handicapés (article 4 (1) du règlement aide sociale),
- les personnes âgées (article 4 (1) du règlement aide sociale),
- les femmes enceintes (article 4 (1) du règlement aide sociale),
- les parents isolés accompagnés de mineurs (article 4 (1) du règlement aide sociale),
- les personnes qui ont subi des tortures, des viols ou d'autres formes graves de violence psychologique, physique ou sexuelle dont les besoins particuliers ont été constatés après une évaluation individuelle de leur situation (articles 1er, 8ème tiret et 4 (1) du règlement aide sociale).

Q.30. B. How is their specific situation taken into account (see articles 13, §2, second indent, 16 §4 second sentence and 17 which are mandatory provisions)?

Par rapport aux prévisions de l'article 13, § 2, le règlement aide sociale pose le principe général selon lequel « l'aide sociale est déterminée en fonction de la composition du ménage, de l'âge de ses membres, ainsi que des revenus dont dispose le ménage. Elle tient compte des besoins particuliers des personnes vulnérables, telles les mineurs, les mineurs non accompagnés, les handicapés, les personnes âgées, les femmes enceintes, les parents isolés accompagnés de mineurs et les personnes qui ont subi des tortures, des viols ou d'autres formes graves de violence psychologique, physique ou sexuelle (…) » (article 4 (1)).

En pratique, Madame la Commissaire du Gouvernement aux étrangers précise que les soins et suivis psychologiques pour des personnes ayant des besoins spécifiques, sont traités par le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux étrangers, comme les soins de santé, sur prescription médicale.

Nous avons par ailleurs déjà vu que la transposition en droit national de l'article 16 § 4 de la directive n'était pas formellement conforme (voir réponse sous la question 21. D. et l'article 4 (6) du règlement aide sociale) à celui-ci, alors que la disposition nationale ne prévoit pas explicitement la prise en considération de la qualité de personne vulnérable en cas de retrait ou limitation de l'aide sociale. Nous avons cependant également déjà vu qu'au cas où une telle situation serait soumise au contrôle des juridictions administratives luxembourgeoises, ces dernières devront apprécier la qualité de personne vulnérable pour toiser la question.

Avant l'entrée en vigueur du règlement aide social, il n'existait aucune disposition qui prévoyait explicitement la prise en compte particulière de la qualité de personne vulnérable, mais la pratique leur donnait la possibilité de bénéficier, à leur demande, de la guidance sociale offerte par les assistants sociaux du Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers. Pratiquement, certaines associations (comme le service réfugié de la CARITAS) ont toujours considéré les personnes vulnérables comme leur public cible et se sont toujours efforcées d'essayer de trouver des solutions adéquates pour chaque cas individuel.

Q.30. C. How and when are the special needs of the concerned persons supposed to be legally identified (see article 17 § 2 which is a mandatory provision and clarify how it has been interpreted by transposition)?

Pour la prise en considération de la qualité de personne vulnérable dans le cadre de la détermination de l'aide sociale, l'article 4 (1) in fine du règlement aide sociale prévoit que les besoins particuliers de ces personnes seront constatés « après une évaluation individuelle de leur situation ». L'article 4 (2) du règlement aide sociale dispose par ailleurs que « le bénéficiaire de l'aide sociale est tenu d'informer le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux étrangers en charge de l'instruction du dossier d'aide sociale de la composition de son ménage, de la présence de personnes ayant des besoins particuliers, (...) ». Le règlement ne prévoit cependant aucune procédure selon laquelle une éventuelle personne vulnérable, sera identifiée pour la prise en compte de ses besoins particuliers.

On peut penser que la pratique en cours avant l'entrée en vigueur du règlement aide sociale, sera poursuivie et que les associations continueront à identifier et orienter vers les services du Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers, les personnes vulnérables, voire à les prendre elles-mêmes en charge pour assurer, par exemple, un service de traduction et d'encadrement des mineurs non accompagnés.

Q.30. D. Is the necessary medical and other assistance provided to persons with special needs as requested by article 15, §2 which is a mandatory provision and in particular to victims of torture and violence as requested by article 20 which is a mandatory provision?

Le règlement aide sociale prend spécifiquement en compte les victimes de tortures et de violences, alors qu'il précise dans son article 1er, 8ème tiret que l'aide sociale comporte « les soins et suivis psychologiques gratuits pour les personnes en ayant besoin, notamment les victimes de traumatismes. ». Avant l'entrée en vigueur du règlement aide social, une telle prise en charge n'était pas prévue mais pas non plus exclue de la pratique.

En pratique, Madame la Commissaire du Gouvernement aux étrangers précise que les soins et suivis psychologiques pour des personnes ayant des besoins spécifiques, sont traités par le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux étrangers, comme les soins de santé, sur prescription médicale.

Q.31. About minors:

Q.31. A. Till which age are asylum seekers considered to be minor?

La législation luxembourgeoise prévoit que la majorité est acquise à l'âge de 18 ans.

Q.31. B. How is access of minor asylum seekers to the education system ensured? Is it at school or in case inside accommodation centres and can it be considered as similar to the conditions for nationals as requested by article 10, §1?

A part la disposition générale de l'article 1er , 7ème tiret du règlement aide sociale, qui prévoit l'encadrement du mineur non accompagné, il n'existe aucune disposition spéciale prévoyant l'accès des demandeurs mineurs à un quelconque système d'éducation, de telle manière qu'ils sont soumis à l'obligation générale de droit commun prévue à l'article 1er de la loi scolaire et qui dispose que « Tout enfant qui, au cours de l'année civile, atteindra l'âge de six ans révolus, recevra pendant neuf années consécutives l'instruction dans les matières prévues à l'article 23 de la présente loi.
(…)
Les dispositions du présent titre sont applicables aux enfants d'habitants du Grand-Duché qui ne possèdent pas la nationalité luxembourgeoise. »[568]

[568] Loi du 5 août 1963 portant réforme de l'éducation préscolaire et de l'enseignement primaire, (Mém. A 1963 p. 749).

Par ailleurs, le commentaire de l'article 1er, 7ème tiret du règlement aide sociale (mineurs non accompagnés) par l'autorité auteur de celui-ci, nous renseigne sur le fait que ledit encadrement comprend « une éducation appropriée, dans le respect de sa personne, de son histoire et de ses particularités culturelles et religieuses », ainsi que « l'obligation de garantir au mineur une formation scolaire et professionnelle adéquate », sans qu'une quelconque force obligatoire ne puisse toutefois être tirée de ce commentaire.

Des classes d'accueil linguistique pour les enfants étrangers sont ouvertes auprès de certaines écoles primaires et quelques lycées. Pour tous les problèmes liés à la scolarité des jeunes, on peut s'adresser au Service pour scolarisation des enfants étrangers du Ministère de l'Education Nationale qui dispose également de médiateurs culturels.

Q.31. C. Is access to education ensured not later than 3 months as requested by article 10, §2 (or after maximum one year if specific education for asylum seekers is provided) and till an expulsion decision is really enforced?

Il n'existe aucune disposition en ce sens mais la pratique assurait jusqu'à présent le respect du délai de trois mois ainsi que l'assurance de suivre les cours jusqu'à l'exécution matérielle d'une mesure d'éloignement, respectivement d'expulsion. Il importe cependant de relever qu'il est arrivé par le passé que les autorités de police se rendent directement à l'école, voire dans les classes des demandeurs mineurs déboutés afin d'exécuter la mesure d'éloignement.

Q.31. D. Is specific education (like language classes) available for asylum seekers, in particular to facilitate their effective access to the education system of the reception Member State (see article 10, §2 which is an optional provision)?

Il n'existe aucune disposition en ce sens mais pour les mineurs qui ne maîtrisent aucune des langues véhiculaires du Luxembourg et qui arrivent dans le pays au milieu de l'année scolaire, certaines associations ont mis des structures à disposition de ceux-ci, des classe de transition où ils obtiennent des connaissances de base en français, en mathématiques, en éducation civique et qui les aide ensuite à intégrer les cours linguistiques officiels ou à continuer leur scolarité normale.

Q.31. E. Are minors in general accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them? (see article 14, § 3)

En ce qui concerne les mineurs accompagnés, si aucune disposition spéciale n'existe en ce sens, la pratique a toujours voulu que les enfants mineurs soient hébergés ensembles avec leurs parents ou membres de la famille proche.

Q.31. F. Do minors with special needs enumerated by article 18, §2 which is a mandatory provision, have access to appropriate mental health care and qualified counselling?

A part l'article 1er, 7ème et 8ème tiret du règlement aide sociale qui dispose que l'aide sociale comporte « l'encadrement des mineurs » (sans autres précisions) et « les soins et suivis psychologiques gratuits pour les personnes en ayant besoin, notamment les victimes de traumatismes » (sans précisions quant aux mineurs non accompagnés qui seraient bénéficiaires de cette prestation), il n'existe aucune disposition spéciale en ce sens.

Cependant, le commentaire de ces dispositions par l'autorité compétente auteur de celles-ci, nous renseigne, alors qu'il y est précisé que l'encadrement du mineur non accompagné comprend « une aide psychologique qui réponde aux difficultés éventuelles liées au vécu de séparation et de traumatisme », sans qu'une quelconque force obligatoire ne puisse toutefois être tirée de ce commentaire.

La prise en charge psychologique des mineurs non accompagnés n'était pas plus prévue ni organisée sous l'empire de l'ancien texte. Avec l'arrivée massive de demandeurs du Kosovo à la fin des années 1990, l'Etat a cependant pris conscience de l'importance d'une telle prise en charge et le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers du ministère de la Famille a depuis engagé une infirmière qui reçoit et écoute les demandeurs (mineurs ou pas) qui en émettent le vœu. L'infirmière orientera encore éventuellement la personne concernée vers un médecin spécialiste.

Il convient de relever que si l'Etat ne semble à l'heure actuelle pas encore avoir mis en place les structures nécessaires pour la prise en charge spécifique des demandeurs mineurs non accompagnés qui ont été victimes de traumatismes, certaines associations, dont le Service Réfugié de la Caritas se sont saisies du problème.

Ainsi, ce service a toujours été à l'écoute des personnes traumatisées (mineures ou pas) et a mis en place une formation de traducteurs de langue russe, albanaise, serbo-croate, arabe et française dans le domaine de la santé mentale. L'association a ainsi recours à leurs services tant pour la simple écoute des demandeurs, que pour leur suivi psychologique, voire psychiatrique. Ce suivi est en pratique assuré par une équipe de professionnels, impliqués dans, ou intéressés par, la cause des réfugiés.

Nous relèverons encore que cette prise en charge n'est pas spécifique pour les demandeurs mineurs non accompagnés.

Il a pu encore être constaté que depuis quelques mois, en pratique, le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers place systématiquement les demandeurs mineurs non accompagnés dans les foyers d'accueil gérés par les ONGs (Caritas et Croix Rouge) qui disposent de personnels éducatifs et où la détection et la prise en charge des traumatismes seront ainsi plus aisées et efficientes que dans un autre centre.

Madame la Commissaire du Gouvernement aux étrangers précise qu'en pratique, la situation est assez difficile et qu'elle est liée à la situation générale au Luxembourg, de trouver des places dans le système des foyers et structures ayant pour objet le suivi socio-pédagogique et l'hébergement des mineurs, indépendamment de leur nationalité.

Q.31. G. How and when is organised the representation of unaccompanied minors (guardianship, special organisation) and regularly assessed? (see article 19, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

L'article 12 de la loi du 5 mai 2006 dispose qu' « un demandeur mineur non accompagné se voit désigner, dès que possible un tuteur qui l'assiste dans le cadre de l'examen de sa demande. (...) ». Ainsi, la disposition précitée ne prévoit pas explicitement la représentation juridique du mineur mais uniquement son assistance par un « tuteur » dans le cadre de l'examen de sa demande. L'utilisation du terme tuteur peut laisser cependant supposer qu'une tutelle soit ouverte selon les règles du code civil luxembourgeois[569] ou selon les règles de la loi nationale du mineur, si celle-ci prévoit un régime comparable à celui de la tutelle. La pratique qui existait avant l'entré en vigueur du règlement aide social consistait à tendre vers une telle situation.

Par ailleurs, l'article 1er, 7ème tiret du règlement aide social dispose que l'aide sociale comporte « l'encadrement des mineurs non accompagnés. » et le commentaire de cette disposition par l'autorité compétente auteur de celle-ci nous éclaire, en ce qu'il précise que cet encadrement comprend « le souci d'attribuer au mineur un tuteur qui assume la responsabilité parentale, ainsi qu'un conseil juridique qui les assiste pendant la procédure d'asile et au-delà », sans qu'une quelconque force obligatoire ne puisse toutefois être tirée de ce commentaire. En pratique, un tuteur sera désigné le plus rapidement possible à un demandeur si sa minorité n'est pas mise en doute.

Q.31. H. How is placement of unaccompanied minors organised (with adult relatives, a foster family, in special accommodation centres or other suitable accommodation)? (see article 19, §2 which is mandatory provision)

L'article 7 du règlement aide sociale fait la distinction entre mineurs non accompagnés de moins de 16 ans et mineurs de plus de 16 ans. Ainsi ; « les mineurs non accompagnés âgés de moins de 16 ans sont hébergés :

a) auprès de membres adultes de leur famille,
b) au sein d'une famille d'accueil,
c) dans un centre spécialisé dans l'accueil des mineurs,
d) dans d'autres lieux d'hébergement convenant pour les mineurs.

Les mineurs non-accompagnés âgés de 16 ans ou plus peuvent être placés dans des centres d'hébergement pour demandeurs d'asile adultes. »

[569] Article 390 du code civil : « La tutelle s'ouvre lorsque le père et la mère sont tous deux décédés ou se trouvent dans l'un des cas prévus à l'article 376. (...) »
Article 376 du code civil : « Perd l'exercice de l'autorité parentale ou en est provisoirement privé celui des père et mère qui se trouve dans l'un des cas suivants:
1° s'il est hors d'état de manifester sa volonté, en raison de son incapacité, de son absence, de son éloignement ou de toute autre cause ; (...) »

Cette nouvelle disposition devrait permettre d'améliorer des situations de fait qui existaient il n'y pas si longtemps et dans lesquelles il a pu être constaté que des demandeurs mineurs étaient logés indistinctement ensembles avec des demandeurs majeurs, dans les centres d'accueil.

L'article 7 précité devrait venir institutionnaliser la nouvelle pratique observée depuis quelques mois et qui tend à placer les mineurs non accompagnés dans les foyers d'accueil gérés par les ONGs Caritas et Croix Rouge qui disposent de personnels éducatifs spécialisés. Ainsi, les demandeurs âgés entre 13 et 15 sont placés dans un centre géré par la Croix-Rouge et les demandeurs âgés entre 16 et 18 ans dans un centre géré par la Caritas, les deux centres étant situés à proximité de Luxembourg-Ville. Il a pu également être observé que dans des situations exceptionnelles, de très jeunes demandeurs non accompagnés ont été placés dans des centres spéciaux pour mineurs (maison d'enfants) où du personnel spécialisé est constamment présent mais n'est cependant pas spécifiquement formé en matière de protection internationale.

Q.31. I. How is the tracing of the family members of the unaccompanied minors organised? Are measures taken to protect confidentiality of information when necessary? (see article 19, §3 which is a mandatory provision)

Aucune disposition de transposition n'existe en ce sens en droit luxembourgeois. Cependant, en pratique, le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers vient de conclure avec la Croix Rouge un accord de collaboration le 24 juillet 2006 au terme duquel la Croix-Rouge est notamment chargée de transmettre les messages des demandeurs d'asile vers leurs familles et inversement. Cette transmission se fera par l'intermédiaire de l'Agence centrale de recherches du Comité international de la Croix Rouge.

Sans plus de précision, les autorités compétentes nous informent également que la Croix-Rouge intervient dans la recherche des parents des mineurs non accompagnés.

8. EXCEPTIONAL MODALITIES OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.32. Apart from detention covered by the next question, are there exceptional modalities for reception conditions in the following cases and if yes, which ones and for how long are they applicable, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)?

Q.32. A. Persons with specific or special needs, regarding in particular the period of assessment of those needs?

Aucune modalité exceptionnelle en ce sens.

Q.32. B. Non availability of reception conditions in certain areas

Aucune modalité exceptionnelle en ce sens.

Q.32. C. Temporarily exhaustion of normal housing capacities

L'article 6 (1), 2ème § du règlement aide social, prévoit que « lorsque les capacités de logement normalement disponibles sont temporairement épuisées le bénéficiaire de l'aide sociale peut être logé dans une structure d'accueil d'urgence. »

Dans le passé, lors de l'afflux massif des demandeurs de protections (guerre au Kosovo), les structures d'Etat ayant été rapidement saturées, certains demandeurs de protection ont été logés dans des campings..

Q.32. D. The asylum seeker is confined to a border post

Aucune modalité exceptionnelle en ce sens.

Q.32. E. All other cases not mentioned in the directive (for instance urgent situation in case of a sudden high number of applicants outside a case of application of the directive on temporary protection).

Aucune modalité exceptionnelle en ce sens.

Q.33. Detention of asylum seekers (we do not cover the situation of rejected asylum seekers detained for the purpose of their return) (see articles 6 §2, 7 §3, 13, §2 2nd indent and 14 §8 which implies that the directive is in principle applicable in case of detention):

Q.33. A. In which cases or circumstances and for which reasons[1] (identity verification in particular if the persons have no or false documents, protection of public order or national security, refugee status determination, way of entry into the territory, etc) can an asylum seeker be detained during the asylum procedure till his request has been finally rejected. Quote precisely in English in your answer the legal basis for detention of asylum seekers in national law.

L'article 18 § 1er de la directive procédure a toujours été respecté, avant et après la transposition.

La base légale de la détention des demandeurs d'asile, est article 10 de la loi du 5 mai 2006 relative au droit d'asile et à des formes complémentaires de protection.

[1] Please specify if article 18 §1 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Member States shall not hold a person in detention for the sole reason that he/she is an applicant for asylum" is or not respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed).

Avant l'entrée en vigueur de la loi du 5 mai 2006, les seuls cas de placement en structure fermée de demandeurs d'asile qui ont pu être constatés en pratique étaient ceux des demandeurs célibataires pour lesquels le Luxembourg n'était pas compétent pour examiner la demande et en attendant leur transfert vers l'Etat responsable.

Depuis le 5 mai 2006, un demandeur de protection internationale peut désormais être théoriquement placé dans une structure fermée dans les cas suivants :

- lorsque la demande de protection internationale a été déposée dans le but de prévenir un éloignement de la personne concernée alors que celle-ci se trouve en séjour irrégulier au Luxembourg (article 10 (1) a) de la loi du 5 mai 2006),
- lorsque le demandeur refuse de coopérer avec les autorités dans l'établissement de son identité ou de son itinéraire de voyage (article 10 (1) b) de la loi du 5 mai 2006),
- lorsque le placement s'avère nécessaire afin de ne pas compromettre le transfert du demandeur vers le pays qui, en vertu d'engagements internationaux auxquels le Luxembourg est partie, est considéré comme responsable de l'examen de la demande (article 10 (1) d) de la loi du 5 mai 2006),
- lorsque le demandeur a induit en erreur les autorités en présentant de fausses indications ou de faux documents ou en dissimulant des informations ou documents concernant son identité ou sa nationalité qui auraient pu influencer la décision dans un sens défavorable (article 10. (1) c) combiné à l'article 20. (1) d) de la loi du 5 mai 2006),
- lorsque le demandeur a introduit une autre demande de protection internationale mentionnant d'autres données personnelles (article 10. (1) c) combiné à l'article 20. (1) e) de la loi du 5 mai 2006)
- lorsque le demandeur n'a produit aucune information permettant d'établir, avec une certitude suffisante, son identité ou sa nationalité, ou s'il est probable que, de mauvaise foi, il a procédé à la destruction ou s'est défait de pièces d'identité ou de documents de voyage qui auraient aidé à établir son identité ou sa nationalité (article 10. (1) c) combiné à l'article 20. (1) f) de la loi du 5 mai 2006),
- lorsque le demandeur ne dépose une demande qu'afin de retarder ou d'empêcher l'exécution d'une décision antérieure ou imminente qui entraînerait son éloignement du territoire (article 10. (1) c) combiné à l'article 20. (1) i) de la loi du 5 mai 2006)
- lorsque le demandeur est entré ou a prolongé son séjour illégalement sur le territoire du Grand-Duché et, sans motif valable, ne s'est pas présenté aux autorités et/ou introduit sa demande de protection internationale dans les délais les plus brefs compte tenu des circonstances de son entrée sur le territoire (article 10. (1) c) combiné à l'article 20. (1) k) de la loi du 5 mai 2006),
- lorsque le demandeur constitue un danger pour la sécurité nationale ou constitue un danger pour l'ordre public (article 10. (1) c) combiné à l'article 20. (1) l) de la loi du 5 mai 2006),
- lorsque le demandeur refuse de se conformer à l'obligation de donner ses empreintes digitales (article 10. (1) c) combiné à l'article 20. (1) m) de la loi du 5 mai 2006).

Il est à noter que dans les sept dernières hypothèses, la demande sera encore traitée sous le régime de la procédure accélérée.

En pratique et depuis l'entrée en vigueur de la loi, le ministre compétent restreint ses décisions de placement en structure fermée aux seuls cas de demandeurs majeurs, célibataires, de sexe masculin et pour lesquels le Luxembourg n'est pas compétent pour analyser la demande dans l'attente de leur transfert.

Q.33. B. Has your member State adopted measures to transpose §3 of article 7 which is an optional provision? If yes, how has this provision been legally understood (is it a case of detention or an obligation to stay in and not leave a certain place?) and for which reasons can an asylum seeker be "confined" in such a place?

Le Grand-Duché de Luxembourg a sans aucun doute transposé l'article 7, § 3 de la directive en prévoyant dans la loi dix cas et situations dans lesquels le Ministre des Affaires Etrangères peut décider de placer le demandeur dans une structure fermée. Sans le moindre doute également, l'obligation que l'Etat fait au demandeur dans ces dix situations de demeurer dans un lieu déterminé, a été légalement comprise comme un cas de détention (même si le terme n'est jamais employé), alors que la voie utilisée pour obliger de demeurer dans un lieu déterminé est le placement dans une structure fermée.

Q.33. C. Are there legally alternatives to detention, like obligation to report to the authorities, obligation to stay in a place, provision of a guarantor or of a financial guarantee?

Il n'existe aucune alternative légale aux dix cas dans lesquels le demandeur peut être placé dans une structure fermée.

Q.33. D. Which is the competent authority to order the detention of an asylum seeker? Explain if different authorities are involved to first take and later confirm the decision.

Le Ministre des Affaires Etrangères et de l'Immigration est l'autorité compétente pour ordonner le placement d'un demandeur d'asile en structure fermée (voir la réponse sous la question 33. H)

Q.33. E. For how long and till which stage of the asylum procedure can an asylum seeker be detained?

La mesure de placement est ordonnée aux termes de l'article 10 (1), première phrase, pour une durée maximale de trois mois. La loi n'établit aucun lien entre la durée de placement et le stade de la procédure d'examen de la demande.

La décision de placement ne peut être prorogée que dans la seule hypothèse où elle a été initialement ordonnée lorsque le demandeur n'a produit aucune information permettant d'établir, avec une certitude suffisante, son identité ou sa nationalité, ou s'il est probable que, de mauvaise foi, il a procédé à la destruction ou s'est défait de pièces d'identité ou de documents de voyage qui auraient aidé à établir son identité ou sa nationalité (article 10. (2) c) combiné à l'article 20. (1) f) de la loi du 5 mai 2006). Dans cette situation, le Ministre pourra proroger la mesure chaque fois pour une durée de trios mois sans que la durée totale ne puisse excéder douze mois.

Par ailleurs, l'article 10 (3) dispose que « lorsque la demande de protection internationale est formulée au cours d'une mesure de placement en vertu de la législation sur l'entrée et le séjour des étrangers, la durée du placement en vertu de la présente loi court à partir du jour du dépôt de la demande de protection internationale »

Q.33. F. In which places (can we call them "closed centres"?) are asylum seekers detained (places in a special closed centres reserved only to asylum seekers, together with returnees like illegal aliens or even in a normal prison, in case within separated areas or with the other detainees)? Indicate if a difference has to be made following the location of the "closed centres" at the border or on the territory? Which is the authority managing those places and is it the same as the one in charge of reception conditions?

Le Luxembourg ne dispose pas de centre de rétention aux frontières.

En ce qui concerne la structure fermée dans laquelle le demandeur peut être placé, la situation actuelle est extrêmement floue, alors qu'avant la loi du 5 mai 2006, aucune disposition ne traitait formellement du sujet et seuls les célibataires dont l'examen de la demande ne pouvait être fait par le Luxembourg étaient en pratique susceptibles de faire l'objet d'une telle mesure (situation actuellement prévue à l'article 10 (1) d)).

Ces personnes étaient placées dans un bloc spécial du centre pénitentiaire (au troisième étage d'un bâtiment à trois étages dont les deux autres étaient peuplés de détenus de droit commun), ensembles avec les étrangers en situation irrégulière qui faisaient l'objet d'une mesure de placement en attendant leur éloignement ou leur expulsion du territoire.

Même en ce qui concerne les étrangers en situation irrégulière placés, il n'existait pas de texte spécifique justifiant ce placement au sein même du centre pénitentiaire (réservé aux détenus préventifs et condamnés) de telle sorte que le r*èglement grand-ducal du 20 septembre 2002 créant un Centre de séjour provisoire pour étrangers en situation irrégulière*, est venu légitimer cette situation.

Le règlement grand-ducal du 20 septembre 2002 n'a cependant pas été modifié après l'adoption de la loi du 5 mai 2006 relative au droit d'asile et à des formes complémentaires de protection qui a institué pour la première fois le principe du placement du demandeur de protection internationale en structure fermée et il n'est actuellement pas prévu que le Centre de Séjour pour Etrangers en situation irrégulière reçoive des demandeurs de protection internationale, mais seuls des étrangers en situation irrégulière faisant l'objet d'une mesure de placement

Le Luxembourg vient par ailleurs de voter la loi du 24 août 2007 relative à la construction d'un Centre de Rétention. L'article 1er de la loi dipose que « Le Gouvernement est autorisé à procéder à la construction d'un centre de rétention qui est destiné à servir (…) de structure fermée au sens de l'article 10 de la loi du 5 mai 2006 relative au droit d'asile et à des formes complémentaires de protection. » La construction a débuté au cours de l'été 2007.

Nous pouvons donc légitimement nous attendre à ce qu'une réglementation transposant toutes les exigences de la directive, accompagne en temps utile cette réalisation.

Actuellement, le Ministre de la Justice est l'autorité responsable de la gestion du centre de séjour au sein du Centre pénitentiaire de Luxembourg et n'est pas le même que celui en charge des conditions d'accueil.

Q.33. G. Does UNHCR and NGOs have access to the places of detention and under which conditions?

L'article 13 (a) de la loi du 5 mai 2006 prévoit explicitement la situation, alors qu'il dispose que « Le Haut Commissariat des Nations Unies pour les réfugiés (HCR), les membres du Comité luxembourgeois des droits de l'enfant (ORK) ainsi que toute organisation disposant d'un agrément sont autorisés:
a) à avoir accès aux demandeurs, y compris ceux qui sont placés dans une structure fermée conformément à l'article 10 qui précède (…) »

Suite à la pression exercée par les ONGs, une permanence bihebdomadaire vient d'être établie (février 2007), en accord avec le ministre des Affaires étrangères et de l'Immigration, pendant laquelle les associations membres du Collectif Réfugiés sont autorisées à avoir des entretiens individuels avec les retenus et peuvent également organiser des activités récréatives en groupe.

Q.33. H. What appeal(s) can asylum seekers introduce against the fact he is detained? Is article 18 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Where an applicant for asylum is held in detention, Member States shall ensure that there is a possibility of speedy judicial review" respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed)?

Les demandeurs d'asile placés en structure fermée disposent d'un recours devant le tribunal administratif, qui statue comme juge du fond.

L'article 15 (9) de la loi du 28 mars 1972 concernant 1. l'entrée et le séjour des étrangers, 2. le contrôle médical des étrangers, 3. l'emploi de la main d'oeuvre étrangère[570] auquel l'article 10 (4) renvoie[571], prévoit que le tribunal administratif statue d'urgence et en tout cas dans les dix jours de l'introduction de la requête. Contre la décision du tribunal administratif, le demandeur placé pourra relever appel devant la Cour administrative dans un délai de trois jours. La Cour administrative statue d'urgence et en tout cas dans les dix jours de l'introduction de la requête.

[570] Memorial A 1972, N°24, p. 817
[571] Article 10 (4) de la loi du 5 mai 2006 : « Les paragraphes (3), (4), (5), (6), (8) et (9) de l'article 15 de la loi modifiée du 28 mars 1972 concernant 1. l'entrée et le séjour des étrangers; 2. le contrôle médical des étrangers; 3. l'emploi de la main-d'oeuvre étrangère sont applicables. »

Alors qu'avant la loi du 5 mai 2006, aucun texte législatif ne prévoyait la possibilité de placer un demandeur d'asile dans une structure fermée, à fortiori, aucun texte ne pouvait prévoir l'exercice d'une voie de recours rapide contre une telle décision. En tout état de cause, l'article 18 de la directive procédure fut respecté dès l'apparition légale dans l'ordre juridique luxembourgeois du principe de placement d'un demandeur d'asile en structure fermée.

Q.33. I. Is the directive on reception conditions considered to be in principle applicable to the places where asylum seekers are detained? In particular which information do they receive about their rights, which access do they have to legal advice and health care?

Ni la loi du 5 mai 2006, ni le règlement aide sociale, ne prévoit expressément qu'un demandeur de protection internationale a un droit d'accès de principe aux conditions d'accueil. C'est la délivrance de l'attestation prévue par l'article 6 (5) de la loi du 5 mai 2006 au demandeur et la possession dans son chef de celle-ci le long de la procédure d'examen de sa demande, qui lui confère le droit à l'aide sociale (art. 6(7) de la loi, voir Q. 10).

Cette attestation tient en pratique également lieu de « titre de circulation » du demandeur sur le territoire, l'article 6 (5), § 2 de la loi du 5 août 2006, prévoit qu'elle n'est pas délivrée au demandeur qui fait l'objet d'une mesure de placement.

Il n'est donc pas possible de dire que les dispositions de la directive sont applicables dans la structure fermée où les demandeurs sont retenus, puisque le législateur considère ainsi que c'est la possession de cette attestation qui donne droit à l'aide sociale et non la qualité de demandeur de protection internationale. Il est à noter que la loi n'exclut par ailleurs pas formellement l'accès aux conditions d'accueil dans la structure fermée.

Rappelons qu'aux termes de l'article 1er du règlement formation, l'aide sociale comporte les prestations suivantes :

- l'hébergement, assorti d'une pension complète ou bien d'une fourniture de repas respectivement de denrées alimentaires,
- l'allocation mensuelle,
- les soins médicaux d'urgence,
- la prise en charge des cotisations à titre de l'assurance volontaire prévue par l'article 2 du code des assurances sociales pour la durée de maintien de l'aide sociale,
- les moyens de transport publics du réseau du Grand- Duché de Luxembourg,
- la guidance sociale,
- l'encadrement des mineurs non- accompagnés,
- les soins et suivis psychologiques gratuits pour les personnes en ayant besoin, notamment les victimes de traumatismes ;

- les conseils en matière sexuelle et reproductive.
- des aides ponctuelles en cas de besoin,

En pratique, le demandeur ne recevra plus d'allocation mensuelle, et la situation reste floue en ce qui concerne l'accès aux autres conditions d'accueil. La pratique qui existait avant l'entrée en vigueur de la nouvelle loi et qui consistait à limiter les décisions de placement en structure fermée aux seuls cas de demandeurs majeurs, célibataires, de sexe masculin et pour lesquels le Luxembourg n'est pas compétent pour analyser la demande, et qui semble persister, ne permet pas une observation aisée (en raison du très faible nombre de demandeurs actuellement placés) en ce qui concerne l'accès aux conditions d'accueil des demandeurs placés.

Par ailleurs, l'article 15 (3) de la loi du 28 mars 1972 concernant 1. l'entrée et le séjour des étrangers, 2. le contrôle médical des étrangers, 3. l'emploi de la main d'œuvre étrangère, prévoit que la notification de la décision de placement est effectuée par un membre de la gendarmerie qui a la qualité d'officier de police judiciaire et que cette notification est faite par écrit et contre récépissé, dans la langue que l'étranger comprend, « sauf les cas d'impossibilité matérielle dûment constatés. »

L'article 15 (4) de la prédite loi prévoit que « pour la défense de ses intérêts, l'étranger retenu a le droit de se faire assister à titre gratuit d'un interprète », l'article 15 (5) précise qu'il « est immédiatement informé, par écrit et contre récépissé dans une langue qu'il comprend, sauf les cas d'impossibilité matérielle dûment constatés, de son droit de prévenir sa famille ou toute personne de son choix. Un téléphone est mis à sa disposition à cet effet. » et finalement, l'article 15 (6) exige qu'il soit « immédiatement informé, par écrit et contre récépissé, dans une langue qu'il comprend, sauf les cas d'impossibilité matérielle dûment constatés, de son droit de se faire examiner par un médecin et de choisir un avocat à la Cour d'un des barreaux établis au Grand-Duché ou de se faire désigner un avocat par le bâtonnier de l'ordre des avocats de Luxembourg. »

Q.33. J. Apart from freedom of movement, what are the main differences between normal reception conditions and exceptional modalities for reception conditions in case of detention, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)? If it is about closed centres, are the regulations of those places in line with the requirements of the directive (is article 13, §2, second indent of the directive following which "Member States shall ensure that standards of living is met (…) in relation to the situation of persons who are in detention" respected?).

Démuni de son attestation, le demandeur ne peut prétendre à avoir accès aux conditions d'accueil dans la structure fermée où il a été placé. Il bénéficie cependant de conditions en terme de nourriture, d'hygiène et de santé qui sont satisfaisantes et sont les mêmes auxquelles les étrangers, non demandeurs d'asile avec lesquels ils son placés, ont accès.

A défaut d'existence à l'heure actuelle d'un centre de rétention spécifique approprié pour étrangers, l'ensemble de cette population se trouve actuellement au centre pénitentiaire de Luxembourg, dans la même structure que les détenus de droit commun préventifs et condamnés.
Le 20 septembre 2002, un règlement grand-ducal (créant un Centre de séjour provisoire pour étrangers en situation irrégulière, et modifiant le règlement grand-ducal modifié du 24 mars 1989 concernant l'administration et le régime interne des établissements pénitentiaires.[572]) a tenté de légitimer cette situation de fait en se limitant à l'adoption des dispositions suivantes :

> Art. 1er. Il est créé au Centre pénitentiaire de Luxembourg une section spéciale pour les retenus appelée «Centre de séjour provisoire pour étrangers en situation irrégulière».
> Art. 2. Sont désignés par le mot «retenus» tous les étrangers qui subissent une mesure privative de liberté sur base de l'article 15 de la loi modifiée du 28 mars 1972 concernant l'entrée et le séjour des étrangers, le contrôle médical des étrangers et l'emploi de la main-d'oeuvre étrangère.[573]
> Art. 3. Durant leur séjour au centre, les retenus sont strictement séparés des autres détenus.
> Art. 4. Les retenus sont soumis à un régime spécial adapté à leur situation spécifique:
> 1) au plus tard le premier jour ouvrable après leur admission, les retenus sont informés sur leur situation administrative ainsi que sur leurs droits et devoirs;
> 2) les retenus sont examinés par un médecin dans les 24 heures de leur admission au centre et aussi souvent qu'un examen médical est nécessaire ultérieurement;
> 3) les retenus ne peuvent être soumis à aucune obligation de travail en prison;
> 4) sur demande écrite, le retenu peut être autorisé par le directeur à participer à des activités avec des détenus s'il est établi que ces activités sont dans l'intérêt du retenu;

L'article 2 du règlement grand-ducal précité prévoit cependant seulement que les retenus sont des étrangers en situation irrégulière faisant l'objet d'une mesure de placement et aucune disposition légale ou règlementaire ne désigne ce centre comme pouvant recevoir les demandeurs de protection internationale contre lesquels une décision de placement a été prise aux termes de l'article 10 de la loi du 5 mai 2006. Malgré cette situation de fait, il convient de relever que les demandeurs de protection internationale qui font malgré tout l'objet d'une mesure de placement dans cette structure fermée, se voient garantir un niveau de vie adéquat pour leur santé ainsi que leur subsistance. En effet, l'article 5 du règlement grand-ducal du 20 septembre 2002 dispose que « pour toutes les questions non réglées par le présent règlement grand-ducal, le règlement grand-ducal modifié du 24 mars 1989 concernant l'administration et le régime interne des établissements pénitentiaires est applicable. ». L'article 251 du prédit règlement grand-ducal du 24 mars 1989 dispose que « les détenus reçoivent aux heures usuelles des repas ayant une valeur nutritive suffisante au maintien de leur santé et de leurs forces » et son article 262 prévoit quant à lui que « les détenus malades bénéficient gratuitement des soins qui leur sont nécessaires ainsi que la fourniture de produits et spécialités pharmaceutique prescrits par le médecin de l'établissement. »

Pratiquement, les retenus (étrangers en situation irrégulière et demandeurs de protection internationale) n'ont pas accès à beaucoup d'activités et sont de facto moins bien traités que les [572] Mémorial A n°116 du 15 octobre 2002, page 2836.

[573] À noter que le demandeur d'asile placé en structure fermée l'est sur base d'une autre disposition légale, l'article 10 de la loi du 5 mai 2006 et qu'à ce jour, le règlement grand-ducal n'a pas été modifié en ce sens, détenus de droit commun, étant donné que ces deux populations ne peuvent être mêlées et que la quasi-totalité de la réglementation du centre pénitentiaire concerne les détenus. Le suivi socio psychologique a été très longtemps nettement insuffisant voire inexistant. Le manque de personnel qualifié et la charge de travail supplémentaire qu'a entraîné la création du Centre de séjour au sein du centre pénitentiaire, ont cruellement pesé sur ce problème.

En janvier 2006, un incendie s'est déclaré au Centre de séjour provisoire pour étrangers en situation irrégulière qui a fait un mort. Suite à cet incendie, la situation de certains retenus s'est empirée en ce qu'ils ont été enfermés 23 heures sur 24 et n'ont pu avoir accès au téléphone pendant des semaines.

La situation s'est actuellement assouplie mais n'est toujours pas satisfaisante, à défaut de bâtiment et de règlementations appropriée aux étrangers placés en rétention.

Q.33. K. Are measures taken to avoid detention of asylum seekers with special needs (if yes, which ones?) or are special measures taken because of their needs?

La pratique nous a permis de constater à la date de rédaction des présentes, qu'autant avant l'entrée en vigueur de la loi du 5 mai 2006, qu'après celle-ci, seuls des demandeurs célibataires, on fait l'objet d'une mesure de placement. Nous pouvons raisonnablement estimer qu'un demandeur vulnérable ne fera pas l'objet d'une telle mesure même s'il n'existe aucun texte spécifique en ce sens.

Q.33. L. Can minor asylum seekers be detained together with relatives? Can unaccompanied minor asylum seekers be detained? If yes, are there special measures which take into account that children are concerned?

Aucun texte n'interdirait la réalisation de ces hypothèses. A noter que dans le passé, en l'absence de structure appropriée, des étrangers (pas nécessairement demandeurs de protection internationale) mineurs ont fait l'objet de mesure de rétention administrative et se sont ainsi vus placés seuls au centre de séjour pour étrangers avec d'autres retenus majeurs (aucun nouvel autre cas ne semble s'être produit depuis.)

Q.33. M. In particular is article 10 regarding access to education of minors respected in those places?

Aucune prévision légale en ce sens n'existe et la pratique constatée jusqu'à ce jour ne nous a pas permis de conclure par l'affirmative ou la négative.

Q.33. N. How many asylum seekers are for the moment detained in your Member State? Which proportion does this represent in comparison of the total number of asylum seekers at the same moment?

Au jour de la rédaction du présent rapport, un seul demandeur d'asile (de sexe mâle, célibataire) était placé au Centre de Séjour provisoire pour Etrangers en situation irrégulière.

9. ORGANISATION OF THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.34. Explain if the system of providing reception conditions is centralised or decentralised (which levels of government do provide practically reception conditions?) (do not confuse this question with question number 3 about the competence to make rules about reception conditions).

Le système est centralisé. Le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers qui dépend du Ministère de la Famille et de l'Intégration est responsable des prestations des conditions d'accueil.

Q.35. In case, are accommodation centres public or/and private (managed by NGOs? If yes, are the NGOs financially supported by the State?)

La plupart des centres d'accueil sont gérés directement par le Ministère de la Famille. Ceux qui sont gérés par des ONGs sont soutenus financièrement par l'Etat.

Q.36. In case, how many accommodation centres are there in your Member State (distinguish in your answer between public and private centres)?

- 22 centres d'accueil publics
- 20 hôtels/pensions/campings privés
- 4 centres d'accueil gérés par les ONGs (CARITAS et Croix Rouge)

Q.37. Is there in the legislation a plan or are there rules in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory of your Member State to avoid their concentration in some areas like big cities or to share the costs of their reception between central, regional and local authorities?

S'il n'existe aucun plan ou disposition écrite en ce sens, la pratique nous enseigne que les demandeurs sont répartis sur tout le territoire du Grand-Duché de Luxembourg, mais de manière très inégale selon les quantons et les communes.

Une question parlementaire a été posée en ce sens le 7 mars 2006 (annexe 8) et la réponse de la Ministre de la Famille et de l'Intégration du 19 avril 2006 (annexe 9) laisse présager de l'intervention prochaine d'une réglementation de répartition des demandeurs sur tout le territoire, contraignante pour les communes.

Q.38. Does a central body representing all the actors (like NGOs) involved in reception conditions exist? Does it play a consultative role for the State authorities, a coordination role for the actors or any other role?

Il n'existe pas de telle institution qui réunirait tous les acteurs impliqués dans la mise en œuvre des conditions d'accueil. Les associations oeuvrant pour la cause des demandeurs d'asile se sont cependant regroupées dans un collectif, le Collectifréfugiésluxembourg-lëtzebuergerflüchtlingsrot (LFR ou Collectif Réfugiés) afin de pouvoir peser le plus efficacement possible dans ce domaine.

Le Collectif prend régulièrement position par voie de communiqués de presse sur les questions relatives aux conditions d'accueil.

Le collectif a été particulièrement actif lors des discussions et travaux préparatoires de la loi du 5 mai 2006.

Q.39. Q.39. A. Which is the body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions as requested by article 23 which is mandatory provision? Include in your answer which is the competent ministry (Interior, Social affairs, etc) for reception conditions?

A l'heure actuelle, aucun texte ne désigne formellement de corps spécifiquement en charge de la surveillance, du contrôle et de l'orientation de l'ensemble des conditions d'accueil définies par la directive.

Ces tâches relèvent cependant en partie des compétences du ministre de la Famille et de la Solidarité et de son Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers.

Le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers, fut crée auprès du ministère de la Famille et de la Solidarité par la loi du 27 juillet 1993 concernant l'intégration des étrangers au Grand-Duché de Luxembourg ainsi que l'action sociale en faveur des étrangers (annexe 12).

La mission du Commissariat est « d'apporter son appui et d'organiser toutes les autres actions prévues par la présente loi en faveur des immigrants et des personnes étrangères s'établissant au Grand-Duché de Luxembourg. » (article 1er de la loi).

L'article 2 de cette loi dispose que « L'appui à porter aux personnes visées à l'article 1er consiste notamment à :
a) s'occuper, en cas de besoin, du logement et de l'hébergement des étrangers ;*
b) aider les étrangers à s'adapter à la vie sociale, économique et culturelle de la collectivité luxembourgeoise moyennant, notamment, l'aide matérielle et psychosociale, l'information, la formation, l'orientation, le regroupement familial et le soutien de l'organisation des loisirs ;
c) intervenir, en cas de besoin, dans l'organisation du voyage et de l'accueil des étrangers et de leur famille et aider, le cas échéant, les étrangers lors de leur rapatriement ;
d) encourager et appuyer au profit des étrangers les initiatives et les activités sociales ;

e) encourager et soutenir les initiatives et activités destinées à promouvoir l'échange interculturel entre Luxembourgeois et étrangers y compris par des recherches sociologiques sur l'immigration et l'intégration des étrangers ;
f) encourager les étrangers à participer à la vie sociale ;
g) offrir une formation d'intégration sociale. »

L'article 14, deuxième alinéa de la loi précise que « Les aides indiquées à l'article 2, sub a) consistent à (...) gérer ou collaborer avec d'autres organismes à la création et la gestion (...) de centres d'accueil réservés au logement provisoire des demandeurs d'asile »

Le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers est encore chargé « d'organiser et de coordonner, en étroite collaboration avec les autres instances concernées, les mesures spécifiées aux articles 2 et 14 de la présente loi » et « d'assurer la surveillance de l'application des dispositions des articles 5 à 11 et 14 à 17 de la présente loi » (article 27 a et j) de la loi.

Le ministre de la Famille oriente, surveille et contrôle à fortiori le niveau du logement des demandeurs d'asile en ce que l'article 5 de la même loi dispose que « nul ne peut, à titre principal ou accessoire, ouvrir, faire fonctionner ou gérer ni un foyer d'accueil hébergeant, même temporairement, des travailleurs étrangers ni un centre d'accueil réservé au logement provisoire des demandeurs d'asile, s'il n'est en possession d'un agrément délivré par le ministre de la Famille et de la Solidarité*.* ».

On relèvera encore que l'article 10 in fine de la loi précise qu'« En cas de risque imminent pour la santé physique ou morale d'un usager d'un service, le commissaire du Gouvernement prend l'initiative afin que toute mesure appropriée soit prise par l'autorité compétente en vue de la protection de l'usager concerné. »

L'article 15 alinéa 2 de la loi prévoit encore que « chaque foyer d'accueil et chaque centre d'accueil est doté d'un règlement d'ordre intérieur proposé par le commissaire du Gouvernement, le cas échéant, après consultation des usagers, et approuvé par le ministre. »

Q.39. B. Has your Member State (like the Czech Republic did recently) approved quality standards (not necessary legally binding) for housing services (for instance about the number of persons per bedroom on the basis of its size, number of accessible toilets, bathrooms, showers and washing machines per number of persons, existence of common rooms with radio, television, newspapers, books, computers, accessibility of telephone, existence of recreative rooms for children,…) to be respected in particular in accommodation centres?

Il n'existe pas de tels critères qui seraient officiellement publiés mais la Commissaire du Gouvernement aux Etrangers nous informe que : "A l'heure actuelle, il existe des critères de rémunérations de prestations minimales que doivent remplir les pensions de famille. Ces critères déterminent les conditions minimales en termes de restauration et de logis que doivent obligatoirement remplir les différentes pensions. Au cas où les prestations offertes aux demandeurs d'asile dépassent le minimum requis, la rémunération à fournir par le locataire sera d'autant plus importante.

Cette grille des critères a été élaborée par le Service de Logement du CGE, mais n'a pas encore été définitivement adoptée."

Q.39. C. How is this system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions organised?

voir la réponse sous Q.39 A

Q.39. D. Does the body in charge of guidance, control and monitoring produce reports about the level of reception conditions? If yes, how frequently and are they public?

L'article 27 m) de la loi du 27 juillet 1993 concernant l'intégration des étrangers au Grand-Duché de Luxembourg prévoit que le Commissaire du Gouvernement est chargé « de soumettre au ministre (de la Famille et de l'Intégration) un rapport annuel comprenant un bilan de l'année passée, l'inventaire des services existants et les statistiques y relatives ainsi que les propositions d'activités futures. » qui devrait, à défaut de précision, concerner l'ensemble des dispositions de la loi et donc celles touchant à l'hébergement des demandeurs d'asile.

Q.40. Q.40. A. What is the total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions for the last year for which figures are available (see article 22 obliging Member States to calculate those statistics about which we also asked the Commission to require them from Member States for mid June)?

Selon Madame la Commissaire du Gouvernement aux étrangers, au premier janvier 2007, 1934 personnes étaient couvertes par les conditions d'accueil au Luxembourg.

Il convient cependant de préciser que toutes ces personnes ne sont pas des demandeurs de protection internationale, alors que ce nombre couvre toutes les personnes qui bénéficient d'aides sociales (bénéficiaires du statut de tolérance, bénéficiaires de protection internationale en attente de devenir indépendants, déboutés en attente d'un retour volontaire et déboutés en possession d'une « autorisation de séjour provisoire » en attente de trouver un logement et un emploi)

Q.40. B. What is the total budget of reception conditions in euro for the last year for which figures are available?

Le budget total pour couvrir les conditions d'accueil et les aides sociales au bénéfice des personnes énumérées sous la question 40.A, était de 14.483.723,27.-€ pour l'année 2006.

Q.40. C. What is the average cost of reception conditions in euro per asylum seeker for the last year for which figures are available?

Alors que le montant du budget communiqué par le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux étrangers ne couvre pas les seules conditions d'accueil destinées aux demandeurs de protection internationale, il n'a pas été possible de calculer le coût moyen par demandeur de protection internationale.

Q.40. D Are the costs of reception conditions of asylum seekers supported by the central/federal or federated government or are they shared with regional and/or local authorities?

Le budget de l'Etat finance le coût intégral de l'accueil et de l'entretien des demandeurs d'asile.

Q.40. E. Is article 24 § 2 of the directive following which "Member States shall allocate the necessary resources in connection with the nationals provisions enacted to implement this directive" respected?

Il est actuellement trop tôt pour se prononcer, les nouvelles législations et règlementions de transposition étant trop récentes pour permettre d'avoir une approche efficace de la question. Il semble que les dispositions nationales prises à ce jour aux fins de la transposition de la directive (sans aborder la question des disposition de la directive qui n'ont pas été transposées, cf. Q.6), sont mises en œuvre avec l'aide de ressources mises à disposition par l'Etat qui paraissent suffisantes. On relèvera cependant, que la seule présence d'un gestionnaire et/ou de gardes de sécurité dans certains centres d'hébergement est insuffisante et ne permet pas d'offrir aux demandeurs logés dans ces centres un encadrement socio-éducatif approprié.

Q.41. Q.41. A. What is the total number of persons working for reception conditions?

Au 25 mai 2007, selon les informations du Commissariat du Gouvernement aux étrangers, il y a vingt-quatre personnes qui travaillent au sein du Commissariat du Gouvernement aux étrangers. Ce sont des fonctionnaires, des employés et des ouvriers (onze travailleurs sociaux et de santé, dont quatre à mi-temps, deux employés administratifs en charge du volet accueil administratif et aides financières, huit personnes, dont deux à mi-temps, pour le volet hébergement et deux ouvriers, cinq personnes, dont deux à mi-temps pour le service comptabilité

Q.41. B. How is the training of persons working in accommodation centres organised? Does it take into account specific needs of unaccompanied minors when relevant as well as the gender dimension? (see article 14 §5, 19 § 4 and also 24 §1 which are mandatory provisions)?

Seul l'article 7 in fine du règlement aide sociale prévoit que « le personnel chargé de mineurs non accompagnés a une formation appropriée concernant leurs besoins et est tenu par le devoir de confidentialité prévu en ce qui concerne les informations dont il a connaissance du fait de son travail », rien n'étant prévu pour la formation de personnes travaillant de manière spécifique dans les centres d'accueil.

En pratique une formation en "gestion de conflit et d'agressivité" de quelques membres du personnel des centres a récemment été organisée. Selon les informations données par le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux étrangers, le cahier des charges à la base des soumissions gardiennages des centre d'accueil, exige que les agents de surveillance de la société engagés dans les différents foyers, reçoivent une formation en gestion des conflits interculturels. De manière plus générale, ces agents auraient suivi des formations en premiers secours, sécurité et hygiène alimentaire. Les assistants sociaux et éducateurs ont reçu une formation sociale de par leurs études de base. Enfin, d'après le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers, tous les agents du Commissariat ont également suivi une formation en gestion des conflits interculturels, qui serait prévue d'être complétée périodiquement.

Q.41. C. Are there rules about the deontology of persons working in accommodation centres, in particular on confidentiality?

Seul l'article 7 in fine du règlement aide sociale prévoit que « le personnel chargé de mineurs non accompagnés a une formation appropriée concernant leurs besoins et est tenu par le devoir de confidentialité prévu en ce qui concerne les informations dont il a connaissance du fait de son travail. »

Par ailleurs, d'après les informations de la Commissaire du Gouvernement aux Etrangers,, le cahier des charges à la base de la soumission gardiennage du Ministère de la Famille et de l'Intégration, impose aux sociétés d'exiger cette obligation de confidentialité de leurs agents, obligation qui est reprise dans le contrat conclu avec la société à laquelle le marché est adjugé.

Aucune réglementation plus précise et exhaustive n'existe à l'heure actuelle.

10. IMPACT OF THE DIRECTIVE

Legal impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.42. Specify if there are or not big problems with the translation of the directive in the official language of your Member State and give in case a list of the worst examples of provisions which have been badly translated? (please note that this question has in particular been added to the questionnaire concerning the new Member States)

Il n'existe aucun problème de traduction, alors qu'une des langues officielles administratives est le Français.

Q.43. Where there precise legal rules on reception conditions for asylum seekers before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the directive (if yes, specify what the nature of those rules was (legislation, regulation, administrative instructions,…)?

Avant la transposition de la directive, la loi du 3 avril 1996 portant création d'une procédure relative à l'examen d'une demande d'asile[574] règlementait la matière. Son article 11 disposait que « Il est délivré au demandeur d'asile une attestation tenant lieu de pièce d'identité et lui conférant le droit à une aide sociale suivant des modalités à fixer par règlement grand-ducal.» Avant l'adoption du règlement aide social en exécution de la loi du 5 mai 2006, le règlement grand-ducal du 4 juillet 2002 fixant les conditions et les modalités d'octroi d'une aide sociale aux demandeurs d'asile était applicable à la matière[575].

Q.44. Did the legal rules applicable to reception conditions become more clear, precise, coherent or detailed with the adoption of the transposition norms (for instance do you now have after the transposition one basic text dealing with reception conditions instead of numerous different texts in the past?

Les règles applicables aux conditions d'accueil avant l'entrée en vigueur de la loi du 5 mai 2006 formaient déjà, avant la transposition de la directive, un ensemble cohérent, alors qu'elles étaient rassemblées dans un seul et unique texte qui avait pour seule finalité de les règlementer (règlement grand-ducal du 4 juillet 2002).

Suite à la transposition, l'introduction dans la nouvelle réglementation de la notion de personnes vulnérables et la prise en compte de leurs besoins spécifiques, l'intérêt porté aux mineurs et leurs besoins particuliers, l'obligation d'informer les demandeurs, rendent la nouvelle réglementation plus complète et détaillée que la précédente.

Le droit pour les demandeurs d'accès au marché du travail aux termes du neuvième mois, est également apparu avec la loi du 5 mai 2006.

Q.45. Did the transposition of the directive imply important changes in national law or were the changes of minor importance? In case, list the most important changes that have been introduced.

Le changement le plus important qui est intervenu à l'occasion de la transposition en droit luxembourgeois de la directive, est l'ouverture du marché de l'emploi aux demandeurs de protection internationale.

Les changements créés par la transposition sont sinon assez minimes. On relèvera cependant, le rajout dans la législation du principe de l'encadrement des mineurs non accompagnés, des soins et suivis psychologiques gratuits pour les personnes en ayant besoin et des conseils en matière sexuelle et reproductive à titre de composante supplémentaire de l'aide sociale. Le règlement aide social innove encore en posant le principe de l'obligation d'information des demandeurs quant aux avantages dont ils peuvent bénéficier et aux obligations à leur charge.

[574] Memorial A 1996, N°30, p. 1025
[575] Memorial A 2002, N°84, p. 1736

Political impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.46. Explain briefly if there has been an important debate about the transposition of the directive (in particular in the Parliament, but possibly also in the government, between political parties, including in medias, etc; underline in case the main points which have been discussed or have created difficulties)

La nouvelle loi d'asile a fait l'objet d'une procédure d'approbation émaillée régulièrement lors des avis émis par les différentes instances qui ont eu de larges échos dans la presse. La procédure d'approbation a d'abord été marquée par deux oppositions formelles du Conseil d'Etat , puis une troisième.
Le fait que la Chambre des Députés n'a pas tenu compte des remarques du Conseil d'Etat a rendu nécessaire une deuxième lecture du projet de loi devant la Chambre des Députés. Il a aussi contribué à un débat public assez critique.
La Commission parlementaire chargée d'examiner le projet de loi a consulté bon nombre d'organisations (annexe 10).

Les points du débat les plus discutés et critiqués étaient les suivants :

La durée de rétention maximale des demandeurs qui, dans un cas de figure peut s'étendre sur un an, qui a fait l'objet de nombreuses critiques (voir la réponse sous la question 33. E)
.
Par ailleurs, le fait que le demandeur placé le soit au Centre Pénitentiaire, est régulièrement critiqué, (notamment par l'ECRI dans son troisième rapport sur le Luxembourg du 16 décembre 2005 et par le Procureur Général d'Etat dans le rapport d'activités du ministère de la Justice 2005) et beaucoup plaident, dans l'attente de la construction d'un centre de rétention autonome en-dehors du Centre Pénitentiaire, pour une solution à courte échéance.

Il convient de mentionner le fait que le LFR a adopté, sur demande du gouvernement, un avis sur la rétention des demandeurs d'asile le 13 janvier 2005. Il a été reçu par le Ministre délégué à l'Immigration à cet effet, qui a promis d'associer les ONGs dans l'élaboration du concept.

Les autres points les plus vivement discutés étaient :

- L'accès au marché de l'emploi des demandeurs d'asile suite à la transposition de la directive accueil,
- La suppression du double degré de juridiction (également objet d'une opposition formelle du Conseil d'Etat)
- Les deux projets de règlements grand-ducaux (formation et aide sociale) n'ont quasiment pas été discutés ou fait l'objet d'un débat public. Le LFR a néanmoins élaboré deux avis sur ces projets. Il faut aussi soulever le fait que lors du deuxième débat parlementaire sur le projet de loi asile, la motion introduite par rapport au projet de règlement formation et demandant l'extension du contrat d'apprentissage jusqu'à la mesure d'éloignement effective, a été rejetée.

Un débat public sur la loi du 5 mai 2006 a été organisé par le Comité de Liaison et des Associations d'Etrangers (CLAE) lors du Festival de l'Immigration en mars 2006 avec la participation du Ministre délégué à l'Immigration, du UNHCR et du LFR.

Dans le cadre du débat public, il convient aussi de signaler une pétition lancée via Internet le 14 février 2006 intitulée « Pour une autre loi sur le droit d'asile » contre certaines dispositions du projet. Cette pétition récoltait 1214 signatures - dont celles de plusieurs personnalités de la société civile - elle a été remise le 4 avril 2006 au président de la Chambres des Députés. Il faut aussi citer des piquets de manifestation et journées de sensibilisation du comité d'action migrations.

Les nombreuses critiques expliquent sans doute l'approbation d'une motion parlementaire lors de la deuxième lecture du projet de loi dans laquelle la Chambre des députés invite le gouvernement :
A se donner les moyens pour mettre en œuvre de la façon la plus efficace et la plus humaine la nouvelle loi et à procéder à une évaluation de la loi au bout de deux années suivant sa mise en vigueur, tenant compte des évolutions européennes en matière d'harmonisation des politiques d'asile et d'immigration tout comme des enseignements tirés de la mise en oeuvre de la loi (compte rendu de la Chambre des Députés 5 avril 2006).

A côté du débat entourant la nouvelle loi d'asile, la problématique de l'hébergement des demandeurs d'asile a suscité l'intervention de l'ECRI dans son troisième rapport sur le Luxembourg du 16 décembre 2005 (pp 16-18).

Outre l'accès au marché du travail, les conditions d'accueil ont cependant à peine été abordées dans ces débats. L'élaboration du règlement grand-ducal aide sociale s'est faite assez confidentiellement et il n'y a pas eu de véritables débats publics la concernant. Les projets de règlements grand-ducaux ont cependant été modifiés suite aux avis de la Chambre de Travail et de la Chambre des Employés privés pour le règlement formation et à l'avis de l'UNHCR pour le règlement aide sociale.

Q.47. Did the transposition of the directive contribute to make the internal rules stricter or more generous? In particular, did your Member State use the occasion of the transposition to abolish more favourable provisions of national law? Does your Member State still have rules more favourable than the provisions of the directive (if yes, try to give the more important examples).

L'ouverture du marché du travail au bénéfice des demandeurs est l'effet le plus positif de la transposition.

Il est à noter qu'avant la transposition, aucun texte ne prévoyait la possibilité de détenir des demandeurs d'asile, pratique qui se serait révélée illégale avant l'entrée en vigueur de la loi du 5 mai 2006 et que celle-ci consacre désormais.

Le Luxembourg était déjà doté d'une réglementation assez solide quant aux conditions d'accueil à offrir aux demandeurs d'asile et la nouvelle réglementation ne supprime aucun « acquis d'aide sociale ». Le règlement aide social est une norme de transposition qui se veut presque parfaite, mis à part les lacunes rencontrées, et il ne faut pas perdre de vue que l'effectivité de ses dispositions innovatrices restent encore à constater dans la pratique.

Le règlement aide sociale contient une série de nouveautés positives et la transposition de la directive semble susceptible d'améliorer globalement l'accueil des demandeurs. Les avancées ont notamment trait aux personnes vulnérables et aux informations à donner aux demandeurs.

On peut encore relever que depuis que le Luxembourg s'est doté pour la première fois d'une réglementation en la matière en 2002, il a su jouer de sa petite taille en offrant aux demandeurs d'asile la gratuité des transports publics sur tout le territoire, ce qui est incontestablement une prévision plus favorable pour ne pas exister dans la directive.

Cette mise à disposition des transports publics sert incontestablement à la réalisation effective du droit de liberté de circulation du demandeur sur tout le territoire.

11. ANY OTHER INTERESTING ELEMENT

Q.48. What are in your view the weaknesses and strengths of the system of reception conditions in your Member State?

La plus grande faiblesse juridique est l'inexistence d'une règlementation sur le lieu exact de la structure fermée dans laquelle le demandeur peut être placé ainsi que son accès aux conditions d'accueil. L'absence de réglementation spécifique relative à la formation du personnel travaillant dans les centres d'hébergements en est une autre.

En plus, d'un point de vue pratique, à part un foyer accueillant 220 demandeurs où une permanence journalière de 4 heures est assurée alternativement par deux éducatrices graduées et une assistante sociale du Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers, seuls les centres d'accueil gérés par des ONGs prévoient un encadrement social sur place. De manière générale, dans les structures d'accueil publiques, les assistants sociaux du Ministère de la Famille essaient d'assurer une permanence ponctuelle (1 fois toute les 3 semaines).

Globalement, les conditions d'accueil des demandeurs d'asile s'améliorent depuis 2003 où elles étaient plus qu'insuffisantes. Cette situation s'expliquait par l'arrivée massive de demandeurs à cette période, qui, combinée à une certaine désorganisation dans les centres, y avait favorisé la création de problèmes d'hygiène et de discipline. La situation s'est améliorée en 2004 avec la signature de Conventions entre l'Etat et les ONGs (Cartias et Croix-Rouge) pour la gestion de quelques centres. En 2005, la situation s'est encore améliorée avec la baisse du nombre de demandes d'asile. Le problème dû à l'absence de réglementation spécifique relative à la formation appropriée du personnel des centres, reste cependant à l'heure actuelle préoccupant.

L'accent de la part du Commissariat de Gouvernement aux Etrangers est souvent plus mis sur le contrôle plutôt que l'encadrement. De nombreux foyers d'accueil publics sont surveillés par une firme de gardiennage (pour protéger les résidents et les structures).

Les points forts se situent surtout au niveau de l'accès aux soins médicaux efficace par le biais du paiement des cotisations de sécurité sociale des demandeurs. Le Commissariat du Gouvernement aux Etrangers organise encore une consultation médicale pour soins de santé mentale dans un foyer géré par la Croix-Rouge.

La petite taille du pays permet une organisation de l'aide sociale assez bien structurée, beaucoup de structures d'aide sont accessibles aux demandeurs même si elles ne sont pas spécifiquement conçues pour eux. Ainsi, seules quelques rares institutions spécialisées peuvent apporter des réponses adéquates.

Q.49. Mention any good practice in your Member State which could be promoted in other Member States

- La gratuité des transports publics,
- La procédure spéciale, protectrice des droits des bénéficiaires des conditions d'accueil, prévue à l'article 4 (5) du règlement aide sociale en cas de limitation ou de retrait des conditions d'accueil (Question 21 C).

Q.50. Please add here any other interesting element about reception conditions in your Member State which you did not had the occasion to mention in your previous answer.

QUESTIONNAIRE FOR THE NATIONAL REPORT ON THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE DIRECTIVE :
RECEPTION CONDITIONS OF 27 JANUARY 2003

IN: Malta
by
Dr Katrine Camilleri LL.D.
Lawyer
katrinecamilleri@yahoo.com
22/08/07

1. NORMS OF TRANSPOSITION

Q.1. Identify the main norm of transposition (indicate the title, date, number, date of entry into force and references of publication into the official journal) and indicate its legal nature (legislative, regulatory, administrative); indicate in your answer if this norm was only devoted to the directive or if it has been included in a more general text and indicate in that case by quoting precisely the numbers of the provisions adopted to transpose the directive.

Title: Reception of Asylum Seekers (Minimum Standards) Regulations, 2005
Date: 2005
Number: L.N. 320 of 2005
Date of entry into force: 22nd November, 2005

This norm was devoted exclusively to the transposition of the Directive

Q.2. List by order of importance by using numbers (1, 2, 3) the others norms of transposition if there are more than one (indicate for each norm the title, date, number and references of publication into the official journal; include in your answer the administrative measures taken to ensure implementation of the directive and of the transposition norms like regulations, administrative circulars, special instructions,…)

Title: Refugees Act, 2000
Date: 1st October, 2001
Number: Act XX of 2000, Chapter 420 of the Laws of Malta

Q.3. Explain which level of government is competent to adopt the legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers (specify in particular in case of a federal or regional State, if it is the federal/central power or the components; in case, specify below when it is impossible for you to answer a question because it is about the competence of the components and it is impossible for you to gather reliable information about all of them)

In Malta there is only a central government, which is responsible for adopting legal norms relating to reception conditions for asylum seekers.

Q.4. Explain the legal technical choices done to transpose the directive (comment on the nature and level of the norms used to do the transposition: legislative, regulatory, administrative like instructions, etc). Add any other element about the technique of transposition of the directive which is interesting for the implementation of Community law.

Nature of norms of transposition: Regulation

The said regulations are considered as 'subsidiary legislation' enacted by virtue of the powers conferred by the parent act, in this case in terms of article 19 of the Refugees Act, 2000.

Q.5. Mention if there is a general tendency to just copy the provisions of the directive into national legislation without redrafting or adaptation them to national circumstances? If yes, give some of the worst examples and explain if there is a risk that those provisions remain unapplied or will create difficulties of implementation in the future.

The vast majority of the provisions of the Directive were simply copied into national legislation; in a few instances, changes were made to adapt the provisions of the Directive to national circumstances.

Q.6. Have all the texts necessary to ensure the effective implementation of the new rules of transposition been adopted, prepared or at least foreseen in the future (for example a regulation completing a new law and the necessary instructions telling the administration how to apply the new rules)?

Although, by and large, the necessary legislative framework is in place, the provisions of the Directive are not all effectively implemented. Possibly, more input is needed at the level of instructions to the administration regarding the implementation of the new rules.

2. BIBLIOGRAPHY

Q.7. Has an in-depth preparatory study been made public about the changes at the occasion of the transposition? If yes, thanks for trying to provide us a copy (please contact to answer this question adequately the body and person who was responsible for the preparation of the transposition of the directive in the public administration).

As far as could be ascertained no such study was ever carried out and, if it was, it was never made public.
[awaiting confirmation of this statement from the responsible authority].

Q.8. Quote any recent scientific book or article published about the directive, the transposition rules or the question of reception conditions for asylum seekers in general (answer even if this literature is only available in your language and provide the complete title in your language (without translation) with all references; indicate author, title, in case name of periodical, year and place of publication).

No scientific books or articles about the Directive, the transposition rules or reception conditions for asylum seekers have been published, either recently or in the past.

[A final year law student wrote a dissertation on the Reception Directive, some months prior to its transposition into national law – would you be interested in this publication?].

The following reports, mostly regarding the detention of asylum seekers in Malta (listed in order of date of publication, with the most recent first), may be of interest:

1	Report by the LIBE Committee delegation on its visit to the administrative detention centres in Malta	PV\613713EN	Brussels 30 March 2006
2	Follow-up report on Malta (2003-2005): Assessment of the progress made in implementing the recommendations of the Council of Europe Commissioner for Human Rights	CommDH(2006) 14	Strasbourg 29 March 2006
3	Report to the Maltese Government on the visit to Malta carried out by the European Committee for the Prevention of Torture and Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CPT) from 18 to 22 January 2004	CPT/Inf (2005) 15	Strasbourg 25 August 2005
4	The Maltese Government's response to the report on the visit to Malta carried out by the European Committee for the Prevention of Torture and Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CPT) from 18 to 22 January 2004	CPT/Inf (2005) 16.	Strasbourg 25 August 2005
5	Report by Mr Alvaro Gil-Robles, Commissioner for Human Rights, on his visit to Malta, 20-21 October 2003	CommDH (2004)4	Strasbourg 12 February 2004
6	Locking up foreigners, deterring refugees: controlling migratory flows in Malta – Report on an international fact-finding mission of the International Federation for Human Rights (FIDH) from 21-26 February 2004	No 403/2	September 2004
7	Report to the Maltese Government on the visit to Malta carried out by the European Committee for the Prevention of Torture and Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CPT) from 13 to 18 May 2001	CPT/Inf (2002) 16	Strasbourg 27 August 2002

Q.9. Quote any interesting decision of jurisprudence based on the implementation of the new rules of transposition of the directive (indicate references of publication if any)?

There have not been any decisions of the local courts concerning the implementation of the rules of transposition of the directive.

3. GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

The purpose of the following two questions is to help the reader to understand easily and quickly the system of reception conditions in your Member State and also to avoid that you have to repeat general elements in other parts of the questionnaire. Please do not write more than one or maximum two pages and do not include large historical developments.

[This outline does include some broad historical developments – I apologize, but I though they might be useful to enable you understand why the system for provision fo reception conditions developed in the way it did]

Q.10. Describe in general the system of reception conditions in your Member State (in particular which are the main actors in charge of reception conditions?)

In Malta the reception of asylum seekers is regulated by national law (i.e. the Refugees Act, 2000, the Reception of Asylum Seekers (Minimum Standards) Regulations, 2005 and, to some extent, the Immigration Act, 1972) and government policy. Policy in this area is formulated largely by the Ministry for Justice and Home Affairs and the Ministry for the Family and Social Solidarity.

Malta signed the 1951 Geneva Convention and the 1967 Protocol in 1971, however, prior to the enactment of the Refugees Act there was no national legislation in place for the recognition and protection of refugees and the reception of asylum seekers. There was no state authority mandated to conduct refugee status determination; asylum seekers and persons granted protection were provided with state medical care and access to primary and secondary education on a purely discretionary basis and accommodation was largely catered for by NGOs. The undisputed leader in this field was the Malta Emigrants' Commission, a Commission of the Diocesan Church, which, over the years, hosted large numbers of asylum seekers and people granted protection practically single-handedly, providing lodging and other basic necessities.

With the enactment of the Refugees Act and the removal of the geographic limitation to Malta's obligations under the Convention, national structures for determination of applications for refugee status were put in place. However, initially, reception (particularly accommodation) of asylum seekers in the community was still provided primarily by NGOs.

From 2002, Malta experienced a sharp increase in the number of undocumented migrants arriving by boat, usually from Libya. The new arrivals were detained, in terms of the Immigration Act, which stipulates that all immigrants refused admission into Malta or issued with a removal order shall detained until they can be removed from Maltese territory. The vast majority of the arrivals applied for asylum after they were placed in custody, however, then, as now, this did not mean automatic release from detention. Asylum seekers would be released from detention only if and when they were granted some form of protection (refugee status or humanitarian protection).

This new reality placed a huge strain on the arrangements in place for accommodation and reception of irregular immigrants and/or asylum seekers.

It was more than just the sheer number of arrivals that posed a challenge to the existing system. The fact that they were an essentially 'mixed' caseload with different protection needs on various levels (i.e. both on the level of refugee protection and on the level of protection/assistance required as a result of vulnerability) and the fact that most were undocumented served to further complicate matters. In to previous years, there were rarely more than 100 immigrants, mostly adult males, in detention at any given time. Now there were hundreds of immigrants in detention at any given time. They would spend months, rather than days or weeks, in detention, and now the population was not made up only of men, but included families, women and minor children.

In response to this phenomenon, policies, institutions and structures were established, within the legal framework established by asylum and immigration law, to deal with the pressing needs created by the new reality on the ground.

On the policy level changes were made in the sense that detention did not remain indefinite – a cut-off point was initially established at 18 months (see government policy document published in January 2005), which was later reduced to 12 months in the case of asylum seekers. The only exceptions to this policy are those considered to be in a particularly vulnerable situation; they are released from detention in terms of government policy, once their vulnerability is established, medical clearance is obtained and accommodation in the community is found.

On a more practical level, a new service, the Detention Service (DS), was set up to run detention centres and open centres were created to house immigrants released from detention, whatever their status.

It was in this context that the Reception of Asylum Seekers (Minimum Standards) Regulations came into force in November 2005.

Regulation 11(1) of the Reception of Asylum Seekers (Minimum Standards) Regulations, 2005, places the responsibility for ensuring that material reception conditions, established by law and policy, are available to applicants (asylum seekers) upon "the authorities responsible for the management of reception centres".

The term “reception centre” is not defined in the said regulations, however it is usually used in much the same manner as the term “accommodation centre”, which is defined in Regulation 2 as “any place used for collective housing of asylum seekers”.

As was explained, in Malta, there are two kinds of facilities used for collective housing of asylum seekers: closed reception centres (or detention centres) and open centres.

Detention centres are managed by the Detention Service (DS), which is directly accountable to the Minister for Justice and Home Affairs. The DS is headed by an officer in the Armed Forces of Malta and is staffed by a mixture of civilian and military personnel. The civilian personnel are mostly ex-members of the security forces.

Today, most Open Centres are managed by the Organization for the Integration and Welfare of Asylum Seekers (OIWAS), a government agency recently established by the Ministry for the Family and Social Solidarity. Some are managed/administered by NGOs, however today this is done in terms of an agreement with OIWAS (still being negotiated in some cases), on behalf of the MFSS, which funds most if not all the costs of running these centres.

None of these facilities are used exclusively for the accommodation of asylum seekers. All detention centres house persons at different stages of the asylum procedures, including rejected asylum seekers, and immigrants who never applied for protection. The population of most Open Centres too consists of a mixture of different categories of immigrants including: persons granted some form of protection (refuge status or humanitarian protection); asylum seekers released from detention, either after the lapse of 12 months or on grounds of vulnerability; and rejected asylum seekers. OIWAS estimate that some 40% of the population of Open Centres are rejected asylum seekers.

It should be noted however, that, as a rule, all of them house only asylum seekers who were apprehended by the immigration authorities because of their irregular migration status and placed in detention. Asylum seekers who are not detained do not fall within the remit of OIWAS, and although a couple of individuals within this category are provided with accommodation in Open Centres, this is on a case-by-case basis usually for humanitarian reasons.

In practice this means that asylum seekers who were never detained (in practice a relatively small number of people) are effectively provided with very little by way of material reception conditions.

Q.11. Q11. A. Explain if you have different types and levels of reception conditions following the different stages of the asylum procedure (this implies that you have to give briefly the necessary explanations about the asylum procedure). Make if relevant for reception conditions a distinction between the following procedural stages: determination of the responsible Member State on the basis of the Dublin II regulation, special procedures at the border (including transit zones in airports), accelerated procedures, admissibility procedures, eligibility procedures and the different possibilities of appeals (suspensive or not) against a refusal of the asylum request. Indicate what the main differences of reception conditions are between the different stages (if necessary by detailing between the different elements of reception conditions, in particular housing) and explain what the evolution of reception conditions is following the different stages of the procedure.

National RSD procedures are relatively uncomplicated. Asylum seekers apply to the Office of the Refugee Commission, established by the Refugees Act to examine and determine asylum applications at first instance. Each application is examined on its merits following an in-depth interview with the asylum seeker concerned.

The only exceptions are applications that are either inadmissible (article 18A) or invalid (article 8 (2A) and (B)).

Article 8(2A) of the said Act stipulates that applications presented more than two months after asylum seeker's arrival in Malta are not valid, however the Refugee Commissioner has the discretion to consider such applications valid 'for special and exceptional reasons to be stated in his decision'. Where the Refugee Commissioner considers a late application valid, it is examined under the normal procedure.

Moreover, in terms of article 18A an application made by a person who has been granted refugee status by a Member State other than Malta, or who has been recognised as a refugee in a country which is not a member state and can obtain effective protection there, or who is a national or citizen of or has a right of residence in any safe country of origin listed in the Schedule to the Act is inadmissible. Asylum seekers who are informed by the immigration authorities that their application is inadmissible may ask the Refugee Commission to reconsider their case. No appeal is possible from a decision to confirm the initial decision regarding the inadmissibility of an application.

In practice, asylum applications presented by so-called 'boat people' are examined in chronological order, according to the date of their arrival in Malta. Applications presented by other categories of asylum seekers are likely to be examined more speedily, but the procedure followed is essentially the same. As a rule all asylum applications, whether presented at the border or within the territory of the state, go through the ordinary procedure.

Article 18 of the Refugees Act provides for the possibility of accelerated procedures for manifestly unfounded applications, but this procedure has rarely, if ever/never been used. It is, in fact, doubtful whether the said procedure would in fact be faster/ more efficient than the ordinary procedure.

Asylum seekers whose application is rejected may appeal to the Refugee Appeals Board.

All appeals have a suspensive effect, in the sense that, in terms of article 10 of the Refugees Act, asylum seekers cannot be removed from Malta until their application is finally determined.

On paper the rights of asylum seekers remain unchanged throughout the asylum procedure however, in practice there are significant variations in the treatment received by different categories of asylum seekers. One determining factor is whether or not an asylum seeker is detained for breaching the Immigration Act. Another is whether or not an asylum seeker falls within current government policy on entitlement to accommodation in an Open Centre, as many benefits, including financial assistance, are only available to asylum seekers who are residing in such a centre. As was previously stated, in terms of current policy, as a rule only immigrants released from detention are entitled to accommodation in Open Centres and this is usually for a four month period, which may be (and usually is) extended for up to one year and, in some cases, even beyond that date.

Q 11. B. Indicate precisely for which stage(s) of the asylum procedure the answers on reception conditions you give below are valid.

4. GENERAL RULES ON RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.12. Q 12. A. Are material reception conditions provided in kind, in money or in vouchers or in a combination of these elements (see article 13, §5 which is an optional provision)? Distinguish between the different elements (housing, food, clothes, health, transportation, pocket money,…). If reception conditions are provided in money (in general or in some cases, for instance when no places are anymore available in accommodation centres), indicate the precise amount given to the asylum seekers. Indicate in your answer what is provided in general and if there are exceptional cases. Specify in your answer if reception conditions are different from the general system of social aid for nationals or aliens and if yes, if and when (which stage of the asylum procedure) can asylum seekers have access to the general system of social aid?

It is worth noting at the outset, that art 13 §5 has not been transposed into national legislation.

In practice, material reception conditions are provided both in money and in kind, but different rules are applicable to particular categories of asylum seekers as was explained in Q11.

Asylum seekers in detention are provided with material reception conditions in kind, including basic accommodation, healthcare, food and basic necessities such as soap, toothpaste, etc.

Asylum seekers living in open centres are provided with material reception conditions partly in kind, i.e. accommodation, and partly in the form of a financial contribution, which may be described as an allowance for daily living. Until December 2006 asylum seekers at open Centres were provided exclusively with material reception conditions in kind, i.e. food rather than financial assistance and accommodation. This arrangement created problems, particularly for people who did not work, as they did not have money to pay for transportation and other daily necessities.

In January 2007 a new system was introduced. Now, residents who do not work are provided with a financial allowance, instead of the pre-cooked food previously provided. In addition, all residents at Open Centres must register regularly. Residents who do not work must register three times a week in order to receive their allowance. The allowance provided to asylum seekers who do not work amounts to Lm1.75 i.e. some €4 per day. The daily rate is just slightly more than the minimum wage for one hour, which amounts to Lm1.50 i.e. some €3.50.

Residents who work regularly do not receive the daily allowance and are required to pay a small contribution (Lm0.50 per day/Lm3.50 per week, i.e. €1.17 per day/€8.19 per week) towards the costs of their accommodation.

As a rule, financial assistance is only provided for as long as asylum seekers are resident in Open Centres; once they leave they are no longer entitled to any form of financial assistance, even if they are unemployed. Moreover, most asylum seekers would not qualify for social assistance or contributory benefits, as social assistance is given only to Maltese nationals and recognised refugees and in order to qualify for contributory benefits one would need to have made at least 50 national insurance contributions, of which 20 must have been paid or credited in the previous 2 years.

Although legally the entitlements of all asylum seekers are the same, in practice asylum seekers living in the community who are not resident in Open Centres receive very limited support from the state by way of material reception conditions. They are not provided with accommodation and they are not entitled to any form of financial assistance.

Q 12. B. Can the reception conditions in kind, money or vouchers be considered as sufficient "to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence" as requested by article 13, §2 of the directive (which is a mandatory provision but leaves a certain space to Member States)? In order to help to assess the respect of this rule when reception conditions are provided in money, include if necessary in your answer points of comparison with the minimum amount of social aid guaranteed for nationals in your Member State.

Even if an asylum seeker were to receive the full spectrum of material reception conditions currently provided by the state, it would still ensure provision of only the most basic necessities for daily living.

First and foremost, the financial assistance provided is very limited. As was previously mentioned the daily allowance of Lm1.75 (€4) is equivalent to slightly less than the minimum wage for one hour. In comparison, the daily rate of social assistance provided to an adult Maltese national is some Lm6 (€14) per day.

In addition, the accommodation provided in the larger centres (i.e. Hal Far Appogg, Hal Far Sliem Tent Centre and Marsa Open Centre) is extremely basic, although that provided in the smaller centres, accommodating families with minor children and unaccompanied minors, is significantly better.

Asylum seekers living in the community who are not resident in an Open Centre are far more disadvantaged, and are definitely not provided with material reception conditions sufficient "to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence".

Asylum seekers in detention are provided with the basic requirements for daily living, including shelter, food, medical care, etc, however they are deprived of their liberty for prolonged periods and held in very poor conditions (see reports of independent monitors listed above in Q8).

5. PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

Q.13. Q 13. A. Does the national legislation specifically provide that a request for international protection is presumed to be under the Geneva Convention unless explicitly requested otherwise? (see article 2, b which is a mandatory provision)

Regulation 2, which transposes article 2(b), defines "application" as "an application for refugee status made under article 8 of the [Refugees] Act", which is in fact an application for protection in terms of the Geneva Convention, with the possibility of being granted a subsidiary form of protection in certain specific circumstances should the application for refugee status be rejected.

National law is therefore effectively saying that, in terms of these regulations, an application for international protection can only be an application for asylum in terms of the Geneva Convention.

In practice, at present the Qualification Directive has not been transposed into national legislation. National asylum law contains a single application procedure and does not provide for the possibility of applying specifically for subsidiary or humanitarian protection as opposed to refugee status.

There is one other form of protection from forced removal currently available in national law, but, in my view, this does not qualify as a form of international protection. This is the protection afforded by article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights and/or the corresponding article 36 of the Constitution of Malta, whereby a foreign national may ask the First Hall of the Civil Court acting in its Constitutional Jurisdiction to prohibit his/her forced removal to a country where he/she will face treatment contrary to the said legal provisions.

Q. 13. B. Explain if the scope of application of reception conditions is extended to other asylum seekers than refugees in the sense of the Geneva Convention, in particular to persons asking for subsidiary protection or to other forms of protection like humanitarian statuses (see article 3, § 4 which is an optional provision)? If not, explain briefly which the differences between these special regimes and the directive are.

As was explained in the answer to the previous question, at present national law only provides for the possibility of applying for refugee status.

In theory, all who apply for refugee status are entitled to the provision of material reception conditions; in practice, apart from a few individual cases, asylum seekers who are never detained are not provided with reception conditions as specified in the Directive (see Q11A). In the few individual cases mentioned above, assistance is granted on humanitarian grounds. Beneficiaries also include individuals who are not applying for Convention refugee status per se.

Q. 13. C. Are there specific provisions in national law for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation (see article 3, §2 which is an optional provision)?

Regulation 3(2) provides that these regulations do not apply in the case of requests for diplomatic or territorial asylum submitted to representations of Malta abroad.

There is no specific provision in national law for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests.

Q.14. Are reception conditions available as from the moment one asylum application is introduced? How is article 13, §1 which is mandatory legally understood? Do asylum seekers have to satisfy any other condition in order to get reception conditions?

In practice, reception conditions are not always available from the moment an asylum application is introduced.

Where an asylum seeker is in detention, as was explained earlier, basic reception conditions – i.e. accommodation, food, toiletries and medical care – are provided within the centre, both to asylum seekers and to every other detained immigrant.

Once asylum seekers are released from detention (after 12 months, if their application is pending, or earlier if they are considered to be in a particularly vulnerable situation) they are provided with a wider range of benefits, including accommodation (some centres, particularly the smaller ones, offer better conditions than the other larger centres), financial assistance, access to the labour market, free primary and secondary education in state-run institutions and free medical care.

Asylum seekers who are never detained, i.e. asylum seekers who arrive in Malta legally or who manage apply for asylum before they are apprehended by the immigration authorities for illegal entry or stay, are provided with very little by way of reception conditions throughout the whole of the procedure. As was explained earlier, they are not provided with accommodation or material or financial assistance. They would, however, be entitled to access to the labour market after 12 months, education free of charge in state run educational institutions up to the compulsory school age limit (i.e. 16 years of age) and state medical care also without charge.

Q.15. Explain when reception conditions end, for instance after refusal of the asylum request (include in your answer the link with the right of appeal against a decision of refusal of the status, in particular the question of its suspensive effect)

Regulation 3(1) states that the regulations regarding reception conditions "shall apply to all third country nationals and stateless persons who make an application for asylum in Malta as long as they are allowed to remain in Malta as asylum seekers".

Although not explicitly stated it is therefore clear that, in terms of law, reception conditions, when granted, are guaranteed only until the final rejection of an asylum application. This provided they have not been withdrawn or reduced in terms of regulation 13(1).

In practice however, there is very little difference between the reception conditions granted to asylum seekers upon release from detention and the conditions offered to other categories of migrants released from detention, including rejected asylum seekers. They are housed in the same centres, provided with this form of 'sheltered' accommodation for the same length of time, provided with medical care and provided with a slightly smaller daily allowance (Lm1.50 (€3.50) rather than Lm1.75 (€4) per day).

On the other hand, as was previously stated, asylum seekers who are never detained are provided with significantly less in terms of reception conditions.

Q.16 Are there special rules or practices regarding reception conditions in case of successive applications for asylum introduced by the same person?

At this stage national law does not provide for the possibility of successive applications.

Q.17. Information of asylum seekers about their rights and obligations in terms of reception conditions, in particular about established benefits (see article 5 which is too large extend a mandatory provision; do not confuse this question with the information to be provided to asylum seekers about the asylum procedure):

Regulation 4(1) and (2) transposes the provisions of article 5 of the Directive into national legislation, placing the obligation to provide such information upon the Principal Immigration Officer (PIO) – i.e. the Police Commissioner. The Immigration Department within the Security Branch of the Malta Police Force carries out most of the tasks and functions if the PIO in terms of the Immigration Act and other national laws.

Q. 17. A. Are asylum seekers informed, and if yes about what precisely?

From the information obtained from various sources, both governmental and non-governmental, it appears that there is no structure in place to ensure that all asylum seekers are provided with such information in a timely, consistent, organised and systematic manner.

As a rule, the immigration authorities do not provide asylum seekers with specific information regarding the benefits to which they are entitled or the obligations with which they must comply relating to reception conditions. Nor do they provide information on organizations or groups of persons providing legal assistance or other services.

It should be stated, however, that given the way the system the system works in practice the immigration authorities are not the best placed to provide asylum seekers with information regarding conditions of reception. Although it is true that the Refugees Act envisages a situation where an asylum seeker's first point of contact would be an immigration officer (see article 8 of the Refugees Act), in practice this is not the case. Most asylum seekers apply for refugee status while they are in detention or, if they are in the community, by going directly to the Office of the Refugee Commissioner. It would therefore be far more workable in practice to have information provided by other agencies which have more direct and regular contact with asylum seekers (as in fact already happens where information is provided – see below).

In practice, some categories of asylum seekers are provided with an amount of information, but it is not complete or comprehensive. There is no one single publicly available document containing a full description of all the benefits to which asylum seekers are entitled, their obligations in this regard, information on how they can access their rights, on who takes decisions in each case, and on how and when they can appeal from a decision which aggrieves them.

Asylum seekers who are never detained are not provided with any form of information about the reception conditions available to them, which are admittedly very limited.

The following is an indication of the information that is provided to another category of asylum seekers – asylum seekers who are or were in detention:

1. Upon being placed in detention, all immigrants refused admission into Malta or issued with a removal order are given a pamphlet by the immigration police, entitled "Your entitlements, responsibilities and obligations while in detention" (electronic copy attached for your information).

   At that point the immigrants/detainees concerned would not have applied for refugee status.

   In fact, this pamphlet, published by the Ministry of Justice and Home Affairs, is not specifically geared towards asylum seekers but rather towards immigration detainees. However, it does give basic information about the asylum procedure in addition to information about the entitlements and obligations of persons held in immigration detention.

The focus of this document is mostly on internal rules of behaviour and entitlements within the centres, and it contains only very generic information on detainees' legal rights in terms of asylum and immigration law and policy.

Moreover, the pamphlet simply informs detainees of their right to contact non-governmental organizations, but does not contain a list of such organizations, a description of the services they provide or their contact details. Having said this, in practice, immigration officials and/or detention service personnel often provide asylum seekers with such information (i.e. regarding NGOs and how they can be contacted) on a case-by case basis in an informal manner.

The pamphlet is published in English, Maltese, Arabic and French. There are no arrangements in place to provide the information contained therein in other languages/formats. It seems that, where a detainee cannot read one of these languages, fellow detainees read the leaflet and/or translate it into a language the detainee can understand.

2. Upon release from detention, i.e. usually months after an asylum application is lodged, asylum seekers are provided with the following information:

    - A letter, which is given to each asylum seeker by the immigration police upon release from detention, requiring him/her to inform the PIO of any change of address. This requirement is however linked to the RSD procedures and therefore only indirectly to the provision of reception conditions.

      The letter is only provided in English.

    - An 'Integration and Service Agreement', which is usually signed either immediately before release or upon placement in an Open Centre. This agreement is made up of two parts: the first applies to residents in all Open Centres and the second contains rules which are specific to the particular centre where the asylum seeker is placed.

      From the information obtained it appears that the agreement contains information regarding the financial allowance provided, the resident's reporting duties, the basic rules applicable within Open Centres and the sanctions that will apply in case of serious breaches. It does not contain information about the possibility of appeal from a negative decision regarding reception conditions, comprehensive information about asylum seekers' rights and how to access them or information about NGOs.

      The Service Agreement is available in English and in Tigrinya; where necessary it is explained verbally through an interpreter.

      In most centres there are social workers and care staff who would be available to respond to requests for information. However in the larger centres, where there are hundreds of residents, it is naturally far more difficult to reach all the residents.

- The Refugee Service Area within Appogg, which has now been replaced by OIWAS, had published an information leaflet for asylum seekers as part of the EQUAL project. This booklet contained practical information about life in Malta and information about NGOs and other agencies working in the field. However it appears that this booklet is no longer available and no further copies are being published.

- In one particular centre, the Tent Village, asylum seekers are provided with an information leaflet published by staff at the said centre [once I have a copy of this publication I will send it].

- A Customer Care service is available at the Central Office of OIWAS in Floriana; OIWAS staff is available on 2 or 3 mornings a week to meet asylum seekers and other immigrants living in the community to respond to requests for information.

In addition NGOs have undertaken a number of initiatives in this area:

1. The MEC also provides a daily service at their office in Valletta, where they respond to requests for information, help asylum seekers to complete the necessary formalities to apply or jobs, obtain work permits, etc.

2. JRS Malta published a booklet, 'Asylum in Malta: what you should know', with funding obtained from ERFII. This booklet is published in English and French and is distributed free of charge to asylum seekers in detention. This booklet however, focuses mostly on the asylum procedure, rather than on reception conditions per se, with some information about asylum seekers' rights in terms of immigration law and policy. It is currently being translated into Somali and Tigrinya.

Q. 17. B. Is the information provided in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

See above.

Q.17. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify the list of languages in which it is available

See above.

Q. 17. D. Is the deadline of maximum 15 days respected?

See above.

Q.18. Information of asylum seekers about the existence of organisations or groups promoting their interest and defending their rights (see article 5 which is to a large extend a mandatory provision):

Q. 18. A. Is there a list of organisations dressed by the authorities and if yes is it comprehensive? Is this in particular the case about the possibilities to get legal assistance and health care?

No, there is no such list. See above for details of the information that is actually provided.

Q. 18. B. Is the information provided to the asylum seekers, and if yes, in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

No the information is not provided in writing, but, as was mentioned earlier, immigration officials or detention service staff who come in contact with asylum seekers often provide such information in an informal manner. The problem with this arrangement is that there is no guarantee that such information is provided to all asylum seekers in a consistent and systematic manner.

Q. 18. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify if possible the list of languages in which it is available.

See above.

Q. 18. D. How many organisations are active in that field in your Member State?

The following organizations (15 in all, including 2 government agencies, 2 international organizations and 11 NGOs) are active in the field, providing services and/or information:

Government agencies:
OIWAS – Organization for the Integration and Welfare of Asylum Seekers – the unit within MFSS responsible for the implementation of the said Ministry's integration and welfare remit in closed and open centres and providing input on the level of policy-making within the Ministry. In practice, in addition to working on policy, the organization is responsible for the administration and management of open centres, provision of social work and other welfare services in closed and open centres, and the assessment and release of vulnerable asylum seekers from detention.
DS – Detention Service – the organization responsible for the administration and management of detention centres

NGOs
Suret il-Bniedem – funded by the government to run one of the largest Open Centres (Marsa)

Red Cross – offers humanitarian assistance and support to asylum seekers, mostly in the community
Malta Emigrants' Commission – provides accommodation in the community for people released from detention (usually with status or asylum seekers), advice about rights, assistance accessing the labour market and assistance with other formalities
JRS Malta – offers information, legal assistance, social work support and pastoral care to asylum seekers and immigrants in detention
Peace Lab – provides accommodation in the community for people released from detention
Salesians of Don Bosco (Kairos) – provide accommodation in their hostels for a number of unaccompanied minors and asylum seekers and provide humanitarian and social support to refugees and asylum seekers in the community
MDM – Medecins du Monde – currently in Malta on a 6 month mission that ends at the beginning of September – providing medical care to asylum seekers in Open Centres and organizing community education campaigns on health and related issues. Also working on capacity building of local NGOs to provide such information in the longer-term
Integra Foundation – provides information and support to asylum seekers in the community

NGOs – religious organizations:
Legion of Mary
Jehovah Witnesses
Pastor Ahmed Bugre of the >>> Church
All of these organizations provide pastoral care for immigrants in detention and in the community

International organizations:
UNHCR
IOM

Q.19. Documentation of asylum seekers (see article 6):

Q.19. A. What kind of document is delivered to the asylum seeker? Explain the legal value of this document (just a certification of the status as asylum seeker or also prove of identity?) (see §1 of article 6 which is a mandatory provision)

Article 6(1) is transposed into national legislation through the provisions of regulation 5(1), which states that 'the [Refugee] Commissioner shall ensure that, within three days after an application is lodged, an applicant is provided with a document issued in his own name, certifying his status as an asylum seeker or testifying that he is allowed to stay in Malta while his application is pending or being examined'.

In fact, the Refugee Commissioner provides asylum seekers living in the community with a 1-page document certifying that they have applied for refugee status in Malta and that their application is being examined by the competent authorities [awaiting a copy – will forward it as soon as I have it].

This document is simply a certification of status as an asylum seeker; it is not intended to, and in fact cannot, serve as a means of identification, as it does not contain a photograph. Asylum seekers would however need to use this document for various purposes, including applying for a visa extension/regularisation of stay and to obtain free medical treatment.

Where asylum seekers are not in possession of a passport they are issued with a document by the immigration authorities, known as an immigration certificate. This document is not issued only to asylum seekers, but rather to all undocumented migrants who have a permit to stay in Malta, even temporarily, for whatever reason. Visa extensions granted by the Central Immigration Office are recorded on this document – this is in fact the main purpose for which this document is issued.

The immigration certificate makes no reference to immigration or asylum status. It contains a photograph of the holder and the personal details, including name, age, nationality and occupation, all of which are provided by the individual concerned; as such, it does not constitute an official proof of identity.

Q.19. B. Are there situations or specific cases in which another equivalent document or even no document is issued? (in particular is there an exception for "procedures to decide on the right of the applicant legally to enter the territory" as made possible by §2 of article 6)?

Regulation 5(2) reproduces the text of article 6(2) almost verbatim so such a situation in legally possible.

Asylum applications are rarely examined at the border, but when they are the asylum seeker concerned is effectively deprived of his/her liberty and is not provided with a document. The same applies to asylum seekers in detention.

Moreover, although, like article 6(2), regulation 5(2) refers to 'a procedure on the right of the applicant to legally enter the territory of Malta', the meaning of this is not really clear, as neither our asylum nor immigration law provide for such an eventuality. Whatever the case, presumably, if an asylum seeker has been refused admission into national territory, he/she would be detained in terms of the Immigration Act and would therefore not be issued with a document.

Although the regulations stipulate that in "specific cases" applicants may be provided with "other evidence equivalent to the document referred to sub-regulation (1)", the said regulations do not specify what these specific cases are and in practice the only documents issued are those mentioned in Q19A.

Q.19. C. For how long is this document in principle valid and is it necessary to renew it after a certain period?

This document is will be renewed automatically for as long as the asylum procedure is still pending.

Q.19. D. What is the deadline for the delivery of that document? Is the mandatory deadline of 3 days set by article 6, §1 respected[576]?

Asylum seekers in the community who are never detained and who refer themselves spontaneously to the Office of the Refugee Commissioner to apply for refugee status the document described in Q19A is issued as soon as the person applies for refugee status.

Asylum seekers released from detention to await the outcome of their application in the community are provided with the said document as soon as they present themselves at the Office of the Refugee Commissioner upon release from detention.

Q.19. E. Is it possible for an asylum seeker to get a travel document for serious humanitarian reasons (see §5 of article 6 which is an optional provision)?

It is legally possible, as subregulation 5(4) essentially reproduces the text of Article 6(5), and it has happened in practice.

Q.19. F. Is there a central system of registration of asylum seekers and is it or not separate from the registration of aliens? If yes, describe it briefly (content) and indicate in particular if it is an electronic database.

To date there is no central database of asylum seekers. The Office of the Refugee Commissioner keeps records of all applications for asylum. The immigration authorities too keep their own records which would include information about whether or not the immigrant concerned applied for asylum. MFSS have their own database of immigrants living in Open Centres.

Q.20. Residence of asylum seekers:

Q.20. A. Is in principle an asylum seeker free to move on the entire territory of your Member State or only to a limited part of it and in case, which part? (see article 7, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

Article 7(1) has not been transposed into national legislation.

In practice, to date, unless asylum seekers are in detention or otherwise deprived of their liberty, they are free to move in any part of Maltese national territory.

Q.20. B. About the place of residence (see §2 of article 7): explain to which extend the person is free to choose her residence and if this depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance processing of application, attribution of reception conditions,…).

Regulation 6(1) allows the PIO to decide on the residence of the asylum seeker, for reasons of public interest, public order or, where necessary, for the swift processing and effective monitoring of his/her asylum application.

Section 10(2)(b) of the parent Act, i.e. the Refugees Act, 2000, too dictates that, unless an asylum seeker is in custody, he/she shall reside and remain in the places which may be indicated by the Minister.

In practice, however, unless they are in detention, asylum seekers are usually free to reside wherever they please.

Asylum seekers who are never detained have no choice but to find their own accommodation, with little or no support from the Minister or any other governmental agency.

Asylum seekers, who spend some time in detention, are allocated a place in an Open Centre upon release, where they may stay for up to one year. However they may move into independent accommodation anywhere in Malta at any point, should they wish to do so. It should be stated however that the decision to leave the Open Centre usually implies the forfeiture of the daily allowance provided by the government.

Q.20. C. About the place of reception (meaning where the asylum seeker has to stay to benefit from reception conditions) (see § 4 of article 7): explain which are the general rules about the determination of this place (to which extend are the decisions determining the place taken individually and do they take into account the personal situation of the asylum seeker?) and to which extend the person is free to choose it and if it depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance attribution of reception conditions, processing of the application,…).

Regarding asylum seekers who are never detained see answer to previous question.

Asylum seekers who are being released from detention cannot choose the Open Centre where they will reside; as a rule the decision is taken by OIWAS. Decisions regarding placement are dictated by the availability of spaces in Open Centres, however the individual circumstances of the asylum seeker are also taken into consideration. As a rule family unity is respected. Unaccompanied minors are accommodated in purpose-made facilities where conditions are better than in the larger centres. Pregnant women and families with minor children too are usually accommodated in Open Centres with specific provision for the accommodation of family units. Efforts are also made to accommodate asylum seekers with physical or mental health problems in more appropriate facilities.

As was previously stated, asylum seekers are free to move into independent accommodation in the community at any point and this will not affect their asylum application, although they are expected to inform the authorities of their change of address. It will however mean that they lose the financial assistance provided to residents at Open Centres.

Q.20. D. If all asylum seekers are not placed in accommodation centres because of capacity limits, explain how the persons are distributed between accommodation centres and other accommodation facilities (which authority takes the decisions, on the basis of which elements, can that decision be appealed by the asylum seeker,…)

As a rule asylum seekers are accommodated in Open Centres. Where this accommodation is inappropriate for some reason or where there is no space available, OIWAS will consider other alternatives, such as placement in hostels for homeless people.

There is no formal procedure in place for appealing decisions regarding placement in one accommodation facility as opposed to another, however residents can ask for transfer to another centre or may approach one of the 2 NGOs running their own centres and request placement there.

Q.20. E. How can an asylum seeker ask to leave temporarily the place of residence or of reception or an assigned area? How is the individual AND impartial character of the decision ensured? (see §5 of article 7 which is a mandatory provision)

Article 7(5) is transposed almost word for word into national legislation.

In practice, unless they are in detention, asylum seekers are free to leave their place of residence without the necessity of recourse to the PIO in order to request permission. They are however obliged to inform the PIO of their change of address if they decide to relocate their place of residence.

Asylum seekers in detention are not informed of their right ask for temporary permission to leave the place to which they are confined. Although this article has been transposed, to date it has never been used.

Q.21. Q.21. A. Do rules on reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions exist in internal legislation and if yes in which cases (mention in particular if there are cases not foreseen by article 16, § 1 and 2 which are optional provisions)? Distinguish in your answer between cases of reduction and withdrawal and explain which conditions can be reduced and if access to emergency health care is always ensured as requested by article 16, §4, last sentence.

Almost all of article 16(1) has been transposed into national legislation. Regulation 13 empowers the authority responsible for the management of reception centres to reduce or withdraw reception condition in the cases outline in article 16 of the Directive.

Apart from this regulation, there are no other publicly available generally-applicable rules, regulating the reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions, either for asylum seekers in detention or for asylum seekers in the community. However, the Integration and Service Agreement, which is signed by every asylum seeker living in an open reception centre, includes the rules regarding residence in Open Centres.

In the case of asylum seekers who were never detained, this provision makes little or no sense as they are granted little by way of reception conditions. Reducing reception conditions for this category of asylum seekers would effectively mean denying them access to either education or healthcare.

With asylum seekers in detention centres, which are at times called closed reception centres, to date there has never been an issue of withdrawal or reduction of reception conditions, and in practice it is very difficult to imagine what could be reduced.

The situation is somewhat different for asylum seekers residing in Open Centres. Serious breaches of the rules contained in the service agreement could lead to the reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions. In severe cases, e.g. cases of serious violence, the service agreement may be terminated. This effectively means that reception conditions are reduced and the individual concerned is no longer provided with either accommodation or the daily allowance.

This also happens where the asylum seeker chooses to move to independent accommodation in the community; in such cases as a rule the asylum seeker forfeits his/her allowance. In addition, where asylum seekers are regularly employed, reception conditions are reduced in the sense that they are no longer provided with the daily allowance. Where the authorities discover that an asylum seeker has concealed the fact that he/she is employed so as not to lose the daily allowance, he/she may be asked for a refund.

Decisions regarding reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions involving asylum seekers residing in Open Centres are taken by OIWAS.

The provision in article 16(4), imposing an obligation on Member States to ensure access to emergency healthcare in all circumstances, has not been included in the corresponding regulation in national law. However, as far as could be ascertained, access to medical care for asylum seekers has never been reduced or withdrawn in practice. The medical care provided includes treatment and goes beyond emergency medical care.

Q.21. B. Has article 16, §2 dealing with refusal of reception conditions for unreasonably late applications for asylum been transposed by your Member State (or was this case already applicable before transposition)? Are there cases in practice?

This article has been transposed to some extent, in that regulation 13(2) provides that, where an asylum seeker fails to demonstrate that his/her asylum claim was made in accordance with the provisions of the Refugees Act, the authorities responsible for the management of reception centres may refuse reception conditions.

Article 8(2A) of the said Act provides that applications made two months after the asylum seeker's arrival in Malta are invalid. Sub-article (2B) however, allows the Refugee Commissioner to consider such applications valid, for "special and exceptional reasons" to be stated in his decision.

In practice, according to OIWAS, there have never been any cases where asylum seekers were refused reception conditions on this ground.

It should be noted however that, as a rule, applications made more than 2 months after arrival are either made by asylum seekers living in the community, who would be granted very little by way of reception conditions anyway, or by immigrants apprehended by the immigration authorities for illegally staying in Malta. The latter would normally remain in detention until their application is finally determined, unless they are released before for reasons of vulnerability or after the lapse of 12 months. All asylum seekers released from detention would automatically be provided with accommodation in an Open Centre.

Q.21. C. How is it ensured that decisions of reduction or withdrawal are taken individually, objectively AND in particular impartially (for instance through and independent arbitrator) (see article 16, §4 which is a mandatory provision)?

In spite of the provisions of article 16(4) which, with the exception of the provision guaranteeing access to emergency healthcare, are transposed in regulation 13(4), there is no mechanism in place to ensure that such decisions are taken objectively or impartially.

In all cases decisions are taken by OIWAS, the authority responsible for the management of the open centres. This agency stated that the fact that decisions are taken by professionals ensures that they are taken objectively and impartially. Whether this is a sufficient guarantee is, however, open to question, particularly in cases where reception conditions are being reduced because of misbehaviour or non-compliance on the part of the resident in an OIWAS Open Centre, as in such cases the agency plays the role of judge and prosecutor, so to speak.

OIWAS stated that, although decisions regarding the withdrawal or reduction of reception conditions are not always given in writing, the decision and the reasons are usually explained to the individual concerned.

Q.21. D. Is statement 14/03 adopted by the Council at the same moment as the directive respected (see the document attached to our sending)?

[check]

Q.21. E. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements on cases of reduction, withdrawal or refusal which have been taken, and if yes, what has been the outcome?

To date such decisions have never been challenged. It should be stated that, as pointed out in Q.17A above and Q22A below, asylum seekers are not informed of the possibility to appeal from such decisions to the Immigration Appeals Board, in terms of regulation 16.

Q.22. Q.22. A. Appeal against a negative decision relating to the granting of benefits or based on article 7 (see article 21 which is a mandatory provision): indicate against which decision an appeal can be introduced, describe the system of appeal in general and include in particular in your answer the information given to asylum seekers about possibilities of appealing, deadline for appealing, if the appeal has or not a suspensive effect, if there are different steps (for instance first an administrative appeal and in particular if the guarantee of an appeal before a judicial body in the last instance is respected)?

Regulation 16 deals with the possibility of appeal from any decision taken in pursuance of the provisions of the said regulations.

The Directive requires the possibility of an appeal or review before a judicial body at least in the last instance; national law provides the possibility of appeal to the Immigration Appeals Board.

This Board, set up by article 25A of the Immigration Act, is made up of three persons: a lawyer, who shall preside, a person versed in immigration matters and another person, each of whom shall be appointed by the President acting on the advice of the Minister (JHA).

It was originally intended to hear and determine appeals against removal orders, but in recent years, not least as a result of the transposition of the various EU Directives on immigration into national law, the remit of the Board has been considerably extended. It would appear however that the resources allocated to the Board to carry out its functions have not expanded at the same rate as its mandate.

NGOs working in the area of immigration and asylum complained of long delays in the processing of applications and reported that as a rule the Board's decisions generally upheld decisions taken by administrative officials in terms of government policy.

It should be stated that the exact nature of this tribunal is not clear. It would appear that it is an administrative tribunal, however, in its response to the 2004 CPT report (see pages 11 and 12) the government of Malta stated that it is 'in disagreement with the mistaken assertion namely that the Immigration Appeals Board is merely an administrative body. It is not. In actual fact it is a judicial body, not forming part of the Court structure but an independent and impartial adjudicating authority within the meaning of article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights.' However, it then goes on to state that the Board is subject 'not only to the provisions of the Constitution (art 39) and the Convention (art 6) but also to the rules of judicial review of administrative action which are contained in article 469A of the Code of Organization and Civil Procedure'.

This is somewhat contradictory, as article 469A allows judicial review of the actions or decisions taken by administrative and not by judicial bodies. In fact article 469A(2) defines an administrative authority as: 'the Government of Malta, including its Ministries and departments, local authorities and any body corporate established by law'.

In addition, it should be stated that procedures in terms of article 469A do not constitute an appeal on the merits of a decision but a review of the procedure followed in reaching the decision. Appeals on points of law too are excluded in terms of article 25A(8) of the Immigration Act, which states that: 'The decisions of the Board shall be final except with respect to points of law decided by the Board regarding decisions affecting persons as are mentioned in Part III [relating to citizens of Member States of the EU], from which an appeal shall lie within ten days to the Court of Appeal (Inferior Jurisdiction).'

Regarding the procedure followed to hear and determine appeals, article 25A(7) of the Immigration Act provides that appeals to the Board have to be filed within days from the date of the decision subject to appeal. Given that asylum seekers are not always notified with the decision in writing, as well as the fact that they are not informed that they can appeal, in practice it is almost impossible for them to meet this deadline. In fact, from the information we could gather (the Board does not publish statistics nor are its decisions published) there have not been any cases of appeals against negative decisions in terms of these regulations.

It is not clear whether appeals to the Board have a suspensive effect; the law is silent in this regard, however, in its response to the 2004 CPT report cited earlier, the government states that appeals to the Immigration Appeals Board have a suspensive effect (page 14).

Moreover, the meaning of the terms 'without prejudice to the principles of public policy and public interest' in the circumstances is far from clear.

Q.22. B. Explain which are the possibilities for asylum seekers to benefit from legal assistance when they introduce such an appeal (see article 21, §2 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to Member States)?

Article 21(2) is not transposed into national legislation and the regulations on reception do not contain any provision ensuring access to legal assistance.

Moreover whether or not they are in fact entitled to legal aid is open to question. Article 911(1) refers to the right to sue or defend with the benefit of legal aid in proceedings before: 'any court mentioned in articles 3 and 4 [the superior and inferior courst of civil jurisdiction] and before any other adjudicating authority where the benefit of legal aid is by law granted'.

Neither the Immigration Act nor the Reception Regulations grant applicants the right to legal aid to make an appeal before the Board. The Refugees Act only grants applicants the right to legal aid for the purposes of an appeal before the Refugee Appeals Board, i.e. at appeal stage of the RSD procedure.

It should be stated that national structures for the provision of legal aid are somewhat overburdened and also completely inaccessible to asylum seekers in detention. Moreover, asylum seekers are not provided with information on their entitlement to legal aid, if indeed it exists, and the procedures they must follow to obtain such assistance.

Q.22. C. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

As was previously indicated there are no such decisions to date.

Q.22. D. Is a mechanism of complain for asylum seekers about quality of receptions conditions in general (even if they are not personally concerned) organised? If yes, before which authority? Is it linked to the system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions (see below question n° 39)?

There is no mechanism in place to receive formal complaints; OIWAS maintains however, that asylum seekers may complain informally to the management of the Open Centres or through the Customer Care service.

6. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.23. Family unity of asylum seekers: define how a family is defined in relation with article 2, (d) which is a mandatory provision and explain how housing is provided to a family (see articles 8 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to member States and 14, §2, (a) which is a mandatory provision).

The definition of the term "family members" contained in regulation 2 does not include unmarried partners in a stable relationship. It would, however, include the children born of such a relationship, in terms of paragraph (b) of the definition, provided they are unmarried and dependent.

This is in line with our immigration law, which mentions spouses not unmarried partners in a stable relationship. It should be stated however that, in practice, although there is no written policy in this regard, each case involving unmarried partners is currently seen on its own merits by the immigration authorities who give weight to such relationships in their decisions.

Where provision of reception conditions to asylum seekers is concerned, as a rule family unity is respected and, where accommodation is provided, partners are usually housed together.

With asylum seekers in detention, if they declare that they are married upon apprehension by the immigration authorities, family members are usually detained together. They would normally also be released together. The situation becomes somewhat more complicated when people declare that they are a family at a later stage or when relationships are established in detention. However each case is normally examined on its merits by OIWAS staff.

Concerns have been raised regarding the quality of accommodation provided for families in detention, particularly the level of protection provided for children and women and respect for privacy. With accommodation in the community, that provided to families with children is generally better than that provided to couples without children, who must often share a room (or a tent) with other couples.

With asylum seekers who were never detained there is usually no question of provision of accommodation or other receptions conditions, so family composition is rarely an issue in this regard.

Q.24. Q.24. A. How is housing of asylum seekers organised: describe the system in general and indicate in particular what is the most frequently system used (see article 14, §1 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space for Member States; distinguish between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels places or other premises).

State provision of housing for asylum seekers usually consists of accommodation in either Closed or Open Centres. As was previously stated, with few exceptions, asylum seekers who are never detained are not accommodated in these centres as they do not fall within the remit of OIWAS. Alternatives to accommodation in these facilities are considered only when there is no space in these centres or when placement in these centres is not indicated for a valid reason in a particular case.

Q.24. B. What is the total number of available places for asylum seekers? Distinguish in your answer between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels or other premises.

As was explained earlier, neither the Closed nor the Open Centres accommodate only asylum seekers. Both Closed and Open Centres can accommodate between 1800 and 2000 people.

Q.24. C. Is this number of places for asylum seekers sufficient in general or frequently insufficient?

In practice there have been cases when release from detention was delayed due to lack of accommodation in the community.

Q.24. D. Are there special measures foreseen in urgent cases of a high number of news arrivals of asylum seekers (outside the case of application of the directive on temporary protection)?

No there are no such measures.

It should be stated that the structures in place for the reception of asylum seeker are already labouring under the considerable strain generated by the relatively large numbers of asylum seekers arriving by boat from Libya. Since 2002 Malta has received some 1400-1800 arrivals by boat each year, with the exception of 2003 when there were some 5-600 arrivals.

Since the start of this influx, new structures, such as the Detention Service and the whole Open Centre system, were created to deal with this new reality. Should the number of arrivals increase significantly once again it is not clear whether existing structures will be able to cope and/or what will happen as a result.

Q.25. Accommodation centres (important note: all the following questions are about open and not closed centres where asylum seekers are detained which are covered by another question)

Q.25. A Are there different categories of accommodation centres, for instance depending of the stage of the procedure (admissibility and eligibility)?

There is only one category of open accommodation centres, most of which house people at all stages of the asylum procedure, including rejected asylum seekers.

Q.25. B. Is there a legal time limit for accommodation in a centre after which the asylum seekers have access to private houses or apartments or is this limit linked to a stage of the asylum procedure?

The only accommodation in the community offered to asylum seekers is in collective accommodation centres.

There is no legal time limit for accommodation in these centres.

In the centres administered directly by OIWAS, as a rule, in terms of the new policy introduced since January 2007, residents are initially granted permission to stay for a period of 4 months, which may be extended for up to one year, after which time asylum seekers must find their own accommodation in the community. In practice this rule is not always strictly applied, particularly in the case of residents in the larger centres where individual follow-up is more difficult.

Up to now, this new policy does not apply in all the centres belonging to NGOs, however, as collaboration between OIWAS and these NGOs becomes more formalised, policies and procedures may become more standardised and will start to apply across the board.

As was stated earlier, however, asylum seekers may move into independent accommodation whenever they wish.

Q.25. C. Is there a general regulation about the internal functioning of those centres and the rights and duties of the asylum seekers? If yes, is this general regulation applicable to public and private centres? If not, are the centres supposed to adopt an internal regulation and does a central authority have or not a kind of control about its content?

There are rules, found in the first part of the service agreement (rf Q17 above), which should apply across the board and others which are particular to the individual centres. To date, apart from the core content which is applicable to all, individual centres, particularly those managed by NGOs, are free to adopt internal rules and regulations for the running of the centre.

Q.25. D. Do the regulations foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers in case of breach of the rules? (see article 16, §3) If yes, which sanctions for which rules? Which is the competent authority to decide? How is it ensured that decisions are taken individually, objectively and in particular impartially (for instance through an independent arbitrator) as requested by §4 of article 21 which is mandatory provision*?* Which are the possibilities of appealing against those decisions if the system is different from the general one under question n°22? Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

(See answer to previous question and Q17 above)

All open centres have internal rules to ensure the smooth running of the centre and, in all cases, there is the possibility of imposing sanctions for serious breaches of the rules. Most of these rules are written in the service agreement which the asylum seeker signs upon placement in an Open Centre.

In case of seriously violent behaviour or repeated abuse of alcohol or drugs, the sanction is often termination of the service user agreement. This effectively means that all material reception conditions are withdrawn, as termination implies not only the loss of one's place in an open centre but also the loss of the daily allowance provided by the state.

Decisions regarding the imposition of sanctions are normally taken by the authorities managing the centre, i.e. either by the staff at the centre or by OIWAS, depending on the circumstances of the case. There are no publicly available procedural rules in this regard, and there is no established procedure in place to ensure that both sides are heard or that decisions are taken objectively or impartially.

Asylum seekers may appeal from such decisions to the Immigration Appeals Board, in terms of regulation 16, the regulation regarding appeals from negative decisions taken in terms of the Reception Regulations. However, they are not informed of their right to do so or of the procedure that must be followed. In fact, to date their have been no appeals from such decisions.

However, according to OIWAS some asylum seekers contest the decision informally, through the Customer Care Service provided by OIWAS.

Q.25. E. Are asylum seekers involved in the management of these centres? If yes, how (advisory board, appointment or election of representatives)? (see article 14, §6 which is an option provision)

Article 14(6) of the Directive is not transposed into national legislation; asylum seekers are not usually formally involved in the running of the centres, however they usually assist in the day-to-day running of the centres.

Q.25. F. Do specific rules exist on work of asylum seekers inside the accommodation centres different from the general ones about employment (see below)? If yes, which ones? Can working inside accommodation centres be considered as a (mandatory) contribution of the asylum seekers to the management of the centres, is it or not paid and considered as implying access to the labour market and subject to the same rules?

No there are no specific rules in this regard. To date it is not possible for asylum seekers to work inside accommodation centres.

Q.26. Q.26. A. How can asylum seekers communicate with legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGOs? (see article 14, §2, (b) which is a mandatory provision).

Article 14(2)(b) is transposed verbatim in regulation 12(2)(b).

Asylum seekers are provided with possibility to contact their lawyers, UNHCR or NGOs, in the sense that they are not prevented from doing so.

It is naturally far easier for asylum seekers in Open Centres to establish contact as they are free to move within national territory and may therefore easily travel to the offices of the agency they want to contact in order to obtain the assistance they require.

Although asylum seekers in detention are not prohibited from establishing contact, in practice they face several very real difficulties when trying to do so. Often, even if they have access to a telephone (which is not always the case) they do not have money to make the call. In some centres, e.g. Ta' Kandja which is run by the police, staff facilitate the contact if requested to do so, but this is not true with all centres, particularly where the population is very large.

Q.26. B. What are the rules about access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs regarding access to accommodation centres and other housing facilities (see article 14, §7 which is a mandatory provision)

As was previously stated, for asylum seekers in the community it is quite easy to visit the offices of the agencies they wish to approach in order to request assistance.

Regarding access to the centres, OIWAS rules provide that 'bona fide visitors' may be granted permission to enter the centres. Lawyers and NGO personnel wishing to visit should show their accreditation and/or CV when requesting permission to visit, and NGOs wishing to work within the centres should submit a description of the project they wish to undertake.

As a rule, lawyers, UNHCR and NGOs are granted permission to visit the Open Centres in order to provide assistance.

Regarding NGO and UNHCR access to closed centres see below.

Q.26. C. Can the access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs be limited for security reasons or any other reason (see article 14, §7, last sentence)?

Yes, regulation 12(5) allows the authorities responsible for the management of reception centres to "impose such limits as they may deem appropriate on grounds relating to the security of the centres and facilities and of the asylum seekers".

In practice, while access of certain categories of persons, including journalists, may be limited to protect residents, access by NGOs, UNHCR or lawyers is normally less restricted.

Regarding access to closed centres see below.

Q.27. Q.27. A. Is a medical screening organised by the receiving State, is it mandatory or voluntary? Does it include HIV tests? (see article 9 which is an optional provision)

Article 9 is transposed into national legislation by means of regulation 8, which stipulates that the Director General Health may require medical screening for applicants on public health grounds.

Persons arriving by boat in an irregular manner are required to undergo mandatory medical screening, which consists of testing for active TB, upon arrival in Malta and prior to release from detention.

Asylum seekers who are not detained are not required to undergo medical screening.

Asylum seekers (and other immigrants) are not routinely tested for HIV – they may however request to be tested of their own free will.

Pregnant women in categories considered to be at high risk of HIV infection, which would include persons coming from countries with a very high incidence of HIV infection, are advised to undergo an HIV test. This as in such cases treatment could significantly reduce the risk of transmission of the infection to the unborn child.

Q.27. B. Do the legal provisions on reception conditions ensure that asylum seekers receive at least emergency care and essential treatment of illness as requested by article 15 §1 which is a mandatory provision? Do they have a further access to health care?

The regulations dealing with the reception of asylum seekers do not expressly stipulate that asylum seekers are entitled to emergency medical care and essential treatment of illness – neither article 15 nor the latter part of article 16(4) are included in the said regulations.

However, it should be stated that in terms of article 10 of the Refugees Act asylum seekers are entitled to receive state medical care and services free of charge.

In practice asylum seekers are granted such treatment as a matter of course – in fact it is true to say that the main issue in the area of healthcare provision is not about entitlement but about access to medical care.

Q.27. C. What is the practice regarding access of asylum seekers to health care and how is it organised? In particular, what is the situation in accommodation centres (are doctors coming to the centres or do asylum seekers go to doctors outside)?

The system of healthcare provision in open and closed centres has always worked differently, so each will be tackled separately.

Until very recently asylum seekers in open centres, like all other asylum seekers living in the community, had to go to the local health centres (primary healthcare clinics situated in various towns and villages in Malta) or to the general hospital to obtain medical care.

In addition to the strain which this arrangement placed on the existing service, it also created problems of access.

While in theory their situation was identical to that of the Maltese population, many NGOs reported that in practice this was not the case and many immigrants/asylum seekers faced problems obtaining the treatment they required although they were entitled to it. The reasons for this were varied and included:

- lack of proper translation facilities which made medical diagnosis and treatment very difficult;
- lack of intercultural awareness and understanding of the situation of asylum seekers among members of the medical profession (particularly true in cases involving cultural practices such as FGM or the treatment of conditions which result from past trauma, e.g. PTSD);
- lack of trained personnel, particularly cultural mediators, who could help to bridge this gap;
- lack of information, follow-up and support (including social work support) to enable asylum seekers to obtain the services/treatment they require;
- prejudice on the part of healthcare professional/medical personnel who at times fail to take asylum seekers' concerns seriously (e.g. refusing to send an ambulance to the open centre);
- diffidence and reluctance to approach the system on the part of asylum seekers as a result of these difficulties.

One area which proved particularly problematic was the area of mental health, as persons with mental health problems are less likely to recognise the symptoms and, even if they did, many immigrants would be unlikely to refer themselves for treatment because of the stigma associated with such conditions.

Since March 2007 a doctor and nurse from Medecins du Monde have been providing a 20-hour in-house medical service in the larger open centres. According to an article carried in the Times of Malta on July 23, 2007, the results are very positive, as visits to the health centres have reduced and the ambulance service to the centres has dropped by half. Moreover, residents are better able to access medical care.

With regard to asylum seekers in detention, there has always been an in-house medical service in place. Since March/April 2007 this service has been considerably improved and now a doctor and nurse are present in the two larger centres (which house between 6-800 people) on a daily basis for 4-5 hours. Previously the service consisted of one doctor who would visit the centre daily for an hour or two each time seeing a maximum of 10-12 patients each time.

NGOs reported that although the current service is still insufficient to meet existing needs, given the very large population within the centres, it is a huge improvement on the previous system and a step in the right direction.

The said NGOs reported that in their view, the main problems in the area of healthcare are related to access to the system, i.e. getting to see the doctor and obtaining specialised follow-up care, which is provided on an out-patient basis at the general hospital. Detainees often complain that although they requested to see the doctor they were not allowed to do so. Moreover, detainees prescribed medication or referred for follow-up care often remain without the treatment they require. One reason for this is lack of resources, including lack of transportation or sufficient personnel to provide an escort.

It is worth noting, in addition, that detainees are taken to hospital on military trucks or jeeps, or else in a closed van with a cage inside, accompanied by military or detention service personnel. Moreover detainees are taken to hospital in handcuffs.

Q.28. Q.28. A. What is the length of the period determined by the concerned Member State during which asylum seekers have no access to the labour market? (see article 11 which is a mandatory provision)

Asylum seekers are entitled to access the labour market if their case has not yet been finally determined within 12 months.

It should be stated that Regulation 10, like article 11 of the directive, which deals with asylum seekers' access to the labour market, refers to cases where there is no decision at first instance within 12 months. However in practice it has been extended to cases where cases have not been finally determined after 12 months.

Moreover, both government personnel and NGOs working in the field reported that, in practice, asylum seekers released from detention before the lapse of 12 months are often granted permission to work.

Q.28. B. After that period, are asylum seekers or not obliged to obtain a work permit? In case is there a limit for the administration to deliver the permits and how quick are they delivered? What is their length?

In terms of Maltese policy it is not the asylum seeker but the prospective employer who applies for a permit to employ the asylum seeker. A fee of Lm25, i.e. €60, must be paid for each work permit application.

There is no administrative or legal time limit for the issue of a work permit – NGOs working with asylum seekers in the community stated that as a rule permits take weeks to be issued and have at times taken months.

Q.28. C. After that period, what are the conditions for access of the asylum seekers to the labour market? (in particular, are there rules concerning the maximum allowed of working hours or days per week, month or year, limits in terms of type of work or of professions authorised?

Asylum seekers may undertake employment, but may not work as self-employed persons.

Most asylum seekers find work in the construction and hospitality industries, as well as doing seasonal jobs such as sorting potatoes for export or grape-picking. However, this is due not to official restrictions on employment, but to the fact that there is a demand for immigrant labour in these sectors.

Q.28. D. What are the rules in terms of priorities between asylum seekers on the one hand and nationals, EU or EEE citizens and legally third-country nationals on the other?

[*to check]

Q.28. E. Do asylum seekers have access to vocational training, does this or not depend of their right to access to the labour market, and in case at which conditions? (see article 12 which is optional regarding §1 and mandatory regarding § 2)

[*to check]

Q.28. F. Are the rules regarding access to the labour market adopted to transpose the directive more or less generous than the ones applicable previously?

They are more generous, as previously asylum seekers could not work legally at any stage of the procedures.

Q.29. Are reception conditions subject to the fact that asylum seekers do not have sufficient resources? Are asylum seekers requested to contribute to reception conditions when they have personal resources (for instance if they work) or to refund the authorities if it appears that they have resources? (see article 13 §§ 3 and 4 which are optional provisions)

Both article 13(3) and (4) have been transposed into national legislation, so in theory both are possible.

In practice, to date this provision only applies to asylum seekers living in open centres. Once they start working regularly (as opposed to occasional or daily labour – there must be a measure of stability) they are asked to pay a small contribution (Lm0.50 - €1.17) towards the costs of their accommodation. They also stop receiving their daily allowance.

Asylum seekers in detention cannot work.

Asylum seekers living in independent accommodation in the community are never provided with accommodation or a daily allowance at state expense.

As was explained earlier, asylum seekers or other immigrants who fraudulently conceal income or assets to receive state benefits may be asked to refund monies received.

7. SPECIAL NEEDS OF PARTICULAR CATEGORIES OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.30.

Q.30.A. Which of the different categories of persons with special needs considered in the directive are taken into account in the national legislation (see article 17, §1 which is a mandatory provision): disabled people, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence? Include in your answer all other categories envisaged in national law.

Regulation 14(1) which transposes article 17(1) of the Directive mentions "the specific situation of vulnerable persons which shall include minors, unaccompanied minors and pregnant women, found to have special needs after an individual evaluation of their situation".

This is the only list of vulnerable persons in this or any other national law.

However, government policy on immigration includes a somewhat wider list. It should be noted however, that the list in the policy document is not linked to reception conditions per se but to release from detention.

It should be stated that both the list in the regulations regarding reception and that in the government policy document appear to be indicative rather than exhaustive (Regulation 14(1): "which shall include…"), however, the fact that the legislator chose to mention only those categories and omit the others cannot but be noted.

Q.30. B. How is their specific situation taken into account (see articles 13, §2, second indent, 16 §4 second sentence and 17 which are mandatory provisions)?

Regarding the transposition of these articles, or parts thereof, into national law, it should be noted that:

- Article 13(2) is transposed verbatim in regulation 11(2);
- Article 16(4) is partly transposed in regulation 13(4), which, in addition to omitting any reference to provision of emergency healthcare in all circumstances (see however Q27B), only directs national authorities taking decisions on reduction and withdrawal to take the specific situation of "persons covered by regulation 15" (i.e. unaccompanied minors only, not all vulnerable persons) into account;

- Article 17(1) is partly transposed in regulation 14(1), however, as was previously noted (rf Q30A) our law only makes specific mention of minors, unaccompanied minors and pregnant women.

In practice, there is no system in place to address the special needs of vulnerable asylum seekers who are never detained. With other asylum seekers (i.e. those who are detained at some point), the special needs of vulnerable persons are taken into account in two areas.

The first is that of release from detention; government policy on detention states that vulnerable people shall not be detained. It does allow however that…

In practice, as a rule, all are detained upon apprehension by the immigration authorities for illegal entry or stay. Vulnerable persons are then released from detention after their vulnerability is determined through an individual evaluation of their personal circumstances (undertaken by OIWAS), medical clearance is obtained and accommodation is found in the community (again placement is made by OIWAS).

The procedure for assessment and release of vulnerable persons is not written – the following is a description of the practice on the ground provided by various actors (both governmental and non-governmental) working in the field.

Identification of vulnerable persons is usually carried out by the immigration authorities on arrival, the staff at the detention centres, and NGO personnel or staff of other agencies visiting the centres. All persons identified are referred to OIWAS, the government agency responsible for conducting an assessment of vulnerability.

There are no fixed timelines within which assessment and release should take place – in fact this procedure may take weeks or even months. In practice, the length of time a vulnerable person spends in detention will depend on a number of things, including the point at which the individual is identified, availability of accommodation in the community and the nature of the condition giving rise to vulnerability.

With certain categories of people whose vulnerability is immediately obvious, such as pregnant women or minors, identification and assessment are relatively straightforward. Moreover, once they are identified and their vulnerability is ascertained they are released from detention more or less automatically.

In cases where vulnerability is less obvious and may be disputed, such as persons suffering from medical conditions, certain kinds of disability, mental health problems, or trauma and torture, identification and assessment are more difficult in practice and release may take longer to obtain. NGOs reported that the criteria used to assess such cases are not always clear. Moreover, even once vulnerability is ascertained by OIWAS, the government agency responsible for such assessment, release is not automatic but has to be ordered by the Principal Immigration Officer on a case-by-case basis. According to NGOs working in the field, once an immigrant is found to be vulnerable the PIO usually orders release, however, having to go through an additional step in the process means that release may take longer to obtain.

To date, the greatest difficulties have been faced by asylum seekers suffering from psychological and mental health problems and victims of trauma and torture. It is true that some cases have been fast-tracked and release ordered: e.g. in July 2006 seven survivors of a shipwreck who had lost close relatives, e.g. children, parents, siblings or wives, in the tragedy were released from detention almost immediately and in May 2007 the sole survivor of a shipwreck was released from detention. However, many others are never identified and even when they are, release is not always ordered.

While vulnerable asylum seekers are in detention, no special provision is made for them.

The second area where special provision is made for vulnerable asylum seekers is that of accommodation in the community.

As was mentioned earlier, there are special purpose-made facilities in place to accommodate certain categories of vulnerable asylum seekers – i.e. unaccompanied minors (Dar is-Sliem and Dar Liedna), pregnant women and families with minor children (Dar Liedna (upper floors), Dar Qawsalla and part of Hal Far Open Centre).

There are no special facilities available to accommodate other categories of vulnerable persons, such as persons suffering from disability or physical or mental health problems. They are therefore either accommodated within facilities for asylum seekers run by NGOs or within mainstream facilities, but placement in these centres is not always easy as resources are very limited.

It should be stated however that, as a rule, only immigrants (including asylum seekers) released from detention are accommodated in these residential facilities.

Q.30. C. How and when are the special needs of the concerned persons supposed to be legally identified (see article 17 § 2 which is a mandatory provision and clarify how it has been interpreted by transposition)?

Article 17(2) is included in sub-regulation 14(1), which states that: "In the implementation of the provisions relating to material reception conditions and healthcare, account shall be taken of the specific situation of vulnerable persons which shall include minors, unaccompanied minors and pregnant women, found to have special needs of after an individual evaluation of their situation".

As was explained in the answer to the previous question, the mechanism in place for identification and assessment of vulnerable persons is specifically linked to release from detention and not to special provision in the area of material reception conditions and healthcare across the board. The needs of vulnerable asylum seekers who are never detained would not be assessed through this procedure.

Q.30. D. Is the necessary medical and other assistance provided to persons with special needs as requested by article 15, §2 which is a mandatory provision and in particular to victims of torture and violence as requested by article 20 which is a mandatory provision?

Neither article 15(2) nor article 20 are specifically transposed into national legislation, however, as was previously stated, the Refugees Act entitles all asylum seekers to free medical treatment, which, as a rule, they can obtain.

One possible area of treatment which is not specifically covered by national legislation is that of psychological support. It seems that asylum seekers would qualify for such treatment from government agencies free of charge. However, there are problems relating to limited resources (there are very long waiting lists for such services) and cultural issues.

Q.31. About minors:

Q.31. A. Till which age are asylum seekers considered to be minor?

They are considered to be minors until the age of 18.

Q.31. B. How is access of minor asylum seekers to the education system ensured? Is it at school or in case inside accommodation centres and can it be considered as similar to the conditions for nationals as requested by article 10, §1?

Minor asylum seekers have free access to the state educational system. They attend local state schools under the same conditions as Maltese nationals. This applies to all asylum seekers living in the community.

Today, education is not provided while minors are in detention – in 2002 and 2003 when there were a large number of minors in detention for months on end (up to 21 months in some cases) minors used to attend school wile they were in detention. This was prior to the introduction of the current policy on release of vulnerable persons. Today minors are usually placed in school once they are released from detention.

Q.31. C. Is access to education ensured not later than 3 months as requested by article 10, §2 (or after maximum one year if specific education for asylum seekers is provided) and till an expulsion decision is really enforced?

Minor asylum seekers or children of asylum seekers who are never detained may access the education system as soon as the necessary medical checks have been carried out.

With minor asylum seekers or children of asylum seekers who are detained, as was previously stated access to education is usually provided once the minor is released from detention. In some cases this took longer than 3 months – the applicable time limit given that no specific education is provided.

It seems that as a rule education continues to be provided even after a negative decision is given.

Q.31. D. Is specific education (like language classes) available for asylum seekers, in particular to facilitate their effective access to the education system of the reception Member State (see article 10, §2 which is an optional provision)?

No there is no specific education available.

Q.31. E. Are minors in general accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them? (see article 14, § 3)

With asylum seekers who are never detained, as a rule accompanied minors live with their parents or the adult who is responsible for them. In practice the relationship would only questioned in exceptional circumstances (e.g. where there are issues of abuse), given that there is no issue of entitlement to release or any other benefit.

Minor asylum seekers in detention are usually accommodated with their parents if they arrive together. They are also considered for release as a family unit. Where they arrive separately family unity is normally respected once the existence of a parent-child relationship is established. Parents arriving after their children have been released from detention are normally released to live with their family.

Where the accompanying adult is not a parent the minor is normally considered as unaccompanied, even if the adult is an older sibling or aunt/uncle. While this could make sense in some cases, e.g. where the accompanying adult is just one or two years older than the minor, in other cases, e.g. where the accompanying adult is an aunt or a sibling who is considerably older, the situation is different. However, OIWAS maintain that they cannot entrust the minor to the care of a relative other than a parent unless there is a court order entrusting the child to his/her care.

This effectively means that the family unit is divided, as the minor is released while the accompanying adult remains in detention.

Given that the adult remains in detention, with only limited access to information about their rights, legal assistance or other services, often they do not even know that they can challenge such a decision. As a rule, OIWAS do not inform the accompanying adult of his/her right to apply to the court for authorisation to act as legal guardian or of the procedure that must be followed. Moreover, given that they are in detention it is very difficult for them to obtain legal assistance, although they would be entitled to legal aid in terms of the COCP.

Q.31. F. Do minors with special needs enumerated by article 18, §2 which is a mandatory provision, have access to appropriate mental health care and qualified counselling?

Article 18(2) has not been transposed into national legislation.

The needs of minors who are not detained only come to the attention of the authorities in exceptional cases, as they are not assessed as a matter of routine and such assistance/care/treatment is not systematically provided. Whether or not they will get the attention they require will depend on whether or not their needs are identified.

In detention minors are not provided with any form of special services/care/support. Once they are identified and released they are accommodated in specialised facilities where they will have the support of a residential social worker. This will help to identify those who need specialised care and to facilitate access to such care, including mental healthcare if this is necessary.

It should be stated that, in practice, in individual cases where psychological care was indicated, the Advisory Board (see 31G below) has authorised access to private care, in order to avoid long waiting lists for government services.

Q.31. G. How and when is organised the representation of unaccompanied minors (guardianship, special organisation) and regularly assessed? (see article 19, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

Article 19(1) has not bee specifically transposed into national legislation, however, article 12 of the Refugees Act provides that: 'Any child or young person below the age of eighteen years falling within the scope of this Act who is found under circumstances which clearly indicate that he is a child or young person in need of care, shall be allowed to apply for asylum, and for the purposes of this Act, shall be assisted in terms of the Children and Young Persons (Care Orders) Act, as if he were a child or young person under such Act.'

This effectively means that any child found to be an unaccompanied minor will be placed under the care of the Minister for the Family and Social Solidarity, by means of a care order issues in terms of the Children and Young Persons (Care Orders) Act (Chapter 285 of the Laws of Malta).

Upon the issue of a care order the minor is released from detention, placed in a facility for unaccompanied minors and a curator is appointed.

It has become standard practice to appoint the residential social worker employed at the facility where the asylum seeker resides as a curator. This effectively means that each social worker could be curator for between 20 and 30 unaccompanied minors at any given time. The main function of the curator is to assist the minor during his/her interview with the Office of Refugee Commissioner. In all other matters it is the Minister who is responsible for the welfare and care of the minor.

Major decisions regarding unaccompanied minors, as with all children in care, are taken by the Advisory Board, which is appointed by the Minister to advise her on matters relating to children in care. In terms of Section 11 of the Care Orders Act, it is 'the duty of the Board to advise the Minister on the best methods of dealing with every child or young person committed to or taken into his care in accordance with this Act, to exercise general supervision over such children or young persons and, in general, to promote their welfare.' In practice, when taking decisions, the Board relies heavily on recommendations of the professionals involved in the case, which, in the circumstances is more than understandable.

There is no mechanism specifically set up to assess the representation/guardianship provided, either in the law or in practice. To some extent, the Advisory Board could fulfil this role, but it is not clear whether it has been specifically charged with doing so.

Q.31. H. How is placement of unaccompanied minors organised (with adult relatives, a foster family, in special accommodation centres or other suitable accommodation)? (see article 19, §2 which is mandatory provision)

Article 19(2) is only very partially transposed into national legislation – regulation 15 simply states that "An unaccompanied minor aged 16years or over may be placed in accommodation centres for adult asylum seekers".

Unaccompanied minor asylum seekers who are identified from among asylum seekers in detention, are always released from detention and placed in specialised facilities set up for the purpose. In practice most unaccompanied minor asylum seekers come from within this category. As was indicated in Q31E unaccompanied minor asylum seekers are not normally placed with adults who are not their parents.

In the rare cases where there are unaccompanied minors who are not apprehended on arrival and placed in detention (usually these are not asylum seekers), they are placed in care facilities as soon as they are identified.

If unaccompanied minors are very young, they are usually placed in mainstream residential facilities for children in care rather than in facilities for unaccompanied minor asylum seekers. In the latter facilities, as the average age of the residents is usually older (15-18), they are not equipped to care for younger children.

Q.31. I. How is the tracing of the family members of the unaccompanied minors organised? Are measures taken to protect confidentiality of information when necessary? (see article 19, §3 which is a mandatory provision)

Article 19(3) is not transposed into national legislation.

From what we could gather tracing of family is only undertaken at the minor's request and, very often, on his/her own initiative.

Regarding the issue of confidentiality of information regarding asylum seekers in general, article 8(3) of the Refugees Act provides that: 'All information concerning applications for refugee status shall remain confidential. Under no circumstance shall any information concerning such applications be disclosed to the authorities of the country of origin of the applicant, nor shall any information be requested from such authorities regarding the applicant.'

It is doubtful whether this provision provides the level of protection required by article 19(3), however it goes some way towards ensuring confidentiality of information regarding all asylum seekers, including minors.

8. EXCEPTIONAL MODALITIES OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.32. Apart from detention covered by the next question, are there exceptional modalities for reception conditions in the following cases and if yes, which ones and for how long are they applicable, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)?

There are no exceptional modalities for reception conditions, apart from detention.

Q.32. A. Persons with specific or special needs, regarding in particular the period of assessment of those needs?

Q.32. B. Non availability of reception conditions in certain areas

Q.32. C. Temporarily exhaustion of normal housing capacities

Q.32. D. The asylum seeker is confined to a border post

Asylum seekers are not normally confined to border posts.

Q.32. E. All other cases not mentioned in the directive (for instance urgent situation in case of a sudden high number of applicants outside a case of application of the directive on temporary protection).

Q.33. Detention of asylum seekers (we do not cover the situation of rejected asylum seekers detained for the purpose of their return) (see articles 6 §2, 7 §3, 13, §2 2nd indent and 14 §8 which implies that the directive is in principle applicable in case of detention):

Q.33. A. In which cases or circumstances and for which reasons[1] (identity verification in particular if the persons have no or false documents, protection of public order or national security, refugee status determination, way of entry into the territory, etc) can an asylum seeker be detained during the asylum procedure till his request has been finally rejected. Quote precisely in English in your answer the legal basis for detention of asylum seekers in national law.

Asylum seekers who enter Malta legally are not detained. Asylum seekers with irregular migration status may be detained in terms of the Immigration Act (Chapter 217 of the Laws of Malta).

It is important to note that immigration status is not the sole factor that determines whether or not an asylum seeker will be detained throughout the duration of the asylum procedure. Asylum seekers with irregular migration status who manage to apply for refugee status before they are apprehended by the immigration authorities are not detained as a rule. Those who apply for refugee status after having been placed in custody (with few exceptions, see below), however, remain in detention throughout the procedure for the determination of their asylum application.

Maltese law does not contain specific provisions regulating detention of asylum seekers per se.

The Refugees Act makes no mention of detention, however, Article 11 of the said Act, indicates that asylum seekers may be detained for breaching immigration regulations, when it states that:
'(1) Notwithstanding the provisions of any other law to the contrary, and notwithstanding any deportation or removal order, a person declared to be a refugee shall be entitled -

(a) to remain in Malta, and to be granted personal documents, including a residence permit; and if in custody in virtue only of a deportation or removal order, to be immediately released;'

The Immigration Act provides that all immigrants refused admission into Malta or issued with a removal order, in terms of the said Act, shall be placed in custody until they can be removed from national territory.

Article 10 of the Immigration Act, which deals with detention of persons refused admission into Malta, provides that:
'(1) Where leave to land is refused to any person arriving in Malta on an aircraft, such person may be placed temporarily on land and detained in some place approved by the Minister and notified by notice in the Gazette until the departure of such aircraft is imminent.
(2) Where leave to land is refused to any person arriving inMalta by any other means, such person at his own request may,with the leave of the Principal Immigration Officer, be placed temporarily on shore and detained in some place approved by the Minister and notified by notice in the Gazette....

[1] Please specify if article 18 §1 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Member States shall not hold a person in detention for the sole reason that he/she is an applicant for asylum" is or not respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed).

(3) Any person, while he is detained under sub-article (1) or (2), shall be deemed to be in legal custody and not to have landed.'

Article 14 of the same Act regulates the detention of persons issued with a removal order:
'(1) If any person is considered by the Principal Immigration Officer to be liable to removal as a prohibited immigrant under any of the provisions of article 5, the said Officer may issue a removal order against such person...
(2) Upon such order being made, such person against whom such order is made, shall be detained in custody until he is removed from Malta.'

As was previously stated, those who apply for asylum after they have been placed in custody remain in detention.

Detention lasts as long as it takes for an asylum application to be determined. Where an application for asylum is still pending after 12 months, the asylum seeker is released from detention to await the final outcome of his/her asylum application in the community. The only exceptions are vulnerable asylum seekers; these are released to live in the community once their vulnerability is determined, medical clearance is obtained and accommodation is found in the community (refer Q30).

Q.33. B. Has your member State adopted measures to transpose §3 of article 7 which is an optional provision? If yes, how has this provision been legally understood (is it a case of detention or an obligation to stay in and not leave a certain place?) and for which reasons can an asylum seeker be "confined" in such a place?

Article 7(3) is transposed into national legislation through regulation 6(2), which allows the Principal Immigration Officer to order that an applicant be confined to a particular place in accordance with Maltese law, "for legal reasons or reasons of public order".

In practice, the only asylum seekers confined to a particular place are those who are detained. Technically it is not detention per se that is ordered by the PIO; as was previously explained, in terms of the Immigration Act, detention is the automatic consequence of a removal order (issued by the PIO) or of a refusal to grant admission to national territory.

Q.33. C. Are there legally alternatives to detention, like obligation to report to the authorities, obligation to stay in a place, provision of a guarantor or of a financial guarantee?

The law provides for only one alternative to detention, which may be described as an obligation to report to the autorities.

Article 25A(9) of the Immigration Act provides that the Immigration Appeals Board shall have 'jurisdiction to hear and determine applications made by persons in custody in virtue only of a deportation or removal order to be released from custody pending the determination of any application under the Refugees Act or otherwise pending their deportation in accordance with the following subarticles of this article.'

The said article goes on to limit the circumstances in which the Board may grant release, and states that:
'(13) It shall be a condition of any release under subarticles (9) to (12) that the person so released shall periodically (and in no case less often than once every week) report to the immigration authorities at such intervals as the Board may determine.'
See Q33H for more information regarding the efficacy of this remedy.

In practice, there are alternatives to detention for vulnerable asylum seekers and for asylum seekers released from detention to await the outcome of their asylum application in the community (i.e. in those cases where an application is still pending after 12 months).

Q.33. D. Which is the competent authority to order the detention of an asylum seeker? Explain if different authorities are involved to first take and later confirm the decision.

Prohibited immigrants are detained by virtue of a removal order issued by the Principal Immigration Officer or as a result of a refusal to grant admission into national territory (see Q33A&C). National law does not provide for the automatic review or even for the need to confirm the detention of an immigrant.

Q.33. E. For how long and till which stage of the asylum procedure can an asylum seeker be detained?

Persons who apply for asylum after they have been placed in custody remain in detention throughout the duration of the procedures for the determination of their asylum application. The only exceptions are vulnerable asylum seekers and asylum seekers whose application is still pending after 12 months.

This 12 month time limit on detention of asylum seekers is not fixed by law, nor is it clearly established by government policy.

Until December 2003, detention was indefinite. From December 2003 the government started releasing groups of immigrants who had been in detention for more or less 18 months, regardless of the status of their application for protection. By January 2005 the 18-month time limit was clearly established, and was included in the government policy document on detention.

In mid-2005 the government changed existing policy on release, and started releasing asylum seekers whose application was still pending after 12 months. This change was apparently introduced as a result of the application of article 11(2) and (3) of the Reception Directive (Regulation 10(2) and (3)) regulating asylum seekers' access to the labour market. In practice, this provision has been interpreted to mean that all asylum seekers whose application is still pending, whether at first or second instance, will be released from detention as they must be allowed access to the labour market.

It is true that not all asylum seekers spend the maximum duration of 12 months in detention; some are released before if their application is determined and they are granted some form of protection. The government has in fact maintained that asylum seekers who are granted some form of protection usually spend an average of 5 or 6 months in detention.

To put this declaration in context, it should be explained that the vast majority of asylum seekers granted protection get it at first instance. Very few appeals are accepted - no statistics are available, but NGOs say that only 2 out of the thousands of appeals filed have been accepted to date.

In practice, some asylum seekers have spent less than 5 months in detention, but many others have spent far more.

Asylum seekers are interviewed in chronological order, according to the date of their arrival in Malta. As a rule, asylum seekers who arrive by boat later in the year are likely to spend longer in detention than those who arrive earlier as the backlog of cases pending before the Refugee Commissioner's Office would have increased by then.

During the last 12 months, due to staff shortages at the Office of the Refugee Commissioner, asylum applications were processed far more slowly than usual. In fact, many asylum seekers who are currently being released after 12 months in detention have not even been called for their initial interview with this office.

Q.33. F. In which places (can we call them "closed centres"?) are asylum seekers detained (places in a special closed centres reserved only to asylum seekers, together with returnees like illegal aliens or even in a normal prison, in case within separated areas or with the other detainees)? Indicate if a difference has to be made following the location of the "closed centres" at the border or on the territory? Which is the authority managing those places and is it the same as the one in charge of reception conditions?

Asylum seekers are detained in detention centres with other immigrants, including rejected asylum seekers and immigrants who did not apply for asylum. They are not placed in prison unless they have committed a criminal offence. All detention centres house immigrants at different stages of the asylum procedure, from new arrivals to those whose application has been rejected.

Detention centres are managed by the Detention Service, within the Ministry for Justice and Home Affairs. Open reception centres, on the other hand, are managed by OIWAS, a social welfare agency within the Ministry for the Family and Social Solidarity.

Q.33. G. Does UNHCR and NGOs have access to the places of detention and under which conditions?

Both UNHCR and NGOs are allowed access to detention centres once a permit has been obtained from the police authorities.

UNHCR and NGO personnel are allowed to enter inside the facilities where detainees are housed. The only area NGOs are not allowed to enter is that used for seclusion of detainees.

Q.33. H. What appeal(s) can asylum seekers introduce against the fact he is detained? Is article 18 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Where an applicant for asylum is held in detention, Member States shall ensure that there is a possibility of speedy judicial review" respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed)?

There is no automatic review of the administrative decision to detain, however, at least on paper, the law provides a number of remedies for a detained asylum seeker to obtain release from detention and/or to challenge his/her detention.

Problems however arise in practice due to:

- the scope of these remedies and the manner in which the law is applied by the courts/tribunals concerned (there is a tendency to apply the law rather restrictively);
- the level of accessibility of these remedies, particularly for asylum seekers in detention;
- the difficulties faced by detained asylum seekers when seeking to obtain legal assistance and/or legal aid; and
- the length of time some of these procedures take.

This has raised concerns that, in fact, asylum seekers do not have the possibility of a 'speedy judicial review' of their detention.

The following is an outline of existing legal remedies:

Appeal against a removal order

Article 14(1) of the Immigration Act allows any immigrant against whom a removal order is issued to appeal to the Immigration Appeals Board, within 3 working days from the date when the order is issued (Article 25A(7) of the same Act). Upon a request by the appellant, the Immigration Appeals Board has the authority to grant provisional release pending the final determination of an appeal from a removal order, subject to the conditions it deems fit, in terms of Art 25A(6).

This procedure does not really qualify as a 'judicial review' of detention – it is a review of the merits of the administrative decision to issue a removal order, with the possibility of temporary release pending the final outcome of the appeal.

No statistics on appeals filed are publicly available, but it seems that in practice few immigrants appeal from removal orders issued against them and very few of the appeals filed are upheld.

Naturally, in those cases where the Board accepts the appeal and revokes the removal order, the immigrant concerned will be released as the legal grounds for detention no longer exist.

Application to the Immigration Appeals Board

Article 25A(9) & (10) provide that any immigrant who is detained in terms of the Immigration Act may apply to the Board for release from custody if he/she believes that his/her detention is unreasonable either because of its duration, or because there is no reasonable possibility of removal within a reasonable time. Anyone released by virtue of this provision will be obliged to report to the immigration authorities at least once a week.

The law itself restricts the scope of this remedy, stating that the Board may refuse to authorise the release of a rejected asylum seeker who fails to cooperate with the immigration authorities' attempts to repatriate him/her.

In addition, article 25A(11) further restricts the Board's discretion stating that the Board shall not grant release:

" (a) when the identity of the applicant including his nationality has yet to be verified, in particular where the applicant has destroyed his travel or identification documents or used fraudulent documents in order to mislead the authorities;

(b) when elements on which any claim by applicant under the Refugees Act is based, have to be determined, where the determination thereof cannot be achieved in the absence of detention;

(c) where the release of the applicant could pose a threat to public security or public order."

Article 25(11)(a) was been used as the reason to justify the continued detention of Somali asylum seekers who had been in detention for 9-10 months simply awiting their initial interview with the Office of the Refugee Commissioner. As they arrived in Malta undocumented and had no proof of their Somali nationality (which is usually established through their asylum interview) the Board rejected their application for release. The applicants concerned were later released after the lapse of 12 months without having been interviewed.

The law provides for the possibility of re-arrest where the Principal Immigration Officer is satisfied that: "there exists a reasonable prospect of deportation" or that such person is not co-operating with legitimate attempts to remove him "to his country of origin or to another country which has accepted to receive him"

The following are some of the concerns raised regarding this remedy:

- It is questionable whether this remedy qualifies as a 'judicial' review – as it would appear that the Immigration Appeals Board is not a judicial but an administrative tribunal (vide concerns raised above in Q22A);

- It is most definitely not speedy – applications usually take weeks if not months to be decided;

- The scope of this remedy - in addition to the restrictions built into the legal provisions establishing this remedy (highlighted above), there is the fact that the Board is not directed to examine the 'lawfulness' but the 'reasonableness' of detention. There is no clear definition regarding what qualifies as 'reasonable'. A review of the Board's decisions in such cases to date seems to indicate that the Board considers current government policy to be 'reasonable'. In practice release has only been granted in very few cases where there were serious reasons which, in the Board's view, justified a deviation from standard practice in the individual case, e.g. a medical condition. But then again, the Board does not order the release of every asylum seeker with a medical condition, even if it is serious chronic illness.

- It is largely inaccessible to most detained asylum seekers.

  One reason for this is the fact that they face huge difficulties obtaining legal assistance to be able to make the application. It is not clear whether they are entitled to legal aid (free legal assistance) to make the application – in fact, in my view, they are not.

  Article 911(1) of the Code of Organization and Civil Procedure (Chapter 12 of the Laws of Malta) provides that one may be granted legal aid to sue or defend: '...in any court mentioned in articles 3 and 4 (i.e. the superior and inferior courts of civil jurisdiction, including the Constitutional Court) and before any other adjudicating authority where the benefit of legal aid is by law granted'. Neither the Immigration Act nor any other law provides that detainees are entitled to legal aid for the purposes of making an application to the Board.

  In practice, even if they are entitled to legal aid, it is virtually impossible for them to obtain such assistance through the normal channels, as this involves visiting the office of the legal aid lawyer at the law courts (impossible for one who is detained)or making an application to the First Hall of the Civil Court (impossible without the assistance of a lawyer). In fact, in the case of appeals from decisions of the Refugee Commissioner, a special legal aid service was set up to cater for asylum seekers, many of whom are in detention, as the 'normal' procedure did not work in this context. It is very difficult for detainees to obtain the services of a private lawyer, as they cannot afford to pay. There is one NGO (JRS Malta) offering free legal services to detainees, but in general NGOs lack sufficient resources to provide a meaningful service to all detainees in the circumstances;

  The issue of inaccessibility is also due to the manner in which the Immigration Appeals Board functions: e.g. it has no registry or office where one can file applications or follow up on cases and asylum seekers are not provided with information or instructions explaining where one should go to file an application or what procedures should be followed when doing so. In practice, it is therefore practically impossible for a detained asylum seeker to make use of it.

In a recent case, Tafarra Besabe Berhe vs Commissioner of Police in his capacity as Principal Immigration Officer and the Minister for Justice and Home Affairs, the the First Hall of the Civil Court presided by Judge J.R. Micallef delivered a preliminary judgement dealing with the adequacy of this remedy.

The case concerns an Eritrean asylum seeker who is challenging the lawfulness of his 7-month detention in terms of Articles 3 and 5 of the European Convention on Human Rights (articles 34 and 36 of the Constituion of Malta). The government argued that applicant should not have resorted to a Constutional application, which is considered an exceptional remedy, but should have used the remedy contemplated in article 25A, which is an ordinary remedy first. Applicant argued that article 25A cannot be considered an adequate remedy in the circumstances. The Court upheld applicant's claims in a preliminary judgement delivered on Thursday June 20, 2007, wherein it stated that considering the nature of the applicant's claims, the jurisdiction of the Board which is limited to ordering release rather than examining the lawfulness or the conditions of detention, the limited resources of the Board, the Court:
'agrees with the applicant's submissions and considers that the remedy mentioned by the defendants cannot give, even in the best hypothesis, a remedy that is adequate, effective and certain as demanded by law in cases where a person's liberty is denied, even for a limited time.'

Application to the Magistrates Court
Section 409(A) of the Criminal Code allows anyone (immigrant or not) who is detained under the authority of the police or of any other public authority not in connection with any offence with which he is charged or accused before a court to challenge the lawfulness of his/her detention by means of an application to the Court of Magistrates, which shall have the same powers as that court has as a court of criminal inquiry demanding his release from custody.

This remedy definitely qualifies as speedy as the law lays down strict timelines within which the respondent must be notified and the application appointed for hearing.

However, the scope of this remedy is quite narrow. In two cases filed by immigrants, (an asylum seeker, Karim Barboush, and a rejected asylum seeker, Kinfe Asmelash) who had been detained for 14 and 12 months respectively, the court held that it could only look at whether the detention was authorised in terms of the Immigration Act. It could not examine the lawfulness of detention in the light of the provisions of the ECHR or look at whether or not detention was necessary. Such analysis can only be carried out by the Constitutional court following an application by the victim in terms of the Constitution or the ECHR.

The issue of access to legal aid mentioned above applies also in regard to this remedy.

Constitutional application
Any immigrant who believes that his detention is in violation of Art 5 of the European Convention of Human Rights (or indeed any other article of the Constitution of Malta or the ECHR) may file an application to the First Hall of the Civil Court (Constitutional Jurisdiction).

Although this remedy definitely constitutes a judicial review of detention, the European Court of Human Rights has stated that it cannot be considered to satisfy the ECHR requirement of 'speediness' (see Kadem v Malta [Application number 55263/00 [2003]- application in terms of article 5(4) – January 9, 2003] and Sabeur Ben Ali v Malta [Application number 35892/97 [2000]- application in terms of article 5(3) & (4) – June 29, 2000]).

Once again the accessibility of this remedy is questionable, not because of entitlement to legal aid which results clearly from the provisions of the law, but rather because of the practical difficulties faced by detained asylum seekers when seeking to obtain legal aid.

Q.33. I. Is the directive on reception conditions considered to be in principle applicable to the places where asylum seekers are detained? In particular which information do they receive about their rights, which access do they have to legal advice and health care?

In practice asylum seekers in detention receive little information about their rights. On arrival in Malta they are given a copy of a pamphlet, entitled 'Your Entitlements, Responsibilities and Obligations while in Detention', published by the MJHA in English, French and Arabic. This booklet gives a brief outline of the asylum procedure, informs asylum seekers that they can apply to the Board to challenge the reasonableness of their detention, and outlines their rights and obligations while in detention. It does not go beyond simply informing asylum seekers that they have rights – i.e. it provides them with no practical information about how they might access them.

JRS Malta also published a booklet focused on the asylum procedure, as part of a project funded by ERFII 2005. So far it is available in English and French. It is currently being translated into Tigrinya and Somali.

The main problem with written publications is that many asylum seekers – particularly, but not only, women – are illiterate and have absolutely no formal education. It is particularly difficult for these people to understand the mechanisms in place to examine asylum application or challenge detention as often they do not even understand the very concept of procedure. In such cases only repeated provision of oral information in a language they can understand and regular availability to answer questions will fill the information vacuum.

JRS does provide a basic information service, but it is very limited in comparison to the overwhelming needs on the ground.

Regarding access to legal assistance – as was previously stated asylum seekers in detention find it very hard to obtain legal assistance from private sources, for financial and other reasons. Legal aid is only available in very specific circumstances and, with the exception of that provided to asylum seekers at appeal stage of the procedures in terms of the Refugees Act, which is tailor-made to meet the needs of detained asylum seekers, it is practically impossible for detained asylum seekers to obtain legal aid through the normal channels.

Regarding access to medical treatment, see Q27C above.

Q.33. J. Apart from freedom of movement, what are the main differences between normal reception conditions and exceptional modalities for reception conditions in case of detention, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)? If it is about closed centres, are the regulations of those places in line with the requirements of the directive (is article 13, §2, second indent of the directive following which "Member States shall ensure that standards of living is met (…) in relation to the situation of persons who are in detention" respected?).

Refer also to Q33E.

Asylum seekers are deprived of their liberty for months on end in very poor conditions – few of the facilities currently being used to detain asylum seekers were ever intended for use as detention centres, some where not even intended for human habitation. Two of the buildings were originally intended as warehouses, for military use, and in another compound detainees are housed in tents. Even in the one facility which was designed and built for use as a detention centre conditions are far from ideal. These facilities are therefore particularly inappropriate to house so many people for such long periods.

All of the centres are overcrowded, particularly during the summer months when there are many new arrivals. There is a lack of privacy both in the bathrooms and in the sleeping quarters, which is made up mostly of dormitories full of bunk beds divided into smaller sections by means of makeshift partitions, usually bedsheets. Most of the showers have no doors or curtains and the toilet doors do not lock.

The one centre which houses both males and females, i.e. where families and single women are detained, the situation is much the same. Here too the sleeping quarters house both males, females (including single females) and children, often in the same room, and sanitary facilities are shared.

In addition to the physical conditions in which they are detained, detainees have nothing to do all day. There is little internal recreational space. Most centres have a yard; in some cases the detainees have unlimited access to open air, in other cases access is from sunrise to sunset, in other cases for one hour daily and in one centre for an hour twice a week.

Apart from the handful of detainees who are allowed to help with odd jobs around the centre or in the barracks, none of the detainees have any opportunity to engage in constructive or meaningful activities to pass the time. The only thing they can do is watch television – in most cases one TV set is shared between over a 100 people – read a book, if they manage to get one, or play board games.

The conditions in Malta's detention centres have been documented in numerous reports, some of which are listed in Q8 above.

From all accounts, it is difficult to describe the conditions within the centres as providing an adequate standard of living in line with the requirements of the Reception Directive.

In addition, NGOs working in detention also raised the following concerns:

- Detainees are almost totally isolated, making it very difficult for them to obtain information about their rights, or to exercise them effectively even if they know about them.

- In addition, detainees face major difficulties when seeking to access basic services, including healthcare, legal assistance and social work services. There are very few social workers working within the centres – currently there is 1 employed by an NGO and 2 employed by the state to work in detention. The latter are however more involved in assessing vulnerability than in providing social work follow up in individual cases. Regarding access to medical care rf Q27C and regarding access to legal assistance rf Q33H.

- Moreover, the staff at the centres is made up almost exclusively of people from a military/police background. The ratio of staff to detainees is relatively small, when one considers the size of the detainee population. As a result, within the centres, the focus is often far more on security than on welfare. Detainees wear handcuffs every time they leave the facility, even to go to the hospital.

- Although the situation varies within different centres, communication between detainees in staff is often poor as a result of various problems, including language barriers, inability to cope with the overwhelming demands, fear and mistrust.

- The staff working at the centres receives some training, but concerns were expressed regarding the adequacy of the training provided and the level of support that staff receive. A report on the psychological health of Detention Service staff that was tabled in Parliament points to high levels of stress, insecurity and even fear.

- The rules regarding the administration of discipline within the centres are far from clear and questionable forms of punishment, such as seclusion for days in a small, dark cell and deprivation of access to open air, are often used.

Q.33. K. Are measures taken to avoid detention of asylum seekers with special needs (if yes, which ones?) or are special measures taken because of their needs?

Refer to the answer provided to Q30A and B.

While they are in detention no special measures are in place to meet the needs of asylum seekers with special needs.

Q.33. L. Can minor asylum seekers be detained together with relatives? Can unaccompanied minor asylum seekers be detained? If yes, are there special measures which take into account that children are concerned?

Both accompanied and unaccompanied minor asylum seekers may be detained if they are apprehended by the immigration authorities for breaching immigration laws. They are released from detention once their situation is assessed and they are found to be vulnerable in terms of government policy. Until this procedure is carried out they are detained.

Regarding accommodation with relatives refer to the answer to Q31E.

Unaccompanied minor asylum seekers who arrive in an irregular manner, usually by boat, are usually placed in detention on arrival – as are all other such arrivals, whether vulnerable or otherwise. They remain in detention until they are identified and age assessment procedures are carried out by the Age Assessment Team (AAT) within OIWAS. This process may take some time, particularly is the individual concerned is referred for a Further Age Verification Test, usually an X-ray of the bones of the wrist.

There are no special measures for children while they are detained – they are detained with adults, in a centre where the daily regime is actually stricter than that in other centres. They have access to the open air only twice weekly and spend the rest of the time in cramped facilities consisting mostly of sleeping quarters. No activities are organised for them.

Q.33. M. In particular is article 10 regarding access to education of minors respected in those places?

As was stated in the answer to Q31B, as a rule minors in detention do not go to school; they are placed in school as soon as they are released from detention.

In terms of government policy children are released from detention as soon as medical clearance is obtained and accommodation is found in the community. In some cases this process is completed within days but, according to NGOs working in the centres, it has on occasion taken months (up to 6 months in some cases during 2006).

Q.33. N. How many asylum seekers are for the moment detained in your Member State? Which proportion does this represent in comparison of the total number of asylum seekers at the same moment?

The authorities concerned informed us that it is very difficult to accurately establish the number of asylum seekers in detention.

[We are awaiting further information regarding this point and will pass it on as soon as we have it.]

9. ORGANISATION OF THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.34. Explain if the system of providing reception conditions is centralised or decentralised (which levels of government do provide practically reception conditions?) (do not confuse this question with question number 3 about the competence to make rules about reception conditions).

The system, such as it is, is more or less centralised. By and large reception conditions are provided by two main institutions (the Detention Service for asylum seekers and other immigrants in detention within the MJHA and OIWAS for asylum seekers and other immigrants in the community within the MFSS). Both are set up by and answerable to the central government.

The NGOs providing accommodation do this in collaboration with OIWAS and the MFSS.

Q.35. In case, are accommodation centres public or/and private (managed by NGOs? If yes, are the NGOs financially supported by the State?

Some accommodation centres are public, owned and managed by OIWAS or, in one case, by an agency contracted to run it on their behalf, and others are owned and managed by NGOs in collaboration with OIWAS. The relationship between OIWAS and the NGOs concerned is regulated by means of an agreement between them.

NGOs who are running Open Centres receive state-funding to do so – most of the costs of running these centres are paid by the government.

Q.36. In case, how many accommodation centres are there in your Member State (distinguish in your answer between public and private centres)?

There are the following accommodation centres:
Public
Hal Far Open Centre – managed by OIWAS
Hal Far Sliem Tent Centre – managed by OIWAS
Marsa Open Centre – managed by Suret il-Bniedem Foundation (an NGO)
Dar Liedna – managed by OIWAS
Dar Qawsalla – managed by OIWAS
Dar is-Sliem – managed by OIWAS

Private
Peace Lab – owned and managed by the NGO of the same name
Dar ir-Refugjati, Balzan – church owned and managed by the Malta Emigrants Commission

Malta Emigrants Commission also have a number of smaller houses which are used to accommodate refugees/asylum seekers - these usually house smaller numbers of persons than the Open Centres. These premises are located in Msida, Sta Venera, Floriana, Valletta and Guardamangia.

Q.37. Is there in the legislation a plan or are there rules in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory of your Member State to avoid their concentration in some areas like big cities or to share the costs of their reception between central, regional and local authorities?

There is no such plan, however it should be stated that with a territory the size of Malta (122 square miles) such plans are somewhat unnecessary.

Local councils do exist, but they are mostly involved in issues concerning their locality and not in matters such as the reception and care of asylum seekers.

Q.38. Does a central body representing all the actors (like NGOs) involved in reception conditions exist? Does it play a consultative role for the State authorities, a coordination role for the actors or any other role?

The Inter-Ministerial Committee on Irregular Immigration brings together the ministries directly involved in the reception of irregular immigrants and asylum seekers, however NGOs and other agencies such as UNHCR, are not represented on this committee.

There are two regular meetings convened and chaired by OIWAS staff:

- the Committee of Open Centre Managers, which brings together all NGOs involved in the running of Open Centres and OIWAS. This group meets periodically to discuss issues relating to the management of Open Centres. Its members were involved in discussions regarding the setting up of the new system (registration and financial assistance) in Open Centres.
- the NGO Forum, which meets once a month and brings together all the NGOs working in the field at different levels, a representative of the MJHA, IOM and UNHCR. This group has no decision-making powers at all; it is primarily a forum to share information and cannot be described as advisory or consultative.

The Detention Service is not directly represented at any of the meetings convened by OIWAS.

Q.39. Q.39. A. Which is the body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions as requested by article 23 which is mandatory provision? Include in your answer which is the competent ministry (Interior, Social affairs, etc) for reception conditions?

Article 23 has not been transposed into national legislation.

Apart from the agencies responsible for providing material reception conditions themselves, there is no independent body mandated to provide monitoring, guidance and control.

The Ministry responsible for reception conditions of asylum seekers in the community is the Ministry for the Family and Social Solidarity (MFSS) and the that responsible for asylum seekers in detention is the Ministry of Justice and Home Affairs (MJHA).

Q.39. B. Has your Member State (like the Czech Republic did recently) approved quality standards (not necessary legally binding) for housing services (for instance about the number of persons per bedroom on the basis of its size, number of accessible toilets, bathrooms, showers and washing machines per number of persons, existence of common rooms with radio, television, newspapers, books, computers, accessibility of telephone, existence of recreative rooms for children,…) to be respected in particular in accommodation centres?

There are no such standards.

Q.39. C. How is this system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions organised?

Not applicable.

Q.39. D. Does the body in charge of guidance, control and monitoring produce reports about the level of reception conditions? If yes, how frequently and are they public?

Not applicable – there are no such reports.

Q.40. Q.40. A. What is the total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions for the last year for which figures are available (see article 22 obliging Member States to calculate those statistics about which we also asked the Commission to require them from Member States for mid June)?

All statistics available so far include asylum seekers and irregular immigrants, and not asylum seekers only. It is therefore not possible to answer this question accurately.

Q.40. B. What is the total budget of reception conditions in euro for the last year for which figures are available?

There is no budget allocation specifically for reception of asylum seekers.

Q.40. C. What is the average cost of reception conditions in euro per asylum seeker for the last year for which figures are available?

I was unable to obtain this information – as was stated in answer to Q40A all available statistics include the cost of detaining/housing both asylum seekers and other irregular immigrants.

Q.40. D Are the costs of reception conditions of asylum seekers supported by the central/federal or federated government or are they shared with regional and/or local authorities?

All costs are supported by the central government.

Q.40. E. Is article 24 § 2 of the directive following which "Member States shall allocate the necessary resources in connection with the nationals provisions enacted to implement this directive" respected?

Article 24(2) of the Directive is not transposed into national legislation.

The budget allocation for immigration and related issues has been substantially increased in recent years in an attempt to address this issue.

However, in view of the enormous needs created by the large numbers of undocumented migrants arriving by boat each year since 2002, the resources allocated are not enough to meet more than the most basic needs of these persons.

The situation is made worse by the fact that, in practice, there is little or no distinction between asylum seekers and other immigrants.

Q.41. Q.41. A. What is the total number of persons working for reception conditions?

Within the OIWAS/Open Centre system there are approximately 80 people, excluding volunteers.

Q.41. B. How is the training of persons working in accommodation centres organised? Does it take into account specific needs of unaccompanied minors when relevant as well as the gender dimension? (see article 14 §5, 19 § 4 and also 24 §1 which are mandatory provisions)?

Articles 14(5), 19(4) and 24(1) are not transposed into national legislation.

Detention Service staff receive initial training, which consists of a series of lectures delivered by professionals from various disciplines, UNHCR and NGO staff.

OIWAS informed us that their staff too receives training in order to be able to carry out their work.

There is a project due to start in September 2007, funded by ERFII 2007, which will provide monthly training sessions for DS staff and other personnel working in the area of reception. This project is being run by JRS Malta, UNHCR and the Malta Red Cross.

Q.41. C. Are there rules about the deontology of persons working in accommodation centres, in particular on confidentiality?

10. IMPACT OF THE DIRECTIVE

Legal impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.42. Specify if there are or not big problems with the translation of the directive in the official language of your Member State and give in case a list of the worst examples of provisions which have been badly translated? (please note that this question has in particular been added to the questionnaire concerning the new Member States)

English is one of the official languages of the Maltese state and all laws are available in English and in Maltese. There are no major problems with the Maltese translation.

Q.43. Where there precise legal rules on reception conditions for asylum seekers before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the directive (if yes, specify what the nature of those rules was (legislation, regulation, administrative instructions,…)?

There were no legal rules on reception of asylum seekers prior to the transposition of the Directive.

Q.44. Did the legal rules applicable to reception conditions become more clear, precise, coherent or detailed with the adoption of the transposition norms (for instance do you now have after the transposition one basic text dealing with reception conditions instead of numerous different texts in the past?

The rules are definitely clearer, as now they are written down. However, work still needs to be done to ensure that these rules are fully implemented and that all asylum seekers are provided with adequate reception conditions.

Q.45. Did the transposition of the directive imply important changes in national law or were the changes of minor importance? In case, list the most important changes that have been introduced.

Prior to the transposition of the Directive there was only one article in the Refugees Act regulating the treatment of asylum seekers, aside from the provisions governing the asylum procedure and procedural rights (article 8) and protection from refoulement (article 9). This article states simply that:

'(1) Notwithstanding the provisions of any other law to the contrary, an asylum seeker shall not be removed from Malta before his application is finally determined in accordance with this Act and such applicant shall be allowed to enter or remain in Malta pending a final decision of his application. He shall also have access to state education and training in Malta and to receive state medical care and services.
(2) An asylum seeker -
(a) shall not seek to enter employment or carry on business unless with the consent of the Minister;
(b) shall, unless he is in custody, reside and remain in the places which may be indicated by the Minister;
(c) shall report at specified intervals to the immigration authorities as indicated by the Minister:
Provided that if any such applicant is in breach of any of the provisions of paragraphs (a), (b), (c) he shall be guilty of an offence and shall be liable on conviction to imprisonment for a term of not more than six months.
(3) If the applicant leaves Malta voluntarily, his application will be deemed to be withdrawn, unless his departure from Malta is authorised by the Minister.'

The tranposition of the Reception Directive therefore introduced major changes into national law in this area, by clarifying and, to some extent, broadening state responsibility with respect to reception of asylum seekers.

Political impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.46. Explain briefly if there has been an important debate about the transposition of the directive (in particular in the Parliament, but possibly also in the government, between political parties, including in medias, etc; underline in case the main points which have been discussed or have created difficulties)

The directive was introduced by means of regulations, a process which involves far less public and parliamentary scrutiny.

Q.47. Did the transposition of the directive contribute to make the internal rules stricter or more generous? In particular, did your Member State use the occasion of the transposition to abolish more favourable provisions of national law? Does your Member State still have rules more favourable than the provisions of the directive (if yes, try to give the more important examples).

See reply to Q45.

11. ANY OTHER INTERESTING ELEMENT

Q.48. What are in your view the weaknesses and strengths of the system of reception conditions in your Member State?

In my view, however I should state that the answer to this question is a totally personal opinion, many of the weaknesses of the current system are due to the fact that it was developed more as a response to the arrival of large numbers of undocumented migrants arriving by boat than as a system for the reception of asylum seekers stricto sensu.

The very real needs generated by such relatively large, but very mixed flows of people, clearly demanded some sort of immediate practical response from the authorities; inevitably, the real or perceived nature of the problem on the ground shaped the government's response to the issue.

Some of the weaknesses inherent in the system as a result are the following:

- an almost exclusive focus on the needs of irregular immigrants as opposed to asylum seekers per se, i.e. immigrants in detention or who spent some time in detention – most of whom arrive by boat;
- a resulting almost total lack of provision of material and other reception conditions for asylum seekers who arrive regularly, admittedly a rather small proportion of the asylum seeking population;
- blurring of the distinction between asylum seekers and irregular immigrants in many areas, which has led to a dilution of the protection that should be provided to asylum seekers, particularly in the area of socio-economic rights, and also, in some cases, more favourable treatment being granted to rejected asylum seekers/ irregular immigrants than to asylum seekers.

Another major drawback of the system is the continued use of prolonged detention in the case of asylum seekers who apply for asylum after they have been apprehended by the immigration authorities for breaches of immigration regulations.

Q.49. Mention any good practice in your Member State which could be promoted in other Member States

One good practice is the entitlement to access more than basic healthcare for asylum seekers (aside from practical problems of access).

Another is the acceptance that vulnerable people should not be detained (aside from practical problems of identification and release).

On a practical level, the introduction of a customer care service is also a good practice, as it makes it easier for asylum seekers to access information that would not otherwise be readily available.

Q.50. Please add here any other interesting element about reception conditions in your Member State which you did not had the occasion to mention in your previous answer.

QUESTIONNAIRE FOR THE NATIONAL REPORT ON THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE DIRECTIVE :

RECEPTION CONDITIONS OF 27 JANUARY 2003

IN: THE NETHERLANDS

16/05/07
by

Karina Franssen, junior researcher at the Faculty of Law, Radboud University Nijmegen (k.franssen@jur.ru.nl)

Folke Larsson, junior researcher at the Faculty of Law, Radboud University Nijmegen (f.larsson@jur.ru.nl)

Lieneke Slingenberg, junior researcher at the Faculty of Law, Free University Amsterdam (c.slingenberg@rechten.vu.nl)

1. NORMS OF TRANSPOSITION

Q.1. Identify the main norm of transposition (indicate the title, date, number, date of entry into force and references of publication into the official journal) and indicate its legal nature (legislative, regulatory, administrative); indicate in your answer if this norm was only devoted to the directive or if it has been included in a more general text and indicate in that case by quoting precisely the numbers of the provisions adopted to transpose the directive.

Main norm of transposition
Regulation on the provisions for asylum seekers and other categories of aliens 2005 (Regeling verstrekkingen asielzoekers en andere categorieën vreemdelingen 2005)(Rva 2005), 26 January 2005, Nr. 5332253/05/DVB Directie Vreemdelingenbeleid, published in the Government Gazette of 3 februari 2005, no. 24, p. 17.

Legal nature
The Rva 2005 is a legally binding regulatory measure issued by the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration. Regulatory measures are orders of a general nature from the central government and issued by a Minister. In contrast with the procedure regarding the coming about of acts, orders and decrees, the Minister will neither ask the Council of State for advice nor involve the Parliament in the procedure. Moreover, the regulatory measure will not be published in the official Bulletin of Acts, Orders and Decrees, but in the Government Gazette.

According to the explanatory memorandum to the Rva 2005, which forms a part of the Rva 2005, the Rva 2005 is not only issued because of the transposition of the Reception Conditions Directive. It holds a complete revision of the Rva 1997 which has expired with the coming into force of the Rva 2005. The Rva 2005 is also issued to carry out national policy reforms (return policy, policy regarding unaccompanied minors, etc.) and a clarification of the existing policy. Thus at the same time a few changes in the Rva are made in relation with the transposition of Directive 2001/55/EC on temporary protection for asylum seekers.

Transposing table (as laid down in the explanatory memorandum to the Rva 2005)

Reception Conditions Directive	Rva 2005
Article 2, under b	Article 1, under c
Article 2, under c	Article 1, under d
Article 2, under d	Article 1, under f
Article 2, under h	Article 1, under e Article 9 par. 1 Article 1, under h
Article 2, under j	Article 3 par. 2, under a
Article 2, under l	Article 2 par. 3 and 4
Article 3 par. 1	Article 10 under c juncto article 19, under e; article 13
Article 5	Article 3 par. 3, under d; article 11 par. 3
Article 7 par. 4	Article 9 par. 2
Article 8	Article 3 par. 1 and 2
Article 9	Article 9 par. 1
Article 13 par. 1	Articles 14 and 15
Article 13 par. 1 and 2	Article 2 par. 1
Article 13 par. 1, 2 and 5	Article 20
Article 13 par. 3	Article 15
Article 13 par. 4	Article 1, under h
Article 13 par. 5	Article 3 par. 3, under d; article 11 par. 3
Article 14 par. 1	Article 10 under c and d
Article 14 par 2, under a	Article 9 par. 6-8
Article 14 par. 2, under b, 2nd alinea	Article 11 par. 1
Article 14 par. 2, under b and par. 7	Article 4 par. 1
Article 14 par. 4	Article 9 par. 1, under e; article 16 par. 1
Article 14 par. 8	Article 4 par. 2, article 7 par. 1, under i and j; article 10, under c; article 11 par. 1; article 13 par.1; article 19, under e
Article 15	Article 7 par. 1, under k; article 10, under a and b; article 21
Article 16 par. 1, under a	Article 10, under c and d
Article 16 par. 1, under b	Article 7 par. 1, under b
Article 16 par. 3	Article 9 par. 4
Article 16 par. 5	Article 9 par. 4
Article 17 par. 1	Article 3 par. 2, under b; article 6; article 11 par. 3-5
Article 18 par. 2	Article 9 par. 4
Article 19 par. 2
Article 20

Q.2. List by order of importance by using numbers (1, 2, 3) the others norms of transposition if there are more than one (indicate for each norm the title, date, number and references of publication into the official journal; include in your answer the administrative measures taken to ensure implementation of the directive and of the transposition norms like regulations, administrative circulars, special instructions,…)

The Rva 2005 is the main, if not the sole, formal norm of transposition. Maybe some internal regulations of the Central Agency for the Reception of Asylum Seekers (Centraal Orgaan opvang asielzoekers)(COA), which is the main agency responsible for the reception of asylum seekers (see below), have been changed after the date of adoption of the directive as well, but these internal rules are unpublished.

There are however some norms with regard of reception of asylum seekers adopted before the date of adoption of the directive (transposition ensured otherwise):

1. Article 11 and article 45 in conjunction with article 62 of the Aliens Act 2000 (Vreemdelingenwet 2000[577]) with regard to the (end of the) right of asylum seekers to reception conditions;
2. Article 9 of the Aliens Act 2000 in conjunction with article 4.21 Aliens Decree 2000 (vreemdelingenbesluit 2000[578]) and article 3.3 Aliens Regulation 2000 (Voorschrift vreemdelingen 2000[579]) with regard to documentation of asylum seekers;
3. Article 6 and 59 of the Aliens Act 2000 with regard to (the grounds of) detention of asylum seekers;
4. The Central Agency for the Reception of Asylum Seekers Act (Wet centraal orgaan opvang asielzoekers[580]) with regard to the organisation, the financing and the competent agency for the reception of asylum seekers;
5. Article 8 (2) of the Aliens Employment Act (Wet arbeid vreemdelingen, Wav[581]) in conjunction with article 2A of the Implementing order aliens employment act (Besluit uitvoering wet arbeid vreemdelingen[582]) and paragraph 22 of the Implementing rules (Uitvoeringsregels wet arbeid vreemdelingen behorende bij het delegatie- en uitvoeringsbesluit wet arbeid vreemdelingen[583]) with regard to the access of asylum seekers to the labour market;

[577] Act of 23 November 2000, published in the official Bulletin of Acts, Orders and Decrees of 2000, no. 495 (has been amended since).
[578] Order of 23 November 2000, published in the official Bulletin of Acts, Orders and Decrees of 2000, no. 497 (has been amended since).
[579] Regulatory measure of 18 December 2000, published in the Government Gazette of 2001, no. 10 (has been amended since).
[580] Act of 19 May 1994, published in the official Bulletin of Acts, Orders and Decrees of 1994, no. 422 (has been amended since).
[581] Act of 21 December 1994, published in the official Bulletin of Acts, Orders and Decrees of 1994, no. 959 (has been amended since).
[582] Order of 23 August 1995, published in the official Bulletin of Acts, Orders and Decrees of 1995, no. 406 (has been amended since).
[583] Regulatory measure of 23 August 1995, published in the Government Gazette of 1995, no. 168 (has been amended since).

6. The Compulsory Education Law (Leerplichtwet[584]) with regard to the access of minor asylum seekers to the education system;
7. The General Administrative Law Act (Algemene wet bestuursrecht[585]) with regard to the requirement that decisions are taken individually, objectively and impartially and with regard to the right of appeal;
8. The Legal Aid Act (Wet op de rechtsbijstand[586]) with regard to the right of asylum seekers to state-funded legal aid.
9. Article 15 of the Passport Law (Paspoortwet[587]) in conjunction with the Amended policy rules regarding the provision of laissez passers on the basis of the Passport Law (Gerectificeerde beleidsregels verstrekking laissez passers op grond van de Paspoortwet[588]) with regard to travel documents for asylum seekers;
10. The Penitentiary Principles Act (Penitentiaire Beginselenwet[589]) and chapter 6 of the Management of Regional Police forces Decree (Besluit beheer regionale politiekorpsen[590]) with regard of the rights and duties of asylum seekers in detention centres and police cells (in case of detention on the basis of article 59 Aliens Act 2000);
11. The Border Accommodation Regime Decree (Reglement regime grenslogies[591]) and the house rules border accommodation (unpublished) with regard to the rights and duties of asylum seekers in border detention centres (in case of detention on the basis of article 6 Aliens Act 2000);
12. House rules application centre and house rules temporary emergency reception (unpublished) with regard to the rights and duties of asylum seekers in these centres;
13. Paragraph 23, part C of the Aliens Circular 2000 (Vreemdelingencirculaire 2000, Vc 2000[592]); the Regulation on personal contribution by asylum applicants with income or possessions (regeling eigen bijdrage asielzoekers met inkomen en vermogen, Reba[593]); the Rules on the Withholding of provisions (Reglement onthoudingen verstrekkingen) (unpublished) and COA Complaints Regulation for residents and other persons (klachtenregeling voor bewoners en derden[594]) contain a closer elaboration of (some articles of) the Rva 2005.

[584] Act of 30 May 1968, published in the official Bulletin of Acts, Orders and Decrees of 1968, no. 303 (has been amended since).
[585] Act of 4 June 1992, published in the official Bulletin of Acts, Orders and Decrees of 1992, no. 315 (has been amended since).
[586] Act of 23 December 1993, published in the official Bulletin of Acts, Orders and Decrees of 1993, no. 775 (has been amended since).
[587] Statute law of 26 September 1991, published in the official Bulletin of Acts, Orders and Decrees of 1991, no. 498 (has been amended since).
[588] Regulatory measure of 29 October 2001, published in the Government Gazette of 2001, no. 213 (has been amended since).
[589] Act of 18 June 1998, published in the official Bulletin of Acts, Orders and Decrees of 1998, no. 430 (has been amended since).
[590] Order of 28 March 1994, published in the official Bulletin of Acts, Orders and Decrees of 1994, no. 224 (has been amended since).
[591] Order of 14 January 1993, published in the official Bulletin of Acts, Orders and Decrees of 1993, no. 45 (has been amended since).
[592] Regulatory measure of 2 March 2001, published in the Government Gazette of 2001, no. 64 (has been amended since).
[593] Regulatory measure of 31 August 1998, published in the Government Gazette of 1998, no. 166 (has been amended since).
[594] Regulatory measure of 12 December 2002, published in the Government Gazette of 2003, no. 20.

Q.3. Explain which level of government is competent to adopt the legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers (specify in particular in case of a federal or regional State, if it is the federal/central power or the components; in case, specify below when it is impossible for you to answer a question because it is about the competence of the components and it is impossible for you to gather reliable information about all of them)

The state secretary of justice (under the responsibility of the Minister of justice). From 22 July 2002 until 22 February 2007, the minister for Alien Affairs and Integration was the competent minister for the reception of asylum seekers. Since 22 February 2007, the portfolio for Alien Affairs and Integration no longer exists.

Q.4. Explain the legal technical choices done to transpose the directive (comment on the nature and level of the norms used to do the transposition: legislative, regulatory, administrative like instructions, etc). Add any other element about the technique of transposition of the directive which is interesting for the implementation of Community law.

Article 11(2)(b) of the Aliens Act mentions that asylum seekers who are lawfully resident in the Netherlands awaiting a final decision on their asylum application may claim facilities and benefits if these are granted by or pursuant to the Act on the Central Agency for the Reception of Asylum Seekers (Wet Centraal Orgaan opvang asielzoekers)(Wet COA). The Wet COA contains rules concerning the establishment of COA, an autonomous administrative body ('zelfstandig bestuursorgaan') entrusted with the material and immaterial reception of asylum seekers. It does not contain any provision with respect to the content of the material and immaterial reception of asylum seekers. It only holds rules about the organization of COA. Pursuant to article 12 of the Wet COA, the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration is competent to take further regulatory measures regarding the provisions for asylum seekers. She has used this competence by formulating the Rva 2005. Also in the past detailed rules on reception of and provisions for asylum seekers were included in a regulatory measure, the Rva 1994 and the Rva 1997.

Also with regard to the access of asylum seekers to the labour market, the substantive rules are not laid down in the act (Aliens Employment Act), but in 'lower' legislation (administrative decree). On the basis of article 8, paragraph 2 Aliens Employment Act, rules can be laid down, by or pursuant to an administrative decree, concerning the access to the labour market of asylum seekers whose entrance into the Netherlands has not been refused. The administrative decree in which these rules are laid down is the Implementing order aliens employment act (Besluit uitvoering wet arbeid vreemdelingen). The implementing rules (Uitvoeringsregels wet arbeid vreemdelingen behorende bij het delegatie- en uitvoeringsbesluit wet arbeid vreemdelingen) contain a more detailed eleboration of the rules laid down in the administrative decree.

With regard to the reception of asylum seekers in emergency temporary reception and application centres, which forms the first stage of the asylum procedure, the rules with regard to the material and immaterial reception are only laid down in unpublished house rules.[595] However, a large number of asylum seekers in the Netherlands is only entitled to reception conditions during this first stage of the procedure (see below).

Q.5. Mention if there is a general tendency to just copy the provisions of the directive into national legislation without redrafting or adaptation them to national circumstances? If yes, give some of the worst examples and explain if there is a risk that those provisions remain unapplied or will create difficulties of implementation in the future.

In our opinion there has been no general tendency to just indiscriminately copy the provisions of the directive into national legislation without adaptation to national circumstances. There are however provisions in the Rva 2005 which have been literally taken over from the Directive (e.g. article 9, par. 6-9, of the Rva 2005 literally copies article 14(2)(b) and 7 of the Directive). Since these provisions contain rights for the asylum seeker (right of communicating with relatives, legal advisers and representatives of UNHCR) which were not laid down in the Rva 1997, from the point of view of the asylum seeker this is very desirable.

Q.6. Have all the texts necessary to ensure the effective implementation of the new rules of transposition been adopted, prepared or at least foreseen in the future (for example a regulation completing a new law and the necessary instructions telling the administration how to apply the new rules)?

Yes.

2. BIBLIOGRAPHY

Q.7. Has an in-depth preparatory study been made public about the changes at the occasion of the transposition? If yes, thanks for trying to provide us a copy (please contact to answer this question adequately the body and person who was responsible for the preparation of the transposition of the directive in the public administration).

No.

Q.8. Quote any recent scientific book or article published about the directive, the transposition rules or the question of reception conditions for asylum seekers in general (answer even if this literature is only available in your language and provide the complete title in your language (without translation) with all references; indicate author, title, in case name of periodical, year and place of publication).

[595] For asylum seekers who are detained during this stage of the asylum procedure, rules with regard to their rights and duties are laid down in the Border Accommodation Regime Regulations (Reglement regime grenslogies).

- Ariane den Uyl, 'Politieke overeenstemming over minimumnormen voor de opvang van asielzoekers' (Political agreement on minimum standards for the reception of asylum seekers), NAV 2002/9, p. 580-585
- Ariane den Uyl, 'Wet- en regelgeving: Opvangrichtlijn geïmplementeerd: nieuwe Rva', (Legislation: Reception Conditions Directive implemented: new Rva), Nieuwsbrief Asiel- en Vluchtelingenrecht (NAV) 2005/3, p. 132.
- H.T. Masmeyer, Opvang van asielzoekers (Reception of asylum seekers), Den Haag: Sdu Publishers 2005
- ECRE (November 2005): The EC Directive on the Reception of Asylum Seekers: Are asylum seekers in Europe receiving material support and access to employment in accordance with European legislation?
- T. Groenewegen, 'Kronieken: Opvang van asielzoekers' (Column: Reception of asylum seekers), NAV 2006/1, p. 17-21
- H.T. Masmeyer, 'Opvang van asielzoekers, deel I en II (reception of asylum seekers, parts I and II)', Journaal vreemdelingenrecht 2006/7
- T. Groenewegen, 'Kronieken: Opvang van asielzoekers' (Column: Reception of asylum seekers), NAV 2007/2, p. 106-109
- W. Lozowski and A. den Uijl,'Tekst en Commentaar Wet COA e.a.' (Text and Commentary on the Act on the Central Agency for the Reception of Asylum Seekers a.o.), Den Haag: Sdu Publishers 2006.
- F. Larsson, 'Commentaar Europees Migratierecht: de Opvangrichtlijn' (Commentary European Migration Law: the Reception Conditions Directive), Den Haag: SDU Publishers (loose-leaf book)(forthcoming)

Q.9. Quote any interesting decision of jurisprudence based on the implementation of the new rules of transposition of the directive (indicate references of publication if any)?

Important case law:

A recent judgment of 9 February 2007 (AWB 06/39427 and AWB 06/39426) of the district court of Haarlem concerned the case of an applicant who argued that the Directive was applicable to him, because he could be regarded as a stateless person who is found not be a refugee as defined in Article 3(4) of the Directive and that according to Article 11(2) of the Directive he is entitled to a residence permit for the purpose of employment. The defendant however stated that the Directive was not applicable to the applicant due to the fact that he could neither be regarded as a third-country national nor as a stateless person, because a declaration of the Slovak authorities of 13 June 2006 showed that the applicant was a Slovak citizen. The district court decided that it is clear from the wording of Article 3(1) of the Directive that the Directive is only applicable in case an asylum application has been filed. Because the applicant has not denied that he didn't ask for asylum, the Directive is not applicable to him. Moreover, Article 3(4) of the Directive indeed contains the possibility for Member States to apply the Directive in connection with procedures for deciding on applications for kinds of protection other than that emanating from the Geneva Convention for third-country nationals or stateless persons who are found not to be refugees, but in that case the Netherlands should have declared the Directive applicable to other procedures which has not been shown.

In a judgement of 14 June 2006 (AWB 06/26452, not published), the District Court of Den Bosch decided that, since the Directive does not contain provisions about the way asylum applications should be submitted, member states are free to organise the submission of asylum applications according to their own preference. The practice in the Netherlands (which holds that asylum seekers who want to submit a second asylum application have to make an appointment for that purpose, and are only entitled to reception conditions after that appointment) does not violate Directive 2003/9/EC.

In a judgment of 4 May 2006 (200600347/1) the Council of State decided that according to article 2(c) juncto article 3(1) of Directive 2003/9/EC, the Directive did not apply to the appellants concerned because a final decision on their asylum requests had already been reached.

A judgment of 20 January 2006 (Jurisprudentie Vreemdelingenrecht (JV) 2006/142 m.nt. HBA) concerned a request for a preliminary injunction. The District Court of Haarlem held that the fact that the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration did not provide reception conditions to an asylum seeker who filed a repeated asylum request according to article 4(2) of the Rva 2005, was not contrary to articles 16(1)(a), 16 (4) or 17 of the Reception Conditions Directive. Neither does article 16(5) of the Reception Conditions Directive compel the Minister to provide reception conditions until a final decision on the repeated asylum request has been reached.

In an earlier case the applicability of the Reception Conditions Directive was also invoked. A judgment of 27 January 2003 (LJN: AF3393) concerned the case of a family who, due to the closing of a reception centre at Ameland (one of the West Frisian Islands) where they were staying, had to be transferred to a reception centre on the mainland (Kollum). They objected to this relocation stating that the reception conditions in the reception centre in Kollum were in breach of the Reception Conditions Directive. The District Court of Leeuwarden however concluded that aside from the fact that the deadline for transposition of the Directive had not yet been reached, the statement was insufficiently motivated.

3. GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

The purpose of the following two questions is to help the reader to understand easily and quickly the system of reception conditions in your Member State and also to avoid that you have to repeat general elements in other parts of the questionnaire. Please do not write more than one or maximum two pages and do not include large historical developments.

Q.10. Describe in general the system of reception conditions in your Member State (in particular which are the main actors in charge of reception conditions?)

Reception of asylum seekers

The Central Agency for the Reception of Asylum Seekers (Centraal Orgaan opvang asielzoekers)(COA) is the main actor in charge of reception conditions for asylum seekers in the Netherlands. This governmental agency is an autonomous administrative body ('zelfstandig bestuursorgaan'), working under the (political) responsibility of the State Secretary for Justice. Its budget is provided by the Department of Justice.

COA's tasks include the reception of asylum seekers, providing basic assistance and information to asylum seekers, securing access to care for asylum seekers, the payment of the weekly allowances to asylum seekers, the acquirement, maintenance and closure of reception facilities and the maintenance of security in these facilities.
Traditionally, COA was responsible for the organization of the first health care for asylum seekers. This responsibility is, however, gradually transferred to a (fully) government-funded medical foundation. Since 2000, the regional Community Health Services ('GGD') are responsible for the provision of health care to asylum seekers. In order to carry out these tasks, foundations for Community Health Services for Asylum Applicants ('Medische Opvang van Asielzoekers')(MOA) have been created. These are funded by COA. However, COA will change the health care system for asylum seekers in future. For this reason, COA has terminated its present contract with the MOA as of 1 January 2009. The purpose of this change is to create a more efficient health care system; to create more clarity in the division of responsabilities; and to carry out the governmental opinion that health care for asylum seekers is regular health care.[596]

The Immigration and Naturalization Service (IND), the body that investigates whether or not an asylum seeker qualifies for an asylum residence permit, is also responsible for the reception of asylum seekers in application centres, in which asylum seekers stay during the first days of the asylum procedure (see below).

Apart from the fact that quite a few asylum seekers are placed in detention and the system hereunder will not be applicable to unaccompanied minors, the following main forms of reception of asylum seekers exist:

[596] Kamerstukken II, 2006/07, 29 689, 19 637 and 29 484, no. 130.

1. Temporary Emergency Reception (TNV)
2. Application Centre (AC)
3. Regular reception in:
    a. Centre for orientation and integration
    b. Centre for return
4. Administrative registration and other arrangements.

1. The TNV is used to house asylum seekers who have not been admitted to the asylum procedure yet. The Dutch asylum procedure starts in the Application Centres. At the AC in Ter Apel it usually takes several weeks (2-3) until an asylum seeker is given the opportunity to submit his claim. During the waiting period asylum seekers stay in the TNV, situated near the Application Centre in ter Apel. Housing is in mobile homes. During this stage of the procedure, the Rva 2005 is not applied. In fact there are no legal norms for the reception of asylum seekers during this stage.

2. As explained above, in order to request asylum, an asylum seeker must submit an official application at an Application Centre (AC) where he will also be housed. For what period of time the asylum seeker will be housed in an AC depends on the review by the IND whether an asylum request can be dealt with quickly (in cases when extensive research is not needed) or not. In the first situation the asylum request will be dealt with within 48 'processing' hours (= 3-5 working days). This procedure is the so-called accelerated asylum determination procedure. The asylum seeker will stay in the AC until a final decision is made. During this stage of the procedure the Rva 2005 is not applied. Also during this stage there are no legal norms for the reception of asylum seekers. When it appears impossible to reach a decision within 48 hours, because more research is needed, the asylum seeker will be referred to one of the centres described below (under 3).

3. This is the main category of reception to which the Rva 2005 is applicable. In January 2005 a new reception model was implemented. This model distinguishes three phases of reception: orientation (before first decision), integration (after positive decision), return (after first negative decision). Accordingly, the phase of the asylum procedure determines in which type of centre the asylum seeker is staying. Therefore the standard facilities are divided in reception centres for orientation and integration and reception centres for return.

Some of the centres are newly built facilities, others old buildings, like monasteries and schools, which are converted for reception purposes. Not only big buildings, also regular houses are used for reception.

Following protests about accommodation in tents for temporary emergency reception at the time of significant arrivals, COA developed minimum standards for privacy, hygiene and space to move. According to COA, the existing reception centres meet minimum quality standards. Due to the decrease in the number of asylum-seekers, COA in recent years has closed a number of reception centres and laid off many staff. There are concerns that COA will no longer be prepared for a large influx should there be a major refugee crisis in the future.

a. Centres for orientation and integration, orientation stage

These centres house asylum seekers who have not yet received a decision and those who received a positive decision.

b. Centres for return

After the first negative decision the asylum seeker is transferred to a centre for return. When an asylum seeker receives a definite refusal of his asylum claim, he automatically loses his right to reception facilities. Only in exceptional cases reception may be provided.

c. Centres for orientation and integration, integration stage

After the asylum seeker received an asylum permit, he is entitled to private housing in a municipality. However, this process may take several months. Nowadays it is on average six months, but for the last years it has been on average nine to eleven months.

4. In exceptional circumstances the asylum seeker may stay outside one of the available reception centres (administrative registration). This form of housing is allowed if lodging is available at a Dutch first degree family member, or a spouse or partner lawfully residing in appropriate housing. It may also be allowed if continued reception in a centre is harmful or inhumane, because of severe medical reasons. In that case a family member must be available to assist and take care of the asylum seeker outside the reception centre. In all of these cases the municipality must allow the housing of the asylum seeker. If this form of housing is allowed, the asylum seeker concerned will be registered in the nearest reception centre. This is where he may receive his weekly financial allowance (pocket money, allowance for clothing and allowance for food). By means of this registration he has been also insured against medical expenses and against the financial impact of third party liability.

Another form of the small-scale reception are the 'central reception houses' (COW) or the small-scale central reception units (KCO). These are ordinary houses rented by COA. Rva 2005 applies to asylum seekers who stay in these reception houses / units. However, as from 2005, there is no new influx of asylum seekers in these small-scale reception centres anymore.

Q.11. Q.11.A. Explain if you have different types and levels of reception conditions following the different stages of the asylum procedure (this implies that you have to give briefly the necessary explanations about the asylum procedure). Make if relevant for reception conditions a distinction between the following procedural stages: determination of the responsible Member State on the basis of the Dublin II regulation, special procedures at the border (including transit zones in airports), accelerated procedures, admissibility procedures, eligibility procedures and the different possibilities of appeals (suspensive or not) against a refusal of the asylum request. Indicate what the main differences of reception conditions are between the different stages (if necessary by detailing between the different elements of reception conditions, in particular housing) and explain what the evolution of reception conditions is following the different stages of the procedure.

There are differences in treatment according to the stage of the asylum procedure. Before asylum seekers are officially admitted to the asylum procedure they stay at a TNV. Accomodation and reception conditions are very basic (bed, bath, bread). When asylum seekers are admitted to the asylum procedure and their asylum claim is being processed through the accelerated 48-hours asylum determination procedure (AC-procedure) they are also only entitled to basic facilities, like accomodation in AC's run by the IND and emergency health care. There are no legal norms with regard to the reception of asylum seekers during this stage.

Asylum seekers whose claims are not rejected within 48 hours under the accelerated procedure are referred to regular reception centres run by COA. The phase of the asylum procedures determines whether an asylum seeker has to stay in a centre for orientation and integration or in a reception centre for return.

a. Centres for orientation and integration, orientation stage

These centres house asylum seekers who have not yet received a decision and those who received a positive decision.

During the orientation stage all activities and messages focus on a temporary stay in the Netherlands. The following information and facilities will be available to the applicant:
- intake focused on the informing the asylum seeker on the daily routine, rules and regulations in the centre;
- interviews with the asylum seeker to develop a ' realistic' perspective of the future, meaning that the asylum seeker will be regularly confronted with the notion that most asylum applications are rejected;
- information sessions to transfer basic knowledge of Dutch language, necessary for temporary stay;
- general information aimed at direct environment of the centre;
- introduction to the Self Study Centre.
Recreational activities are available, only limited outside the centre.

b. Centres for return

After the first negative decision the asylum seeker is transferred to a centre for return. In this centre all facilities are aimed at 'voluntary' return to the country of origin. The push and pull factors of return are to be discussed with the asylum-seeker. Information is provided on the role of IOM, the situation in the country of origin, specific possibilities of return, consequences of illegal stay in the Netherlands. Another aim of this phase is the elimination of possible obstacles for return.
Further access to Dutch language courses is denied.

When an asylum seeker receives a definite refusal of his asylum claim, he automatically loses his right to reception facilities. Only in exceptional cases reception may be provided.

c. Centres for orientation and integration, integration stage

After the asylum seeker receives an asylum permit, he is entitled to private housing in a municipality. However, this process may take several months. Nowadays it is on average six months, but for the last years it has been on average nine to eleven months.

To make this period useful, COA is allowed to offer holders of an asylum status facilities to prepare themselves on the' integration exam'. Since 2007 aliens have to pass an exam to obtain a definite permit. This is also the case for holders of an asylum status who get for the first five years a revocable permit.The holders of an asylum permit have the possibility to learn Dutch and orientation on the Dutch society. Since January 2007, the possibility to prepare for the integration exam is based on article 9a Rva 2005. In the year before COA did a pilot project to set up this 'pre-integration programme' In the Rva 2005 it is stated that following the programme may not be the reason to delay moving to regalar housing. The programme is also on a voluntary base and free of charge for the asylum seekers with an asylum permit.

Q.11.B.Indicate precisely for which stage(s) of the asylum procedure the answers on reception conditions you give below are valid.

The Rva 2005, which is the main norm of transposition of the Reception Conditions Directive, is only applicable to asylum seekers who stay at reception centres for orientation and integration and reception centres for return, runned by COA. The Rva 2005 is not applicable during the first stage of the asylum procedure, when asylum seekers stay in temporary emergency reception and application centres. Moreover, the Rva 2005 is not applicable to asylum seekers who are placed in detention and to asylum seekers whose application has been rejected at an application centre. In 2005, 37% of the asylum applications were rejected at application centres. In 2006, 29% of the asylum applications were rejected at application centres.[597] This means that the Rva 2005 is not applicable to a large group of asylum seekers present in the Netherlands.

4. GENERAL RULES ON RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.12. Q.12.A. Are material reception conditions provided in kind, in money or in vouchers or in a combination of these elements (see article 13, §5 which is an optional provision)? Distinguish between the different elements (housing, food, clothes, health, transportation, pocket money,…). If reception conditions are provided in money (in general or in some cases, for instance when no places are anymore available in accommodation centres), indicate the precise amount given to the asylum seekers. Indicate in your answer what is provided in general and if there are exceptional cases. Specify in your answer if reception conditions are different from the general system of social aid for nationals or aliens and if yes, if and when (which stage of the asylum procedure) can asylum seekers have access to the general system of social aid?

[597] Annex to Kamerstukken II, 2006/07, 19 637, nr. 1134, p. 32.

Asylum seekers do not have access to the general system of social aid in the Netherlands. The Reformed Social Assistance Act (Wet Werk en Bijstand) which was put into operation on 1 January 2004 is not applicable to them.

Housing:	in kind (but only in reception centres except for 'administrative registration': see answer Q10);
Health care:	in kind (at the same level as for Dutch citizens with the exception of IVF-treatment, gender alteration surgery and only emergency dental care for adults (see Q27(B)).
Clothing:	money / vouchers: one-off allowance of € 36,30 and weekly allowance which can (partly) be used for the purchase of clothes (see below).
Food:	in kind and/or in money (see below), but almost none of the remaining reception centres provide all food in kind

According to article 14 of the Rva 2005 an asylum seeker is entitled to the following financial allowances (to be used for food, clothing and other personal expenses):

▪ In case no meals are provided by COA:

	Total allowance (per week)
Child (0-11)	€ 33,75
Child (12-17)	€ 40,41
Adults	€ 52,61
Unaccompanied Minors	€ 49,33
Single parent bonus	€ 27,14

▪ In case dinner is provided by COA:

	Total allowance (per week)
Child (0-11)	€ 12,37
Child (12-17)	€ 15,39
Adults	€ 30,87
Unaccompanied Minors	€ 27,43
Single parent bonus	€ 21,54

▪ In case all meals are provided by COA:

	Total allowance (per week)
Child (0-11)	€ 3,75
Child (12-17)	€ 5,62
Adults	€ 16,38
Unaccompanied Minors	€ 13,11
Single parent bonus	€ 10,77

Exceptional costs: (since 2003 to a large extent) in money; according to article 17 of the Rva 2005 an asylum seeker can be refunded for extraordinary costs (e.g. traveling expenses, school costs, medical costs, (legal) dues and costs related to a countercheck).

Asylum seekers qualify for the following compensation (outlines):*

- one-off allowance for the purchase of cooking utensils: € 108,93
- one-off allowance for the purchase of plates and cutlery: € 10,73
- yearly school costs for children of school age (in August): € 34,03 (price level 2005)
- in case of the birth of a child: € 114,89
- in case of a funeral: € 2800

 based on information provided by the Dutch Council for Refugees*

Q.12.B. Can the reception conditions in kind, money or vouchers be considered as sufficient "to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence" as requested by article 13, §2 of the directive (which is a mandatory provision but leaves a certain space to Member States)? In order to help to assess the respect of this rule when reception conditions are provided in money, include if necessary in your answer points of comparison with the minimum amount of social aid guaranteed for nationals in your Member State.

There has been debate (in parliament) on the initiative of the Dutch Council for Refugees that the weekly financial allowance and in particular the food allowance are inadequeate with regard to health food and that this will be in breach of the criterion mentioned in article 13(2) of the Directive, namely that material reception conditions have to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their existence (Handelingen der Tweede Kamer, 8 februari 2005, vergaderjaar 2004-2005, nr. 47, p. 3006-3014).

Also the Community Health Service (GGD) has expressed its concerns. In September 2004 the GGD declared in a letter to the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration and to the parliament that the allowance for food was not sufficient.

In the Rva 2005 the financial allowance had been raised with € 1,- as compared with the amount granted in 1997. This allowance did not come up to the standards established for the costs of a sound nutritional diet per person by the Netherlands Nutrition Centre and NIBUD, the National Institute for Budget Information, financial an information and advising bureau on consumer matters.

According to NIBUD the food allowance should be (2004/2005):

Child (0-11)	€ 23,80
Child (12-17)	€ 33,75
Adults	€ 34,02
Unaccompanied Minors	€ 35,07

These amounts are based on the costs of a two-person household. NIBUD indicates that for single persons the costs are 4% higher, for three-person households they are 17% lower per person and for four-person households, 26% lower per person.

In the past, the Rva 2005 stated that asylum seekers were entitled to the following allowances:

▪ In case no meals are provided by COA:

	Food allowance (per week)	Pocket money (per week)*	Total allowance (per week)
Child (0-11)	€ 4,63	€ 3,63	€ 8,26
Child (12-17)	€ 6,90	€ 5,45	€ 12,35
Adults	€ 24,16	€ 15,88	€ 40,04
Unaccompanied Minors	€20,06	€ 12,71	€ 32,77
Single parent bonus	€ 15,88	€ 10,44	€ 26,32

When these amounts are compared to those of the NIBUD, this clearly shows that according to the NIBUD, asylum seekers received too little money to provide for a responsible diet. In particular, the amount for children was much too low. Even if parents spent their entire child supplement on food (which means no diapers, toothpaste, public transportation tickets or toys), it was still not enough.

During the debate in parliament a motion in order to raise the food allowance was adopted. This induced the Minister to re-examine the level of the allowances. In a letter of 22 November 2005 (5371296/05/DVB) the Minister indicated that she intended to raise the level of the food allowances to the NIBUD standard with regard to all age-groups (including unaccompanied minors) in phases within a period of 4 years, because there was not enough money to raise all the allowances at once.

However, after the adoption of another motion in parliament, the minister indicated that she would assess the level of the food allowances to the NIBUD standard as from 1 January 2007.

The new levels of the allowances are now officially laid down in a decision taken by the Minister of 23 January 2007 to alter the Rva 2005 (Stcrt. 30 January 2007, no. 21, p. 36). See answer Q12A.

Finally, it is important to note that the whole discussion about the allowances of asylum seekers has been focused on the food allowance. The part of the allowance which is for other expenses (pocket money: € 16,38 for adults) and the one-off allowance for cloting (€ 36,30) have only been raised marginally since 1997, although prices have gone up considerably.

As compared to the minimum amount of social aid guaranteed for nationals in the Netherlands, it might be relevant to compare the amount of financial assistance of asylum seekers to the amount of social aid of people staying in (mental) institutions or nursing homes. These people receive accommodation, food, heating etc. in kind and are therefore entitled to a lower amount of social assistance than people living outside these institutions.[598] According to the Dutch social assistance act (Wet Werk en Bijstand), people living in institutions are entitled to a monthly payment of €276,46[599], which is € 9,09 per day, whereas (adult) asylum seekers receive an allowance of € 2,34 per day (in case all meals are provided by COA).

[598] Explenatory memorandum to the Reformed Social Assistance Act (Wet werk en bijstand), Kamerstukken II, 2002/03, 28 870, no. 3, p. 51-52.
[599] Article 23 Reformed Social Assistance Act (Wet werk en bijstand). For people living in institutions, the amount has been raised with € 51 per month (article 23, paragraph 2). This is meant for the payment of health care insurance (Kamerstukken II, 2005/06, 30 314, nr. 11). Since asylum seekers do not have to pay for their health care insurance, this amount has not been taken into account.

5. PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

Q.13. Q. 13. A. Does the national legislation specifically provide that a request for international protection is presumed to be under the Geneva Convention unless explicitly requested otherwise? (see article 2, b which is a mandatory provision)

According to Article 29 of the Aliens Act 2000 people who apply for asylum in the Netherlands can be awarded a temporary asylum residence permit on one of the following six grounds:

a. on the basis of the 1951 Geneva Convention relating to the Status of Refugees;
b. on the basis of article 3 of the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR);
c. for compelling humanitarian reasons relating to their individual circumstances, for instance in the light of traumatic experiences;
d. if return to their country of origin would place them at grave risk because of the general situation there, for instance because it is at war
e. if the applicant belongs, as husband, wife or minor child, to the family of the alien as referred to at (a) to (d), has the same nationality as the alien and has either entered the Netherlands at the same time as the alien or has entered it within three months of the date on which the alien referred to at (a) to (d) was granted a temporary asylum residence permit;
f. if the applicant is, as a partner or a child who is of age, dependent on the alien as referred to at (a) to (d) and can for that reason be considered as belonging to the family of this alien, has the same nationality as the alien and has either entered the Netherlands at the same time as the alien or has entered it within three months of the date on which the alien referred to at (a) to (d) was granted a temporary asylum residence permit.

Asylum can thus be granted to people who are refugees according to the definition in article 1A of the Geneva Convention, but also to people who request for international protection on another ground. Notwithstanding the different grounds, the Aliens Act leaves only one asylum permit to be obtained. All holders of this asylum permit get the same rights.

Q.13.B. Explain if the scope of application of reception conditions is extended to other asylum seekers than refugees in the sense of the Geneva Convention, in particular to persons asking for subsidiary protection or to other forms of protection like humanitarian statuses (see article 3, § 4 which is an optional provision)? If not, explain briefly which the differences between these special regimes and the directive are.

The scope of application of reception conditions is extended to people who apply for refugee status in the sense of the Refugee Convention, but also to people who apply for a residence permit on the other grounds mentioned in the previous question (b-f).

Q.13.C. Are there specific provisions in national law for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation (see article 3, §2 which is an optional provision)?

No. There are however specific rules regarding so-called 'resettled refugees' (article 3(l) junco article 1(i) of Rva 2005). These refugees are refugees who, at the request of UNHCR, are invited by the Dutch government to resettle in the Netherlands (resettlement policy). These refugees will receive a revocable asylum residence permit shortly after arrival in the Netherlands and will be entitled to reception conditions in a reception centre offered by COA.

The resettlement programme of the Netherlands has been in operation since 1984 (in principle: 500 places a year or 1500 in 3 years). In 2004 resettlement missions were revived after a period in which individual file submissions were insufficient to meet the quota. In consultation with the UNHCR, the Netherlands will determine which area-specific population groups are to be invited. The Government intends to organise approximately four resettlement missions per year. In January 2005 a first group of 57 resettled refugees from Congo, Sudan and Burundi arrived at Amsterdam Schiphol Airport (Press Release Ministry of Justice, 24 January 2005).

During the course of December 2005 a small number of refugees who claimed asylum in Malta were accepted and resettled in the Netherlands (Press Release Maltese Ministry of Justice and Home Affairs of 21 March 2006). In total, a number of 452 refugees were selected for resettlement in 2005.

Q.14. Are reception conditions available as from the moment one asylum application is introduced? How is article 13, §1 which is mandatory legally understood? Do asylum seekers have to satisfy any other condition in order to get reception conditions?

Asylum seekers who want to apply for asylum in the Netherlands must report to an Application Centre (AC) of the IND. There are two application centres in the Netherlands: AC Ter Apel and AC Schiphol Airport (Amsterdam). Asylum seekers who are referred to AC Ter Apel in order to file their asylum application have to make an appointment to submit the official application. Usually this takes several weeks (2-3). During this waiting period asylum seekers stay at a Temporary Reception Centre (TNV). The TNV is run by COA, but the Rva 2005 is not applicable to people staying at the TNV. Asylum seekers staying in a TNV do not get a financial allowance. Housing is in caravans or mobile homes.

Asylum seekers arriving from a non-Schengen country at Schiphol Airport will be admitted to the asylum procedure immediately after the Border Police hands them over to the immigration authorities (which should take place within six hours after they reported their wish to submit an asylum claim). There is no waiting period for this group, as they will be held in the closed AC Schiphol directly after the registration at the IND.

Although the TNV and AC are thus in fact (temporary) material reception conditions, the main norm of transposition, the Rva 2005 is not applied to asylum seekers who stay in a TNV or AC. A stay in a TNV may last for several weeks. In the AC the formal asylum application is filed. The stay in the AC lasts for 48 'processing' hours (= 4-5 working days).

Q.15. Explain when reception conditions end, for instance after refusal of the asylum request (include in your answer the link with the right of appeal against a decision of refusal of the status, in particular the question of its suspensive effect)

The refusal of an asylum application has as an 'automatic' consequence that the asylum seeker is no longer lawfully resident in the Netherlands (article 45(1)(a) of the Aliens Act). He will be granted 4 weeks in order to leave the Netherlands voluntarily, failing which the alien may be expelled. In general also reception conditions end 4 weeks after refusal of the asylum application (article 45(1)(c) juncto article 62(1) of the Aliens Act 2000). When an asylum seeker receives a negative decision within 48 hours in the so-called accelerated asylum determination procedure (AC-procedure) his right to reception ends immediately.

The asylum seeker can appeal against the negative asylum decision to an administrative court. However, the rejected asylum seeker cannot lodge an appeal against the ending of the reception facilities itself (see answers Q21A and C and Q22A and C). When the negative decision has been taken within the accelerated 48 hours procedure this appeal has to be lodged within one week and does not have suspensive effect. When the negative decision has not been taken in the accelerated procedure (but in the ordinary procedure) the appeal has to be lodged within four weeks. This appeal has suspensive effect: the asylum seeker is allowed to remain in the Netherlands and has a right to reception facilities while awaiting the outcome of the appeal (article 5(1)(a) of the Rva 2005).

When the administrative court decides that an appeal is unfounded, the asylum seeker can lodge a further appeal to the Administrative Jurisdiction Division of the Council of State, which is the highest court in administrative matters. He must lodge this appeal again within four weeks (one week with regard to the 48 hours procedure). The appeal has no suspensive effect. This means that the asylum seeker may not officially await the Council of State's judgment in the Netherlands, and has no right to reception facilities. In that case, a preliminary injunction ('voorlopige voorziening') has to be requested. According to policy rules the asylum seeker is allowed to await the outcome of this first preliminary injunction. During this period he has a right to reception facilities (article 5(1)(b) of the Rva 2005).

Besides, article 7 and 8 of the Rva 2005 enumerate in total 14 situations in which the entitlement to reception conditions provided by COA ends. As mentioned above, first of all the entitlement to reception facilities ends when lawful residence ends. Reception facilities will also end when an asylum seeker has obtained a residence permit and, according to COA, a suitable living accommodation is available. Further, reception can end by way of sanction (e.g. when an asylum seeker has failed to comply with his duty to report to the Aliens Police for two consecutive weeks or if after a transfer to a new reception facility, the applicant does not arrive there within 48 hours).

Q.16 Are there special rules or practices regarding reception conditions in case of successive applications for asylum introduced by the same person?

Yes. Before 1 January 2006, asylum seekers who filed a repeated asylum request in principle had no right to reception conditions (except in cases of humanitarian need), even though they were lawfully resident in the Netherlands (article 4 of the Rva 2005). Since 1 January 2006 this has been changed: asylum seekers who file a repeated asylum request which is not being rejected within the accelerated 48 hours asylum procedure have a right to reception conditions (decision by the Minister of 7 September 2006 to alter the Rva 2005, Stcrt. 12 September 2006, no. 177, p. 7).

Q.17[600]. Information of asylum seekers about their rights and obligations in terms of reception conditions, in particular about established benefits (see article 5 which is to a large extent a mandatory provision; do not confuse this question with the information to be provided to asylum seekers about the asylum procedure):

Q.17.A. Are they informed in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

According to article 2(3) and (4) of the Rva 2005 COA informs asylum seekers in writing about their rights and obligations in terms of reception conditions and about legal assistance and reception facilities. According to information provided by COA, asylum seekers will also be informed orally (interpreters are used when needed). In addition, a local group of the Dutch Council for Refugees is present in each centre and will give additional information about the rights of asylum seekers. This is done orally and if necessary with an interpreter.

Q.17.B. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by the asylum seeker? Specify the list of languages in which it is available.

Article 2(4) of the Rva 2005 explicitly states that the information will be provided in a language understood by the asylum seeker. According to information of COA this information is available in 13 languages: Dutch, Arabic, Chinese, English, Farsi, French, Croatian, Nepalese, Portuguese, Russian, Somalian, Spanish, Turkish. For 'resettled refugees' (answer Q13C) the information is also available in Amharic.

[600] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or to be completed on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Q.17.C. Is the deadline of maximum 15 days respected?

Article 2(3) of the Rva 2005 mentions a deadline of maximum 10 days. According to information given by COA asylum seekers will in practice be informed within 5 working days after arrival in a reception centre. Also the Dutch Council for Refugees has the same opinion. It indicates that COA starts with giving information as soon as the asylum seeker arrives in the centre which is 24 hours after the AC-procedure (which takes 48 'processing' hours or 4-5 working days).

Article 5 of the directive states that member states shall inform asylum seekers within a reasonable time not exceeding fifteen days after they have lodged their application for asylum. However, in the Netherlands, asylum seekers sometimes have to wait for several weeks before they can officially lodge their asylum application (see Q. 10).

Q.18[601]. Information of asylum seekers about the existence of organisations or groups promoting their interest and defending their rights (see article 5 which is to a large extend a mandatory provision):

Q.18.A. Is there a list of organisations dressed by the authorities and if yes is it comprehensive? Is this in particular the case about the possibilities to get legal assistance and health care?

When the asylum seeker stays in the TNV he is given the opportunity to speak with one of the staff members of the Dutch Council for Refugees. Upon arrival in the AC (where his asylum procedure starts) he will also be referred to the Dutch Council for Refugees which is present in the AC, because it is partly responsible for giving information about the asylum procedure and the available legal assistance. Legal assistance and medical care are also available in the AC. Staff members of the Dutch Council for Refugees and nurses will also walk around in the waiting area. In this way it is easy for the asylum seekers to get into contact with them. In the AC there are also leaflets of the IOM. The Dutch Council for Refugees refers people to IOM when they want to know more about the possibilities to repatriate.

At the moment an asylum seeker is referred to an orientation and integration centre run by COA, he will receive information in which a list of organisations with which COA cooperates is mentioned. Organisations that provide legal assistance and health care are included. Other organisations which are mentioned are: Immigration and Naturalization Service (IND), Aliens Police, PreNed Security (PreNed Beveiliging), Asylum Seekers' Legal Aid Foundation (Stichting Rechtsbijstand Asiel) (SRA), (VVN), Community Health Services for Asylum seekers (Medische Opvang Asielzoekers) (MOA), International Organization for Migration (IOM), Red Cross/Tracing, Nidos Foundation (guardianship institution for unaccompanied minors).

[601] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or to be completed on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Q.18.B Is this done in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

Asylum seekers staying in the TNV and AC will mostly be informed orally by the Dutch Council for Refugees, but there are also leaflets of the Dutch Council for Refugees in different languages.

According to article 2(3) and (4) of the Rva 2005, COA informs asylum seekers in writing about legal assistance and reception facilities. According to information provided by COA asylum seekers will also be informed orally (interpreters are used when needed).

Q.18.C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by the asylum seeker? Specify if possible the list of languages in which it is available.

The leaflet of the Dutch Council for Refugees (see previous answer) is available in 33 languages.

Article 2(4) of the Rva 2005 literally states that the information will be provided in a language understood by the asylum seeker. With regard to the list of languages: see answer Q.17B.

Q.18.D. How many organisations are active in that field in your Member State?

According to COA there are nine organisations with which COA cooperates (see answer Q18(A)).

The Dutch Council for Refugees is present in each reception centre and almost all municipalities to assist asylum seekers and refugees. The Dutch Council for Refugees has 24 regional and 170 local departments with approximately 450 paid staff and 7,200 volunteers. Apart from the Dutch Council for Refugees the Red Cross has some (buddy-) projects for unaccompanied minors and many religious groups and churches support asylum seekers in individual cases. In many municipalities there are groups of people, often church related and sometimes officially organised (with even financial support of the municipality) who support (rejected) asylum seekers who are not allowed to stay in reception centres. There are approximately 100 of these groups which accommodate about 2,000 (rejected) asylum seekers. On estimation 70% of these people are still waiting for a final decision in an asylum procedure or a procedure on other grounds (like medical, family or humanitarian reasons).

Q.19. Documentation of asylum seekers (see article 6):

Q.19.A. What kind of document is delivered to the asylum seeker? Explain the legal value of this document (just a certification of the status as asylum seeker or also prove of identity?) (see §1 of article 6 which is a mandatory provision)

According to article 9 of the Aliens Act the Minister shall supply an alien who is lawfully resident in the Netherlands with a document or written statement evidencing the lawful residence.

Asylum seekers who are lawfully resident in the Netherlands pending a decision on an asylum application or pending a decision on appeal, receive a so-called W-document. This document does not only evidence the lawful residence of the asylum seeker, but also mentions his identity and nationality (article 4.21 Aliens Decree in conjunction with article 3.3. Aliens Regulation). It is however not a valid travel document (C3/13.3 Aliens Circular).

Q.19.B. Are there situations or specific cases in which another equivalent document or even no document is issued? (in particular is there an exception for "procedures to decide on the right of the applicant legally to enter the territory" as made possible by §2 of article 6)?

See answer under C.

Q.19.C. For how long is this document in principle valid and is it necessary to renew it after a certain period?

Although Article 9 Aliens Act states that the asylum seeker who is lawfully residing in the Netherlands on the basis of Article 8 Aliens Act (e.g. pending a decision on the asylum application or pending a decision on appeal) is entitled to a document, in practice the W-document will be issued for only one year. When the validity ends it is in principle the IND which is responsible for issuing a new document if the asylum seeker is still entitled to such a document. According to information provided by the Dutch Council for Refugees this automatic extension unfortunately does not occur in a standard way which means that the asylum seeker himself has to apply for extension of the validity of his W-document. This can imply a waiting period of 6-8 weeks. During this waiting period it is possible for the asylum seeker to ask the IND for a declaration or a letter on the ground of article 9 Aliens Act evidencing his or her lawful residence.

Q.19.D. What is the deadline for the delivery of that document? Is the mandatory deadline of 3 days set by article 6, §1 respected[602]?

With respect to the W-document, paragraph C3/13.3 of the Aliens Circular does not explicitly mention a deadline. It only indicates that at the beginning of the reception by COA the chief of the local police has to provide the asylum seeker with a W-document. It is rather doubtful whether the mandatory deadline of three days which is not foreseen by law is respected in practice As mentioned above, it will only be produced at the moment the asylum request is not rejected within the AC-procedure and the asylum seeker is sent to a reception centre run by COA. However, in practice, it seems that as soon as an asylum seeker reports to an AC because he or she wants to file an asylum application, the Aliens Police draws up a form that shows that the asylum seeker has reported. On this form the personal data of the asylum seeker (like name, place of birth, country of origin, nationality, sex, marital state and spoken language) are included as well as a passport photo. With this document an asylum seeker can identify himself during his stay at the TNV and in the AC.

[602] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

With regard to the so-called 'resettled' refugees (see answer Q13C) the procedure is as follows: they have to formally ask for asylum at Schiphol airport in a short procedure, but do not receive a W-document. According to the Dutch Council for Refugees, they usually have to wait several weeks or longer for their identification document as holder of an asylum status.

Q.19.E. Is it possible for an asylum seeker to get a travel document for serious humanitarian reasons (see §5 of article 6 which is an optional provision)?

Yes. In case of serious humanitarian reasons the Minister of Foreign Affairs can issue a laissez-passer to an asylum seeker who has no passport and is lawfully resident in the Netherlands (article 15 (2) of the Passport Law juncto Amended policy rules regarding the provision of laissez passers on the ground of the Passport Law, Government Gazette, 2 November 2001, nr. 213, p. 6). In order for the Minister of Foreign Affairs to issue such a laissez passer a humanitarian exigency has to be demonstrated. Such a humanitarian exigency arises for example because of family circumstances in case of serious illness of the applicant, the spouse or close relatives (parents, children, brothers/sisters, grand parents) in a foreign country (not being the country of origin) or when the asylum seeker wants to attend a funeral of his or her spouse or of a close relative in a foreign country (not being his country of origin).

Q.19.F. Is there a central system of registration of asylum seekers and is it or not separate from the registration of aliens? If yes, describe it briefly (content) and indicate in particular if it is an electronic database.

In the so-called Basisvoorziening Vreemdelingen (BVV)(Basic Facility Aliens) personal data are registered of all aliens who are to be found in the different administrations of IND, COA, etc. The aliens registration system of the IND is called VAS (Vreemdelingen Administratie Systeem). The data in the VAS originate from the IND and are based on information from the interviews held with the asylum seekers. The VAS and the BVV are both electorinic databases. Thus, the data of asylum seekers are not registered separately from the data of other aliens.

Q.20. Residence of asylum seekers[603]:

Q.20.A. Is in principle an asylum seeker free to move on the entire territory of your Member State or only to a limited part of it and in case, which part? (see article 7, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

As mentioned earlier, asylum seekers will often first be sent to a TNV when they report at an AC in order to file an asylum application. The asylum seeker is however not legally obliged to stay at the TNV.

For some time there has been debate on whether the stay in an AC had to be considered as deprivation of liberty. The Appeal Court of the Hague ruled on 31 October 2002 that accommodation in an AC must be considered as deprivation of liberty (00/68 KG, NAV 2002/291). In reaction to this judgment the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration decided that asylum seekers are allowed to leave the ACs when their availability is not necessary for the investigation into the allowability of the application (TBV 2002/52, 2 December 2002). At present this means that the asylum seeker has to remain at the AC during working hours from 7:30 am to 6:00 pm (paragraph C3/12.2.5 of the Aliens Circular).

An asylum seeker who arrives in the Netherlands through Schiphol Airport (Amsterdam) or one of the seaports and who has been refused entry (which is more or less standard if the asylum seeker does not arrive from a Schengen country) is required to stay in a space or place designated by a border control officer (article 6 of the Aliens Act). When he declares that he wants to file an asylum application he will be transferred to the AC Schiphol which is a closed location,secured against unauthorised departure (see Q32D).

When asylum seekers stay in an ordinary reception centre run by COA they can leave this centre and/or municipality where the centre is located as long as they notify the authorities and keep reporting at the agreed times.

Q.20.B. About the place of residence (see §2 of article 7): explain to which extend the person is free to choose her residence and if this depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance processing of application, attribution of reception conditions,…).

According to article 11 of the Rva 2005 COA is entrusted with the placement of asylum seekers and is also entitled to relocate asylum seekers. Asylum seekers are thus not free to choose the centre in which they want to stay. Moreover asylum seekers have to report to the designated reception facility within 24 hours of being notified in the application centre or within 48 hours after a transfer from one reception centre to another reception centre, or else they run the risk that they will be no longer entitled to reception conditions from COA (article 2(5) and 7(1)(i) of the Rva 2005).

[603] Nota bene: the case of detention is covered by other questions and should be ignored under this question.

Asylum seekers do however have the possibility not to be housed by COA (see under C). In that case there is no formal rule saying that the asylum seeker is not allowed to choose his place of residence.

Q.20.C. About the place of reception (meaning where the asylum seeker has to stay to benefit from reception conditions) (see § 4 of article 7): explain which are the general rules about the determination of this place (to which extend are the decisions determining the place taken individually and do they take into account the personal situation of the asylum seeker?) and to which extend the person is free to choose it and if it depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance attribution of reception conditions, processing of the application,…).

As mentioned above, it is COA who decides in what reception facility an asylum seeker is placed. This decision is an administrative decision. The normal legal remedies under the General Administrative Law Act may be lodged against such a decision. Depending on the stage of the asylum procedure COA places asylum seekers in an orientation & integration centre or in a return centre.

COA also has the possibility of placing specific categories of asylum seekers (asylum seekers with behavioural and/or serious (mental) health problems, unaccompanied minors) in special reception facilities run by third parties (article 7(2) of the Wet COA). For example, there are special reception facilties for asylum seekers who due to their unacceptable behaviour cannot stay in a normal reception facility (so-called AMOG centres) and for asylum seekers who have mental problems ('Abri' and 'de Vonk').

Asylum seekers have the choice not to be housed by COA (article 13 of the Rva 2005). In that case, however, they will not receive the provisions and benefits mentioned in article 9 of the Rva 2005 (with the exception of necessary medical care, legal assistance during the asylum procedure and education of minors).

There is one exception to the above mentioned: the administrative registration (see answer Q10 under 4). In special, exceptional circumstances asylum seekers are allowed to live outside COA reception centres and still receive the provisions and benefits of the Rva 2005. Asylum seekers are allowed to live with relatives in the first degree or with their spouse/partner who is/are lawfully resident in the Netherlands and has/have suitable housing. These asylum seekers are registered by a COA reception centre in the neighbourhood and subject to the rules mentioned in the Rva 2005. This means that they have to participate in the phase-specific program in the centre they are administered by, but are also allowed to use its facilities.

Q.20.D. If all asylum seekers are not placed in accommodation centres because of capacity limits, explain how the persons are distributed between accommodation centres and other accommodation facilities (which authority takes the decisions, on the basis of which elements, can that decision be appealed by the asylum seeker,…)[604]

Because of the considerable decline of the number of asylum applications in the last five years (with an upsurge at the beginning of 2006), COA has been reducing the number of accommodation centres drastically.

In the past however it was often difficult for COA to organize sufficient reception capacity. Distribution of asylum seekers at times of a sudden mass influx (e.g. during the Kosovo crisis in 1999) occurred on an ad-hoc basis. It even proved necessary to use emergency accommodation in the form of tent camps.

Q.20.E. How can an asylum seeker ask to leave temporarily the place of residence or of reception or an assigned area? How is the individual AND impartial character of the decision ensured? (see §5 of article 7 which is a mandatory provision)

An asylum seeker is allowed to temporarily leave the place of a COA reception centre as long as he or she fulfils the duty to report weekly to the Aliens Police (article 54(1)(f) of the Aliens Act juncto article 4.51 of the Aliens Decree) and COA (article 19(e) of the Rva 2005). However, article 13 (1) of the Rva 2005 states that asylum seekers are not entitled to reception conditions if they do not make use of the offered accommodation. Under special circumstances, COA can deviate from this rule according to article 13 (2) of the Rva 2005. Furthermore, under certain circumstances it is possible for the asylum seeker to obtain a release from this duty to report. In some occasions he may be allowed to report only monthly to the Aliens Police (e.g. in situations in which an asylum seeker, by virtue of the Aliens Act or on the ground of a judicial decision, may await the outcome of an appeal against a negative decision). Children under 12 years of age do not have a duty to report (paragraph C3/13.2 of the Aliens Circular). Reception conditions under the Rva 2005 will however end when an asylum seeker fails to comply with his duty to report to the Aliens Police for two consecutive weeks (article 7(1)(j) of the Rva 2005). When an asylum seeker fails to comply with his duty to report to COA, reception conditions cannot end on this ground, but it is possible for COA to end the reception conditions (for a period of time) by virtue of a sanction (see answer Q21).

[604] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Q.21. Q.21.A. Do rules on reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions exist in internal legislation and if yes in which cases (mention in particular if there are cases not foreseen by article 16, § 1 and 2 which are optional provisions)? Distinguish in your answer between cases of reduction and withdrawal and explain which conditions can be reduced.

Yes. According to article 10 of Rva 2005 reception conditions can be reduced or withdrawn if an asylum seeker:

- does not give proper information which is necessary in order to realize reception, like name, date of birth, nationality, country of origin, family composition, properties, date of asylum application;
- does not contribute to reception facilities if he or she has income from work or capital;
- does not comply with the house rules;
- does not follow instructions of COA personnel;
- refuses to do cleaning tasks in or around his or her living area;
- does not give entrance to his living area to COA personnel when it is likely that the asylum seeker does not comply with the house rules or when this is deemed necessary because of the management of the reception facility;
- does not comply with the duty to report at COA (once a week);
- causes trouble to other asylum seekers or COA personnel;
- refuses to participate in programmes aimed at informing, stimulating and alerting the asylum seeker with regard to his or her return. This last ground is not mentioned in the Directive as a possible ground for reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions.

Details are laid down in COA's Rules on the Withholding of Provisions 2005 (Reglement Onthoudingen en Verstrekkingen 2005)(ROV 2005). See answer under Q21 (C) and Q25(D).

Reception facilities are ended if the asylum application has been definitively rejected (see answers Q15, Q21A and C and Q22A and C).

Q.21.B Has article 16, §2 dealing with refusal of reception conditions for unreasonably late applications for asylum been transposed by your Member State (or was this case already applicable before transposition)? Are there cases in practice[605]?

No.

Q.21.C Are the decisions of reduction or withdrawal taken individually, objectively AND impartially (for instance through and independent arbitrator) (see article 16, §4 which is a mandatory provision)?

COA has the competence to take decisions on the withdrawal or reduction of reception facilities. As mentioned above, in a separate, internal regulation (ROV) COA laid down in what cases and under what circumstances sanctions are allowed. Decisions on the reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions are individual administrative decisions in the sense of article 1:3 (2) of the General Administrative Law Act. As a consequence all the (procedural) provisions of this Act are applicable. This implicates a.o. that the administrative decision must be based on proper reasons and must fulfil the duty of care and the weighing of interests. According to information provided by the Dutch Council for Refugees it occurs that in practice decisions of COA personnel often lack proper motivation. In that case the asylum seeker can appeal against the decision by lodging an objection with COA. When the objection is held to be legally unfounded, the asylum seeker can lodge an appeal to an administrative court. The District Court will then decide whether or not COA's decision was correct. If the court agrees with the rejection of the objection, the asylum seeker can lodge a further appeal to the Council of State, the highest court in administrative matters.

[605] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

The decision to end the reception facilities if the asylum application has been definitively rejected is an element of the asylum decision. Some individual interests of the asylum seeker not to end the facilities are not being judged in that legal framework (see answers Q15, Q21A and C and Q22 A and C).

Q.21.D Is statement 14/03 adopted by the Council at the same moment as the directive respected (see the documentation pack you received at our meeting in Brussels in April)?

Statement 14/03
Member states must in all cases concerning article 16(2) and (3) of the Directive:

1. comply with international obligations on human dignity (in particular article 3 ECHR)

Comment:
The Netherlands is a party to the ECHR (and other relevant human rights treaties), the result being that they are legally obliged to respect international obligations on human dignity when deciding on reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions.

2. take account of the situation of the person concerned (in particular the specific situation of vulnerable persons provided for in article 17)

Comment:
According to the explanatory memorandum to the ROV,COA will have to verify whether the behaviour of the asylum seeker justifies the reduction or withdrawal of the reception facilities. The severity of the sanction has to be in proportion with the nature and seriousness of the behaviour. It has to be ascertained that no less severe sanction will serve the same goal.The interests of the asylum seeker have to be balanced with regard to the decision whether a sanction (and what sanction) will be imposed.

3. ensure that as a minimum access to emergency healthcare is guaranteed under all circumstances.

Comment:
Yes. Access to emergency health care is ensured for all aliens regardingless whether they are legally or illegally resident in the Netherlands.

With regard to emergency health care, illegal migrants do not have an enforceable right to health care, but doctors, general practitioners, pharmacists and specialists have, on the basis of the criminal law and their disciplinary rules and professional ethics, a duty to extend health care to everybody in urgent situations.

There are two provisions to ensure that the costs for health care for illegal migrants do not completely fall on the shoulders of the individual providers. The first provision is for hospitals. According to arrangements with health insurance companies, hospitals have a special budget for unpaid bills. Unpaid bills by illegal migrants can be written off of this budget. The second provision is the so-called Linkage Fund (Koppelingsfonds) for primary health care, like GP's, midwives and pharmacies. This Fund does not pay the bills of the illegal migrants, but compensates the doctors for a loss of earnings. There are several conditions that have to be fulfilled to get an application accepted by the Fund. The health care provider should prove that the person is actually illegal, that the costs for the health care cannot be claimed in any other way, that the provided care was urgent[606], and that the financial burden on the provider was excessive. Because of these conditions and because it is the individual caregiver who decides whether the care is urgent, access to primary health care can in practise be difficult. Access to hospitals can even be more problematic in practice for illegal migrants since in hospitals the medical-ethical and financial considerations are not united in one person. Some doctors report that it becomes more and more complicated for illegal migrants to get access to hospitals. Often they are sent away without having their complaints examined by a doctor (Medisch Contact, 19 May 2006, nr. 20, p. 843).

Q.21.E Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements on cases of reduction, withdrawal or refusal which have been taken, and if yes, what has been the outcome[607]?

[606] Care is in any case urgent: in case – or for prevention - of life threatening situations, or in case – or for prevention - of situations of permanent loss of essential functions; in case there is a danger for a third party, e.g. certain contagious diseases (in particular TB) and for psychological disturbances and consequent aggressive behaviour; in case of pregnancy care; and in case of preventive health care for children.
[607] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

With regard to the Rva 1997 there were a lot of administrative appeal decisions or judgments on cases of reduction, withdrawal or refusal of reception conditions, but with regard to the Rva 2005 there are only a few judgments at present. See answer Q 9 for one of the most important judgments: in a judgment of 20 January 2006 (Awb 05/57129 and 57971) the District Court of Haarlem held that the fact that the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration did not provide reception conditions to an asylum seeker who filed a repeated asylum request according to article 4(2) of the Rva 2005 was not contrary to articles 16(1)(a), 16 (4) and 17 of the Reception Conditions Directive. Neither does article 16(5) of the Reception Conditions Directive compel the Minister to provide reception conditions until a final decision on the repeated asylum request has been reached nor do new policy rules regarding the filing of a repeated asylum request as laid down in WBV 2006/1 (answer Q16).

Q.22. Q.22.A. Appeal against a negative decision relating to the granting of benefits or based on article 7 (see article 21 which is a mandatory provision): indicate against which decision an appeal can be introduced, describe the system of appeal in general and include in particular in your answer the deadline for appealing, if the appeal has or not a suspensive effect, if there are different steps (for instance first an administrative appeal and in particular if the guarantee of an appeal before a judicial body in the last instance is respected)?

In principle, every asylum seeker who files a (first) asylum application in the Netherlands has a right to reception facilities until a negative decision is taken. According to the Aliens Act a negative decision on an asylum application has several 'automatic' effects. One of these 'de jure' effects is the automatic end of all reception facilities after 28 days. This means that COA does not have to take a separate decision to end reception conditions. Against the negative decision on the asylum application the asylum seeker can lodge an appeal to the administrative court. This appeal has to be lodged within 4 weeks after the negative decision. This appeal has suspensive effect: the asylum seeker is allowed to remain in the country and has a right to reception facilities while awaiting the outcome of the appeal. When the administrative court decides that the appeal is unfounded, the asylum seeker can lodge a further appeal to the Administrative Justice Division of the Council of State which is the highest court in administrative matters. He has to lodge this appeal again within 4 weeks. The appeal has no suspensive effect. This means that the asylum seeker may not await the Council of State's judgment in the Netherlands and has no right to reception facilities. In that case a preliminary injunction ('voorlopige voorziening') has to be requested. In accordance with policy rules, an asylum seeker is allowed to await the outcome of this preliminary provision.

The system mentioned above is different if a negative decision is reached within the so-called accelerated determination procedure (AC-procedure). In this procedure a decision is reached within 48 'processing' hours. During these 48 hours (spread over several working days) the asylum seeker resides in the AC. During this period the Rva 2005 is not applicable to him. The asylum seeker can lodge an appeal against the negative decision to the administrative court within one week, but this appeal has no suspensive effect. He has to ask for a preliminary injunction. According to policy rules of the Minister the asylum seeker is allowed to await the outcome of this procedure, but he is not allowed to stay in the AC. He has to find accommodation himself. Against the judgment of the district court the asylum seeker can lodge an appeal to the Council of State, but also in this case the appeal has no suspensive effect.

As mentioned above, a rejected asylum seeker can lodge an appeal against the negative asylum decision. However, the rejected asylum seeker cannot lodge an appeal against the ending of the reception facilities itself, for the following reasons. Dutch law indicates that if the negative decision on the asylum application is definitive, the legal consequence that the facilities end, exists ex jure. In addition, the Council of State (ABRS, 24 July 2002, JV 2002/311) judged that the Aliens Act prescribes that this consequence cannot be judged independently from the (negative) decision on the asylum request. Reasons lodged by the asylum seeker to avoid the ending of the reception facilities, which reasons do not relate directly to the legal grounds on which the residence permit was asked, are not being judged in an asylum procedure. As a consequence a major part of e.g. serious medical and psychological problems are (according to the jurisprudence of the Council of State) not assessed in the asylum procedure. They are therefore not to be considered legal reasons for which reception facilities of an asylum seeker should not be ended (ABRS 28 March 2007, JV 2007/187 annotated by Larsson). Though the reception is not ended by a separate individual decision, it is possible to file a separate application for reception after the negative decision on an asylum application. In a judgment of 23 February 2005 the Council of State stated that a decision on such an application is an administrative decision against which an appeal can be lodged (NAV 2005/80 and JV 2005,155). Furthermore, the Council of State (ABRS 28 March 2007, JV 2007/187 annotated by Larsson) stated that COA, deciding on such a separate application, should grant reception facilities to the rejected asylum seeker, if very special reasons occur. The Council of State did not mention any possible very special reasons so far.

COA itself is in charge of taking decisions relating to the reduction or withdrawal of benefits and decisions relating to the place of residence or transfer to another place of residence of asylum seekers. Such decisions are individual administrative decisions in the sense of article 1:3 (2) of the General Administrative Law Act. As a consequence all the (procedural) remedies of this Act are applicable. In that case the asylum seeker can appeal against the decision by lodging an objection with COA. When the objection is held to be legally unfounded, the asylum seeker can lodge an appeal to the administrative court. The District Court will then decide whether or not COA's decision was correct. If the District Court agrees with the rejection of the objection, the asylum seeker can lodge a further appeal to the Council of State. These appeals do not have suspensive effect.

Regarding appeal against a negative decision based on article 7 of the Directive (restriction of freedom to move and detention): see answer Q33H.

Q.22.B. Explain which are the possibilities for asylum seekers to benefit from legal assistance when they introduce such an appeal (see article 21, §2 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to Member States)?

During the entire asylum procedure an asylum seeker has the right to be legally assisted or represented by a legal representative (e.g. lawyer)(article 2:1 of the general Administrative Law Act). The administrative authority may require a legal representative to produce a written authorisation.

Pursuant to the Act on Legal Aid and the Aliens Circular, in the Netherlands all asylum seekers have a right to state-funded legal assistance at all stages of the asylum procedure (first-instance decision stage, first and second judicial appeals stage). The coordination of this legal assistance in asylum matters is to a large extent consigned to the Asylum Seekers' Legal Aid Foundation (SRA). This Legal Aid Foundation assigns independent lawyers and lawyers employed by the Foundation specialised in asylum and refugee law to asylum seekers.

When a lawyer refuses to proceed with an asylum seeker's case because of lack of merit (e.g. when the lawyer refuses to lodge an appeal against a negative decision taken in the AC), he has to inform the asylum seeker about his right to contact a second lawyer for a second opinion on the merits of the case. If the second lawyer also rejects the case, this usually means that no legal aid is available through the Legal Aid Act. In that case asylum seekers can seek the services of a private lawyer independently.

Due to the reduction of the number of asylum claims however, this system will be abolished in the near future. Asylum seekers will only be assisted by privately practising lawyers again.

Further, it should be noticed that because of the very strict time limits in the accelerated 48 hours procedure it is often very difficult for legal advisers to provide effective legal assistance. Another complication is that during the accelerated procedure lawyers appointed by the Legal Aid Foundation operate on a rota-basis, so the asylum seeker may be in contact with more than one or two lawyers during the few days or weeks (including appeal and further appeal) the procedure lasts.

Q.22.C. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones[608]?

See answer Q9 and Q21E: A judgment of 20 January 2006 (Jurisprudentie Vreemdelingenrecht (JV) 2006/142 m.nt. HBA) concerned a request for a preliminary injunction. The District Court of Haarlem held that the fact that the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration did not provide reception conditions to an asylum seeker who filed a repeated asylum request according to article 4(2) of the Rva 2005 was not contrary to articles 16(1)(a), 16 (4) and 17 of the Reception Conditions Directive. Neither does article 16(5) of the Reception Conditions Directive compel the Minister to provide reception conditions until a final decision on the repeated asylum request has been reached.

Q.22.D. Is a mechanism of complain for asylum seekers about quality of receptions conditions in general (even if they are not personally concerned) organised? If yes, before which authority? Is it linked to the system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions (see below question n° 39)?

Yes, in 2003 COA adopted a COA Complaints Regulation for residents and other persons (Klachtenregeling voor bewoners en derden). This Complaints Regulation is published in the Government Gazette of 29 January 2003, nr. 20, p. 25. According to this Complaints Regulation, every asylum seeker has the right to lodge a complaint with COA about a co-resident or about (a member of staff of) COA. COA uses the following information sheet which gives the asylum seeker more information about the complaints procedure, how to lodge a complaint, and how COA will deal with the complaint:

You have a complaint

A complaint is an expression of dissatisfaction with the behaviour or conduct of a co-resident, a COA member of staff, or about COA in general.

Lodging a complaint

If you have a complaint, COA will ask you to talk with the other(s) first. If you cannot come to an understanding with the other, you can lodge a written complaint with COA.

If you submit a written complaint, you must sign the complaint and give at least the following information:

Your name and address, or the name of the person who authorised you;
The issue you are complaining about, and the date of the event;
A description of the complaint.

You can send your written complaint to the reception centre where the undesirable behaviour took place. COA has a special complaints form for lodging your complaint. This form can be obtained from the Info desk.

Dealing with your complaint

After lodging a written complaint, COA will confirm receipt of your complaint in writing. Your complaint will be dealt with by a COA executive that has not been involved in the case. The person(s) about whom you have lodged the complaint will receive a copy of the complaint and any related documents.

[608] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Hearing the persons involved

COA will give you and the person about whom you complained the opportunity to react verbally to the complaint. COA will make a report of this reaction. This so-called hearing of those involved will not take place if the complaint is obviously unfounded, or when you do not want to make use of the right to be heard.

Handling your complaint

COA will handle your complaint within six weeks after receipt. COA can extend the handling of your complaint with four weeks at the most. You and the person about whom you complained will be informed about the deferment in writing. COA will notify you in writing and well reasoned about the result of the investigation into the complaint and any possible conclusions COA attached to it. If COA does not consider a complaint, the complainant will be informed in writing as soon as possible but not later than four weeks after receipt of the complaint. After COA dealt with your complaint and you are not satisfied, you may seek the help of an arbitrator, the National Ombudsman.

Also the Community Health Services for Asylum Seekers (MOA) employs a complaints regulation with regard to their medical service which is available for asylum seekers in different languages.

6. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.23. Family unity of asylum seekers: define how a family is defined in relation with article 2, (d) which is a mandatory provision and explain how housing is provided to a family (see articles 8 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to member States and 14, §2, (a) which is a mandatory provision).

Article 1(f) of the Rva 2005 defines the family as follows:

1) spouses or unmarried partners together;
2) spouses or unmarried partners and their (step)child under 18 years of age they are responsible for;
3) the single parent and his or her (step)child under 18 years of age.

Ad 3) A single parent is the single person who has the full care for one or more (step)children they are responsible for and who has no joint household with another person, unless this concerns a relative in the first or second degree (article 1(9) of the Rva 2005).

According to article 11 (1) of the Rva 2005 COA decides on the housing facility of an asylum seeker. It has the authority to relocate an asylum seeker from one housing facility to another. But in using this authority COA has to maintain, as far as possible and with the asylum seeker's agreement, the family unity and takes the protection of family life as a starting point (article 11(3) of the Rva 2005). Provided that this will be in the interest of the child, COA will also take care of the fact that the minor child of an asylum seeker or the asylum seeker who is a minor will be accommodated with his or her parent or with an adult family member (article 11(4) of the Rva 2005). Finally, COA will, as far as possible, lodge minor siblings together (article 11(5) of the Rva 2005).

In the explanatory memorandum to the Rva 2005 the Minister mentions that subsections 3, 4 and 5 of article 11 of the Rva 2005 (as mentioned above) are only a formalization of what in practice is already common. What is noteworthy is that in the opinion of the Minister the maintaining of the family unity with regard to housing does not preclude the possible separated expulsion or eviction of asylum seekers after reception condition end, since according to standing jurisprudence neither article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights nor the Convention on the Rights of the Child hinders reception conditions coming to an end at different moments for different members of a family (see explanatory memorandum to the Rva 2005).

Asylum seekers who arrive in the Netherlands while their familiy members are staying in orientation or return centres, are not reunited with their family members immediately. They have to stay in emergency temporary reception and application centres first, and during that time, they do not fall under the scope of the Rva 2005.

Q.24. Q.24.A. How is housing of asylum seekers organised: describe the system in general and indicate in particular what is the most frequently system used (see article 14, §1 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space for Member States; distinguish between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels places or other premises).

The housing of asylum seekers is organized in a centralised way. COA is the main responsible agency for the housing of asylum seekers. The following main forms of housing reception facilities (no private housing) of asylum seekers exist (see answer Q10):

a. Temporary emergency reception (TNV)
b. Application Centre (AC)
c. Regular reception in:
  a. Centre for orientation and integration
  b. Centre for return
d. Administrative registration and other arrangements

Ad a) TNV is run by COA. Housing is in caravans / mobile homes. The TNV in Ter Apel consists of 80 caravans, an office building and a shed. The caravans house about 400 asylum seekers. In the office building, office space is made available for the Community Health Services for Asylum Seekers (Medische Opvang Asielzoekers)(MOA), Dutch Council for Refugees (2 employees and 20 volunteers) and COA (about 16 employees). The shed accomodates a dining room and a depot (for second-hand clothing, furniture, etc.). Due to budgetary reasons, there is neither a recreation area nor a day-care centre for children. The Rva 2005 is not applied to the stay in a TNV. Ad b) ACs are run by the IND. The AC in Ter Apel is a half-open centre to that extent that asylum seekers are allowed to leave the AC when their availability is not necessary for the investigation into the allowability of the application (between 6pm and 7:30 am).The AC in Schiphol however is a so-called closed centre in which detention measures on the basis of article 6 of the Aliens Act (see answer Q32D) are implemented. According to the Minister forAlien Affairs and Integration accomodation in an AC is sober, but humane. Facilities are very basic. During the day, asylum seekers stay in common waiting areas with plastic chairs and one or two televisions. A small and confined outside area is available. During the night, the asylum seekers stay in dormitories with bunkbeds. Men and women are seperated during the night. If capacity allows it, families are allowed to stay in a separate room together. The sleeping facilities are not open during the day. The Rva 2005 is not applied to the stay in an AC.

Ad c) If the asylum application has not been denied within the accelerated 48 hours procedure and/or the asylum seekers hasn't been placed in detention, this is the main category of housing. The phase of the asylum procedure determines in which type of centre the asylum seeker is staying. Therefore the standard facilities are divided in reception centres for orientation and integration (before first decision and after positive decision) and reception centres for return (after first negative decision). The Rva 2005 is applicable.

Some of the centres are newly built facilities, others old buildings, like monasteries and schools, which are converted for reception purposes. Not only big buildings, also regular houses are used for reception.

Housing facilities include facilities to sleep, to cook, to do laundry, to shower, etc. Although reception centres are set up in different accomodations, COA however laid down prescribed dimensions for the different housing facilties in a so-called Program of Demands (Programma van Eisen)(PvE) which is of a highly technical nature and contains technical minimum standards for the construction or renovation of reception centres. For example bedrooms will be for a maximum of four individuals, measuring at least 5m²; for each eight inhabitants there will be at least one toilet and 3,25m² of bathroom space (including a washer and dryer) and for each eight inhabitants there has to be 5,72m² of kitchen space. According to the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration, these standards meet the minimum standards for the reception of asylum seekers as laid down in the Directive (TK 2004-2005, 19 637, nr. 913, 30 March 2005).

Ad d) In case of administrative registration, the asylum seeker concerned will be registered in the nearest reception centre. This is where he may receive his weekly financial contribution (pocket money, allowance for clothing and allowance for food). By means of this registration he has also been insured against medical expenses and against the financial impact of third party liability. Another form of the small-scale reception are the 'central reception houses' (COW) or the small-scale central reception units

(KCO). These are ordinary houses rented by COA. The Rva 2005 applies to asylum seekers who stay in these reception houses / units. However, as from 2005, there is no new influx of asylum seekers in these small-scale reception centres anymore

Q.24.B. What is the total number of available places for asylum seekers?[609] Distinguish in your answer between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels or other premises.

According to information provided by COA, at 1 May 2006 the technical capacity was 30,764 places. A number of 23,260 asylum seekers were actually present on 1 April 2007.

Q.24.C. Is this number of places for asylum seekers sufficient in general or frequently insufficient?[610]

At the moment the number of places appear to be sufficient. In fact, due to the decrease in the number of asylum seekers in the last couple of years, COA has closed a number of reception facilities and laid off many staff. At the beginning of 2006 however, there was a (temporary) upsurge with regard to the entry of asylum seekers into the Netherlands. According to a random, non-public and small scale investigation by the Ministry of Justice, these asylum seekers were to a large extent single male Iraqi refugees who had left Germany because of a mass issue of refugee revocation notices and the lifting of a temporary protection policy for asylum seekers coming from Central Iraq. Even the reopening of the AC in Zevenaar was under serious consideration of the IND (AC Zevenaar was closed in 2003 due to the decrease in the number of asylum seekers) at that time. Since then, however, it has been quiet.

Q.24.D. Are there special measures foreseen in urgent cases of a high number of news arrivals of asylum seekers (outside the case of application of the directive on temporary protection)?

It is rather unclear whether there are such special measures. The Rva 2005 states that in urgent cases, the minister can grant COA the power to exclude certain categories of asylum seekers from reception conditions (article 4(1) Rva 2005). This power has been used in the past for certain categories of asylum seekers who could not be housed in reception centres due to a large influx of asylum seekers. These asylum seekers were however entitled to reception conditions similar to those of the Rva 2005 (except for accommodation) and were granted an extra financial allowance for the costs of accommodation outside reception centres. This was called: 'selfcare arrangement' (zelfzorgarrangement).

[609] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[610] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

This selfcare arrangement does no longer exist. It is therefore unclear what will happen in the future in case of large influx of asylum seekers.

Q.25. Accommodation centres (important note: all the following questions are about open and not closed centres where asylum seekers are detained which are covered by another question)

Q.25.A Are there different categories of accommodation centres, for instance depending of the stage of the procedure (admissibility and eligibility)?

Yes. As mentioned above, the following main categories of public accommodation centres exist:

1. Temporary emergency reception (TNV)
2. Application Centre (AC)
3. Regular reception in:
a. Centres for orientation and integration
b. Centres for return
4. Administrative registration and other arrangements

See for more details answer Q10. There are no formal private centres in the Netherlands.

Q.25.B. Is there a legal time limit for accommodation in a centre after which the asylum seekers have access to private houses or apartments or is this limit linked to a stage of the asylum procedure?

Except for the stay in the AC which may only last for 48 'processing' hours (spread over 4-5 working days), there are no legal time limits. With regard to the stay in the TNV: a decision of the district court in Groningen of 7 August 2002 (Awb 02/57266) made clear that the stay in a TNV should be as short as possible. A period of three months was not deemed as short as possible. According to the Dutch Council for Refugees, in AC Ter Apel it usually takes several weeks (2-3) until an asylum seeker is given the opportunity to submit his claim in an AC. At the beginning of 2006, due to a sudden influx of young single Iraqi men who, according to the Ministry of Justice, had left Germany because of a mass issue of refugee revocation notices and the lifting of a temporary protection policy for asylum seekers coming from Central Iraq, the waiting period amounted to almost 8 weeks. Because this led to capacity problems in the TNV Ter Apel, a number of temporary TNVs - more or less in the vicinity of Ter Apel - were opened (Zuid-Laren, Appelscha, Musselkanaal, Zwolle, Arnhem and Bellingwolde). At present (March 2007), besides the TNV in Ter Apel, only the temporary TNV in Bellingwolde is still in use.

The length of the stay in the ordinary reception centres depends on the duration of the asylum procedure. Pursuant to article 42(1) of the Aliens Act a decision must be reached within six months after application, but there are possibilities to postpone the decision for six months (in case expert advice is needed) or for up to one year (e.g. during a period when it is unclear how the situation in a country will develop). In practice it can however take years before a decision on an asylum application is being taken. Accomodation ends 28 days after a final negative decision. When the outcome of the asylum procedure is positive, accomodation in a centre ends as soon as adequate housing in a community is available. This usually takes an average of six months.

Q.25.C Is there a general regulation about the internal functioning of those centres and the rights and duties of the asylum seekers? If yes, is this general regulation applicable to public and private centres? If not, are the centres supposed to adopt an internal regulation and does a central authority have or not a kind of control about its content?

With respect to the internal functioning of the TNV and the AC, COA and the IND respectively employ so-called (unpublished) house rules.
According to the house rules applicable to asylum seekers staying in a TNV, asylum seekers are not allowed to eat or to drink inside the caravans. They are obliged to enjoy their meals in the dining room only.

Regarding the internal functioning of the centres for orientation and integration and centres for return, COA also employs (unpublished) house rules. These house rules are identical for all COA reception centres and have to be signed by the asylum seeker. They contain a number of general obligations as mentioned in article 19 of the Rva 2005 and a number of more detailed rules (obligation for asylum seekers to participate in the obligatory elements of the orientation and return programmes, rules on behaviour and rules concerning the use of the living areas). Besides these house rules, asylum seekers have to sign another document with rights and duties when arriving at a reception centre. These documents are available in 13 languages: Dutch, Arabic, Chinese, English, Farsi, French, Croatian, Nepalese, Portuguese, Russian, Somalian, Spanish, and Turkish.

Q.25.D Do the regulations foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers in case of breach of the rules? (see article 16, §3) If yes, which sanctions for which rules? Which is the competent authority to decide? Are the decisions taken individually, objectively and in particular impartially (for instance through an independent arbitrator) as requested by §4 of article 21 which is mandatory provision*?* Which are the possibilities of appealing against those decisions if the system is different from the general one under question n°23? Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones? [611]

According to the house rules applicable to asylum seekers staying in a TNV, the only possible sanction is to remove an asylum seeker from the area. But this will only happen in very extraordinary circumstances (e.g. in case of repeated extreme nuisance). An asylum seeker who stays in a TNV cannot be cut back on his benefits, because he does not get a financial allowance during this stage.

[611] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

House rule 15 (regarding the internal functioning of the centres for orientation and integration and the centres for return) reiterates article 10 of the Rva 2005 and says that in case of breach of the household rules a (punitive) measure or sanction pursuant to the ROV 2005 (Rules on the Withholding of Provisions 2005) can be imposed. There are 11 sanctions ranging from a one-off deduction of benefits (with a maximum up to € 15,89 for adults and € 5,45 for children from 12-17 years of age) in case of a very light form of nuisance to a permanent end of all provisions and services provided by COA (including housing) in case of very extreme extraordinary nuisance. In case of permanent ending of all provisions, also the health insurance will be ended. In all other cases (ending of all provisions for a certain period of time) the asylum seeker will remain covered for medical expenses pursuant to the health insurance for asylum seekers.

In 2005, the minister has given an overview of the imposed sanctions on the basis of the ROV in 2003 and 2004[612]:

Sanction	2003	Objection well-founded	Objection unfounded	2004	Objection well-founded	Objection unfounded
1	2523	6	12	1534	7	6
2	486		5	322
3	197		3	102
4	180	1	1	141	1
5	16				13
6	214	2	7	131		5
7	85	1		50	1	1
8	15			6	1	1
9	1		1
10	3		1	1	1
11	1
totaal	3721	10	30	2300	11	13

On the basis of the Rva 2005 and the ROV 2005 the competent authority is COA itself. Because the punitive sanction or measure constitutes an infringement of the interests of the asylum seeker and interferes with his or her private life, the ROV 2005 requires COA to deal with this authority in a very careful and reserved manner. Furthermore the decision to impose a (punitive) sanction or measure has to fulfil the conditions of proportionality and subsidiarity. Every (punitive) sanction or measure will be imposed by virtue of an individual administrative decision in the sense of article 1:3 (2) of the General Administrative Law Act. See also a judgment of 28 December 2005 by the Council of State (described below). As a consequence all the (procedural) provisions of this Act are applicable. This implicates a.o. that the administrative decision must be based on proper reasons and must fulfil the duty of care and the weighing of interests. In general the asylum seeker shall also be given the opportunity to state his or her views before an administrative decision is reached. Furthermore, the asylum seeker can appeal against the decision by lodging an objection with COA. When the objection is held to be legally unfounded, the asylum seeker can lodge an appeal to an administrative court. The District Court will then decide whether or not COA's decision was correct. If the District Court agrees with the rejection of the objection, the asylum seeker can lodge a further appeal to the Council of State.

[612] Kamerstukken II, 2004/05, 19 637, nr. 913, p. 6.

In a recent judgment of 28 December 2005 (200507133/1) the Council of State also held that a decision pursuant to the ROV 2005 is an appealable decision in the sense of article 3a of the Wet COA.

Q.25.E Are asylum seekers involved in the management of these centres? If yes, how (advisory board, appointment or election of representatives)? (see article 14, §6 which is an option provision)

According to COA this is not the case.

Q.25.F Do specific rules exist on work of asylum seekers inside the accommodation centres different from the general ones about employment (see below)? If yes, which ones? Can working inside accommodation centres be considered as a (mandatory) contribution of the asylum seekers to the management of the centres, is it or not paid and considered as implying access to the labour market and subject to the same rules?

Yes. Article 18 of the Rva 2005 provides that an asylum seeker may participate in work activities in and around the reception facility, indicated by COA for the performance of which a remuneration can be given. These work activities have to be distinguished from 'regular' work and cannot be considered as implying access to the labour market and are not subject to the same rules. According to COA, working on the premises must be seen as a contribution to the well-being of the asylum seeker and the liveability inside the reception centre.

According to the explanatory memorandum to the Rva 2005, one has to think of work activities for which strength or creative or skilful knowledge is required, like sawing down a tree, hanging a painting on the wall or shortening the curtains.

The remuneration can be provided in money (up to a maximum of € 12,50 per week), in vouchers or in kind (present). COA also has the possibility of not paying out the remuneration to the asylum seeker concerned, but to reserve the money for the benefit of all the inhabitants of the reception centre (e.g. purchase of a satellite dish, additional playthings for the recreation rooms or a joint trip).

With regard to the remuneration, COA employs the following directions:

Activity	Wages per hour
Organisation or the assisting with structural recreational and sports events	€ 0,50
Activities in the kitchen	€ 1
Activities in the canteen	€ 0,50
Bicycle workshop	€ 0,50
Supply room	€ 0,50
Assisting in the computer room	€ 0,50
Cleaning activities	€ 1
Assisting in the (children's) playroom	€ 0,50
Translating service	€ 0,50
Garbage collection on location	€ 1
Laundries	€ 0,50
Maintenance of the premises, the buildings and the green space	€ 0,50

COA has to take care of the fact that the supply of work activities will be proportionally divided among the asylum seekers who want to perform such work activities.

Q.26. Q.26.A. How can asylum seekers communicate with legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGOs? (see article 14, §2, (b) which is a mandatory provision).

During their stay in the TNV asylum seekers can communicate with the Dutch Council for Refugees. The Dutch Council for Refugees uses this waiting period in order to prepare the asylum seeker for the asylum procedure in the AC. The employee stresses the fact that documents and being able to prove your identity are very important. Also individual counselling will be offered to the asylum seeker during which the asylum account will be gone through. In this way a digital dossier (also country-specific information can be added) will be composed which will be handed over to an employee of the Dutch Council for Refugees and to a lawyer of the Asylum Seekers' Legal Aid Foundation (SRA) in the AC. Every week the IOM has office hours in the TNV.

In the AC the asylum seeker will also be referred to the Dutch Council for Refugees which is present in the AC, because it is partly responsible for giving information about the asylum procedure and the available legal assistance. Legal assistance and medical care are also available in the AC. Members of the Dutch Council for Refugees and nurses will also walk around in the waiting area of the AC. In this way it it easy for the asylum seekers to get into contact with them. Members of the Dutch Council for Refugees also attend interviews in order to monitor proceedings. This member may make comments at the end of the interview and write a short report for the lawyer representing the asylum seeker. However, limited capacity means that the Dutch Council for Refugees cannot always send a member to attend the asylum interviews. In practice, especially particularly vulnerable asylum seekers are accompanied to asylum interviews. In the AC there are also leaflets of the IOM. The Dutch Council for Refugees will also refer asylum seekers to the IOM if they want to know more about the possibilities to repatriate.

Regarding asylum seekers who stay in an orientation and integration centre or in a return centre, article 9(6) of the Rva 2005 is applicable. Pursuant to this article an asylum seeker has the opportunity to communicate with family members, legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGO's which are recognized by the Minister. The Dutch Council for Refugees is present in these centres as well.

Q.26.B. What are the rules about access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs regarding access to accommodation centres and other housing facilities (see article 14, §7 which is a mandatory provision)

Article 9 (7) of Rva 2005 provides that legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGOs which are authorized by the Office of UNHCR and recognized by the Minister have access to accommodation centres in order to assist the asylum seekers. They too are under a duty to live up to the house rules of the reception centre (information COA).

According to information provided by the Dutch Council for Refugees, it has an office or a room in the TNV, in the AC's and in each reception centre where they can have office hours. COA and the Dutch Council for Refugees have an official agreement about this (since 2004, but before that time it was also practice). A problem might occur when an asylum seeker is not allowed to stay in the reception centre anymore (in case the application is rejected or as a sanction) and he still wants to make use of the services of the Dutch Council for Refugees. In that case they have to meet outside the centre or COA must give explicit permission for a one-time visit. Other visitors to the reception centre have to report to the COA reception desk to ask permission to enter the centre. Visitors are usually allowed between 8 am and 10 pm.

Q.26.C. Can the access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs be limited for security reasons or any other reason (see article 14, §7, last sentence)?

Yes. According to article 9(8) of Rva 2005 the access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs can be limited for reasons connected with the security of the accommodation centre or the security of the asylum seeker.

Up to now there have been two known cases where the access of members of an organisation has been denied. In one case it was a volunteer of a religious organisation and in another a local politician. In both cases COA found them to obstruct the work of the employees of COA. The first case led to Parliamentary questions (TK 2004-2005, Handelingen p. 1891, nr. 892).

However in the opinion of the Minister it was the right of COA considering the circumstances to forbid entrance. The local politician tried to annul the ban by a court order, but the courts verdict was that COA was right to do so (District Court of Groningen, 17 March 2006, KGZA 06-52).

Q.27. Q.27.A. Is a medical screening organised by the receiving State, is it mandatory or voluntary? Does it include HIV tests? (see article 9 which is an optional provision)

Pursuant to article 9(2) of the Rva 2005, which is a mandatory provision, a first examination of the asylum seeker's state of health will take place as soon as possible after an asylum seeker has been admitted to a reception centre. Upon arrival in the TNV every asylum seeker has to undergo a screening for long tuberculosis. See article 54 (1)(d) Aliens Act in conjunction with article 4.46 Aliens Decree which obliges (mandatory!) the alien who intends to stay in the Netherlands for more than 3 months to cooperate in an examination for tuberculosis. Paragraph B1/4.5 Aliens Circular contains the procedure for this examination. Asylum seekers are not tested for HIV. According to information provided by the IND this is usually performed within a week after arrival. Moreover, each asylum seeker is offered an individual consult with a nurse of the Community Health Services for Asylum Applicants (MOA) within six weeks after arrival. During this consult the nurse will make use of a questionnaire (in 19 different languages) in order to assess the asylum seeker's medical history and present state of health. Children (up to 19), pregnant women, people with handicaps or ailments and the elderly are always referred to a follow up medical examination, others only when they wish to.

Q.27.B. Do the legal provisions on reception conditions ensure that asylum seekers receive at least emergency care and essential treatment of illness as requested by article 15 §1 which is a mandatory provision? Do they have a further access to health care?

Asylum seekers who stay in a reception centre for orientation and integration or in a reception centre for return are covered for medical expenses pursuant to a health insurance which is taken out by COA (article 9(1)(e) of the Rva 2005). Coverage is comparable to that of what until 1 January 2006 was called Ziekenfondswet (Social Health Insurance Act) and the Algemene Wet Bijzondere Ziektekosten (AWBZ) with the exception of IVF-treatment and gender alteration surgery. Access to health care is thus ensured at a nearly equal level provided to nationals covered by these insurances (see also TK 2001-2002, 19 637, nr. 654).).

Since 2005 some basic medical costs have been taken out the basic insurance for nationals and transferred to relatively cheap extra insurances. However for asylum seekers it is because of the law not possible to enter into these insurances. For this reason there is only very limited dental care for adult asylum seekers (only emergency care) and f.i. no insurance for the costs of contraceptives.

Asylum seekers whose asylum claim has been rejected within the accelerated 48 hours procedure and are allowed to await the outcome of the preliminary injunction they have requested are only allowed to emergency care and essential treatment of illness. These asylum seekers do not have an enforceable right to health care, but doctors, general practitioners, pharmacists and specialists have, on the basis of the criminal law and their disciplinary rules and professional ethics, a duty to extend health care to everybody in urgent situations.

There are two provisions to ensure that the costs for health care for illegal migrants do not completely fall on the shoulders of the individual providers. The first provision is for hospitals. They have according to arrangements with health insurance companies a special budget for unpaid bills. Also unpaid bills by illegal migrants can be written of of this budget. The second provision is the so-called Linkage Fund (Koppelingsfonds) for primary health care, like GP's, midwives and pharmacies. This Fund does not pay the bills of the illegal migrants, but compensates the doctors for a loss of earnings. There are several conditions that have to be fulfilled to get an application accepted by the Fund. The health care provider should prove that the person is actually illegal, that the costs for the health care cannot be claimed in any other way, that the provided care was urgent[613], and that the financial burden on the provider was excessive. Because of these conditions and because it is the individual caregiver who decides whether the care is urgent, access to primary health care can in practise be difficult. Access to hospitals can even be more problematic in practice for illegal migrants since in hospitals the medical-ethical and financial considerations are not united in one person. Some doctors report that it becomes more and more complicated for illegal migrants to get access to hospitals. Often they are sent away without having their complaints examined by a doctor (Medisch Contact, 19 May 2006, nr. 20, p. 843).

Q.27.C. What is the practice regarding access of asylum seekers to health care and how is it organised? In particular, what is the situation in accommodation centres (are doctors coming to the centres or do asylum seekers go to doctors outside)?[614]

Every working day, nurses from the Community Health Service for Asylum Seekers (MOA) are present in each reception centre. MOA is responsible for preventive care and coordinates referral to curative care and mental health care. At most centres a general practitioner has surgery hours. Sometimes a general practitioner has office hours for asylum seekers in his own surgery. During the evenings, nights and in the weekends there is a special medical telephone line, connected to the Amsterdam Community Health Service.

[613] Care is in any case urgent: in case – or for prevention - of life threatening situations, or in case – or for prevention - of situations of permanent loss of essential functions; in case there is a danger for a third party, e.g. certain contagious diseases (in particular TB) and for psychological disturbances and consequent aggressive behaviour; in case of pregnancy care; and in case of preventive health care for children.

[614] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

A report (2004) by the independent Medical Aspects of Alien Policy Commission, installed by the Minister of Health, Welfare and Sport and the State Secretary of Justice, showed that the selection of the access to a doctor by a nurse is subject of repeated complaints by asylum seekers. In February 2006, the Dutch Public Health Inspection issued a report on the quality of the medical care of asylum seekers. It concluded that, in general, the quality of the health care for asylum seekers offered at reception centres was adequate. However, the exchange of information between the stakeholders was not deemed sufficient.

The MOA does not work at applications centres. The IND is responsible for the health care for asylum seekers in application centres. For that reason, they make agreements with different health care providers.

In 2005, the Dutch Public Health Inspection visited two application centres. It concluded that the health care for asylum seekers in application centres was insufficient.

Q.28. Q.28.A. What is the length of the period determined by the concerned Member State during which asylum seekers have no access to the labour market? (see article 11 which is a mandatory provision)

According to the Aliens Employment Act (Wet Arbeid Vreemdelingen) (WAV) and its implementing order (Uitvoeringsbesluit, article 2a) and implementing rules (Uitvoeringsregels, article 22) the period during which asylum seekers in the Netherlands are fully excluded from the labour market amounts to 6 months. After these six months an asylum seeker may work for a maximum of 12 weeks per year, if his employer gets a labour permit for this employment. This limited form of access (12 weeks per year) continues as long as the asylum request is pending which may be for many years.

Q.28.B. After that period, are asylum seekers or not obliged to obtain a work permit? In case is there a limit for the administration to deliver the permits and how quick are they delivered? What is their length?

An employer who contracts an asylum seeker will have to get a work permit at the Centrum voor Werk en Inkomen (CWI)(Centre for Work and Income). In order to get such a work permit the asylum seeker has to submit a Declaration issued by the Minister of Justice confirming that the asylum application has been filed more than 6 months ago and that provisions and benefits have been granted according to the Rva 2005, according to the ROA (Regeling Opvang Asielzoekers)(Regulation for the Reception of Asylum Applicants) which was the predecessor of the Rva 2005, or under the responsibility of the Nidos Foundation, which is a guardianship institution for unaccompanied minors. It will take about two weeks to get this declaration. According to the Aliens Employment Act, the application for a work permit has to be decided upon within five weeks (article 6(2)).

Q.28.C. After that period, what are the conditions for access of the asylum seekers to the labour market? (in particular, are there rules concerning the maximum allowed of working hours or days per week, month or year, limits in terms of type of work or of professions authorised?

After these six months an asylum seeker can work for a maximum of 12 weeks every 52 weeks. A report published by Regioplan (an independent commercial research company specialised in social-economic policy research) in March 2004, called Asielzoekers en werk (Asylum Seekers and Work), states that this limitation of 12 weeks per year in practice seriously impedes the possibilities of an asylum seeker to take up work.

Until June 2002 the work during those 12 weeks was restricted to short time seasonal work. Nowadays no more restriction exists as to the nature of the work, but the duration remains limited to 12 weeks. The work for which a work permit is issued must be carried out under market conform conditions.

The Aliens Employment Act is also applicable to voluntary labour done by asylum seekers. Special rules are laid down in the Decision of 21 June 1997 to amend the Royal Decree of 23 August 1995 with respect to voluntary labour done by asylum seekers a.o. (Stb 1997, 405) and in the Enactment of policy rules regarding the Aliens Employment Act (Stcrt.2002, 19, 28 January 2002). Important conditions: labour must be unpaid with no intention to make profit but serving interest of society.

Q.28.D. What are the rules in terms of priorities between asylum seekers on the one hand and nationals, EU or EEE citizens and legally third-country nationals on the other?

Normally an employer when applying for a work permit has to show that he has first actively sought suitable candidates in the Netherlands or in the EEA for at least five weeks. However this does not apply to work to be carried out by asylum seekers. The employer on the other hand has to comply with the current working conditions (e.g. market conform wages).

Q.28.E. Do asylum seekers have access to vocational training, does this or not depend of their right to access to the labour market, and in case at which conditions? (see article 12 which is optional regarding §1 and mandatory regarding § 2)

Asylum seekers have access to all forms of education with the exception of in-service education and modern apprenticeship, because asylum seekers do not have free access to the labour market (see above). This practical, on-the-job training period will be regarded as 'labour', the result being that the same restrictions apply.
Asylum seekers may do a work placement for a maximum of one year, when they follow e.g. regular intermediate vocational education, but this work placement has to be part of the school curriculum. Moreover, a work permit has to be applied for.

Asylum seekers are not entitled to a study grant or a contribution in study costs by the government, but they may apply to be exempted from school fees or for support from the University Assistance Fund (UAF). The UAF is a private foundation (NGO) and has limited resources.

Q.28.F. Are the rules regarding access to the labour market adopted to transpose the directive more or less generous than the ones applicable previously?

The rules regarding access to the labour market have not changed because of the transposition of the Directive.

Q.29. Are reception conditions subject to the fact that asylum seekers do not have sufficient resources? Are asylum seekers requested to contribute to reception conditions when they have personal resources (for instance if they work) or to refund the authorities if it appears that they have resources? (see article 13 §§ 3 and 4 which are optional provisions)

Yes. The Rva 2005 is only applicable to asylum seekers who do not have enough financial means to provide for the necessary costs of livelihood themselves within the meaning of the Law on Social Assistance (Wet Werk en Bijstand) (article 2(1) Rva 2005).

Moreover, if an asylum seeker has sufficient financial resources, savings or revenues, a contribution for reception facilities will be asked for (article 20 of the Rva 2005).

An asylum seeker who has financial means at his disposal that exceed the basic income level ensured by the Law on Social Assistance (Wet Werk en Bijstand) the asylum seeker has to contribute to the costs of reception (article 20 of the Rva 2005).

An asylum seeker who works has to pay a proportion of the wages he earns to COA to contribute to the costs of living. There is a special, very complicated, regulation to calculate the amount of money an asylum seeker has to pay (Regulation on personal contribution by asylum applicants with income or possessions)(Regeling eigen bijdrage asielzoekers met inkomen en vermogen)(Reba). This is yet another reason why legal employment by asylum seekers is difficult and unattractive.

According to article 20(3) of the Rva 2005 COA can also ask for a refund if after the end of the reception conditions it becomes known that an applicant had sufficient means to cover material reception conditions and health care at the moment when the basic needs were covered.

7. SPECIAL NEEDS OF PARTICULAR CATEGORIES OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.30. Q.30.A. Are the different categories of persons with special needs considered taken into account in the national legislation (see article 17, §1 which is a mandatory provision): disabled people, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence?

Article 9 (4) of the Rva 2005 only states in general terms, without distinction between the different categories of persons, that more vulnerable persons with special needs have the right to special support or counselling. According to the explanatory memorandum to the Rva 2005 one has to think of unaccompanied minors and asylum seekers who have serious psychosocial problems. COA has the possibility to transfer the responsibility for the reception of asylum seekers who suffer from serious psychosocial problems to another organisation ('Abri and 'de Vonk').

Q.30.B. How is their specific situation taken into account (see articles 13, §2, second indent and 17 which are mandatory provisions)?

COA has some adapted facilities for disabled people. Medical devices for disabled and elderly asylum seekers are available though COA health care contract for asylum seekers. With regard to pregnant women, in most centres there are separate rooms where a woman can stay in the first period after the birth. Health care for pregnant asylum seekers is available at the same level as for Dutch women who are ensured through a statutory basic health insurance. For single parents no special facilities exist. Specialised health care is available when there is an indication. There is specialised mental and somatic health care for persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence. The Dutch Council for Refugees however indicates that when these people need more private living conditions this can often constitute a problem. According to COA, its employees are trained to deal with traumas asylum seekers face.

In a research carried out in 2002 about the safety of women and girls in receptions centres it turned out that many single women feel unsafe in reception centres because for instance men knock on their doors at night and if they have teenage-girls they feel they are unable to sufficiently protect them from sexual assaults. As a consequence of these results, COA took the following measures:

- reconstruction of centres to prevent insecurity for women;
- training of employees;
- writing of procedures in case insecurity of women is addressed;
- training of women and girls within centres to inform them about their rights and to learn them how to act in situations of insecurity;
- research on women trafficking and the possible use of reception centres in this matter.

Asylum seekers with behavioural and/or serious (mental) health problems are taken care of in special reception facilities run by third parties (article 7(2) of the Wet COA). There are for example special reception facilties for asylum seekers who due to their unacceptable behaviour cannot stay in a normal reception facility (so-called AMOG centres) and for asylum seekers who have mental problems ('Abri' and 'de Vonk').

Also unaccompanied minors are accomodated in special centres.

Q.30.C. How and when are the special needs of the concerned persons supposed to be legally identified (see article 17 § 2 which is a mandatory provision and clarify how it has been interpreted by transposition)?

The special needs are identified by the Community Health Services for Asylum Seekers (MOA) and a doctor at arrival at a reception centre or during office hours in the reception centres.

Q.30.D. Is the necessary medical and other assistance provided to persons with special needs as requested by article 15, §2 which is a mandatory provision and in particular to victims of torture and violence as requested by article 20 which is a mandatory provision?

The MOA or general practitioner can refer asylum seekers to the Riagg, the institute that provides mental health care in the Netherlands. Especially in the big cities these centres are often specialised in migrant or refugee problems. There are also a few medical institutes that are specialised in the treatment of psychiatric problems of asylum seekers / refugees. In the Netherlands there is also a knowledge institute, Pharos in Utrecht, which provides specialist medical knowledge and training for the (mental) health care of asylum seekers / refugees. According to the UNHCR, in practice, psychological aid is often not provided by the specialized organizations during the asylum procedure as it is difficult (and sometimes contra-protective) to treat psychological disorders, including trauma, during this uncertain period.

Q.31. About minors:

Q.31.A. Till which age are asylum seekers considered to be minor?

In the Netherlands asylum seekers are considered to be minors until the age of 18.

Q.31.B. How is access of minor asylum seekers to the education system ensured? Is it at school or in case inside accommodation centres and can it be considered as similar to the conditions for nationals as requested by article 10, §1?

The 1969 Compulsory Education Law (Leerplichtwet) applies to all children on Dutch territory and thus also to minor asylum seekers. All children between the age of 5 and 16 residing in the Netherlands have to be entered into a school by their parents or legal guardian. These children have to attend complete daytime classes. All children aged 16 and 17 have a partial obligation to education. They have to be enrolled in an educational institution but it does not have to be a full-time course. The Compulsory Education Law thus ensures access to schooling for all children of asylum seekers.

The Primary Education Act (Wet op het primair onderwijs), the Centres of Expertise Act (Wet op de expertisecentra), the Secondary Education Act (de Wet op het voortgezet onderwijs), the Vocational Education Act (de Wet Educatie en Beroepsonderwijs, WEB) and the Higher and Scientific Education Act (de Wet op het hoger en wetenschappelijk onderzoek, WHW) all state that access to education is not dependent on the legal right to stay in the Netherlands.

Children of asylum seekers can attend regular primary and secondary schools. In principle the parent(s) or legal guardian of the minor asylum seeker can choose the school of their liking, but only public schools have an obligation to admit children of asylum seekers. In some cases a primary school forms part of a reception centre and offers specialised education.

Q.31.C. Is access to education ensured not later than 3 months as requested by article 10, §2 (or after maximum one year if specific education for asylum seekers is provided)?

In general, asylum seekers have access to education within three months. According to the report 'The child and the asylum policy' (quick scan) carried out by Loes van Willigen (Consultant Health Service Refugees and Human Rights) at the request of the Advisory Committee on Aliens Affairs (ACVZ) in August 2003 it seems that asylum seekers are no longer put on waiting lists before they have access to education. However, when an asylum seeker has been admitted to a reception centre in May or June he will have to wait until the new school year begins (August).

Q.31.D. Is specific education (like language classes) available for asylum seekers, in particular to facilitate their effective access to the education system of the reception Member State (see article 10, §2 which is an optional provision)?

According to the Dutch Council for Refugees this depends on the situation. The municipality together with COA are responsible for organising the education. Sometimes schools provide so-called first-reception education ('eerste opvangonderwijs'), which is aimed at enabling children to participate in the regular educational programs as soon as possible, or have special language classes. For instance, in order to facilitate the effective access to secondary education, so-called international linking classes (internationale schakelklassen)(ISK) provide intensive language education to asylum seekers between 12-18 years of age who do not have sufficient knowledge of the Dutch language. Sometimes special classes are organised at the centre. Municipalities get extra money for the education of asylum seekers' children. However in practice the relatively short existence of many reception centres (five years), or shorter in the case of emergency centres, often gives problems to organise the education well.

Q.31.E. Are minors in general accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them? (see article 14, § 3)

Provided that this will be in the interest of the child, COA has to take care of the fact that the minor child of an asylum seeker or the asylum seeker who is a minor will be accommodated with his or her parent or with an adult family member (article 11(4) of Rva 2005).

Q.31.F. Do minors with special needs enumerated by article 18, §2 which is a mandatory provision, have access to appropriate mental health care and qualified counselling?

Article 9 (4) of the Rva 2005 states that extremely vulnerable persons (including minors) with special needs have the right to special support or counselling.

According to the Dutch Council for Refugees these minors do have in general access to appropriate mental health care and qualified counselling (preventive child health care and curative care when there is an indication) but recent research (2005) carried out by T. Bean for the Institute of War Victims (Centrum '45) showed that their needs are not always effectively dealt with.

Q.31.G. How and when is organised the representation of unaccompanied minors (guardianship, special organisation) and regularly assessed? (see article 19, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

Guardianship of all unaccompanied minors who arrive in the Netherlands is awarded to the guardianship foundation Nidos. This Nidos Foundation is responsible for guarding the interests of the unaccompanied minors and for their upbringing and development. The Nidos Foundation is subsidised by the Ministry of Justice.

Q.31.H. How is placement of unaccompanied minors organised (with adult relatives, a foster family, in special accommodation centres or other suitable accommodation)? (see article 19, §2 which is mandatory provision)

The reception of unaccompanied minors is provided by the Nidos Foundation and by COA.

For unaccompanied minors aged 0-12, Nidos has contracted foster parents. Unaccompanied minors who are not placed with a foster family (> age 12) will be accommodated by COA in children's communal units (Kinderwoongroepen (KWG) of Kinderwooneenheden (KWE)) or in special 'AMA campuses' (Leek, Drachten, Baexem, Oisterwijk and Middelburg). Since the beginning of 2006, as a result of the disappearance of unaccompanied minors from reception facilities, several security measures have been implemented at these AMA campuses, like 24-hour protection and supervision, implementation of keycards and camera surveillance (TK 2005-2006, 27 062, nr. 49, 20 April 2006).

Within the different facilities, the reception conditions of each unaccompanied minor will be either directed at return or at integration, depending on the prospect of the unaccompanied minor and the stage of his or her (asylum) procedure (TK 2005-2006, 27 062, nr. 48, 13 December 2005).

However, in order to make sure that as much as possible homogeneous groups (orientation or return) will be accommodated in the different reception facilities, the new system implies that within a few weeks after the unaccompanied minor has filed an application, COA (in consultation with the IND and the Nidos) will decide on the basis of the perspective of the unaccompanied minor whether he will be sent to a reception facility directed at orientation or to a reception centre directed at return.

Q.31.I. How is the tracing of the family members of the unaccompanied minors organised? Are measures taken to protect confidentiality of information when necessary? (see article 19, §3 which is a mandatory provision)

At the request of a minor (and with the permission of his guardian) the Dutch Red Cross and the international Red Cross investigate whether a minor has parents or other family members. Minors can complete questionnaires providing information about their parents and other family members that they are looking for. The investigation procedure will then be put in progress. Most minors however do not use this procedure. Contact between the minor and his parents could lead to the IND concluding that the minor should be returned to his country of origin and be reunited with his parents. The IND and the Dutch Red Cross do not work together (Dutch Country Report on separated children in Europe, 2001-2003, Defence for Children).

8. EXCEPTIONAL MODALITIES OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.32. Apart from detention covered by the next question, are there exceptional modalities in the following cases and if yes, which ones and for how long are they applicable, knowing that it should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)?

Q.32.A. Persons with specific or special needs, regarding in particular the period of assessment of those needs?

There are exceptional modalities for unaccompanied minors and also for asylum seekers with psychiatric problems. There are three categories for accomodating asylum seekers with psychiatric or behavioural problems:

- Intensive supervised living (Intensief Begeleid Wonen (IBW));
- Psychiatric Intensive Homecare (Psychiatrisch Intensieve Thuiszorg (PIT));
- Asylum seekers with unacceptable behaviour (aielzoekers met onacceptabel gedrag) are accommodated in special AMOG-centres.

Q.32.B. Non availability of reception conditions in certain areas

According to the Dutch Council for Refugees this is not the case.

Q.32.C. Temporarily exhaustion of normal housing capacities

This is not the case anymore. In the past asylum seekers were put in hotels or pensions (AVO – aanvullende opvang asielzoekers), ordinary houses were rented (COW - Centrale Opvangwoningen) or asylum seekers were allowed to live with family or friends (ZZA, Self Care Arrangement).

Q.32.D. The asylum seeker is confined to a border post

An asylum seeker who arrives in the Netherlands through Schiphol Airport (Amsterdam) or one of the seaports and who has been refused entry may be required to stay in a space or place designated by a border control officer (article 6 of the Aliens Act). When he declares that he wants to file an asylum application he will be transferred to the AC Schiphol which is secured against unauthorised departure. There is no legal regulation which says for what period of time such a 'detention measure' may be imposed. This depends on the ground for detention and whether the Minister has already decided on the asylum application.

When it appears to be impossible to reach a decision within 48 hours in AC Schiphol because more investigation is needed (e.g. because the authenticity of documents has to be checked), the detention measure can be prolonged and the asylum seeker will be transferred to a detention centre referred to as 'Border Hospice' ('Grenshospitium'), in the vicinity of Schiphol Airport. In that case the asylum application has to be dealt with speedily. When this will not be the case this can lead to the annulment of the detention measure. According to the Aliens Circular (WBV 2004/32) a period of 6 weeks is 'speedily'. When the Minister wants to continue the detention measure after these 6 weeks this continuance has to be the result of balancing the interest of the asylum seeker in remaining at liberty and the interest of the state to guard the frontiers. This 6 weeks-rule is however only an internal guideline for the IND. It is not a maximum which can be enforced in legal proceedings. According to UNHCR, in many cases the 'research period' (and therefore the detention) is expanded considerably.

When the asylum request has been rejected within the AC-procedure, the detention measure will also be continued in the Border Hospice. In practice this detention measure may last for 6 months or more. The rules relating to the regime applicable to this Border Hospice are laid down in the Border Accomodation Regime Regulations (Reglement Regime Grenslogies) (Bulletin of Acts, Orders and Decrees 1993, nr. 45). The fundamental rule (article 4) is that a resident of the Border Hospice will not be subjected to any other restriction than the one that forbids him to leave the building. Within the Border Hospice the asylum seeker is free to move (except for the night). He is allowed to have visitors and to make telephone calls (article 5 and 7). Furthermore he is entitled to medical and mental care and some pocket money and can take part in recreational activities (article 8).

Q.32.E. All other cases not mentioned in the directive (for instance urgent situation in case of a sudden high number of applicants outside a case of application of the directive on temporary protection).

To our knowledge there are no other exceptional modalities.

Q.33. Detention of asylum seekers (we do not cover the situation of rejected asylum seekers detained for the purpose of their return) (see articles 6 §2, 7 §3, 13, §2 2nd indent and 14 §8 which implies that the directive is in principle applicable in case of detention):

Q.33.A. In which cases or circumstances and for which reasons (identity verification in particular if the persons have no or false documents, protection of public order or national security, refugee status determination, way of entry into the territory, etc) can an asylum seeker be detained during the asylum procedure till his request has been finally rejected. Quote precisely in English in your answer the legal basis for detention of asylum seekers in national law.

See for a recent research report on detention and alternatives to detention: UNHCR, Legal and Protection Policy Research Series, Alternatives to Detention of Asylum Seekers and Refugees by Ophelia Field with the assistance of Alice Edwards, external consultants (April 2006).

1. Aliens refused entry to the Netherlands (see answer Q32D)

Article 6 of the Aliens Act is specifically aimed at those aliens who are refused access to the Netherlands upon arrival by aircraft or boat at the border of the Schengen area (i.e. Schiphol Airport and the sea harbours of Rotterdam and Amsterdam). Such persons are required toleave the Netherlands and may be detained at the border until they can be put back on a plane or boat. When the asylum seeker declares that he wants to file an asylum application he will be transferred to the AC Schiphol which is secured against unauthorised departure.

When it appears to be impossible to reach a decision within 48 hours in AC Schiphol because more investigation is needed (e.g. because the authenticity of documents has to be checked), the detention measure can be prolonged and the asylum seeker will be transferred to a detention centre called Border Hospice ('Grenshospitium'). In that case the asylum application has to be dealt with speedily (see further Q32D).

2. Asylum seekers registered at in-country application centre in Ter Apel

Asylum seekers registered at the AC Ter Apel are instructed, on the basis of Article 55 of the Aliens Act, to remain at the disposal of the IND and, if necessary, available for processing through an accelerated procedure. In practice, this means that their movement is restricted almost continuously for a maximum of five days. They have to leave the AC after 48 processing hours from the moment that the asylum interview starts, but the hours between 6:00 pm and 8:00 am are not counted as processing hours (paragraph C3/12 of the Aliens Circular).

In 2001, the National Ombudsman requested more openness in the AC,as it considered the situation similar to detention, but without adequate legal safeguards. The government was at that time not willing to meet this request. However, the Court of Appeal in The Hague ruled, in a judgment of 31 October 2002, that restrictions on movement during the accelerated procedure at an AC constitute 'detention' in the sense of article 5 of the ECHR, which finds no legal basis in article 55 of the Aliens Act. In afirst reaction to this ruling, the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration announced, in November 2002, that an application can no longer be rejected on the sole ground that an asylum seeker has left the AC during the accelerated procedure. As of March 2004, the Ministry of Justice is working on several general adjustments to the accelerated procedure, but so far the nature and timing of these adjustments remains unknown.

3. Asylum seekers detained during the asylum procedure
If necessary in the interests of public policy or national security, with aview to expulsion, administrative detention on the basis of article 59(1)(b) of the Aliens Act can be used with regard to asylum seekers who are legally resident in theNetherlands pending a decision on their asylum application or on their appeal. According to paragraph A5/5.3.3.6 of the Aliens Circular detention of asylum seekers during their asylum procedure should be limited as far as possible. As an example the Aliens Circular mentions an asylum seeker who lodges a clearly fraudulent asylum application. In this situation a comparative assessment has to be maderegarding the enforcement of the detention in relation to the asylum application.

Q.33.B. Has your member State adopted measures to transpose §3 of article 7 which is an optional provision? If yes, how has this provision been legally understood (is it a case of detention or an obligation to stay in and not leave a certain place?) and for which reasons can an asylum seeker be "confined" in such a place?

Ad 1) Asylum seekers who are refused entry to the Netherlands are required to stay in a space or place designated by a border control officer. When an asylum seeker declares that he wants to file an asylum application he will be transferred to AC Schiphol which is secured against unauthorised departure. When the asylum request has been rejected within the accelerated 48 hours procedure the detention measure can be continued in a detention centre, the Border Hospice, in the vicinity of Schiphol Airport. The asylum seeker has to stay in the detention centre during the appeal and higher appeal (if he appeals at all) until his deportation. If the authorities do not succeed in deporting the rejected asylum seeker, he will eventually be released (this can take more than a year).

Ad 2) Asylum seekers registered at the AC in Ter Apel have to remain at the AC when their availability is necessary for the investigation into the allowability of the application. In practice this means that the asylum seeker has to remain at the AC during working hours from 7:30 am to 6:00 pm (paragraph C3/12.2.5 of the Aliens Circular).

Ad 3) In exceptional cases (e.g. in case of manifest fraud) an asylum seeker can be detained in a detention centre.

Q.33.C. Are there legally alternatives to detention, like obligation to report to the authorities, obligation to stay in a place, provision of a guarantor or of a financial guarantee?

Asylum seekers who stay in a reception centre run by COA, but also asylum seekers who make use of the 'administrative registration', have a duty to report weekly to the Aliens Police (article 54(1)(f) of the Aliens Act juncto article 4.51 of the Aliens Decree) and COA (article 19(e) of the Rva 2005). See answer Q20E.

Q.33.D. Which is the competent authority to order the detention of an asylum seeker? Explain if different authorities are involved to first take and later confirm the decision.

Ad 1) Asylum seekers are refused entry to the Netherlands by border control officers. According to article 3(3) of the Aliens Act these border control officers shall not, save in accordance with a special direction issued by the IND, refuse entry into the Netherlands to an alien indicating that he wishes to have asylum. This special direction is usually issued with regard to asylum seekers.

Ad 2) An asylum seeker has to keep himself available in connection with the screening of his asylum application at a place which is designated by the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration (=AC) and where he has to comply with the directions given to him by the IND.

Ad 3) The IND is the competent authority to order the remand in custody of an asylum seeker on the ground of article 59(1)(b) of the Aliens Act.

Q.33.E. For how long and till which stage of the asylum procedure can an asylum seeker be detained? Is this in line with the requirement of "a reasonable period which shall be as short as possible" set by article 14, §8 of the directive?

Ad 1) Regarding asylum seekers who are referred to AC Schiphol and the Border Hospice: see answer Q 32D.

Ad 2) The so-called AC-procedure lasts for a maximum period of 48 'processing' hours (spread over 4-5 working days). During this period the asylum seeker has to remain available at the AC during working hours from 7:30 am to 6:00 pm (paragraph C3/12.2.5 of the Aliens Circular).

Ad 3) Detention pursuant to article 59(1)(b) of the Aliens Act shall in any event last for no longer than six weeks (article 59(4) of the Aliens Act) with regard to asylum seekers who stay lawfully in the Netherlands. For asylum seekers who do not stay lawfully in the Netherlands, no maximum period of detention applies. However, the interests of detention and of the asylum seekers have to be balanced.

Q.33.F. In which places (can we call them "closed centres"?) are asylum seekers detained (places in a special closed centres reserved only to asylum seekers, together with returnees like illegal aliens or even in a normal prison, in case within separated areas or with the other detainees)? Indicate if a difference has to be made following the location of the "closed centres" at the border or on the territory? Which is the authority managing those places and is it the same as the one in charge of reception conditions?

Ad 1) Asylum seekers who are refused entry to the Netherlands and want to file an asylum application are referred to AC Schiphol. This is a so-called closed centre reserved only to this category of asylum seekers. When the asylum request has been rejected within the accelerated 48 hours procedure the detention measure can be continued in the Border Hospice. The rules relating to the regime applicable to the Border Hospice are laid down in the Border Accomodation Regime Regulations (Reglement Regime Grenslogies) (Bulletin of Acts, Orders and Decrees 1993, nr. 45).

Ad 2) Asylum seekers who report to AC Ter Apel in order to file an asylum application have to stay in this AC. The AC Ter Apel is a 'half-open centre' in that sense that the asylum seeker has to remain available in connection with the screening of this asylum application during working hours (8:00 am – 6:00 pm).

Ad 3) Pursuant to article 5.4 of the Aliens Decree detention on the ground of article 59(1)(b) of the Aliens Act will be executed in a police station (maximum period of 10 days), a house of detention or a place to which the Border Accomodation Regime Regulations are applicable (see ad 1).

This means that asylum seekers are placed in detention centres together with illegal migrants or in normal prisons.

Q.33.G. Does UNHCR and NGOs have access to the places of detention and under which conditions?

The Dutch Council for Refugees has offices both in AC Schiphol and AC Ter Apel and also in the Border Hospice. UNHCR has also access to these places by appointment. This right of access to detention centres for UNHCR is not laid down in any formal document, but in practice UNHCR has not encountered any problems when access was requested.

Q.33.H. What appeal(s) can asylum seekers introduce against the fact he is detained?

The IND will notify the District Court of an order imposing a detention measure pursuant to article 6 or 59 of the Aliens Act no later than 28 days after communication of the order if the person detained has not already appealed against the decision himself (article 94 of the Aliens Act). This notification is viewed as an appeal. The court-session will take place not later than fourteen days after the notification or the appeal has been received, the court will then reach a decision within another seven days. Both the IND and the detained person can appeal against this decision of the court to the Council of State. The detained person can appeal against the prolongation of the detention at any time. This decision of the District Court is not open to appeal at the Council of State.

Q.33.I. Is the directive on reception conditions considered to be in principle applicable to the places where asylum seekers are detained? In particular which information do they receive about their rights, which access do they have to legal advice and health care?

As mentioned before the Rva 2005 is the main norm of transposition of the Reception Conditions Directive. According to article 1(d) of the Rva 2005 the Rva 2005 is not applicable to an asylum seeker who is in detention.

The rules relating to the regime applicable to the Border Hospice are laid down in the Border Accomodation Regime Regulations (Reglement Regime Grenslogies) (Bulletin of Acts, Orders and Decrees 1993, nr. 45). The fundamental rule (article 4) is that a resident of the Border Hospice will not be subjected to any other restriction than the one that forbids him to leave the building. Within the Border Hospice the asylum seeker is free to move (except for the night). He is allowed to have visitors and to make telephone calls (article 5 and 7). Furthermore he is entitled to medical and mental care and some pocket money and can take part in recreational activities (article 8).

According to a report of the Application of Sanctions Inspectorate (Inspectie voor de Sanctietoepassing) on 'Parents and children in aliens detention' (August 2005) asylum seekers who will be placed together with their children in the Border Hospice will not be informed about the circumstances in the Border Hospice beforehand. Once they are placed within the Border Hospice the parents are informed about the (house) rules.

With regard to access to medical care in the Border Hospice: there are doctors available although not all of them are qualified as general practitioners. In cases of infant welfare, parents will be referred to a child-health centre outside the Border Hospice. Dental treatment also takes place outside the Border Hospice. Finally, there is a psychologist available.

Asylum seekers staying in the Border Hospice will be assisted in their procedure by members of the Dutch Council for Refugees which has offices in the Border Hospice.. They also have access to lawyers by appointment.

Asylum seekers who are placed in police stations or houses of detention are entitled to the same rights as Dutch nationals placed in these facilities. According to the Penitentiary Principles Act (Penitentiaire beginselenwet) and the Management of Regional Police Forces Decree (Besluit beheer regionale politiekorpsen) they are entitled to (emergency) medical care, food, clothing etc.

Q.33.J. Apart from freedom of movement, what are the main differences between normal reception conditions and reception conditions in case of detention? If it is about closed centres, are the regulations of those places in line with the requirements of the directive (is article 13, §2, second indent of the directive following which "Member States shall ensure that standards of living is met (…) in relation to the situation of persons who are in detention" respected)?

Reception facilities in case of detention are in general more basic than normal reception centres. This can manifest itself for instance with regard to housing, education and recreational activities. Asylum seekers who have special needs (e.g. minors) will not always be offered the appropriate facilities. Upon arrival of asylum seekers with children in the Border

Hospice no information is available with regard to composition, country of origin, (legal) status, health or expected length of stay of the family.

Q.33.K. Are measures taken to avoid detention of asylum seekers with special needs (if yes, which ones?) or are special measures taken because of their needs?

According to chapter A6/1.5 Aliens Circular detention, in particular detention of minors below the age of 16, should be restricted as far as possible. Before the authorities proceed to the measure of detention, they must consider whether a notification to stay at a place known to the authorities (with family, acquaintances or other private persons) will be a suitable measure. Minors below the age of 12 cannot be detained on the basis of the Aliens Act in a police station or house of detention, unless their parents (who are also detained) insist on having their children with them.

In a judgment of 24 February 2003 the Council of State stated that pursuant to article 37 of the International Convention on the Rights of the Child and article 9 of the Youth Custodial Institutions (Framework) Act (Beginselenwet justitiële jeugdinrichtingen)(Bjj), detention of (unaccompanied) minors has to be executed as far as possible in a special detention centre for young people (separated from adults)(NAV 2003/128). According to UNHCR it is however not uncommon that children are detained in the Border Hospice either to await the outcome of an age assessment or with their family members. According to the report of the Application of Sanctions Inspectorate of August 2005 (see also answer Q33M) the Border Hospice is not truly suitable for children.

According to the report of Human Rights Watch "The Netherlands, fleeting refuge: The triumph of efficiency over protection in Dutch asylum policy (2003)" the AC procedure (especially the one carried out in AC Schiphol) is by its nature unlikely to ensure that unaccompanied children's special characteristics and needs are taken into account.

Q.33.L. Can minor asylum seekers be detained together with relatives? Can unaccompanied minor asylum seekers be detained? If yes, are there special measures which take into account that children are concerned?

Minor asylum seekers can be detained together with relatives in the Border Hospice.

Unaccompanied minors are detained in practice, for example when they enter the Netherlands through Schiphol Airport or a seaport and are refused entry. A detention measure pursuant to article 6 of the Aliens Act will be imposed. According to a judgment by the Council of State of 24 February 2003 (see answer Q 33K) unaccompanied minors have to be detained – as far as possible – in special detention centres for young people or in detention centres to which the Youth Custodial Institutions (Framework) Act (Bjj) is applicable. See also: chapter A6/1.5 Aliens Circular which mentions that unaccompanied minors between 12 and 16 years of age can only be detained on the basis of the Aliens Act if the detention can be executed in a youth custodial institution within 4 days.

Unaccompanied minors of whom the IND has no doubts about their stated age have to be regarded as minors and cannot be detained in the Border Hospice (C5/24.4.2 of the Aliens Circular). In a judgment of 5 March 2004 (NAV 2004/130) the Council of State stated that the IND can treat unaccompanied minors of whom the IND has serious doubts about the stated minority (e.g. in case of false documents, diverse statements about identity and age) as being of age. In that case they can be detained in the Border Hospice pending an age assessment.

In the Border Accomodation Regime Regulations which is applicable to asylum seekers staying in the Border Hospice no rules specifically directed at minors are laid down: the Regulations only cover 'aliens in general'.

Q.33.M. In particular is article 10 regarding access to education of minors respected in those places?

According to the report of the Application of Sanctions Inspectorate (August 2005) in the Border Hospice education to children will only be provided during a few hours a week. The nature of the education is very basic / elementary. The question arises whether this is in accordance with a.o. the 1969 Compulsory Education Law (Leerplichtwet) which applies to all children on Dutch territory (also to those who are refused entry). According to this Law all children between the age of 5 and 16 residing in the Netherlands have to be entered into a school by their parents or legal guardian. These children have to attend complete daytime classes. All children aged 16 and 17 have a partial obligation to education.

Q.33.N. How many asylum seekers are for the moment detained in your Member State? Which proportion does this represent in comparison of the total number of asylum seekers at the same moment?

No itemized figures available.

9. ORGANISATION OF THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.34. Explain if the system of providing reception conditions is centralised or decentralised (which levels of government do provide practically reception conditions?) (do not confuse this question with question number 4 about the competence to make rules about reception conditions).

Since 1992 the Netherlands have a centralised reception system. According to the Wet COA the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration is responsible for the reception of asylum seekers in central reception centres run by COA.

Q.35. In case, are accommodation centres public or/and private (managed by NGOs? If yes, are the NGOs financially supported by the State?)[615]

Accomodation centres in the Netherlands are public (run by COA). NGOs do not manage reception centres. However, NGOs can provide emergency reception for rejected asylum seekers.

Q.36. In case, how many accommodation centres are there in your Member State (distinguish in your answer between public and private centres)?[616]

There is one TNV in Ter Apel (and one temporary TNV in Bellingwolde, situated at a distance of 45 kilometers from Ter Apel). There are two ACs: one in Ter Apel and one at Schiphol Airport. According to information provided by COA, at 1 June 2006 there were about 60 (public) reception centres.

As mentioned in the answer to Q31H, unaccompanied minors are sometimes housed in foster homes, in children's communal units (Kinderwoongroepen (KWG) of Kinderwooneenheden (KWE)) or in one of the special 'AMA campuses' (Leek, Drachten, Baexem, Oisterwijk and Middelburg), and sometimes in COA's central reception centres. In 2004, 1,287 unaccompanied minors were staying at foster families. Nidos used 296 houses as small-scale children's communal units, capable of housing 1,529 children. COA housed 525 unaccompanied minors in the 5 reception centres for return.

Q.37. Is there in the legislation a plan or are there rules in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory of your Member State to avoid their concentration in some areas like big cities or to share the costs of their reception between central, regional and local authorities?

There is no specific legislation about the spreading of asylum seekers. The procedure is as follows: the Ministry of Justice distributes financial means to COA. COA decides the amount of places that have to be made available, based on numbers of intake of asylum seekers. Locations are offered by local authorities or COA looks for areas itself. After that negotiations with local authorities start. In practice, more asylum seekers live in the northern part of the country, because it proved to be easier to establish reception centres in less populated areas (Dutch Council for Refugees).

[615] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[616] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Q.38. Does a central body representing all the actors (like NGOs) involved in reception conditions exist? Does it play a consultative role for the State authorities, a coordination role for the actors or any other role?[617]

There is no central body representing all the actors involved in reception conditions. Occasionally, there are bilateral meetings between the Dutch Council for Refugees and COA on different levels (management, regional, policy).

Q.39. Q.39.A. Which is the body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions as requested by article 23 which is mandatory provision? Include in your answer which is the competent ministry (Interior, Social affairs, etc) for reception conditions?

According to the Wet COA, the board of COA has to provide the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration with all the necessary information regarding the system of reception conditions (article 14) and with a report containing all the relevant activities of COA in the previous year (article 15). The Minister will send this report to both chambers of parliament. COA also has to submit an estimate and to supply the Minister with a financial report (article 16-19) both of which have to be approved by the Minister.

But apart from this kind of (financial) control, the only part of the reception system which is regularly monitored is the health care for asylum seekers by the National Health Inspection (Inspectie voor de Gezondheidszorg). With regard to the quality of reception conditions there is no control or monitoring. About the reception of unaccompanied minors the National Youth Inspection has done some reports in the last years. The most recent one in May 2006. These reports are public.

Q.39.B. Has your Member State (like the Czech Republic did recently) approved quality standards (not necessary legally binding) for housing services (for instance about the number of persons per bedroom on the basis of its size, number of accessible toilets, bathrooms, showers and washing machines per number of persons, existence of common rooms with radio, television, newspapers, books, computers, accessibility of telephone, existence of recreative rooms for children,…) to be respected in particular in accommodation centres?[618]

As mentioned above (Q24A), COA laid down prescribed dimensions for the different housing facilties (TNV, reception centres) in a so-called Program of Demands (Programma van Eisen)(PvE) which is of a highly technical nature and contains technical minimum standards for the construction or renovation of reception centres, based on building and fire preventing regulations. This PvE drawn up by COA is not applicable to the application centres run by the IND. For example bedrooms will be for a maximum of four individuals, measuring at least 5m²; for each eight inhabitants there will be at least one toilet and 3,25m² of bathroom space (including a washer and dryer) and for each eight inhabitants there has to be 5,72m² of kitchen space. According to the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration, these standards meet the minimum standards for the reception of asylum seekers as laid down in the Directive (TK 2004-2005, 19 637, nr. 913, 30 March 2005). The Dutch Council for Refugees expresses its concern that this Program of Demands does not mention anything about common rooms and access to computers and telephone. The Dutch Council for Refugees refers to the fact that in many reception centres there is no quite place for children to do their homework or a recreation room with activities for children.

[617] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[618] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Q.39.C. How is this system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions organised?[619]

See answer under Q39A.

Q.39.D. Does the body in charge of guidance, control and monitoring produce reports about the level of reception conditions? If yes, how frequently and are they public?[620]

No, apart from the reports by the National Health Inspection no reports on the level of reception conditions are produced. The general reports of the National Health Inspection are public, but the reports drawn up in individual cases (e.g. in case of the death of an asylum seeker or illness) are not public. About the reception of unaccompanied minors the National Youth Inspection has done some reports in the last years. The most recent one in May 2006. These reports are public.

Q.40. Q.40.A. What is the total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions for the last year for which figures are available (see article 22 obliging Member States to calculate those statistics about which we also asked the Commission to require them from Member States for mid June)?

On 1 December 2006, 23,492 people stayed in the central reception facilities run by COA, a 18,2 % drop from 1 January 2006. Of these 23,492 people, 2,282 people held a residence permit. The majority of the total number of 23,492 is male (13,196)(www.coa.nl).

Q.40.B. What is the total budget of reception conditions in euro for the last year for which figures are available?[621]

[619] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[620] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

COA's total costs for 2007 are estimated at € 290,7 million (Minister of Justice: Determination of the budget of the Ministry for Justice (VI) for the year 2007: Explanatory Memorandum, part B, chapter 11. TK 2006-2007, 30 800 VI). This includes amongst others the costs for COA's products and services and the costs for benefits provided to asylum seekers.

Q.40.C. What is the average cost of reception conditions in euro per asylum seeker for the last year for which figures are available?[622]
Average cost of an occupied central reception place for 2007 is estimated at € 17 270 (Minister of Justice: Determination of the budget of the Ministry for Justice (VI) for the year 2007: Explanatory Memorandum, part B, chapter 3, paragraph 15 (aliens). TK 2006-2007, 30 800 VI.

Q.40.D. Are the costs of reception conditions of asylum seekers supported by the central/federal or federated government or are they shared with regional and/or local authorities?

The budget of COA is mainly provided through a yearly subsidy by the Minister of Justice which is based on output financing.

Q.40.E. Is article 24 § 2 of the directive following which "Member States shall allocate the necessary resources in connection with the nationals provisions enacted to implement this directive" respected?[623]

Yes.

Q.41. Q.41.A. What is the total number of persons working for reception conditions? [624]

The total number of people employed by COA is 1,950 persons which count for 1,733 fte (date: 15 June 2006).

The total number of people working for the Dutch Council for Refugees in reception centres is an estimated 70 people (date: 15 June 2006).

There are no itemized figures available as to the number of people working for the IND.

The total number of people working for the MOA in reception centres is an estimated 400 people (date: 1 May 2007).

---

[621] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[622] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[623] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[624] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Q.41.B. How is the training of persons working in accommodation centres organised? Does it take into account specific needs of unaccompanied minors when relevant as well as the gender dimension? (see article 14 §5, 19 § 4 and also 24 §1 which are mandatory provisions)?[625]

Employees of COA receive training relevant for their work (e.g. to guide unaccompanied minors, to deal with violence and agression, etc.). According to COA's Annual Report 2004, as a result of the Investigation toward the Safety of Women and Girls in the Reception Centres initiated by the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration in response to a motion in parliament (TK 2003-2004, 19 637, nr. 779), the COA decided to improve the safety of women and girls in reception centres amongst others by the training of assistants in the detection of danger to women and girls.

The Dutch Council for Refugees has an extended training programme about among other things the asylum procedure, family reunification, information on countries of origin, pointing out sociological and psychological problems, cultural and diversity aspects.

Q.41.C. Are there rules about the deontology of persons working in accommodation centres, in particular on confidentiality?[626]

COA employs a Code of Conduct (Gedragscode). The Dutch Council for Refugees asks all her volunteers and employees to sign a confidentiality statement.

[625] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[626] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

10. IMPACT OF THE DIRECTIVE

Legal impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.42. Specify if there are or not big problems with the translation of the directive in the official language of your Member State and give in case a list of the worst examples of provisions which have been badly translated? (please note that this question has in particular been added to the questionnaire concerning the new Member States)

After comparing the Dutch and the English language version of the irective we have not come across any noteworthy problems with the tralation of the Directive into the Dutch language. There is however an inaccuracy regarding the transposition of article 10 (2) of the Directive.The English text of the Directive states: 'Access to the education system shall not be postponed for more than three months from the date the application for asylum was lodged (..).' The official Dutch translation is: 'Minderjarigen moeten uiterlijk drie maanden, te rekenen vanaf de datumwaarop zij of hun ouders een asielverzoek hebben ingediend, toegang krijgen tot het onderwijsstelsel.' Between the words 'uiterlijk' and 'drie maanden' the word 'na' (='after') should have been added.

Q.43. Where there precise legal rules on reception conditions for asylum seekers before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the directive (if yes, specify what the nature of those rules was (legislation, regulation, administrative instructions,…)?

Yes. Before the adoption of the Rva 2005, the Rva 1997 was in force. This regulation regarding the provisions for asylum seekers, like the Rva 2005, was a regulatory measure issued by the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration pursuant to article 12 of the Wet COA.

Q.44. Did the legal rules applicable to reception conditions become more clear, precise, coherent or detailed with the adoption of the transposition norms (for instance do you now have after the transposition one basic text dealing with reception conditions instead of numerous different texts in the past?

Whether the legal rules in the Rva 2005 in comparison with the legal rules laid down in the Rva 1997 became more clear, precise, coherent or detailed is difficult to say. The Rva 2005 is to a large extent a revised version of the Rva 1997. Through the years the Rva 1997 has been revised several times, because of national reception developments (coming into force of the Aliens Act 2000 and a new return policy, policy regarding unaccompanied minors, etc.). After a while these amendments became so extensive that there was a need for a complete revision. In the explanatory memorandum to the Rva 2005, the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration states that at some points the Rva is adjusted because of the transposition of Directive 2003/9/EC. In our opinion the Directive was actually an important reason for revision of the Rva 1997. In order to comply with the minimum norms laid down in the Directive, the Minister for Alien Affairs and Integration saw the need for a revision of the Rva 1997 in order to avoid far-reaching changes of the Rva after the implementation of this Directive.

Q.45. Did the transposition of the directive imply important changes in national law or were the changes of minor importance? In case, list the most important changes that have been introduced.

In comparison with the Rva 1997, there have been a few changes in the Rva 2005:

Directive 2003/9/EC	Rva 1997	Rva 2005
Article 5 (information)	no provisions relating to 'information'	Art. 2(3) and (4): COA should inform asylum seekers within at least 10 days after they have been placed in a reception facility
Article 8 (families)	no provisions concerning family unity	Art. 11(3): COA maintains with the agreement of the asylum seeker the family unity and endeavours to protect family life as much as possible
Article 14(2) and (7) (modalities for material reception conditions)	no provisions relating to 'communication'	Art. 9(6) and (7): possibility of communicating with relatives, legal advisers and representatives of UNHCR and NGOs

Another important change that occurred because of the transposition of the Directive is the eventual raising (in phases) of the weekly financial allowance and in particular the food allowance which was considered to be in breach of the criterion mentioned in article 13(2) of the Directive, namely that material reception conditions have to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their existence (see answer Q12B).

Moreover, as a result of the Directive, the Dutch government decided in October 2002 that so-called Dublin claimants (asylum seekers about whom the Netherlands have made a 'Dublin claim' on a fellow Member State) were entitled again to reception facilities. Until October 2002 this category of asylum seekers was refused accommodation in reception centres because of capacity problems. Because according to the Directive the applicability of the Dublin procedure was no ground for a state to withhold reception conditions from an asylum seeker, the exclusion of this category was ended.

Political impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.46. Explain briefly if there has been an important debate about the transposition of the directive (in particular in the Parliament, but possibly also in the government, between political parties, including in medias, etc; underline in case the main points which have been discussed or have created difficulties)

About the transposition of the directive in its entirety there has neither been an important debate in the parliament, the government nor in the media. However, there has been debate in parliament (initiated by a.o. the Dutch Council for Refugees) about the level of the weekly financial allowance and in particular the food allowance which was not enough to provide for a responsible diet and therefore contrary to the criterion mentioned in article 13(2) of the Directive. This induced the Minister to re-examine the level of the allowances. As a consequence she decided in first instance to raise the level of the food allowance to the NIBUD standard with regard to all age-groups (including unaccompanied minors) in phases within a period of 4 years. In january 2007 however, she raised the level of the food allowance to the NIBUD standard at once. There has also been debate in parliament about the fact that providing no reception conditions to Dublin claimants was in breach of the Directive. As a consequence reception conditions are now provided to both categories of asylum seekers (under certain circumstances).

Q.47. Did the transposition of the directive contribute to make the internal rules stricter or more generous? In particular, did your Member State use the occasion of the transposition to abolish more favourable provisions of national law? Does your Member State still have rules more favourable than the provisions of the directive (if yes, try to give the more important examples).

The transposition of the Directive contributed to make the existing rules laid down in Rva 1997 a bit more generous (see answer Q45). To our knowledge the transposition of the Directive is not used to abolish more favourable provisions of national law.

11. ANY OTHER INTERESTING ELEMENT

Q.48. What are in your view the weaknesses and strengths of the system of reception conditions in your Member State?[627]

A weakness of the Dutch system of reception conditions is that asylum seekers whose asylum application has been rejected at an application center, are not entitled to reception conditions. They are only entitled to reception conditions once their request for an interim measure has been granted. In the time between, and if their request for an interim measure has not been granted, they have to fend for themselves and have the same position as illegal migrants. Although asylum seekers whose application has been rejected at an application centre do no longer stay lawfully in the Netherlands according to the Aliens Act 2000 (article 8), they are, generally, allowed to await the outcome of the procedure about their request for an interim measure in the Netherlands, according to the Aliens Circular 2000 (paragraph C4/17.3.2). The question is therefore whether these asylum seekers are 'allowed to remain on the territory as asylum seekers' within the meaning of article 3 of the Directive.

Another weakness of the system is that the main norm of transposition of the directive, the Rva 2005, is not applicable to asylum seekers staying in application centres. There are in fact no legal norms with regard to the reception of asylum seekers during this stage of the asylum procedure. Asylum seekers staying at application centres stay lawfully in the Netherlands according to article 8 of the Aliens Act 2000 and they have officially submitted their asylum application. Accordingly, they fall under the scope of Directive 2003/9/EC. The absence of legal norms with regard to the reception of asylum seekers in application centres means an inadequate implementation of the Directive.

There are no legal norms with regard to the reception of asylum seekers in the emergency temporary reception (TNV) either. According to article 3 of Directive 2003/9/EC 'this Directive shall apply to all third country nationals and stateless persons who make an application for asylum at the border or in the territory of a Member State as long as they are allowed to remain on the territory as asylum seekers...'. Article 2(b) defines 'application for asylum' as the application made by a third-country national or a stateless person which can be understood as a request for international protection from a Member State, under the Geneva Convention. Pursuant to article 2(c) an 'applicant' or 'asylum seeker' shall mean a third country national or a stateless person who has made an application for asylum in respect of which a final decision has not yet been taken. If these provisions mean that as soon as an asylum seeker makes known to a police officer or an immigration officer that he wants to file an asylum claim he will be covered by the provisions of Directive 2003/9/EC, the reception conditions offered in a TNV will fall under the scope of the Directive. In that case, the absence of legal norms for the reception of asylum seekers during this stage, means an inadequate implementation of the Directive.

[627] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

In addition, a weakness of the system is the long duration of housing in reception centres as a result of the long asylum procedure and the high number of transfers from one reception centre to another as a result of the closure of centres.

The Dutch Council for Refugees points out that one of the strengths of the Dutch reception system is that every asylum seeker who is entitled to reception facilities gets a place to stay. The weakness of the system is that asylum seekers are not empowered to take care of themselves. They hardly have the possibility to work or to follow education. Asylum seekers have little privacy and have to stay in facilities that are meant for a short stay far too long. The lack of privacy (also within families), the lack of money, having to move frequently and to live very close to people who are tense, depressed and sometimes aggressive is especially harmful for children.
Furthermore, the reception centres are in general located outside residential areas in order to hinder the asylum seeker as much as possible in establishing contacts with the Dutch municipality which is in accordance with the objectives of the return policy. This segregation does not contribute to good living conditions.

Another strength is the fact that in the Netherlands the Directive is applied in connection with procedures for deciding on applications for kinds of protection other than that emanating from the Geneva Convention (see the 'may' provision of article 3(4) of the Directive). For more details see answer Q 13A and B.

Other favourable elements within reception centres run by COA include introductory activities and activities aimed at stimulating social orientation and social and cultural activities in the field of sports, play and spare time.

Q.49. Mention any good practice in your Member State which could be promoted in other Member States[628]

NGO's are closely involved in the reception of asylum seekers in any form of reception facility. The Dutch Council for Refugees for example has its seat in the TNV in Ter Apel, in the two AC's and in the reception centres run by COA.

A further example of good practice is given by the Dutch Council for Refugees. It mentions the existing of the MOA as a health care facility which makes the health care better accessible for asylum seekers in combination with Pharos (knowledge centre) which contributes to the specialist knowledge of refugee health care.

[628] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Q.50. Please add here any other interesting element about reception conditions in your Member State which you did not had the occasion to mention in your previous answers.

An interesting element of the Dutch system of reception conditions is that there is a difference between reception centres aimed at orientation and integration and reception centres aimed at return. This system has both weaknesses and strengts. On the one hand, a weakness is that refusing to participate in the compulsory programme aimed at voluntary return in return centres can be ground for the reduction of reception conditions. This ground is not mentioned as a possible ground for reduction of reception conditions in article 16 of the Directive. In addition, the obligations of COA employees, whose main task is the provision of reception conditions to asylum seekers, to engage in systematic conversations with asylum seekers about their return, may create ambivalence about their role and influence their behaviour towards asylum seekers living in reception centres. On the other hand, a strength of this system is that asylum seekers are motivated to think about and work on their future. COA employees (referred to as 'case managers') support them throughout the asylum procedure while confronting them with the reality of their supposed return. This happens right from the moment they arrive at an orientation and integration centre and continues when transferred to a return centre.

Another interesting element is the following. As mentioned before, the rejected asylum seeker can lodge an appeal against a negative asylum decision. Reasons lodged by the asylum seeker to avoid the withdrawal of the reception facilities, which reasons do not relate directly to the legalgrounds on which the residence permit was asked, are not assessed in an asylum procedure. As a consequence a major part of e.g. serious medical and psychological problems are not assessed in an asylum procedure. They are therefore not to be considered legal reasons forwhich reception facilities of an asylum seeker should not be ended (Council of State 28 March 2007, JV 2007/187 annotated by Larsson). Though the reception is not ended by a separate individual decision, (onlyrecently) it is possible to file a separate application for reception after the negative decision on an asylum application, but (again) not against the ending of reception itself.

[1] J.L. - Journal of Laws [Dziennik Ustaw].
[1] The Act has been amended on 24 May 2007. The amendment entered into force on 20 July 2007. The amendment does not refers to the receptions conditions but it changes the name of of the Office for Repatriation and Aliens. Now there is the Office for Foreigners which is managed by the Head of the Office.
[1] Druk Sejmowy nr 1988 (the Seym document no. 1988)

[1] Please specify if article 18 §1 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Member States shall not hold a person in detention for the sole reason that he/she is an applicant for asylum" is or not respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed).

QUESTIONNAIRE FOR THE NATIONAL REPORT ON THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE DIRECTIVE :
RECEPTION CONDITIONS OF 27 JANUARY 2003

IN: POLAND
By

Barbara Mikołajczyk
Professor, University of Silesia mikolaj@us.edu.pl
5.11. 2007

1. NORMS OF TRANSPOSITION

Q.1. Identify the main norm of transposition (indicate the title, date, number, date of entry into force and references of publication into the official journal) and indicate its legal nature (legislative, regulatory, administrative); indicate in your answer if this norm was only devoted to the directive or if it has been included in a more general text and indicate in that case by quoting precisely the numbers of the provisions adopted to transpose the directive.

The Act of 13 June 2003 on granting protection to aliens within the territory of the Republic of Poland [further called Act on Protection] (Consolidated text: J.L.[629] of 2006, No 234, item 1695) is the main act which transposes the Directive 2003/9/EC. It is clearly stated in the amendment to this Act adopted by the Parliament on 22 April 2005 (J. L. of 2005, No 94, item 788). This is the main norm of transposition. The Act of 22 April 2005 has amended not only the Act on granting protection to aliens within the territory of the Republic of Poland but also the Act on Aliens of 13 June 2003[630] (consolidated text: J. L. 2006 No 234, item 1695 with subsequent modifications) and other acts. It transposes provisions of the following Directives: 2003/86/EC, 2003/109/EC, 2003/110/EC, 2004/81/EC, 2003/9/EC, 2001/55/EC.

[629] J.L. - Journal of Laws [Dziennik Ustaw].
[630] The Act has been amended on 24 May 2007. The amendment entered into force on 20 July 2007. The amendment does not refers to the receptions conditions but it changes the name of of the Office for Repatriation and Aliens. Now there is the Office for Foreigners which is managed by the Head of the Office.

All the transposed directives are itemized at the beginning of the Act (in the footnote), not within the concrete provisions.

Part II of the Act on protection refers to the matters regulated in the Directive.

The new amendment of the Act has been prepared by the government (draft of 14 March 2007) but it does contain any significant changes in the field of the reception conditions for asylum seekers. This amendment was sent to the parliamentary commission[631] in July 2007 but the lower chamber of the Parliament – Seym - has not adopted this draft before the dissolution of the Polish Parliament in September 2007. According to the principle of discontinuation of the legislative procedure in case of dissolution of the Parliament the new draft should be submitted to the Parliament by the new government. However the Draft of 14 March 2007 is not controversial and it transposes the qualification directive so it is very likely that the new draft which will be submitted to the new Seym will be very similar. That is why it is still worth analysing.

Q.2. List by order of importance by using numbers (1, 2, 3) the others norms of transposition if there are more than one (indicate for each norm the title, date, number and references of publication into the official journal; include in your answer the administrative measures taken to ensure implementation of the directive and of the transposition norms like regulations, administrative circulars, special instructions,…)

Apart from the amended Act of 13 June 2003 on granting protection to aliens within the territory of the Republic of Poland the other norms should be taken into consideration in relation to the reception conditions.

1. The Act of 20 April 2004 on promotion of employment and institutions of labour market [ustawa o promocji zatrudnienia i instytucjach rynku pracy] (J. L. No 99, it. 1001, No 273, it. 2073 and of 2005 No 64, it. 565)
2. The Act of 1991 on the education system [ustawa o systemie oświaty] Journal of Laws 2004, No 256, item 2572 with subsequent amendments (relevant provision is Article 94a sec. 2 p. 10)
3. According to the Regulation of the Minister of Interior and Administration of 14 August 2003 amended by the Regulation of 8 August 2005 (J. L. 2003, no. 146 item 1428 and 2005, no. 157 no. 1322) on the rules according granting performances for applicants for refugee status. (The Directive is not mentioned in this Regulation because its mentioned in the Act on Protection but in fact the Regulation contains the details of the reception conditions and it should be taken into account in the assessment of the fulfilment of the Directive).
4. The Regulation of the Minister of Interior and Administration of 18 August 2003 on the accommodation conditions of unaccompanied minors in centres for applicants for refugee status. *[Rozporządzenie Ministra Spraw Wewnętrznych i Administracji w sprawie warunków zakwaterowania małoletnich bez opieki oraz standardu opieki w ośrodku dla cudzoziemców ubiegających się o nadanie statusu uchodźcy](J. L. 2003, no. 151 item 1473)
5. Code of the Administrative Procedure of 14 June 1960.(Kodeks postepowania administracyjnego) (consolidated text: J.L.2000, no. 98, item 1071)
6. The draft of 14 March 2007 of the Amendment of the Act of 13 June 2003 on granting protection to aliens within the territory of the Republic of Poland. I will enter into force on the 1st of September 2007.

[631] Druk Sejmowy nr 1988 (the Seym document no. 1988)

Q.3. Explain which level of government is competent to adopt the legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers (specify in particular in case of a federal or regional State, if it is the federal/central power or the components; in case, specify below when it is impossible for you to answer a question because it is about the competence of the components and it is impossible for you to gather reliable information about all of them)

Acts (statutes) – ustawy – such as the Act of 13 June 2003 on granting protection to aliens within the territory of the Republic of Poland, are passed by the Parliament (according to Article 120 of the Constitution of the Republic of Poland of 2 April 1997) . However, the executive regulations – rozporządzenia – regulating the situation of aliens, including asylum seekers, in Poland are issued by the Minister of Interior and Administration. The main rules of the reception conditions of asylum seekers are contained in the Act of 2003 but the details are regulated by the Minister's regulations. Regulations are issued on the basis of a concrete provision of an act (statute). There are also regulations issued by other ministers, for example referring to taking up the work or details of admission of foreign children to schools.

Q.4. Explain the legal technical choices done to transpose the directive (comment on the nature and level of the norms used to do the transposition: legislative, regulatory, administrative like instructions, etc). Add any other element about the technique of transposition of the directive which is interesting for the implementation of Community law.

In all cases directives can be transposed by an act (statute), which means by the Parliament. The statutory norm is the only way to transpose a directive. The details are usually regulated in relevant regulations but they are always issued on the ground of a given provision of the act .

Q.5. Mention if there is a general tendency to just copy the provisions of the directive into national legislation without redrafting or adaptation them to national circumstances? If yes, give some of the worst examples and explain if there is a risk that those provisions remain unapplied or will create difficulties of implementation in the future.

Nowadays it is still too early to identify such a general tendency. However, it may be noted that some provisions are a copy of the Directive's provisions, for example Article 30a (right to work) of the Act on Protection is very similar to the Article 11 sec. 2 of the Directive.

Q.6. Have all the texts necessary to ensure the effective implementation of the new rules of transposition been adopted, prepared or at least foreseen in the future (for example a regulation completing a new law and the necessary instructions telling the administration how to apply the new rules)?

It may be stated that the main aims of the Directive are implemented. The issue of the access to employment was the last one which was to be regulated. However, there are no rules regarding vocational training of asylum seekers in the Polish law. But according to Article 12 of the Directive it is not obligatory and the Member States may allow asylum seekers to participate in any vocational training. The Polish law gives instruments to fulfil the obligations arising from the Directive but it must be stressed that sometimes the practical implementation of the aims of the Directive and the Polish legal acts is difficult.

2. BIBLIOGRAPHY

Q.7. Has an in-depth preparatory study been made public about the changes at the occasion of the transposition? If yes, thanks for trying to provide us a copy (please contact to answer this question adequately the body and person who was responsible for the preparation of the transposition of the directive in the public administration).

On 30 September 2004 the grounds of the draft of amendment of the Act on aliens, the Act on protection and other acts were submitted by the Prime Minister to the Parliament. The draft also referred to the transposition of the Directive 2003/9. The submission of the draft caused the work of the Parliament on the amendment to the aliens law. This and other documents on the issue were published and are accessible at the Sejm website.

Uzasadnienie do projektu ustawy z 13.06.2003 o cudzoziemcach – Druk Sejmowy no. 3333. http://ks.sejm.gov.pl/proc.4/ustawy/3333_u.htm.

The draft 14 March 2007 is also completed by the explanatory report. It is published at the Seym web site:

http://orka.sejm.gov.pl/Druki5ka.nsf/0/EA2D1D807020BBE6C125731D003706F4/$file/1988-uzas.doc

Q.8. Quote any recent scientific book or article published about the directive, the transposition rules or the question of reception conditions for asylum seekers in general (answer even if this literature is only available in your language and provide the complete title in your language (without translation) with all references; indicate author, title, in case name of periodical, year and place of publication).

There are not any strict scientific books or articles dedicated exclusively to the transposition of the Directive. The main discussion in this field took place before Poland's accession to the EU. For example, various aspects of the reception were discussed in:

B.Mikołajczyk: Osoby ubiegające się o status uchodźcy. Ich Prawa i standardy traktowania. Katowice 2004,

B.Mikołajczyk: Prawa dziecka w sytuacji ubiegania się o status uchodźcy. „Państwo i Prawo" 2004, no.. 7, pp. 88 – 99

B.Mikołajczyk: Pomoc prawna w sprawach uchodźczych. Nowe wyzwania w związku z przystąpieniem Polski do UE. „Palestra" 2004, no 1, pp. 19 – 29.

It is quite difficult to find any recent publications on transposition but worth mentioning is the article dedicated to all important changes which were introduced into the Polish law in 2005 (also amendments arising from the transposition of the Directive).

This is:

A.Jasiakiewicz, W.Klaus: 2005: Zmiany w polskim prawie o uchodźcach. Nowelizacja przynosi korzystne zmiany, między innymi więcej praw socjalnych. „Z obcej ziemi" May 2006.

The issue of education of children and the protection of unaccompanied minors are discussed in reports:

A.Jasiakiewicz, W. Klaus: Raport z monitoringu realizacji obowiązku szkolnego przez małoletnich cudzoziemców, przebywających w ośrodkach dla uchodźców. Stowarzyszenie Interwencji Prawnej 2005;

A. Jasiakiewicz, W. Klaus: Raport z monitoringu realizacji obowiazku szkolnego przez maloletnich cudzoziemcow, przebywajacych w osrodkach dla uchodzcow. Druga edycja. Stowarzyszenie Interwencji Prawnej 2006

Raport o sytuacji małoletnich cudzoziemców bez opieki ubiegających się o nadanie statusu uchodźcy w Polsce. Fundacja Studencki Ośrodek Pomocy Prawnej przy Wydziale Prawa i Administracji Uniwersytetu Warszawskiego – Klinika Prawa UW. Warszawa 2005.
K.Zdybska: Ochrona ofiar przemocy oraz cierpiących na traumę na gruncie polskiej ustawy o udzielaniu cudzoziemcom ochrony. In: Biuletyn Stowarzyszenia Praw Człowieka im. Haliny Nieć 2005, pp. 4-12 www.niecassociation.org
B.Smoter: Wybrane zagadnienia sytuacji prawnej małoletnich cudzoziemców bez opieki w świetle nowelizacji ustawy o cudzoziemcach i ustawy o udzielaniu cudzoziemcom ochrony na terytorium RP z dnia 22 kwietnia 2005. In: Biuletyn Stowarzyszenia Praw Człowieka im. Haliny Nieć 2005, pp. 13-18 www.niecassociation.org
Implementacja Prawa Azylowego w Polsce. Biuletyn Prawny Stowarzyszenia Praw Człowieka im. dr Haliny Niec. Nr 1/2004
Listening to refugees. Report in the Gender, Age and Diversity Roll-Out in Hungary, Poland, the Slovak Republic and Slovenia – UNHCR Regional Representation 2005
Dzieci cudzoziemskie w polskiej szkole. „Biuletyn Migracyjny". Luty 2007. http://www.migration-news.uw.edu.pl/
I. Koryś: Dzieci imigrantów w Polsce. Nowe zjawisko .Nowe wyzwania. „Biuletyn Migracyjny". Czerwiec 2006.
http://www.migration-news.uw.edu.pl/BiuletynMigracyjny7.pdf

Q.9. Quote any interesting decision of jurisprudence based on the implementation of the new rules of transposition of the directive (indicate references of publication if any)?

There were just three cases before the administrative courts. One case is pending. Two proceedings were discontinued because aliens did not pay court fees.

3. GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

The purpose of the following two questions is to help the reader to understand easily and quickly the system of reception conditions in your Member State and also to avoid that you have to repeat general elements in other parts of the questionnaire. Please do not write more than one or maximum two pages and do not include large historical developments.

Q.10. Describe in general the system of reception conditions in your Member State (in particular which are the main actors in charge of reception conditions?)

An alien who submitted an application for granting refugee status may also apply for social assistance for the time of pending procedure in both administrative instances. The request for assistance may also refer to an alien's spouse and his/her minor children.

Decisions on granting the assistance were rendered by the President of the Office of Repatriation and Aliens in Warsaw and according to the amendment of 24 May 2007 of the Act since 20 July 2007 they are taken by the Head of Office for Foreigners . The Head of the Office and the Office are the main actors in the whole of the asylum procedure. However in practice the one of the Office departments provides the assistance for foreigners – the Bureau of Organization of Centres for Aliens Applying for Refugee Status or Asylum.
This assistance is granted until the final decision (issued by the second administrative instance) and additionally for a period of 14 days after delivery of such a decision. An applicant must prove that he/she does not possess any financial resources allowing him/her to cover the cost of their stay on the territory of Poland and that he/she is unable to obtain any financial resources and accommodation.

However, upon the request of an alien, the assistance may be extended for a period of up to 3 months from the date of delivery of the decision in cases when an alien has been granted refugee status or he/she obtained a tolerated stay permit. This provision seems to be very important because sometimes a positive decision may be a big problem for a refugee. It can be difficult to find himself/herself in a new situation.

Moreover, upon the request of an alien the assistance may be prolonged until the end of a period of up to 1 month from the date of delivery of the decision on discontinuation of the procedures for granting refugee status due to the fact that that the application for granting refugee status has been withdrawn.

According to Article 57 of the Act of 13 June 2003 the assistance shall include:

- accommodation in the reception centre or granting to an alien a financial benefit to cover his / her own costs of stay
- granting the medical care.

The assistance may also include granting assistance in voluntary repatriation from the territory of the Republic of Poland.

The draft of 14 March 2007 amending the Act on Protection in its Article 71 described the social assistance in details. It means that the scope of the social assistance will not be described in the act of the lower legal power but in the statute. According to this provision the social assistance covers: accommodation, food (full board) or money for food, pocket money, financial benefit for hygienic supplies, a benefit or a voucher for cloth and footwear, Polish language lessons and teaching materials, didactic supplies, costs of transport to order to participate in a proceeding or transport to medical care institution and if possible the social assistance covers costs of additional educational and recreation classes.

In the case when the procedures concerning the -granting of refugee status to married couples staying in the centre together with minor children are being carried out separately, the stay of any spouses staying in the centre may not come to the end prior to the expiry of 14 days from the date of rendering the final decision in the proceedings completed later (presently binding Article 60 of the Act on Protection).

The social assistance is not granted to an alien who resides on the territory of the Republic of Poland on the basis of a fixed period residence permit, a permit to settle or the long-term resident's EC resident permit or he/she has been placed in the guarded centre or held in custody for the purpose of expulsion, has been preliminarily arrested or has been imprisoned. It is also possible not to grant any social assistance if the application for refugee status indicates arguments for refusal of granting refugee status.

The mentioned above social benefits are usually (not always because there is a group of asylum seekers who enjoy the financial benefits but they stay outside the centre for health or safety reasons) provided by the centres for asylum seekers. Nowadays there are 17 centres. The main reception centre is in Podkowa Leśna - Dębak near Warsaw. If an alien intends to apply for the social assistance they must apply to the Reception Centre for Aliens Applying for Refugee Status in Podkowa Leśna –Dębak. Then he/she is usually moved to another accommodation centre. One centre is under construction.

Under Article 63 sec. 2 the Head of the Office may delegate its responsibility for running the centres to social organizations, foundations, associations as well as natural and legal persons.

The Office for Foreigners is the owner of 3 of the 17 centres. The other centres are rented by the Office from private companies. However, all of them are under supervision of the Office or conducted by the personnel of the Office. The Bureau of Organization of Centres for Aliens Applying for Refugee Status or Asylum is a coordinator of the work of all the centres. It is located within the structure of the Office for Foreigners.

Analysing the practical side of the issue it should be noticed that there is the problem with getting to the centre in Debak remains (there is no means of transport from the train station in Otrebusy). The tickets to Debak are bought by the Border Guard but this situation is not legally regulated in the Act. The Border Guard is providing the train tickets for the journey from the border to the centre due to its own rules.

Q.11. Q11. A. Explain if you have different types and levels of reception conditions following the different stages of the asylum procedure (this implies that you have to give briefly the necessary explanations about the asylum procedure). Make if relevant for reception conditions a distinction between the following procedural stages: determination of the responsible Member State on the basis of the Dublin II regulation, special procedures at the border (including transit zones in airports), accelerated procedures, admissibility procedures, eligibility procedures and the different possibilities of appeals (suspensive or not) against a refusal of the asylum request. Indicate what the main differences of reception conditions are between the different stages (if necessary by detailing between the different elements of reception conditions, in particular housing) and explain what the evolution of reception conditions is following the different stages of the procedure.

The procedures for granting refugee status shall be initiated upon an application submitted personally by the alien to the Head of the Office for Foreigners. An alien shall submit an application for granting the refugee status through the commanding officer of the Border Guard division, the territorial scope of activity of which includes the city of Warsaw, or through the commanding officer of the Border Guard checkpoint. Prior to sending the application for granting refugee status to the Head of the Office for Foreigners, the authority admitting the application shall determine, whether: at the moment of submitting the application the alien was authorized to enter the territory of the Republic of Poland or he/she has legally stayed therein; the circumstances referred to in art. 1 sec. F of the Geneva Convention have arisen; shall provide for the performance of medical examinations and necessary sanitary treatments of the alien's body and clothes. An application for granting refugee status shall be immediately sent to the Head of the Office, no later, however, than within 48 hours from the moment of submitting an application by the alien. Usually it is on the same day. (Worth mentioning is that the draft of 14 March 2007 stated that an application should be sent to the Head of the Office without delay but when an alien is placed in the deportation centre or arrest his/her application should be sent within 48 hours from the moment of submitting an application). Then they apply for social assistance. The decision on the social assistance is issued by the Head of the Office for Foreigners. Then they go to the Central Reception Centre. Then they may be transferred to other centres.

The decision on granting or refusal to grant the refugee status should be rendered within the time limit of 6 months from the date of the submission of the application. The decision on the refusal to grant refugee status for the reason of manifestly unfounded application should be rendered within the time limit of 30 days from the date of submission of the application.

They are allowed to stay in the centre for all stages of the procedure and it does not matter if it is pending before an organ of the first (Head of the Office for Foreigners) and second instance (Refugee Board). The organ of the first instance is placed within the structure of the Ministry of Interior and Administration. The Refugee Board is an organ consisting of 12 experts appointed by the Minister of Justice and Minister of Foreign Affairs. (In 2006 the idea of liquidation of the Refugee Board appeared but finally it was withdrawn and the draft of 14 March 2007 contained provisions on procedure before the Refugee Board)

According to the draft, from the 1st September 2007 aliens in Poland were to be able to obtain the refugee status or the subsidiary protection in meaning of the Directive 2004/83 or the tolerated stay. But the draft has not been adopted and Poland did not transposed the Directive 2004/83.

They enjoy the social assistance until the final administrative decisions are issued towards all members of the family and during the next 14 days from delivery of such a decision.

If a person receives two negative decisions issued by the Head of the Office for Foreigners instance and the Refugee Board may submit a complaint to the administrative court and then to the Supreme Administrative Court. Both courts verify the legality of the administrative decisions – if the decisions are in accordance with law. However, the refugee cases are very specific and the courts must refer to the merit of a case (definition of a refugee) if they intend to verify the formal aspects of a case.

It must be stated that according to Article 16 of the Act on Protection in the decision on refusal of granting refugee status an alien is granted a tolerated stay permit or is ordered to leave the territory of Poland within the time limit specified in the decision, not exceeding 30 days. However, if an alien appeals against the decision of the first instance the Refugee Board shall specify the new time limit, not exceeding 14 days. It means that he/she can submit a complaint to the administrative court but she/he should leave Poland. They may appoint their legal representative for the period of the judicial proceeding but in practice it is not of great importance because they are out of the territory of Poland. On the other hand, they may always apply for permission for stay/visa due to general rules for aliens reasoning that they want to be present before the court but there is no guarantee that obtain the permit to stay. (The not adopted Draft of 14 March 2007 contained the provision [Article 48 sec.4] stating that an alien should leave the Poland's territory within 30 days).

During the procedure before the courts they are not granted any social assistance stipulated in the Act on Protection. Concluding, social assistance is granted through all the administrative procedure and not during the judicial proceedings.

It must be stressed that it does not matter if he or she never was in Poland before and applies for the refugee status first time or he/she has been transferred to Poland due to the Dublin mechanism. He/she has the right to the same conditions of reception. According to the information provided by the Office for Foreigners 1197 persons (87% of the Russians citizens who declare Chechen nationality) were transferred to Poland from Czech Republic (428), Germany (413), France (89, Belgium (73) in 2005. In 2006 682 persons were transferred from other EU counties. 552 of them were of them were Chechens.

Completely different, however, is the situation of an alien who is not authorized to enter the territory of the Republic of Poland. In such a case he/she shall submit an application for granting refugee status during the border control upon entry to the Republic of Poland, through the commanding officer of the Border Guard checkpoint.

According to Article 40 of the Act on protection an alien applying for granting refugee status shall not be detained unless he or she submits an application for granting refugee status during the border control, not having the right of entry on territory of the Republic of Poland or staying illegally. They are detained also if prior to submission of an application they have crossed or have attempted to cross the border contrary to the laws or have obtained the decision ordering to leave the territory of Poland or the decision on expulsion. He/she is also detained if it occurs (after submission of the application for refugee status) that for example his/her residence constitutes a threat to the security of Poland or is undesirable or he or she has broken the law (inter alia he or she has taken an employment against Act on promotion of employment and institutions of the labour market of 20 April 2004) and other reasons specified in Article 88 of the Act on Aliens of 13 June 2003.

This group of aliens is placed in the guarded centres or in deportation arrests and they cannot apply for any social assistance in the meaning of the Act on protection. But it should be stressed that the unaccompanied minors and applicants who are presumed to be victims of violence or disabled may not be placed in a guarded centre or deportation arrest.

Q 11. B. Indicate precisely for which stage(s) of the asylum procedure the answers on reception conditions you give below are valid.

As it was stated above the described reception conditions refer to both stages of the administrative procedure - before the Head of the Office for Foreigners and the Refugee Board - and exclusively towards the aliens who are not detained.

4. GENERAL RULES ON RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.12. Q 12. A. Are material reception conditions provided in kind, in money or in vouchers or in a combination of these elements (see article 13, §5 which is an optional provision)? Distinguish between the different elements (housing, food, clothes, health, transportation, pocket money,…). If reception conditions are provided in money (in general or in some cases, for instance when no places are anymore available in accommodation centres), indicate the precise amount given to the asylum seekers. Indicate in your answer what is provided in general and if there are exceptional cases. Specify in your answer if reception conditions are different from the general system of social aid for nationals or aliens and if yes, if and when (which stage of the asylum procedure) can asylum seekers have access to the general system of social aid?

According to the currently binding Article 61 of the Act on Protection the person who is placed in the centre shall be provided with travel fares and meals. The fares are provided in order to enable the person to take part in the procedures for granting refugee status or attend medical examination or prophylactic vaccinations and in other particularly justified cases. All these benefits were mentioned in the draft of 14 March 2007.

They there are also provided with teaching materials or aids for children enjoying education and care of public institutions, primary schools, gymnasia or grammar schools as well as covering of the expenses arising out of charges for education in such institutions, schools or gymnasia. Moreover, they are entitled to permanent financial assistance for the purchase of toiletries and covering out-of-pocket expenses. Worth mentioning is that according to the draft of 14 March 2007 these benefits was to be provided by virtue of the Act on Protection. Currently they are mentioned in the minister's regulation.

It is also possible that an alien referred placed in the centre may be provided with an equivalent in money in return for food. It is provided in case when due to his/her health state he / she should obtain dietary alimentation for a period specified in a medical report, and this alimentation may not be provided by the centre. It is also provided if he/she stays in the centre together with children under 7 years of age or a minor child of an alien enjoys education and care of public institutions, primary schools, gymnasia or grammar schools. They may also be provided the one-time financial assistance for the purchase of clothing and footwear.

In cases when children under 7 and minor children attend schools they receive money for them in cash. As the personnel of the reception centres and school teachers noticed, quite often the parents do not spend the received money on food for their children and as a result their children are undernourished. That is why there is an idea to transfer money to schools, which would provide them the food (for example breakfast or lunch).

The draft of 14 March 2007 was to change also the rules of granting the financial equivalent for food for children. for children under 3 years and children attending kindergartens and schools. The draft withdrew the provisions on possibility to provide an alien with equivalent in money in return for food due to the medical report (because in practice aliens do not dedicate money for appropriate food for them)

According to the Regulation of the Minister of Interior and Administration of 14 August 2003 amended by the Regulation of 8 August 2005 (Journal of Laws 2003, no. 146 item 1428 and 2005, no. 157 no. 1322) persons staying in the reception centre receive 20 PLN for the purchase of toilet articles and 50 PLN pocket money every month. They may also receive an allowance for cloth and footwear – 140 PLN. The NGO-s noticed that it is not enough, especially in the case of growing children.

The mentioned equivalent in money in return for food is 9 PLN per day.

However according to information provided by the Office for Foreigners it happened that aliens did not dedicate the allowances for cloth and footwear but for other things (for example alcohol or cigarettes) or they tried to save money, so the Office decided not to give them the allowance in cash but they receive vouchers. The idea of vouchers was introduced into the draft of 14 March 2007.

There are also situations when the asylum seekers do not stay in the reception centres they receive a benefit of 25 PLN per person for each day of stay. However, if an asylum seeker stays with his/her family this amount is different. When the family consists of 2 people the benefit is 20 PLN, 3 people– 15 PLN, 4 and more family members it is 12,50 PLN.

Q 12. B. Can the reception conditions in kind, money or vouchers be considered as sufficient "to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence" as requested by article 13, §2 of the directive (which is a mandatory provision but leaves a certain space to Member States)? In order to help to assess the respect of this rule when reception conditions are provided in money, include if necessary in your answer points of comparison with the minimum amount of social aid guaranteed for nationals in your Member State.

An answer to this question is quite difficult because of the meaning of the "standard". It is possible to compare the income for the people living outside the centre to the level of Poland's social minimum and the standard of living of the Polish citizens. Providing that the minimal salary is 899,10 PLN gross the help provided for the arriving to Poland asylum seekers should be recognized as sufficient. It must be remembered that if they stay in the reception centre they do not pay for food, accommodation and medical care. If they stay outside the centre they receive money for every day of stay, sometimes it is more than a Polish citizen is able to earn each month.

5. PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

Q.13. Q 13. A. Does the national legislation specifically provide that a request for international protection is presumed to be under the Geneva Convention unless explicitly requested otherwise? (see article 2, b which is a mandatory provision)

According to section 1 of Article 56 of the Polish Constitution of 1997 states that "foreigners shall have a right of asylum in the Republic of Poland in accordance with principles specified by statute".
Section 2 of Article 56 states that foreigners who, in the Republic of Poland, seek protection from persecution, may be granted the status of a refugee in accordance with international agreements to which the Republic of Poland is a party". Sec. 2 refers to the Geneva Convention status. Sec. 1 does not refer to the "international protection".

Under Article 13 sec. 1 of the Act on Protection refugee status in the Republic of Poland shall be granted to an alien who fulfils the conditions for being recognized as a refugee, as specified in the Geneva Convention and the New York Protocol. So, there is the direct reference to the Geneva Convention.

It must be stressed that the other kind of the protection – tolerated stay – is closely connected with refugee status – it does not have an independent nature (except a situation when the Voivode [governor of a province] issues a decision of expulsion of an alien or in extradition cases).

An alien is not eligible for tolerated status himself/ herself (except in the above mentioned situation of expulsion). He or she must apply for refugee status but as a result of the procedure he/she may obtain refusal of granting refugee status and granting a permit for tolerated stay in Poland. Most of the applicants of Chechen nationality is in such a situation.

In these cases the permit is rendered ex officio by the Head of the Office for Foreigners or, in second instance by the Refugee Board, in one decision "on refusal of refugee status and the granting of a permit for tolerated stay".

The tolerated stay is a type of humanitarian status. According to Article 97 of the Act on Protection an alien shall be granted the permit for tolerated stay if his/her expulsion may be effected only to a country where his/her rights contained in Articles 1-7 of the ECHR could be under threat. Moreover this kind of protection shall be granted to an alien whose expulsion is unenforceable due to reasons beyond the authority of executing the decision on expulsion or beyond an alien (for example in case when there are not any direct flights to the country of an alien's origin, see: the judgement of the EctHR in the case Shamsha and Shamsha v. Poland)

That is why an alien enjoying the reception conditions in the reception centres or the other kind of social assistance may become " a refugee" or "an alien who possess a permit for tolerated stay in Poland". It is obvious that conditions of their reception are the same.

Q. 13. B. Explain if the scope of application of reception conditions is extended to other asylum seekers than refugees in the sense of the Geneva Convention, in particular to persons asking for subsidiary protection or to other forms of protection like humanitarian statuses (see article 3, § 4 which is an optional provision)? If not, explain briefly which the differences between these special regimes and the directive are.

Asylum and refugee status there are not all the kinds of the protection which may be granted to aliens in Poland. The Act on Protection contains, apart from the above mentioned solutions also two other possibilities of protection, namely the so called "tolerated stay" and "temporary protection". Thus, the currently binding Act on Protection regulates: refugee status, asylum, tolerated stay and temporary protection. The draft of 14 March 2007 was to introduce the subsidiary protection. If an alien is not granted the refugee status he/she may be granted the permit for tolerated stay. But from the 1st September 2007 he/she was to be granted the subsidiary protection or the permit for tolerated stay. There was only one procedure in the draft, so they were to enjoy the same reception conditions. The asylum seekers applying for asylum are placed in he same centres and they enjoy the same conditions. But in practice there are few applicants for asylum.

Q. 13. C. Are there specific provisions in national law for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation (see article 3, §2 which is an optional provision)?

Articles 90 – 96 of the Act on Protection refer to the "asylum". Foreigners may apply for this type of the protection within of the territory of Poland or outside the Poland's territory. These foreigners are not entitled to the social assistance except the unaccompanied minors if they apply for asylum in Poland.

Q.14. Are reception conditions available as from the moment one asylum application is introduced? How is article 13, §1 which is mandatory legally understood? Do asylum seekers have to satisfy any other condition in order to get reception conditions?

The answer should be positive because after the submission of the application aliens are sent to the Reception Centre in Dębak. Theoretically they must prove that they do not have any resources to cover the costs of their stay in Poland, but in practice their declaration about the lack of any resources are very difficult to verify, so they receive benefits.

Q.15. Explain when reception conditions end, for instance after refusal of the asylum request (include in your answer the link with the right of appeal against a decision of refusal of the status, in particular the question of its suspensive effect)

According to the currently binding provisions an alien, in relation to whom the procedure for granting refugee status has been initiated, shall be provided, upon his/her request, with the assistance for the period of the procedure and for the period of 14 days from the date of delivery of the final decision in this case (so they enjoy reception conditions after appeal in the second instance, as well). However, if there is a family and if separate procedures are conducted in the case of each of them the period of 14 days is counted from the delivery of final decision in case of the last member of a family.

According the draft of 14 March 2007 they were to be entitled to the social assistance and the health care not only during the procedure in both administrative instances but also for two months from delivery of final decision in case of the last member of a family. Only in case of discontinuation of proceeding they would be provided with social assistance and the medical help for the period of 14 days from the date of delivery of the final decision in this case.

Q.16 Are there special rules or practices regarding reception conditions in case of successive applications for asylum introduced by the same person?

The draft of 14 March 2007 was to introduce a provision that if it turns out in the procedure initiated due to the successive application that there are new circumstances of persecution, an alien is provided the social and medical assistance as other applicants.

Q.17. Information of asylum seekers about their rights and obligations in terms of reception conditions, in particular about established benefits (see article 5 which is too large extend a mandatory provision; do not confuse this question with the information to be provided to asylum seekers about the asylum procedure):

Q. 17. A. Are asylum seekers informed, and if yes about what precisely?

Asylum seekers are informed immediately (this information is confirmed by the Halina Niec Human Rights Association – a very active NGO) and rather precisely. However, it is quite difficult to assess each case.

Q. 17. B. Is the information provided in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

The information is provided orally and in writing. It should be remembered that almost 90% of applicants in Poland speak (or at least understand) Russian. That is why there are not any problems with informing them in both forms - orally and in writing. If an asylum seeker speaks any exotic language the information is provided with assistance of an interpreter.

Information in a few basic languages is available in Debak. Moreover some NGOs such as Helsinki Foundation for Human Rights deliver information in the form of leaflets translated into numerous foreign languages. The information is also available in the internet in Russian and English on the Office web site.

Q.17. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify the list of languages in which it is available

As it as stated before 90% of asylum seekers arriving to Poland are Russian speaking persons. That is why the written information is provided mainly in Russian but it is also provided in Arabic, Chinese and English. It results from the fact that asylum seekers usually understand these languages. It may also be added that the reception centres "specialise" in certain languages and for example Arabic speaking asylum seekers are placed in one reception centre. In practice, the centre in Siekierki in Warsaw gives shelter to people with other than Chechnyan nationality.

The Act on Protection is also translated into Russian. It may be also added that the information on the Polish Office for Foreigners (UDSC) Web Page is available also in Russian (not only in English).

Q. 17. D. Is the deadline of maximum 15 days respected?

The deadline is fully respected. They receive the information immediately. It may also be added that some applicants are well informed before they come to Poland because the information on procedure and assistance is provided at the Office for Foreigners web site in English.

Q.18. Information of asylum seekers about the existence of organisations or groups promoting their interest and defending their rights (see article 5 which is to a large extend a mandatory provision):

Q. 18. A. Is there a list of organisations dressed by the authorities and if yes is it comprehensive? Is this in particular the case about the possibilities to get legal assistance and health care?

The list of NGO-s is accessible in each centre. They usually provide legal assistance and social assistance (the Polish Humanitarian Action) or medical assistance. They work permanently or incidentally (educational programmes). Recently the Office has put the list of NGO-s on its web site with their phone numbers and addresses . There are:

Stowarzyszenie Interwencji Prawnej, Al. 3 Maja 12/510 (V pietro), tel: 22 621 51 65, e-mail: Interwencja-prawna@o2.pl, http://www.interwencjaprawna.pl/
ELEOS Prawosławny Ośrodek miłosierdzia, Białystok , ul. Św. Mikołaja 5, tel: 85 742 65 00, 85 742 60 00
Fundacja Edukacji i Twórczości w Białymstoku, Białystok, u. Lipowa 41 D 15-424, tel: 85 742 40 41, 85 742 40 42
Caritas Polska - Biuro Informacji dla Migrantów i Uchodźców, Białystok, ul. Warszawska 43 lok.302
Uniwersytet Jagielloński Uniwersytecka Poradnia Prawna Sekcja Praw Człowieka, Kraków , Al. Zygmunta Krasińskiego 18 30-101, tel: 12 430 19 97, fax: 12 430 19 97, www.juhrc.org/poradnia
Centrum Pomocy Prawnej im. Haliny Nieć (Stowarzyszenie Praw Człowieka im. Haliny Nieć), Kraków , ul. Sobieskigo 7/3 31-136, tel: 12 633 72 23, fax: 12 633 72 23, e-mail: biuro@pomocprawna.org, http://www.pomocprawna.org/
Ośrodek Praw Człowieka Uniwersytetu Jagiellońskiego, Kraków, Al. Z. Krasińskiego 18 30-101, tel: 12 427 24 80, fax: 12 427 24 80, e-mail: biuro@juhrc.org, http://www.juhrc.org/
Polska Misja Medyczna, Kraków, ul. Rejtana 2 30-510, tel: 12 293 40 50, fax: 12 293 40 55, http://www.pmm.org.pl/

Centrum Duszpasterstwa Młodzieży, Lublin , Ul. Krakowskie Przedmieście 1 20-001, tel: 81 532 13 96, e-mail: pneuma@duch.lublin.pl, http://www.duch.lublin.pl/
Caritas Archidiecezji Lubelskiej Centrum Pomocy Migrantom i Uchodźcom, Lublin , Ul. Prymasa Stefana Wyszyńskiego 2 20-950, tel: 81 743 71 86, 81 743 62 48, fax: 81 743 62 49, e-mail: Migranci@kuria.lublin.pl, Migranci-lublin@caritas.pl
Fundacja A-venir, Lublin , Ul. Wojciechowska 7J, tel: 81 444 63 88, fax: 81 444 63 86, e-mail: fundacja@a-venir.org.pl, http://www.a-venir.org.pl/
Fundacja A-venir, Białystok Ul. Warszawska 43, tel: 85 740 72 88, fax: 85 740 72 8, e-mail: fundacja@a-venir.org.pl, http://www.a-venir.org.pl/
Fundacja Instytut na rzecz Państwa Prawa, Lublin , Ul.F.Chopina 14/70 20-023, 81 743 68 05, e-mail: fundacja@fipp.org.pl, http://www.fipp.org.pl/
Stowarzyszenie Centrum Wolontariatu, Lublin , Ul.Jezuicka 4/5 20-113, tel: 81 534 26 52, fax: 81 532 45 45, e-mail: lublin@wolontariat.org.pl, http://www.wolontariat.org.pl/
Stowarzyszenie 'Jeden Świat', Poznań , ul. Krasińskiego 3A/1 60-830, tel: 61 848 43 38, e-mail: info@jedenswiat.org.pl, http://www.jedenswiat.org.pl/
Caritas Archidiecezji Warszawskiej - Centrum Pomocy Migrantom i Uchodźcom, Warszawa, Ul Krakowskie Przedmieście 62, tel: 22 826 99 10, fax: 22 826 99 10, e-mail: Migranci-waw@caritas.pl, http://www.warszawa.caritas.pl/
Polskie Stowarzyszenie Edukacji Prawnej PSEP, Warszawa, Ul. Kredytowa 6/73, tel: 22 423 76 92, 22 423 36 12, fax: 22 826 10 27, e-mail: psep@psep.pl, http://www.psep.pl/
UNHCR, Warszawa , Al.Róż 2, 00-558, tel: 22 628 69 30, fax: 22 625 61 24, e-mail: polwa@unhcr.ch
Lekarze Bez Granic / Medecins Sans Frontieres, Warszawa , Pl. Konstytucji 5/8, 00-657, tel: 22 499 67 98, fax: 22 499 67 99, e-mail: Msff-varsovie@paris.msf.org, http://www.msf.org/
Fundacja na rzecz integracji zawodowej, społecznej oraz rozwoju przedsiębiorczości Via, Warszawa , ul. Długa 44/50 00-241, tel: 22 635 55 62, fax: 22 635 55 76, e-mail: zarzad@via.org.pl, http://www.via.org.pl/
Międzynarodowa Inicjatywa Humanitarna, Warszawa, ul. Fałata 2/41 02-534, tel: 22 849 94 78, fax: 22 849 14 07, e-mail: ihipol@yahoo.com
Fundacja „Studencki Ośrodek Pomocy Prawnej przy Wydziale Prawa i Administracji Uniwersytetu Warszawskiego - Klinika Prawa UW", Warszawa , ul. Krakowskie Przedmieście 26/28, 00-927, tel: 22 552 08 11, fax: 22 552 43 18, e-mail: klinika@wpia.uw.edu.pl, http://www.klinika.wpia.uw.edu.pl/
Związek Harcerstwa Polskiego, Warszawa, Ul. M.Konopnickiej 6 00-491, tel: 22 339 06 00, fax: 22 339 06 06, http://www.zhp.pl/
Polski Czerwony Krzyż, Warszawa , ul. Mokotowska 14 00-561, tel: 22 326 12 00, 22 628 55 75, 22 326 12 86, fax: 22 628 41 68, info@pck.org.pl, http://www.pck.org.pl/
Ośrodek Migranta Fu Shenfu, Warszawa, ul. Ostrobramska 98 04-118, tel: 22 610 02 52
Stowarzyszenie Ruch Nowego Życia, Warszawa, Ul. Polnej Róży 1C 02-798, tel: 22 648 98 18 22 418 29 50, e-mail: rnz@rnz.org.pl
Helsińska Fundacja Praw Człowieka, Warszawa, ul. Zgoda 11 00-018, tel: 22 828 10 08, 22 556 44 66, fax: 22 556 44 40, e-mail: hfhr@hfhrpol.waw.pl, http://www.hfhrpol.waw.pl/
Fundacja „Ocalenie", Warszawa, ul.Mokotowska 14 00-561, tel: 0 602 27 50 53, 0 697 17 60 92, e-mail: ocalenie@wp.pl
Stowarzyszenie Uchodźców w RP, Warszawa, ul.Oleandrów 7/14 00-629, tel: 22 839 09 27, e-mail: assref@hotmail.com
Polska Akcja Humanitarna, Warszawa, ul.Szpitalna 5/3 00-031, tel: 22 828 90 86, fax: 22 831 99 38,e-mail: pah@pah.org.pl, ucho@pah.org.pl; http://www.pah.org.pl/, http://www.refugee.pl/

Stowarzyszenie na rzecz Integracji i Ochrony Cudzoziemców „Proxenia", Warszawa, ul. Ostrobramska 98 04-118

Q. 18. B. Is the information provided to the asylum seekers, and if yes, in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

This kind of information is provided in writing and orally with other information about the conditions of reception. However, it usually depends on an individual situation for example there are illiterate asylum seekers or they speak a very exotic language. The Act on Protection in Article 22 obliges the authorities admitting the application to inform an alien in a language understandable to him/her about the principles and procedures, about his/her rights and obligation during the procedure.

Q. 18. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify if possible the list of languages in which it is available.

The rules referring to information about NGO-s are the same as in the case of the general information on reception conditions.

Q. 18. D. How many organisations are active in that field in your Member State?

At least there are all the itemized above NGO-s. (at least 28) However, forms of their activity are very various. They may be divided into three groups: there are NGO-s which provide legal assistance (the Halina Niec Human Rights Association – Stowarzyszenie im. Haliny Nieć, the Helsinki Foundation – Fundacja Helsińska, the Polish Association of Legal Education – Polskie Stowarzyszenie Edukacji Prawnej, the Polish Association of Legal Intervention – Polskie Stowarzyszenie Interwencji Prawnej, the Students' Law Clinic in Warsaw, Krakow, Bialystok and Lublin).

There are NGO-s which provide material and legal assistance, such as the Polish Red Cross or Caritas. The medical and psychological assistance is provided by the Polish Medical Mission, The Salvation Foundation "Ocalenie". The Bobody's Children Foundation "Dzieci Niczyje" focuses on assistance to the unaccompanied minors (This NGO is not mentioned on the list provided by the Office) . The Proxenia Association takes up many initiatives, such as writing reports, organisation of seminars, conferences, information actions, etc. There are NGO-s which help in other ways, for example organising teaching Polish language for children (the Polish Humanitarian Action). The Polish Humanitarian Action simultaneously provides other forms of assistance, of course. The A -venir Foundation should be mentioned as organization that also offers material and social help.

Q.19. Documentation of asylum seekers (see article 6):

Q.19. A. What kind of document is delivered to the asylum seeker? Explain the legal value of this document (just a certification of the status as asylum seeker or also prove of identity?) (see §1 of article 6 which is a mandatory provision)

According to Article 32 of the Act on Protection an alien who submitted an application for granting refugee status shall be issued a provisional identity certificate – "zaswiadczenie tozsamości". The certificate confirms an alien's identity and entitles him/her to stay on the territory of Poland.

This document replaces a passport or another travel document because an alien who submits the application for granting refugee status is obliged to deposit his travel document (as well as one of his/her children) to the Head of the Office and the Office for Foreigners.

Q.19. B. Are there situations or specific cases in which another equivalent document or even no document is issued? (in particular is there an exception for "procedures to decide on the right of the applicant legally to enter the territory" as made possible by §2 of article 6)?

The Act on Protection does not contains any provisions on other kinds of documents. There are not any specific provisions in the Act on Aliens. Persons who are placed in the guarded centres or in arrests for deportation are obliged to deposit their documents but they do not receive any other documents.

The draft of 14 March 2007 was to introduce a provision containing the possibility to issue upon parents' request a separate document for children over 7 years.

Q.19. C. For how long is this document in principle valid and is it necessary to renew it after a certain period?

The document mentioned in Article 32 of the Act on Aliens is valid for 30 days. When it expires successive identity certificates are issued to an alien for periods of maximum 6 months until completion of the procedure for granting refugee status.

Q.19. D. What is the deadline for the delivery of that document? Is the mandatory deadline of 3 days set by article 6, §1 respected[632]?

The document is delivered immediately and the deadline of 3 days is fully respected. This information is also confirmed by the NGO-s and the UNHCR.

Q.19. E. Is it possible for an asylum seeker to get a travel document for serious humanitarian reasons (see §5 of article 6 which is an optional provision)?

None of the Acts of 2003 contains any provisions referring to §5 of Article 6.

Q.19. F. Is there a central system of registration of asylum seekers and is it or not separate from the registration of aliens? If yes, describe it briefly (content) and indicate in particular if it is an electronic database.

Article 132 of the Act on Aliens and Article 119 of the Act on Protection refer to the registers. Information System has central character and is available for Office for Foreigners as well as for the Border Guards ("POBYT").

There are many separate registers, among others, the register of procedures on granting the refugee status and on granting assistance to aliens applying for granting refugee status.

Q.20. Residence of asylum seekers :

Q.20. A. Is in principle an asylum seeker free to move on the entire territory of your Member State or only to a limited part of it and in case, which part? (see article 7, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

There are not any provisions limiting the free movement of asylum seekers within the entire territory of the Republic of Poland (providing that they are not detained, of course).

However according to the Article 45 of the Act on Protection, the Head of the Office for Foreigners may oblige an alien to stay in a specific place (only in case when an alien was detained or should be detained but he/she is not placed in the guarded centre or arrest). In practice, this law is not being used . This provision was repeated in the draft of 14 March 2007 (its Article 89c).

Q.20. B. About the place of residence (see §2 of article 7): explain to which extend the person is free to choose her residence and if this depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance processing of application, attribution of reception conditions,…).

The possibility to choose the place of residence does not depend on the stage of the procedure. It depends on the submission of the application for social assistance. If an asylum seeker does not apply for the assistance he or she may choose the place of his/her residence. However, he/she is obliged to inform the Office about each change of the place of residence. It is obvious due to the procedural rules and the asylum seeker is informed in an understandable language about this obligation at the beginning of the proceedings. (There is some written information in the form of an application for refugee status).

However, if an asylum seeker applies for social assistance his/her choice of the place of residence is limited. There are 17 reception centres and they are placed first in the central reception centre in Debak then in one of the other 16. They are usually persons of the same nationality or ethnic or language groups who are placed in the same centres. The family unity is also respected. It must be remembered that persons residing in the centre must observe the rules of stay in the centre but, as it was stated before, reception centres are not closed centres.

It must also be added that there is a group of asylum seekers who, according to Article 64 of the Act on Protection, enjoy social assistance (financial benefit) but who do not stay in the reception centre. They do not stay in the centre due to their health state acknowledged by a medical report or if there is a need to assure an alien's safety. According to the information obtained at the Office in May 2007 there were 548 asylum seekers who stay outside the centre and enjoy the financial benefits. Total number of asylum seekers enjoying the reception conditions is 4148 (May 2007).

Q.20. C. About the place of reception (meaning where the asylum seeker has to stay to benefit from reception conditions) (see § 4 of article 7): explain which are the general rules about the determination of this place (to which extend are the decisions determining the place taken individually and do they take into account the personal situation of the asylum seeker?) and to which extend the person is free to choose it and if it depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance attribution of reception conditions, processing of the application,…).

As it was stated before if an asylum seeker applies for social assistance his /her choice of a place of residence is limited. It does not mean that he/she does not have any influence on a decision on placing him/her in the centre (not the first one – the central reception centre in Dębak but in others). There are not provisions in the Act on Protection on impartiality of decisions on reception conditions. It cannot be stated that that the decisions in these cases are not taken individually. The decisions on providing the material assistance are the decisions in the meaning of the Code of the Administrative Procedure. It means that an organ rendering such decisions is obliged to act impartially and individually. It arises directly and indirectly from the principles of the Code (Articles 7, 10, 11)

Various aspects are taken into consideration in taking decisions on reception, for example, situation of the family of the asylum seeker, state of health, understanding of languages, etc. It may be stressed that an asylum seekers may apply for being placed in a concrete centre (for example because many of his/her acquaintances stay there).

Q.20. D. If all asylum seekers are not placed in accommodation centres because of capacity limits, explain how the persons are distributed between accommodation centres and other accommodation facilities (which authority takes the decisions, on the basis of which elements, can that decision be appealed by the asylum seeker,…)

In all these cases the Head of the Office takes the decisions. According to Article 63 of the Act on Protection it is possible to delegate NGOs to run the centres. That would also be possible in a crisis situation. Worth of mentioning is the fact that such a crisis situation happened in 1996. At that time the Polish Humanitarian Action opened its own centre "Dom Uchodźcy" in Warsaw but usually rejected asylum seekers had stayed there (but it should be remembered that the law on aliens was completely different at that time).

The draft of 14 March 2007 was to maintain the possibility to delegate NGOs, natural and legal persons to run the centres (Article 79 sec. 2 of the draft).

Q.20. E. How can an asylum seeker ask to leave temporarily the place of residence or of reception or an assigned area? How is the individual AND impartial character of the decision ensured? (see §5 of article 7 which is a mandatory provision)

As it was stated before the reception centres are not closed (they may leave the centre for a certain time if they give reasons for leaving it), but it must be remembered that a stay in centres is closely connected with providing social assistance. They are also bound by the rules of order in a centre. That is why asylum seekers are not interested in leaving centres. However, providing that for health or safety reasons they may be placed outside the centres and receive money for accommodation and food. If they can stay outside centres from the beginning of the procedure the more they can temporarily change their place of residence during the pending procedure if it turns out that it is necessary for their health or safety. The decisions in such cases must always be taken individually.

Q.21. Q.21. A. Do rules on reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions exist in internal legislation and if yes in which cases (mention in particular if there are cases not foreseen by article 16, § 1 and 2 which are optional provisions)? Distinguish in your answer between cases of reduction and withdrawal and explain which conditions can be reduced and if access to emergency health care is always ensured as requested by article 16, §4, last sentence.

Currently the reduction (1/3 of the financial benefit) or withdrawal of reception conditions is regulated by Article 65 and 66 of the Act on Protection. The Head of the Office has the competence to withhold in the whole or in part the assistance based on placing in the reception centre or granting the financial benefit if an alien is in possession of his/her own financial means sufficient to cover his/her needs or after being granted the assistance, has crossed the border contrary to the law or has grossly violated the rules of social coexistence in the centre or without giving a reason, has stayed outside the centre for a period exceeding 3 days.

The draft of 14 March 2007 did not contain the provisions on reduction but only on withdrawal of the assistance. It could take place if an alien has grossly violated the rules of social coexistence in the centre. The assistance was to suspended if an aliens stayed outside the centre for a period exceeding 3 days. According to the draft an alien could ask for restoration of assistance. In case when an alien was deprived of assistance second time due to gross violation of the rules of social coexistence in the centre the Head of the Office could be grant him/her a financial benefit in the amount of 1/3.

Q.21. B. Has article 16, §2 dealing with refusal of reception conditions for unreasonably late applications for asylum been transposed by your Member State (or was this case already applicable before transposition)? Are there cases in practice?

The Act on Protection does not provide for the possibility to refuse the reception of condition in case of unreasonable late applications.

Q.21. C. How is it ensured that decisions of reduction or withdrawal are taken individually, objectively AND in particular impartially (for instance through and independent arbitrator) (see article 16, §4 which is a mandatory provision)?

There are not any independent arbitrators but all the decisions are administrative decisions in the meaning of the Code of Administrative Procedure, which means that an asylum seeker has the right to appeal against such a decision. The decision should be taken impartially and individually under provisions of the Code.

Q.21. D. Is statement 14/03 adopted by the Council at the same moment as the directive respected (see the document attached to our sending)?

There were not any special amendments implementing the statements 14/03. But it is obvious that in this case the ECHR should be respected. The obligation of ensuring that no one is subject to inhuman dignity or degrading treatment arises also from the Polish Constitution.

Q.21. E. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements on cases of reduction, withdrawal or refusal which have been taken, and if yes, what has been the outcome?

As it was state before there were 3 cases before the administrative courts. 1 is still pending. Two were discontinues because aliens did not pay the court fee and they did not apply for exemption from court costs.

Q.22. Q.22. A. Appeal against a negative decision relating to the granting of benefits or based on article 7 (see article 21 which is a mandatory provision): indicate against which decision an appeal can be introduced, describe the system of appeal in general and include in particular in your answer the information given to asylum seekers about possibilities of appealing, deadline for appealing, if the appeal has or not a suspensive effect, if there are different steps (for instance first an administrative appeal and in particular if the guarantee of an appeal before a judicial body in the last instance is respected)?

All the decisions on granting social assistance are taken by the Head of the Office for Foreigners. In cases concerning granting or refusal to grant refugee status the Head acts as an organ of the first instance and an alien has the right to appeal against his decision to the Refugee Board and then to the administrative courts. In cases referring to social assistance the appeal to the Refugee Board is excluded on virtue of Article 81 of the Act on Protection. The Act on Protection does not contain any specific provisions on the appeal procedure in social assistance matters. It means that the appeal may be submitted according to general rules provided for in the Code of Administrative Procedure. It means that an alien may submit an application for re-examination of a case to the Head. It means that it is "a quasi-appeal". If the second decision is negative an alien may submit a complaint to the administrative court or even to the Supreme Administrative Court.

Q.22. B. Explain which are the possibilities for asylum seekers to benefit from legal assistance when they introduce such an appeal (see article 21, §2 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to Member States)?

The legal assistance may be granted in accordance with general rules before the courts. A person who submits a complaint to the court may apply for free legal assistance if he/she proves that does not posses financial resources to cover the costs of the assistance. It should be added that in practice NGO-s help aliens in these matters.

Q.22. C. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

There were not.

Q.22. D. Is a mechanism of complain for asylum seekers about quality of receptions conditions in general (even if they are not personally concerned) organised? If yes, before which authority? Is it linked to the system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions (see below question n° 39)?

The problem is that if there is no decision then there is not any possibility to make a complaint about it to the administrative courts. The quality of reception conditions is very subjective and it is very difficult to complain about it. There is always a possibility for aliens to complain to the Head of the Office. Moreover, an alien may submit any complaints to a civil court if he/she believes that, for example, the quality of the reception conditions violates his/her dignity. In practice such situations have not taken place.

6. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.23. Family unity of asylum seekers: define how a family is defined in relation with article 2, (d) which is a mandatory provision and explain how housing is provided to a family (see articles 8 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to member States and 14, §2, (a) which is a mandatory provision).

There is not any definition of a family in the Polish law but there are family law and the Family and Guardianship Code of 1969. The Code contains norms on personal and property relations between spouses and parents and children. It is very helpful with the interpretation of the "family" notion.

It may be stated that the family consists of persons who are bound by marriage or parentship. The ties between siblings and grandparents and grandchildren are also taken into consideration (but these ties are much weaker). There are not any differences between children born in wedlock and out of wedlock and if a couple has a child (children) they should be treated as a family but the problem is that unmarried couples /partnerships do not exists in the Polish law. However, aliens arriving nowadays to Poland usually create a very traditional model of family (persons of the Chechen nationality), so there are no problems with, for example, the way of accommodation.

In the context of Article 14 sec. 2 of the Directive it should be noticed that the mentioned Article 60 of the Act of protection seems to be controversial. It says that "In cases when the proceedings for granting the refugee status to married couples staying in the centre together with minor children are being carried out separately, the stay of spouses staying in the centre may not come to the end prior to the expiry of 14 days from the date of rendering the final decision in the proceedings completed later...". The question which should be put toward this provision is why only married spouses with minor children are taken into consideration". What about families with children over 18 years? And what about unmarried couples with minor children?

It seems that the provision of Article 60 is not compatible with the Directive – its Article sec. 14 2a as well as with the jurisprudence of the EctHR and the Convention on Rights of the Child.

The draft of 14 March 2007 did not contain a provision similar to currently binding Article 60. However the rules of accommodation should be elaborated in an executive provision when the amendment enters into force.

Q.24. Q.24. A. How is housing of asylum seekers organised: describe the system in general and indicate in particular what is the most frequently system used (see article 14, §1 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space for Member States; distinguish between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels places or other premises).

Housing for asylum seekers is organized only in accommodation centres, which corresponds with Article 14 sec. 1b of the Directive. However, very often these centres are organized in hotels rented by the Office but the Central Reception Centre in Debak is organized in former military barracks, restored and fully adjusted to the asylum seekers' needs.

Q.24. B. What is the total number of available places for asylum seekers? Distinguish in your answer between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels or other premises.

Currently there are about 3958 places in the centres (more than last year). 350 aliens may be accommodated in the Central Reception Centre (all the asylum seekers are sent to the Central Reception Centre first). This number pf places is sufficient.

Q.24. C. Is this number of places for asylum seekers sufficient in general or frequently insufficient?

Currently the number of places is sufficient but there were moments in years 2004 and 2005 when the centres were overcrowded and NGO-s and UNHCR assessed that the number of places was not sufficient. That is why the Office has decided to build another, its own centre.

Q.24. D. Are there special measures foreseen in urgent cases of a high number of news arrivals of asylum seekers (outside the case of application of the directive on temporary protection)?

There are not any special provisions on urgent cases of a high number of news arrivals of asylum seekers but it seems that in such cases the Article 63 sec. 2 of the Act on Protection may be applied. The Head of the Office may delegate its responsibility for running the centres to NGO-s and natural or legal persons. The Office is planning to open another new centre in Biala Podlaska. However the plans for opening a new centre by the Office for foreigners in Biala Podlaska implies possible closure of some of the rented centres.

Q.25. Accommodation centres (important note: all the following questions are about open and not closed centres where asylum seekers are detained which are covered by another question)

Q.25. A Are there different categories of accommodation centres, for instance depending of the stage of the procedure (admissibility and eligibility)?

There are two kinds of reception centres. First all the asylum seekers applying for the refugee status are placed in the Central Reception Centre in Debak then they are located in other centres – accommodation centres (ośrodki pobytowe)

Linin and Czerwony Bor (former military units) are two accommodation centres being owned by Office for Foreigners. The rest are rented. The Office and the owner of the future centre (for example a hotel) conclude an agreement on the capacity of a centre.

The unaccompanied minors under 13 years are placed in the in the custodian – educational centres. There are 11 minors the in the in the custodian – educational centre in Warsaw (May 2007).

According to the draft of 14 march 2007 all minors should be placed in the custodian – educational centres.

Q.25. B. Is there a legal time limit for accommodation in a centre after which the asylum seekers have access to private houses or apartments or is this limit linked to a stage of the asylum procedure?

There is not such a regulation in the Polish law.

Q.25. C. Is there a general regulation about the internal functioning of those centres and the rights and duties of the asylum seekers? If yes, is this general regulation applicable to public and private centres? If not, are the centres supposed to adopt an internal regulation and does a central authority have or not a kind of control about its content?

There is a special provision in the Act on Protection – Article 62 – "1. An alien placed in the centre shall be obliged to observe the rules of stay in the centre. 2. The minister competent with respect to internal affairs shall specify by means of ordinance the rules of stay in the centre, determining in particular the conditions of admissions an alien to the centre and of paying visits to persons placed therein, the rules of distribution of meals, the rules of cleaning maintenance as well as the internal regulation of the centre".

The Minister of Interior and Administration of 12 August 2003 has issued the rules of stay. It is the Minister Regulation on rules of stay in the centre for aliens applying for refugee status (Rozporzadzenie Ministra Spraw Wewnętrzych i Administracji w sprawie regulaminu pobytu w ośrodku dla cudzoziemców ubiegających się o status uchodźcy) – Journal of Law 2003 No 146 item.1425.

The rules refer to all centres (the central reception centre and all the others).

This principle was to be maintained by the draft of 14 March 2007 (Article 82).

Q.25. D. Do the regulations foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers in case of breach of the rules? (see article 16, §3) If yes, which sanctions for which rules? Which is the competent authority to decide? How is it ensured that decisions are taken individually, objectively and in particular impartially (for instance through an independent arbitrator) as requested by §4 of article 21 which is mandatory provision? Which are the possibilities of appealing against those decisions if the system is different from the general one under question n°22? Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

As it was stated before an alien is obliged to follow the rules of stay. And the assistance may be withheld or limited if he or she has grossly violated the rules of social coexistence (Article 65 of the Act on Protection and Articles 76-78 of the draft of 14 March 2007). However, it is difficult to define the "gross violation". Violation of rules is one of the prerequisites of the withdrawal of the assistance based on placing an alien in the centre so, the withdrawal may be applied only by rendering the administrative decision. The appeal procedure has been described in no. 22.

Q.25. E. Are asylum seekers involved in the management of these centres? If yes, how (advisory board, appointment or election of representatives)? (see article 14, §6 which is an option provision)

There are not any rules on "self - government" of asylum seekers in the centres. However, due to information obtained from the centres the asylum seekers create their informal representatives (at least representatives of particular groups). It must be also added that according to paragraph 10 of the Rules of Stay each alien has the right to submit petitions, complaints and motions referring to her/his stay in the centre.

Q.25. F. Do specific rules exist on work of asylum seekers inside the accommodation centres different from the general ones about employment (see below)? If yes, which ones? Can working inside accommodation centres be considered as a (mandatory) contribution of the asylum seekers to the management of the centres, is it or not paid and considered as implying access to the labour market and subject to the same rules?

If an alien works for the centre as an interpreter or if he/she performs any cleaning works in the centre the pocket money paid every month may be doubled (100 PLN). It is not connected with the access to the labour market. The access to the labour market is regulated by the Act of 2004 on promotion of employment and institution of labour market.

However, it must be noticed that in the case when an asylum seeker takes any job the situation is unclear because the asylum seeker may apply for assistance (accommodation in the centre) if he/she has not any sufficient financial sources to cover the stay during the procedure. The problem lies in the assessment of "sufficient sources". If they have the sufficient sources they should leave the centre, so decisions in these matters should be taken very carefully. The provision concerning a work permit entered into force on 14 June 2005. Article 30a of the Act on Protection guarantees an alien access to the labour market if a first instance decision has not been rendered within the time limit of one year from the date of submission of an application for granting refugee status. The draft of 14 March 2007 cut down this period to 6 months.

Q.26. Q.26. A. How can asylum seekers communicate with legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGOs? (see article 14, §2, (b) which is a mandatory provision).

There are not any obstacles in contacts with UNHCR and NGO-s. The contact is guaranteed in Article 23 of the Act on Protection. There are not any regulations in force on legal advisers (the works on the draft of the act on legal counselling has started recently but presently they are suspended due to the dissolution of the Parliament) but in practice NGO-s provide legal assistance for asylum seeker. On the other hand there are not any obstacles for asylum seekers to contact with other legal advisers.

Q.26. B. What are the rules about access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs regarding access to accommodation centres and other housing facilities (see article 14, §7 which is a mandatory provision)

A representative of UNHCR shall be allowed at any time to contact an alien applying for refugee status (Article 23 sec. 2). Representatives of NGO-s may also contact freely, but on the basis of the information obtained from NGOs, they are supposed to call the centre and fix the time of the meeting for practical reasons. It should be remembered that the centres are not closed and according to the Rules of Stay each person may visit an alien in the centre between 10.00 – 16.00 in a place appointed by a member of the centre staff . A visitor is obliged to produce his/her ID card (or another document) and explain the aim of the visit (paragraph 6 of the Rules). An alien may also meet his/her legal advisors outside the centre.

Q.26. C. Can the access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs be limited for security reasons or any other reason (see article 14, §7, last sentence)?

There are not any provisions containing expressiss verbis such a limitation.

The UNHCR has noticed that the real problem arises in the lack of financial resources to pay for the travels to NGOs offices (many of them outside the cities). NGOs do not have funds or possibilities of systematized visits in the centres.

Q.27. Q.27. A. Is a medical screening organised by the receiving State, is it mandatory or voluntary? Does it include HIV tests? (see article 9 which is an optional provision)

According to Article 58 of the Act on Protection an alien who applies for a place in the centre must undergo a medical examination and if necessary a sanitary treatment of his/her body and clothes. The kinds of this examination and the way of carrying out the examinations are described in the Regulation of the Minister of Health of 30 August 2004 (rozporządzenie w sprawie badań lekarskich oraz zabiegów sanitarnych ciała i odzieży cudzoziemców ubiegających się o nadanie statusu uchodźcy) Journal of Laws 2004, No 202, item. 2079.

According to paragraph 3 sec. 2 the HIV tests (and other tests) may be ordered by a doctor but it did not happen in practice. In June 2006 training on HIV/AIDS was organized for medical and social personnel of centres.

Q.27. B. Do the legal provisions on reception conditions ensure that asylum seekers receive at least emergency care and essential treatment of illness as requested by article 15 §1 which is a mandatory provision? Do they have a further access to health care?

According to Article 67 of the Act on Protection an alien is supported with medical care within the scope of services to which persons covered by compulsory or voluntary insurance are entitled on the basis of the Act of 27 September 2004 on health care and services financed from public funds (Journal of Laws No 210, item 2135). The Act does not limit the medical care only to emergency situations. However, the scope of the medical service is determine in a contract concluded between the Head of the Office and a provider of medical service. The medical care is not only provided in emergency situations or it bases on he essential treatment and but its scope is broader

Q.27. C. What is the practice regarding access of asylum seekers to health care and how is it organised? In particular, what is the situation in accommodation centres (are doctors coming to the centres or do asylum seekers go to doctors outside)?

Medical assistance is organized in all the reception centres on the basis of an agreements and in cooperation between the Office for Foreigners in accordance with Ministry of Interior and Administration of Republic of Poland Central Hospital. As a rule, a doctor comes to every centre (at least twice a week). Moreover, during weekdays, there is at least one nurse in the centre.

A doctor's duty is to deliver basic health care, and in other cases sending a patient to a specialist outside the centre.

In the case requiring hospitalisation, a patient is placed in a hospital.

Q.28. Q.28. A. What is the length of the period determined by the concerned Member State during which asylum seekers have no access to the labour market? (see article 11 which is a mandatory provision)

According to Article 30a of the Act on Protection an asylum seeker obtains access to the labour market in the situation when the first instance decision has not been taken for one year and simultaneously if an alien has not contributed to so long proceedings. The draft of 14 March 2007 cuts down this period to 6 months.

Q.28. B. After that period, are asylum seekers or not obliged to obtain a work permit? In case is there a limit for the administration to deliver the permits and how quick are they delivered? What is their length?

Asylum seekers need to obtain a work permit like other third country nationals. Since 1 January 2006 the work permit has been issued by the respective marszałek województwa (chief of the self – government of a province [województwo] where the residence of an employer is located.

According to the Code of Administrative Procedure the decision should be taken within one month. If the case is very complicated this term may be prolonged until 3 months.

Q.28. C. After that period, what are the conditions for access of the asylum seekers to the labour market? (in particular, are there rules concerning the maximum allowed of working hours or days per week, month or year, limits in terms of type of work or of professions authorised?

If he/she obtains the permit the rules on performing any job are the same as in the case of other aliens – third-country nationals. There are not any rules on working hours.

Q.28. D. What are the rules in terms of priorities between asylum seekers on the one hand and nationals, EU or EEE citizens and legally third-country nationals on the other?

Providing that EU citizens do not apply for refugee status (the so called Spanish Protocol the Amsterdam Treaty), asylum seekers are treated as other third country nationals. Their possibilities to perform their professions are smaller than the possibilities of EU or EEE nationals. The limits arise from the Act on promotion of employment and institutions of labour market and the executive regulations to this Act. From 17 of January 2007 the EU nationals do not need any permits. Third-country nationals need a work permit. Exceptionally they may take up seasonal works but for period up to 3 months. Moreover, the limitation arises from the rules on recognition of qualification and diplomas and linguistic requirements.

Q.28. E. Do asylum seekers have access to vocational training, does this or not depend of their right to access to the labour market, and in case at which conditions? (see article 12 which is optional regarding §1 and mandatory regarding § 2)

There are not any provisions on vocational training in the Act on Protection or in the Act on Promotion of Employment and Institutions of the Labour Market. There are not any provisions forbidding or limiting access to vocational training. Recently two partnerships on pre–integration have been organized within Programme EQUAL. Asylum seekers may improve their professional qualifications, take courses on computing, language lessons and lessons on Polish society. In case when they obtain the work permit and then they take up an employment their rights are the same as the Polish nationals, so they have the same right to vocational training connected with employment.

Q.28. F. Are the rules regarding access to the labour market adopted to transpose the directive more or less generous than the ones applicable previously?

Before the amendment of the Act on Protection in 2005, the asylum seekers had not had any access to work at all.

Q.29. Are reception conditions subject to the fact that asylum seekers do not have sufficient resources? Are asylum seekers requested to contribute to reception conditions when they have personal resources (for instance if they work) or to refund the authorities if it appears that they have resources? (see article 13 §§ 3 and 4 which are optional provisions)

As it was stated before there are not any provisions referring to this problem and it is very difficult to assess if the resources are sufficient or not. On the other hand, taking into consideration the situation on the labour market in Poland, possibilities for an asylum seeker to find a job are rather small but bigger than one year ago. If he/she takes one it is not well–paid and probably not sufficient to cover the cost of living in Poland. (It should be noted that there are usually many children in Chechen families - the main group of asylum seekers in Poland). However, it is pity that there are not any provisions that would make it possible to refund part of expenses if an asylum seeker works. Nowadays an asylum seeker may enjoy full assistance or does not enjoy any at all.

7. SPECIAL NEEDS OF PARTICULAR CATEGORIES OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.30.

Q.30.A. Which of the different categories of persons with special needs considered in the directive are taken into account in the national legislation (see article 17, §1 which is a mandatory provision): disabled people, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence? Include in your answer all other categories envisaged in national law.

Chapter 4 of the Act on Protection refers to procedures with participation of aliens whose psychophysical state allows presuming that they have been victims of violence or of aliens with disabilities. It means that the definition of this group of asylum seekers is very flexible. It consist of all people with disabilities and victims of all kinds of violence (not only tortures). There is a separate chapter on unaccompanied minors (chapter 3). There are not any separate provisions on pregnant women, elderly people or parents with minor children.
Their specific situation arises indirectly from other provisions, for example provisions of the Act on Aliens. Its Article 103 forbids detention of aliens if it may threaten his/ her life or health (it should be applied for example in the case of pregnant women). Moreover, pregnant women and elderly people may enjoy medical care on the basis of the above mentioned provisions.

The draft of 14 March 2007 in its chapter 4 contained provisions on unaccompanied children and aliens whose psychophysical state allows presuming that they have been victims of violence or of aliens with disabilities (so there are not two separate chapters). The rules of procedure remained the same. Worth mentioning is that the draft contained a provision stating that that social assistance is provided to an alien with respect to his/her safety and with particular attention to single women (Article 72).

Q.30. B. How is their specific situation taken into account (see articles 13, §2, second indent, 16 §4 second sentence and 17 which are mandatory provisions)?

Article 54 of the Act on Protection regulates the specific situation of this group of asylum seekers during the procedure. Its section 2 states that: "if it is justified by the mental or physical state of an alien placed in the centre. He/she shall be provided with a transport in order to:

1) give testimonies and statements in the proceedings for granting the refugee status;
2) undergo medical treatment".

According to sec. 3 these group of asylum seekers cannot be placed in the guarded centres or arrests for the purpose of deportation.

It should also added that in the above mentioned cases only financial benefits may be limited or withheld Medical care cannot be a subject of such a limitation (not only in the case of this specific group of asylum seekers but also in the case of all the asylum seekers).
Moreover, according to Article 55 activities connected with assistance in the centre may be carried out by a person of the sex indicated by an alien and who has received a vocational training on the work with victims of crimes or violence and with persons with disabilities.

Q.30. C. How and when are the special needs of the concerned persons supposed to be legally identified (see article 17 § 2 which is a mandatory provision and clarify how it has been interpreted by transposition)?

The needs of an alien should be identified just at the beginning of the procedure. According to Article 26 of the Act on Protection states that the authority admitting an application (in fact the Border Guard) is obliged to provide for the performance of medical examinations and necessary treatment of an alien's body and clothes. It seems that it is the moment of identification of the alien's state of health. It is not a new provision. This obligation existed before the amendment of 2005. Moreover, the medical examination is a condition for placing in the centre. The way and scope of the examination is regulated by the Minister of Health in the above mentioned Regulation of 30 August 2004. According to paragraph 2 of this Regulation the aim of the examination is, inter alia, a general assessment of the alien's health.

Article 17 of the Directive requires establishing of a system of identification of the vulnerable, disabled and ill persons. It seems that such a system works in Poland. Each applicant is obliged to fill in a form. They must provide the following information:

"Have you ever been subject to physical or mental violence? – if the answer is positive, describe please the circumstances."

"Your current health condition"

" Mayor diseases and operations"

"Chronic diseases"

" Identify the degree of disability" (Pages 8 and 11 of the form. The form is accessible at the Office website: www.uric.gov.pl)

Such a catalogue of questions gives a chance for identification of disabled, ill and other applicants "whose psychophysical state allows to presume that he/she has been a victim of violence".

Q.30. D. Is the necessary medical and other assistance provided to persons with special needs as requested by article 15, §2 which is a mandatory provision and in particular to victims of torture and violence as requested by article 20 which is a mandatory provision?

As it arises from Article 57 sec. 1 p.3) and 67 of the Act on Protection. The medical assistance should be adequate to the alien's needs.. However, NGO-s noticed that the psychological assistance which is provided to aliens with special needs is not sufficient.

It may be also added that apart from medical and social assistance, transport to the Office and medical institutions is provided.

Q.31. About minors:

Q.31. A. Till which age are asylum seekers considered to be minor?

The Act on Protection does not contain any definition of a minor but according to the law a minor is a person under 18. It arises from Article 10 of the Civil Code of 1964 but providing that they are not married.

Q.31. B. How is access of minor asylum seekers to the education system ensured? Is it at school or in case inside accommodation centres and can it be considered as similar to the conditions for nationals as requested by article 10, §1?

According to the Polish Constitution (Article 70 sec.1) each person has a right to education not only Polish citizens but also aliens residing in Poland. No one can be denied the right to education even if he/she is under 18. The most important provision is Article 94a sec. 2 p. 10) of the Act of 7 September 1991 on the education system (ustawa o systemie oświaty) Journal of Laws 2004, No 256, item 2572 with subsequent amendments. It guarantees that asylum seekers' children enjoy education in public schools at the primary, lower secondary schools and upper secondary schools. It should be stressed that the Article 94a has been amended on 22 April 2005. This amendment, which entered into force on 1 October 2005, allows the asylum seekers' children (it is obvious that the provision also refers to unaccompanied minors) to take the upper secondary education. Previously it was impossible because the provisions were very unclear.

All children at the age of 7 should start their education. That is why all the parents should be informed that their children should start their education or continue the education. Usually the staff of the centres informs (in an understandable language) the parents about this duty.

Conditions of taking up education in Polish schools are described by the Regulation of the Minister of National Education of 4 October 2001 (Journal of Laws No 131, item 1458) – Rozporządzenie w sprawie przyjmowania osób niebedacych obywatelami polskimi do publicznych przedszkoli, szkół, zakładów kształcenia i placówek. The Regulation contains a provision giving the possibility to organize a placement exam in order to qualify children to an appropriate level of education if they do not possess any certificates or it is necessary to assess the children's capacity to take education.

If a minor does not know the Polish language or this knowledge is insufficient to attend a school, he or she should be granted free language lessons provided by a municipality. The language courses or additional lessons are granted for one year. These lessons are not instead of normal education, they are in addition to normal education. Children are obliged to attend all the lessons. No less than two hours of language lessons should be provided during a week.

Apart from the language lessons organized by the municipalities (in practice by schools) children staying in the centres may attend lessons organized there. Moreover, the social assistance for asylum seekers contains all the handbooks and other things necessary for attending school lessons.

Q.31. C. Is access to education ensured not later than 3 months as requested by article 10, §2 (or after maximum one year if specific education for asylum seekers is provided) and till an expulsion decision is really enforced?

Not counting the time of the summer vacation the requirements of 3 months and 1 year are theoretically respected but the practical side of the issue is quite complicated and differs from the legal requirements which are presented above. According to the above mentioned Regulation the placement exams are organized only twice a year. Such a regulation is not adjusted to the needs of asylum seekers who arrive to Poland regardless of the schedule of the school year. NGOs indicate that in the case of asylum seekers such exams should be organized more often. Moreover, school authorities do not always organize additional language lessons. There are two reasons of such a situation. Firstly, there is a lack of money in the schools' and municipalities' budget. Secondly, every year there are fewer and fewer Chechen children speaking Russian. There are not teachers who are able to teach Chechen speaking children. That is why language lessons are organized mainly in the centres. Moreover, as an NGO – Stowarzyszenie Interwencji Prawnej - indicates in its Report (Raport z monitoringu realizacji obowiązku szkolnego przez małoletnich cudzoziemców, przebywających w ośrodkach dla uchodźców) very often parents do not intend to send their children to schools and there is no effective remedy to force them to do this (for example the limitation of the social assistance).

The other thing is that teaching programmes are not adjusted to children who do not know the Polish language sufficiently and there are not any programmes elaborated only for asylum seekers' children. In practice a little bit more than 50% of asylum seekers' children attend schools in 2005. But in 2006 88% children have started the school year 2006/07. The first semester – 536 children and the second semester 646. It means that there is really a significant progress.

Not counting the time of the summer vacation the requirements of 3 month and 1 year are theoretically respected but the practical side of the issue is quite complicated and differs from the legal requirements which are presented above. According to the above mentioned Regulation the placement exams are organized only twice a year. Such a regulation is not adjusted to the asylum seekers needs who arrive to Poland regardless the schedule of the school year. The NGO-s indicate that in case of asylum seekers such exams should be organize more often. Moreover the authority of schools do not always organize the additional language lessons. There are two reasons of such a situation. Firstly, there is lack of money in the schools' and municipalities' budget. Secondly, every year there are less and less Chechen children speaking Russian. There are not teachers who are able to teach Chechen speaking children. That is way the language lessons are organized mainly in the centres. Moreover as the NGO – Stowarzyszenie Interwencji Prawnej - indicates in its Report (Raport z monitoringu realizacji obowiązku szkolnego przez małoletnich cudzoziemców, przebywających w ośrodkach dla uchodźców) that very often the parents do not intend to send their children to schools and there are not any effective remedy to force them to do this (for example the limitation of the social assistance).

The other thing is that the teaching programmes are not adjusted to children who does not know the Polish language sufficiently and there are not any programmes elaborated only for asylum seekers' children.

Q.31. D. Is specific education (like language classes) available for asylum seekers, in particular to facilitate their effective access to the education system of the reception Member State (see article 10, §2 which is an optional provision)?

As it was stated above the language classes are organized always in the centres and not always in schools. However, generally they have the possibility to learn the Polish language in order to start their normal education in the future (usually in the next semester or the next school year).

Q.31. E. Are minors in general accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them? (see article 14, § 3)

Yes, they are.

Q.31. F. Do minors with special needs enumerated by article 18, §2 which is a mandatory provision, have access to appropriate mental health care and qualified counselling?

If they are under 13 they are placed in the custodian – educational centre. The psychologists usually work in the centres. If he or she is over 13 he/she stays at the accommodation centre the situation is unclear because there are not any provisions granting expressis verbis the psychological assistance but on the other hand in the procedures for granting refugee status the hearing, testimonies and explanations of the unaccompanied minor shall be effected in a manner considering the minor's age, maturity and mental state. That may happen in the presence of a psychologist or a pedagogue, who prepares an opinion on a psychophysical state of the unaccompanied minor.

However, NGO-s are of the opinion that the assistance of psychologists is not sufficient. It is very difficult to find any Chechen speaking psychologists.

Since currently the situation of the unaccompanied minors may differ depending on their age, the draft of 14 March 2007 was to introduce the rule that all they will be placed in the custodian – educational centre regardless their age.

Q.31. G. How and when is organised the representation of unaccompanied minors (guardianship, special organisation) and regularly assessed? (see article 19, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

According to the Article 47 of the Act on Protection the authority admitting an application for granting refugee status submitted by a minor without a legal representative shall apply immediately to the court with a motion for appointment of a guardian to represent the minor in the procedure. Moreover a custodian for an unaccompanied minor shall be appointed. The custodian supervises the provision of such a minor with appropriate accommodation conditions, access to education, medical care. The custodian shall cooperate on the arrangement of the minor free time and grant assistance in order to find the minor' s family.

The custodian is appointed by the Head of the Office and should have the qualification of a social worker.

The draft of 14 March 2007 was to introduce some changes in this field. Its Article 61 stated that the authority admitting an application for granting refugee status submitted by a minor without a legal representative should apply immediately to the court with a motion for appointment of a guardian to represent the minor in the procedure and for placing him/her in the custodian – educational centre. The draft did not contain a provision on custodian for a minor because such a role will play a custodian employed in the custodian – educational centre. According to the draft minors would not be divided into two groups over and under age of 13 years. It means that all the unaccompanied minors should be placed in such a centres not in adjusted accommodation centres for asylum seekers.

Q.31. H. How is placement of unaccompanied minors organised (with adult relatives, a foster family, in special accommodation centres or other suitable accommodation)? (see article 19, §2 which is mandatory provision)

As it was stated before currently they are placed in the custodian – educational centre or in the centre but always there is a special separated sector for them and usually for single mothers with minors. This sector is monitored all the time. If the draft of 14 March 2007 entered they would have been placed in the custodian – educational centre .

Q.31. I. How is the tracing of the family members of the unaccompanied minors organised? Are measures taken to protect confidentiality of information when necessary? (see article 19, §3 which is a mandatory provision).

According to Article 48 of the Act of protection an appointed custodian is obliged, among others, to grant assistance in order to find the minor's family members, in contacting national and international NGO whose statutory aim is to act for the well–being of minors and refugees. There are also provisions on protection of personal data of aliens. The principle of taking steps aiming to find the minors' relatives was maintained in the draft of 14 March 2007 (its Article 61 sec.3)

NGO-s indicate that the realization of this requirement is very difficult in practice paradoxally because of the norm on the protection of personal data. Moreover, because there are not enough appointed custodians, so they have no time for taking sufficient steps in order to find the minors' families. The other thing is the lack of financial resources for this aim.

8. EXCEPTIONAL MODALITIES OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.32. Apart from detention covered by the next question, are there exceptional modalities for reception conditions in the following cases and if yes, which ones and for how long are they applicable, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)?

No, there are not. The aliens may stay in the reception (usually at the beginning) or accommodation centres. They may stay outside centres. However they may be also detained.

Q.32. A. Persons with specific or special needs, regarding in particular the period of assessment of those needs?

As it was stated before persons with special needs may stay outside the centres but they may enjoy assistance. They receive the equivalent for food and accommodation.

Q.32. B. Non availability of reception conditions in certain areas

In such cases aliens may be moved to other centres. But there cannot be any discussion about "certain areas" in case of Poland because the main rule is concentrate the centres around Warsaw and the Office - not further than 200 km.

Q.32. C. Temporarily exhaustion of normal housing capacities

There are not any rules concerning this but in such a situation the provision on delegation to NGO to run other centres may be applied. Moreover, according to information obtained at the Office, it intends to open a new centre. There is always a possibility to place more aliens in the existing centres but in this case there would be a problem with respecting the family unity.

Q.32. D. The asylum seeker is confined to a border post

There are not provisions on keeping an alien at the border in the Act on Protection. An alien may be detained only on the basis of the decision rendered by a court. However, all the formalities at the border may take a lot of time, sometimes few or several hours, especially if an alien has crossed the border illegally. They are provided with food and medical assistance (if necessary). Staying at the border an alien is allowed to contact with NGO-s and the UNHCR.

However, border check points are not adjusted to the reception of big groups of aliens (information obtained from NGO-s). There are specified rooms but there is not enough space.

It seems that in practice the situation of an alien being confined at the border post may take place, especially in cases when he or he does not explain that he/she intends to apply for the protection. According to Article 101 of the Act on Aliens it may last 24 (maximum time of waiting for the delivery of the court's decision on detention) or even 48 hours, maximum within this time he or she should be transferred to the court and the motion on detention should be submitted simultaneously.

Q.32. E. All other cases not mentioned in the directive (for instance urgent situation in case of a sudden high number of applicants outside a case of application of the directive on temporary protection).

Chapter 3 of the Act on Protection refers to the rules of granting temporary protection within the territory of Poland. It contains general rules but it delegates the Council of Ministers to issue an executive regulation on the conditions of the temporary protection if aliens arrive to the Republic of Poland in great number. So there are not any general rules on temporary protection but the conditions will be adjusted to each event. So far such event has not happened.

Q.33. Detention of asylum seekers (we do not cover the situation of rejected asylum seekers detained for the purpose of their return) (see articles 6 §2, 7 §3, 13, §2 2nd indent and 14 §8 which implies that the directive is in principle applicable in case of detention):

Q.33. A. In which cases or circumstances and for which reasons[1] (identity verification in particular if the persons have no or false documents, protection of public order or national security, refugee status determination, way of entry into the territory, etc) can an asylum seeker be detained during the asylum procedure till his request has been finally rejected. Quote precisely in English in your answer the legal basis for detention of asylum seekers in national law.

According to Article 40 of the Act on Protection an alien applying for refugee status may be detained only if:

"1) he/she submits an application for granting refugee status:
- during the border control, not having the rights of entry on the territory of the Republic of Poland;
- staying on the territory of the Republic of Poland illegally;

2) prior to the submission of an application for granting the refugee status he/she:
   a) crossed or attempted to cross the border contrary to the laws;
   b) obtained the decision on the obligation to leave the territory of the Republic of Poland or the decision of expulsion."

Section 1) a) covers all the cases of false documents or lack of documents.

The draft of 14 march 2007 was to modify the prerequisites of detention. An applicant was to be detained if it is necessary for his/her identification, in order to prevent abuses of the refugee procedure or it is necessary for safety, health, life or property of other people. He/she might be detained if it would be necessary for defence or security of the State or for the protection of the public order or public security. Moreover he/she might be detained if crossed or attempted to cross the border contrary to the laws except situations when she/he arrived directly from a territory where the circumstances of persecution or serious harm exist. He/she could not be detained if he/she stayed in Poland illegally but he/she submitted an application for refugee status without delay and it contained credible reasons of his/her illegal entry and stay.

[1] Please specify if article 18 §1 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Member States shall not hold a person in detention for the sole reason that he/she is an applicant for asylum" is or not respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed).

An alien might be also detained if his/her behaviour in the centre for asylum seekers was a threat for safety, health or life of other aliens staying in a given centre.

Q.33. B. Has your member State adopted measures to transpose §3 of article 7 which is an optional provision? If yes, how has this provision been legally understood (is it a case of detention or an obligation to stay in and not leave a certain place?) and for which reasons can an asylum seeker be "confined" in such a place?

Yes. It is possible on the basis of Article 45 of the Act on Protection, the Head of the Office may (it is not an obligation) ex officio or upon request of an alien to render the decision to release from the guarded centre or the arrest for the purpose of expulsion and render the decision ordering to stay in a specified place or in the location, which he/she may not leave without the permission of the Head of the Office, up to the day of rendering the final decision in the procedure for granting refugee status. An alien may be also obliged to report to the authority indicated in the decision at specified intervals of time.

This decision may be taken if evidence of the case indicates the probability that an alien meets the conditions for being recognized the refugee status or if there are the prerequisites contained in Article 107 of the Act on Aliens.

There are following prerequisites:

1) the reasons justifying application of those measures ceased to exist;
2) any of the circumstances referred to in Art. 103 of the Act on Aliens have arisen (a decision on placing an alien in the guarded centre or in arrest shall not be rendered if it may cause a serious threat to his/her life or health)
3) application of those measures is not possible because of the circumstances other than referred to in art. 103 of the Act on Aliens
4) the decision on expulsion of the alien from the territory of the Republic of Poland has been reversed or invalidated;
5) an alien has been granted the refugee status or asylum;

- an alien has been granted the permit for tolerated stay;
- an alien has been preliminary detained or if any other legal measure resulting in deprivation of liberty has been imposed on him/her.

Q.33. C. Are there legally alternatives to detention, like obligation to report to the authorities, obligation to stay in a place, provision of a guarantor or of a financial guarantee?

On the basis of the Act on Protection and the Act on Aliens – the only possibility was mentioned above – the report to the authorities but as it was stated before the possibilities from Article 45 are not apply in practice.

Q.33. D. Which is the competent authority to order the detention of an asylum seeker? Explain if different authorities are involved to first take and later confirm the decision.

According to Article 42 sec. 1 of the Act on Protection and Article 89 of the draft of 14 March 2007 only the court (the district court) is competent to decide on the placement of an alien in the guarded centre or in the arrest for expulsion.

Q.33. E. For how long and till which stage of the asylum procedure can an asylum seeker be detained?

It is possible that an alien will be detained during the whole procedure, it does not matter if the case is in the first or second instance. However, there are two situations which should be described. If an alien who stays in Poland illegally or has crossed the border illegally applies for the refugee status the court renders the decision about detention for 30 days. According the draft of 14 March 2007 the court was to decide on the alien's detention for period from 30 to 60 days (Article 89 sec.1).

Secondly, if an alien is detained and during the detention he/she applies for the status the court shall extend the period of alien's stay for 90 days (since the day of the submission of the application). If the decision on refusal refugee status is delivered to an alien the period of detention may be prolonged in order to execute the decision on expulsion but it cannot be longer than one year.

Q.33. F. In which places (can we call them "closed centres"?) are asylum seekers detained (places in a special closed centres reserved only to asylum seekers, together with returnees like illegal aliens or even in a normal prison, in case within separated areas or with the other detainees)? Indicate if a difference has to be made following the location of the "closed centres" at the border or on the territory? Which is the authority managing those places and is it the same as the one in charge of reception conditions?

There are guarded centres and arrests for expulsion. They are situated inside the country. Asylum seekers are placed with other illegal immigrants. The Police is usually the owner of the arrests and other centres or the Border Guard if they are situated near the border or at the border for example at the Warsaw Okęcie airport.

Asylum seekers are usually placed in the Guarded Centre in Lesznowola. The conditions are various depending on the place (See: the Report of the European Committee for the Prevention of Torture and Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CPT visit in Poland in 2004 the response of the Polish Government of 2 March 2006 CPT/Inf (2006) 11)

Q.33. G. Does UNHCR and NGOs have access to the places of detention and under which conditions?

According to Article 43 sec. 2 of the Act on Protection and Article 89a of the draft of 14 March 2007 the representative of UNHCR and NGO-s may personally contact an alien and have access to the place of detention. This provision is not applied if it is justified by necessity of providing public security and policy or observation of organizational rules in the guarded centre or in the arrest.

If due to security reasons the authorities of the arrest or the guarded centre refuse an alien personal contact with the representatives of the UNHCR or NGO-s, the authorities should inform about this fact the Office and the UNHCR. Such a decision is final.

In practice (information from the Halina Niec Human Rights Association) the access to the arrests and detention centres is limited because representatives of NGO-s need to apply for a permit to visit an alien. The time of such a visit is limited – max. 1 hour it means that it is impossible to provide legal assistance for many aliens.

Q.33. H. What appeal(s) can asylum seekers introduce against the fact he is detained? Is article 18 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Where an applicant for asylum is held in detention, Member States shall ensure that there is a possibility of speedy judicial review" respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed)?

The Act on Protection in its Article 2 1) and 10) states that the arrest for expulsion and the guarded centres should be understood within the meaning of the Act on Aliens. The Act on Aliens refers to the Code of the Criminal Procedure. It should be understood that an alien may submit the complaint against the decision on detention. However it is difficult o say that it is a "speedy judicial review".

Q.33. I. Is the directive on reception conditions considered to be in principle applicable to the places where asylum seekers are detained? In particular which information do they receive about their rights, which access do they have to legal advice and health care?

The rules on reception are not applied to the detention places. However, according to Article 43 sec. 1 an alien should be informed in a language understandable for him /her about the organizations, which statutorily deal with refugees' affairs and shall be allowed a correspondence or telephone contact with these organizations. According to section 2 an alien particularly in purpose of being granted the legal assistance may contact personally with UNHCR and the mentioned organizations. The delegation of the CTP (see: the Report mentioned above) noticed that not in all the detentions such information in various language were available.

The draft of 14 march 2007 contained a provision on an alien's contact with UNHCR and relevant NGO-s but opposite to the currently binding provisions of the Act on Protection it does foresee the obligation to inform an alien in a language understandable for him /her about the organizations, which statutorily deal with refugees' affairs.

The detained asylum seekers have the access to the heath care. Details of detention are regulated in the Regulation of the Minister of the Interior and Administration of 24 August 2004 (Journal of Laws 2004, No 190, item 1953).

Q.33. J. Apart from freedom of movement, what are the main differences between normal reception conditions and exceptional modalities for reception conditions in case of detention, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)? If it is about closed centres, are the regulations of those places in line with the requirements of the directive (is article 13, §2, second indent of the directive following which "Member States shall ensure that standards of living is met (…) in relation to the situation of persons who are in detention" respected?).

There is a difference between detained asylum seekers and these who stay in centres for asylum seekers in relation to information about NGO-s the. The difference in this field will be bigger when the amendment enters into force.

None of the provisions reflects expressis verbis Article 14 § 8 of the Directive, but the time limit of 30 days for placing an alien in the detention suggests that it is "as short as possible".

Referring to Article 13 §2 the conditions in detention centres are much worse but they are provided at least with food and health care. They have also contact with UNHCR and the NGO-s. Due to Article 103 of the Act on Aliens asylum seekers with special needs may not be detained.

Q.33. K. Are measures taken to avoid detention of asylum seekers with special needs (if yes, which ones?) or are special measures taken because of their needs?

Yes, it is possible, as it was stated in the answer to question 33 B. The most important provision is Article 44 of the Act on Protection with connection of Articles 107 and 103 of the Act on Aliens.

The most important is that the unaccompanied minors and applicants who are presumed to be victims of violence or disabled may not be placed in a guarded centre or deportation arrests. The draft of 14 March 2007 was to introduce an exception. Such an alien might be detained if his/her behaviour would be dangerous for other aliens living in a given centre for asylum seekers (Article 88 sec.2)

Q.33. L. Can minor asylum seekers be detained together with relatives? Can unaccompanied minor asylum seekers be detained? If yes, are there special measures which take into account that children are concerned?

In a situation of illegal stay or arrival to Poland, minors coming with their relatives can be detained in a guarded centre with their relatives but unaccompanied minors are not be detained. They may be allowed to stay together (in one room).

Q.33. M. In particular is article 10 regarding access to education of minors respected in those places?

There are not any possibility to take up the education in detention centres but it must be remembered that if aliens who have not any permit to enter Poland and they apply for the protection at the border, they are detained for 30 days (according to the draft of 14 March 2007 for period from 30 to 60 days) or are not detained at all. The other situation is when aliens apply for the protection during their detention. They may stay in the guarded centre without the access to education much longer - 90 days.

Q.33. N. How many asylum seekers are for the moment detained in your Member State? Which proportion does this represent in comparison of the total number of asylum seekers at the same moment?

There are not any data about applicants detained in the deportation arrests (it should not be more applicants in arrests than in the guarded centre). It is difficult to access because the numbers are changing every day. Usually about 10-15% of applicants are placed in the guarded centres (these who crossed the border illegally or they stayed in Poland illegally or they applied for the refugee status during their detention).

9. ORGANISATION OF THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.34. Explain if the system of providing reception conditions is centralised or decentralised (which levels of government do provide practically reception conditions?) (do not confuse this question with question number 3 about the competence to make rules about reception conditions).

The system is fully centralised. The Office for Organization of Reception Centres of the Office for Foreigners is in the structure of the Ministry of Interior and Administration.

Q.35. In case, are accommodation centres public or/and private (managed by NGOs? If yes, are the NGOs financially supported by the State?)

The centres are not managed by NGO-s (however, there is such a possibility). The Office has its own centres or it rents hotels or other centres with the personnel (for example, cooks, cleaning service, secretariat, etc.) but the social worker is always an employee of the Office, as well as a Polish language teacher or a nurse.

Doctors and nurses are hired by the Ministry of Interior and Administration of Republic of Poland. Hospitals provide the medical assistance on the basis of an agreement with the Office for Foreigners.

Q.36. In case, how many accommodation centres are there in your Member State (distinguish in your answer between public and private centres)?

There are 17 centres. 3 of them belong to the Office, the rest of them are rented.

Q.37. Is there in the legislation a plan or are there rules in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory of your Member State to avoid their concentration in some areas like big cities or to share the costs of their reception between central, regional and local authorities?

There is not such a legislation. The idea is to concentrate the centres around Warsaw (in distance up to 200 km). But if an asylum seeker does not enjoy the assistance he or she is allowed to live where he/she wants.

Q.38. Does a central body representing all the actors (like NGOs) involved in reception conditions exist? Does it play a consultative role for the State authorities, a coordination role for the actors or any other role?

Despite the fact that the system may be named centralised the Office which the main actor cooperates with the NGO –s, for example NGO-s were consulted during the works on the Act on Protection and its amendments.

The UNHCR stresses the growing importance of NGOs that work in the centres, among them Doctors Without Borders and NGOs working in the EQUAL programme.

Q.39. Q.39. A. Which is the body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions as requested by article 23 which is mandatory provision? Include in your answer which is the competent ministry (Interior, Social affairs, etc) for reception conditions?

The Office controls the reception conditions and considers all the complaints for the reception conditions in the centres. However, it may also be noted that the in the case when a decision is taken (for example on withdrawal of the reception conditions or about a limitation on them) an asylum seeker may apply for renewal of the decision and then (if the second decision is not satisfactory) may complain to the court. (In practice there are very exceptional situations).

Q.39. B. Has your Member State (like the Czech Republic did recently) approved quality standards (not necessary legally binding) for housing services (for instance about the number of persons per bedroom on the basis of its size, number of accessible toilets, bathrooms, showers and washing machines per number of persons, existence of common rooms with radio, television, newspapers, books, computers, accessibility of telephone, existence of recreative rooms for children,…) to be respected in particular in accommodation centres?

There are not any quality standards but there are Regulations of the Minister of Interior and Administration on the rules of stay in the reception centres, on the conditions of accommodation of unaccompanied minors and standards of protection in a centre for asylum seekers, there is also the Regulation on conditions of stay in a detention centre. Moreover, the Act on Protection refers to the rules and the Act on Aliens describes some of the condition of stay in the detention centre or arrest for expulsion.

It may be added that the "Guide on Bureau of Organisation of Centres for Aliens Applying for Refugee Status or Asylum" has been published. It is not a document of binding force but it describes the standards of the reception conditions and mechanism of granting assistance in a very clear way. It is published also in English and is accessible on the Office web site www.uric.gov.pl

Q.39. C. How is this system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions organised?

The monitoring of the conditions in the reception centres is conducted by NGOs and UNHCR. The systematical actions of UNHCR and NGOs are restricted due to the lack of financial resources

Q.39. D. Does the body in charge of guidance, control and monitoring produce reports about the level of reception conditions? If yes, how frequently and are they public?

The Office tends to give a very general information. However, each year the Head of the Office submits the report on the activity of the Office in the field of asylum. There is the information about the reception conditions. Moreover, NGO-s publish their own independent reports, for example the Helsinki Foundation issues the series "Raporty –Eksperyzy -Opinie", [Reports, Expertises, Opinions].

Generally there are lack of reports provided by NGO-s due to the above reasons.

Q.40. Q.40. A. What is the total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions for the last year for which figures are available (see article 22 obliging Member States to calculate those statistics about which we also asked the Commission to require them from Member States for mid June)?

The average number of people living in the centres every month is about 3,600 (May 2007) and 548 aliens outside the centres. The total number of aliens in the procedure is about overall 4,500.

Q.40. B. What is the total budget of reception conditions in euro for the last year for which figures are available?

In 2006 the Office spent:
47.562. 800 PLN (it is about 12.500 000 euro). It is more than in 2005 (about 11 000 000 euro).
Including 4.533. 000 PLN for medical treatment (about 1 192 894 euro). It is 3 times more than in 2005.

Q.40. C. What is the average cost of reception conditions in euro per asylum seeker for the last year for which figures are available?

It about 1000 PLN per person (on average).It is about 250 - 270 euro per month per person (depending on the exchange rate).

Q.40. D Are the costs of reception conditions of asylum seekers supported by the central/federal or federated government or are they shared with regional and/or local authorities?

The costs are covered from the central budget.

Q.40. E. Is article 24 § 2 of the directive following which "Member States shall allocate the necessary resources in connection with the nationals provisions enacted to implement this directive" respected?

The sources are concentrated in the Office as the main actor in providing the assistance for asylum seekers.

Q.41. Q.41. A. What is the total number of persons working for reception conditions?

According to the UNHCR information about 100 people are responsible for the reception in the centres (including social workers, doctors, nurses and teachers)

Q.41. B. How is the training of persons working in accommodation centres organised? Does it take into account specific needs of unaccompanied minors when relevant as well as the gender dimension? (see article 14 §5, 19 § 4 and also 24 §1 which are mandatory provisions)?

In 2003 UNHCR organized for Office for Foreigners workers training on how to deal with unaccompanied minors. In 2005 UNHCR organized training for social workers on conflict resolution, negotiation, and mediation with gender dimension in mind. In June 2006 the training on HIV/AIDS was organized for social workers and the medical personnel.

Q.41. C. Are there rules about the deontology of persons working in accommodation centres, in particular on confidentiality?

According to information supplied by the Office and the UNHCR, the Office for Foreigners workers hired in the centres are public workers and as such are bound by the rules for public workers. In addition, Article 9 (protection of the personal data) of the Act on Protection is being applied here.

10. IMPACT OF THE DIRECTIVE

Legal impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.42. Specify if there are or not big problems with the translation of the directive in the official language of your Member State and give in case a list of the worst examples of provisions which have been badly translated? (please note that this question has in particular been added to the questionnaire concerning the new Member States)

The UNHCR Office in Warsaw has observed that the directives' translations (not only this one) are in many cases literal translations, e.g.:" asylum" translated as "azyl", and not as "status uchodzcy." This question is discussed while working on the acts' projects, and practically it requires a new directives' translation for the purpose of institution that is preparing the legal act's project.

Q.43. Where there precise legal rules on reception conditions for asylum seekers before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the directive (if yes, specify what the nature of those rules was (legislation, regulation, administrative instructions,…)?

Yes, there was always the Act (a statute - ustawa). From 1997 till 31August 2003 the Act on Aliens. It referred to the reception conditions but rather not in detail (there were appropriate regulations). The Act on Protection and the Act on Aliens were adopted on 13 June 2003. They were both amended on 22 April of 2005 (among others in order to transpose the Directive). The Act on Protection is completed by 12 executive regulations issued by the Minister of Interior and Administration.

Q.44. Did the legal rules applicable to reception conditions become more clear, precise, coherent or detailed with the adoption of the transposition norms (for instance do you now have after the transposition one basic text dealing with reception conditions instead of numerous different texts in the past?

It is rather difficult to find any differences in the quality of norms referred to the reception conditions. It must be remembered that the Act on Protection was adopted on 13 June 2003, it is just after the issuance of the Directive and that is why the Act was to some extent adjusted to the requirements of the Directive, mainly in the aspect of Poland's endeavours to become an EU Member State. Poland had to take into consideration all the future EC law. But taking into consideration the main amendment of the Act – the first one of 22 April 2005 and the draft of 14 March 2007 it may be observed the tendency to make the norms of the Act more precise and clear.

Q.45. Did the transposition of the directive imply important changes in national law or were the changes of minor importance? In case, list the most important changes that have been introduced.

There are two eminent changes in the Polish law which are connected with the transposition of the Directive – the first one: owing to Article 30a of the Act on Protection an asylum seekers has obtained the possibility to take up any employment (after one year of procedure pending in the first instance). Secondly – the upper secondary education is guaranteed for minors who or whose parents apply for refugee status (Article 94 a of the Act on educational system).

Political impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.46. Explain briefly if there has been an important debate about the transposition of the directive (in particular in the Parliament, but possibly also in the government, between political parties, including in medias, etc; underline in case the main points which have been discussed or have created difficulties)

It is quite difficult to talk about the debate on transposition spread out all over the country. The year 2005 was the year of the double (parliamentary and presidential) elections, so it was difficult to notice this kind of a debate. But on the other hand the draft of the amendment of the Act on Protection and especially the Act on promotion of employment and institution of labour market were consulted with NGOs. The Helsinki Foundation was very active in this field.

Undoubtedly the very active role of the UNHCR in the debate on the transposition should be stressed here. The same situation was in case of the draft of 14 March 2007.

Q.47. Did the transposition of the directive contribute to make the internal rules stricter or more generous? In particular, did your Member State use the occasion of the transposition to abolish more favourable provisions of national law? Does your Member State still have rules more favourable than the provisions of the directive (if yes, try to give the more important examples).

Two very important changes have been introduced into the Polish law in 2005, which was the result of the transposition of the Directive. First, it is the possibility for an asylum seeker to take up work (after one year if the case is still under consideration of the first instance). Secondly, minors are allowed (at least potentially) to take up their education on the upper secondary school level. So, it may be concluded that the Directive has contributed to the generosity of the State towards asylum seekers.

However, providing that in practice it is very difficult for an asylum seeker to obtain any work and there are financial problems with providing the effective education for children, it would be saver to state that the transposition did not have any influence on deterioration of the reception conditions.

11. ANY OTHER INTERESTING ELEMENT

Q.48. What are in your view the weaknesses and strengths of the system of reception conditions in your Member State?

The main weakness of the reception system in Poland is the lack of financial resources. More financial resources could improve the education system for asylum seekers' children and unaccompanied minors. It would be possible to organize extra intensive courses of Polish as well as English languages. It would also be possible to cover costs of language training of psychologists. Generally speaking, social assistance would be higher (140 PLN for clothes is not enough).

More financial resources would make it possible to employ more well qualified social workers who would be able to take care of asylum seekers, especially with special needs, and unaccompanied minors.

Moreover if NGO-s would be financed from the national budget, their assistance for asylum seekers could become more complex and long – lasting.

It may be also stated that there is not any act on legal assistance.

Q.49. Mention any good practice in your Member State which could be promoted in other Member States

It seems that the most important thing is the fact that asylum seekers may enjoy the same reception conditions during all the administrative procedure, even if they receive the negative decision in the first instance. Secondly, an extremely important principle is that all the administrative decisions are under the judicial control.

Taking into consideration the fact that Poland is very often the country of first asylum and many asylum seekers are sent back to Poland on the basis of the Dublin mechanism, it should be noted that the same reception conditions for all asylum seekers should be recognized as a good practice.

The idea of concentration of all the centres around Warsaw may be controversial but it has some advantages because usually all the governmental institutions (like the Office for Foreigners) are located in Warsaw. Moreover, in the UNHCR Office and the main NGOs working for asylum seekers also work in Warsaw. It means that it is easier for asylum seekers to visit all the institutions, and on the other hand, the centres are more accessible for representatives of the UNHCR and NGO-s.

Moreover, the positive description is possible when dealing with the possibility of extending the stay in the reception centre up to three months (according to draft of 14 March 2007 two months) from the date of issuing the decision, including a person with tolerated stay and in future with subsidiary protection, as its aim is to give this person additional time to prepare oneself for the life outside the reception centre.

Q.50. Please add here any other interesting element about reception conditions in your Member State which you did not had the occasion to mention in your previous answer.

The new tendency may be observed that every year more and more NGO-s are active in the field of the protection of asylum seekers, and, what is maybe even more important, that the government is not reluctant to cooperate with them.

However it is very disappointing that the financing of NGOs from the national budget is only in a very small percentage and is mostly financed by various international organizations and institutions, such as UE or UNHCR.

It should be also observed that the number of asylum seekers' children attending schools is growing rapidly. In the school year 2004/2005 only 10% of them started their education at schools, in 2005/2006 – 53 % of them and in 2006/2007 – 88% of them. Maybe it is an influence of the Directive.

QUESTIONNAIRE FOR THE NATIONAL REPORT ON THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE DIRECTIVE :
RECEPTION CONDITIONS OF 27 JANUARY 2003

IN: PORTUGAL

by Nuno Piçarra
nunopicarra@fd.unl.pt

11th of June 2007

1. NORMS OF TRANSPOSITION

Q.1. Identify the main norm of transposition (indicate the title, date, number, date of entry into force and references of publication into the official journal) and indicate its legal nature (legislative, regulatory, administrative); indicate in your answer if this norm was only devoted to the directive or if it has been included in a more general text and indicate in that case by quoting precisely the numbers of the provisions adopted to transpose the directive.

Loi nº 20/2006 adoptée par le Parlement national (Assembleia da República) le 23 juin 2006, portant sur les dispositions complémentaires du cadre juridique relatif à l'asile et aux réfugiés, assurant la pleine transposition dans l'ordre juridique interne de la directive 2003/9/CE du Conseil, du 27 janvier 2003, relative à des normes minimales pour l'accueil des demandeurs d'asile dans les Etats membres, publiée au Diário da República – I Série-A n.º 120 du 23-6-2006, p. 4452-4457, entrée en vigueur le 24-6-2006.
Cette loi ne concerne que la transposition de la directive 2003/9/CE.

Q.2. List by order of importance by using numbers (1, 2, 3) the others norms of transposition if there are more than one (indicate for each norm the title, date, number and references of publication into the official journal; include in your answer the administrative measures taken to ensure implementation of the directive and of the transposition norms like regulations, administrative circulars, special instructions,…)

L'autre texte juridique à mentionner, dans la mesure où il contient plusieurs dispositions en matière d'accueil des demandeurs d'asile est la Loi nº 15/98, du 26 mars, établissant le nouveau cadre juridique en matière d'asile et de réfugiés (Diário da República – I Série-A n.º 72, du 26-3-1998, p. 1328). La Loi nº 20/2006 se prétend un complément de la Loi nº 15/98. Celle-ci a été développée par le Décret-loi nº 242/98, du 7 août, relatif au Commissariat national pour les réfugiés (publié au Diário da República – I Série-A n.º 181, du 7-8-1998). La Loi nº 20/2006 a cependant abrogé le Décret-loi nº 242/98.
Il est encore à mentionner, d'une part, l'arrêté ministériel – Portaria nº 30/2001, du 17 janvier, des ministres des affaires intérieures et de la santé – établissant les modalités spécifiques d'assistance médicale à prêter au cours des différentes phases de la procédure d'octroi du droit d'asile, dès la présentation de la demande jusqu'á la décision finale (publié au Diário da República – I Série-B, nº 14, du 17-1-2001, p. 249) et, d'autre part, la décision ministérielle –

Supprimé :

Despacho 1/SESS/87 –applicable aux montants des allocations à accorder aux demandeurs d'asile.

Q.3. Explain which level of government is competent to adopt the legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers (specify in particular in case of a federal or regional State, if it is the federal/central power or the components; in case, specify below when it is impossible for you to answer a question because it is about the competence of the components and it is impossible for you to gather reliable information about all of them)

Conformément aux dispositions combinées des articles 165, paragraphe 1, sous b), et 227, paragraphe 1, sous b), de la Constitution, c'est au seul niveau central de l'Etat qu'il échoit d'adopter les dispositions juridiques sur les conditions d'accueil des demandeurs d'asile. La compétence pour ce faire appartient à l'Assembleia da República, qui peut autoriser le gouvernement à adopter un décret-loi en la matière.
Les assemblées législatives des deux régions autonomes (Açores et Madère) ne peuvent adopter des dispositions d'exécution en la matière que dans la mesure où l'Assembleia da República ou le gouvernement ne se sont pas réservés le correspondant pouvoir exécutif. Tel n'a pas été le cas.

Q.4. Explain the legal technical choices done to transpose the directive (comment on the nature and level of the norms used to do the transposition: legislative, regulatory, administrative like instructions, etc). Add any other element about the technique of transposition of the directive which is interesting for the implementation of Community law.

Dès lors que la directive porte sur la matière des droits, libertés et garanties, prévue par l'article 165, paragraphe 1, sous b), de la Constitution, en tant que matière relevant de la réserve relative de compétence de l'Assembleia da República, il y avait deux alternatives pour sa transposition : ou bien une loi de cette assemblée, ou bien un décret-loi du gouvernement autorisé par celle-ci. En l'espèce, l'option pour une loi de la Assembleia da República a été déterminée par le fait qu'il s'agit, par la transposition de la directive 2003/9/CE, de compléter la Loi nº 15/98. Il convenait donc d'adopter un acte de la même catégorie normative.

Q.5. Mention if there is a general tendency to just copy the provisions of the directive into national legislation without redrafting or adaptation them to national circumstances? If yes, give some of the worst examples and explain if there is a risk that those provisions remain unapplied or will create difficulties of implementation in the future.

Une tendance générale dans le sens de copier les dispositions de la directive, sans procéder à leur adaptation, n'a pas été constatée dans la Loi n.º 20/2006.

Q.6. Have all the texts necessary to ensure the effective implementation of the new rules of transposition been adopted, prepared or at least foreseen in the future (for example a regulation completing a new law and the necessary instructions telling the administration how to apply the new rules)?

La Loi nº 20/2006 est, pour l'essentiel, auto-applicable. Cependant, certaines de ses dispositions semblent exiger des dispositions complémentaires afin de clarifier leur application. Parmi ces dispositions on peut citer l'article 8, paragraphe 3, concernant la création de modalités spéciales d'enseignement pour demandeurs d'asile mineurs ; les articles 14, paragraphe 5, et 19, paragraphe 8, concernant la formation dont doivent bénéficier tous ceux qui travaillent dans un centre d'accueil ou avec des demandeurs d'asile mineurs ; l'article 19, paragraphe 6, concernant les procédures visant à localiser la famille du demandeur d'asile mineur non accompagné; l'article 18, paragraphe 2, portant sur l'accompagnement psychologique spécialement adapté dont doivent bénéficier tous les demandeurs d'asile mineurs victimes d'abus. Aucun projet de texte portant sur ces mesures n'a cependant été envisagé jusqu'à présent.

2. BIBLIOGRAPHY

Q.7. Has an in-depth preparatory study been made public about the changes at the occasion of the transposition? If yes, thanks for trying to provide us a copy *(please contact to answer this question adequately the body and person who was responsible for the preparation of the transposition of the directive in the public administration).

Il n'y a pas eu d'étude préparatoire. La Loi n.º 20/2006 a été élaborée par le Ministère des affaires intérieures avec la collaboration du Ministère du travail et de la sécurité sociale, du Ministère de l'éducation et du Ministère de la santé.

Q.8. Quote any recent scientific book or article published about the directive, the transposition rules or the question of reception conditions for asylum seekers in general (answer even if this literature is only available in your language and provide the complete title in your language (without translation) with all references; indicate author, title, in case name of periodical, year and place of publication).

Jusqu'à présent, aucun article à ce sujet n'a été publié en langue portugaise.

Q.9. Quote any interesting decision of jurisprudence based on the implementation of the new rules of transposition of the directive (indicate references of publication if any)?

La Loi n.º 20/2006 ayant entrée en vigueur le 24 juin 2006, il n'y a pas encore de décisions jurisprudentielles à son égard.

3. GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

The purpose of the following two questions is to help the reader to understand easily and quickly the system of reception conditions in your Member State and also to avoid that you have to repeat general elements in other parts of the questionnaire. Please do not write more than one or maximum two pages and do not include large historical developments.

Q.10. Describe in general the system of reception conditions in your Member State (in particular which are the main actors in charge of reception conditions?)

Selon l'article 11, paragraphe 1, de la Loi nº 15/98, l'étranger ou l'apatride qui entre dans le territoire national afin d'obtenir l'asile doit présenter sa demande au Service des étrangers et des frontières (ci-après le « SEF »), qui dépend du Ministère des affaires intérieures, ou à n'importe quelle autorité policière. Celle-ci doit transmettre la demande au SEF. C'est à ce service qu'il échoit d'informer le demandeur d'asile, dans un délai de cinq jours, de ses droits et obligations.

L'article 49 de la même loi impose à l'État portugais d'assurer aux demandeurs d'asile, jusqu'à la décision finale sur leur demande « des conditions de dignité humaine ».

Conformément à l'article 22 de la Loi n.º 20/2006 (compris dans le chapitre VII, dont le titre est « mesures destinées à rendre plus efficace le système d'accueil »), il incombe au Ministère des affaires intérieures de garantir aux demandeurs d'asile qui se trouvent retenus dans les postes de frontières les conditions de logement et d'accès à des soins de santé, ainsi que de supporter les charges découlant de l'octroi des conditions matérielles d'accueil jusqu'à la décision sur la recevabilité de la demande, laquelle doit intervenir dans un délai maximal de cinq jours (article 18, paragraphe 3, de la Loi nº 15/98). Ces conditions peuvent être assurées par d'autres entités publiques ou particulières sans but lucratif, en vertu d'un protocole.

Par ailleurs, il incombe au Ministère du travail et de la solidarité sociale, directement ou par l'intermédiaire d'autres entités publiques ou privées sans but lucratif en vertu d'un protocole, de supporter les charges découlant de l'octroi des conditions matérielles d'accueil aux demandeurs d'asile ne se trouvant pas retenus aux postes de frontières et dont la demande a été déclarée recevable jusqu'à la décision finale. Enfin, il échoit au Service national de santé d'assurer l'accès des demandeurs d'asile et des membres de leur famille aux soins de santé.

Q.11.A. Explain if you have different types and levels of reception conditions following the different stages of the asylum procedure (this implies that you have to give briefly the necessary explanations about the asylum procedure). Make if relevant for reception conditions a distinction between the following procedural stages: determination of the responsible Member State on the basis of the Dublin II regulation, special procedures at the border (including transit zones in airports), accelerated procedures, admissibility procedures, eligibility procedures and the different possibilities of appeals (suspensive or not) against a refusal of the asylum request. Indicate what the main differences of reception conditions are between the different stages (if necessary by detailing between the different elements of reception conditions, in particular housing) and explain what the evolution of reception conditions is following the different stages of the procedure.

La Loi nº 15/98 distingue une procédure d'asile « générale » ou commune, dont la première phase porte sur la recevabilité de la demande d'asile et la deuxième phase sur le fond. En tant que procédures spéciales figurent, d'une part, celle portant sur les demandes d'asile présentées aux postes de frontières par des demandeurs ne remplissant pas les conditions exigées pour entrer dans le territoire national. D'autre part, il y a la procédure spéciale de détermination de l'Etat responsable de l'analyse de la demande d'asile. Cela ne signifie cependant pas que la Loi nº 15/98 ou la Loi nº 20/2006 prévoient expressément des différents types et niveaux de conditions d'accueil en fonction du type ou de la phase de la procédure d'asile. En effet, ainsi qu'il a été mentionné, l'article 49 de la Loi nº 15/98 dispose en termes généraux que l'Etat portugais assure à tous les demandeurs d'asile des conditions de dignité humaine jusqu'à la décision finale sur leur demande. La seule distinction juridiquement établie à cet égard tient à l'entité chargée d'assurer ces conditions, dont les formes sont spécifiées à l'article 12 de la Loi nº 20/2006 (voir réponse à la Q 12 A). Le Ministère des affaires intérieures est compétent vis-à-vis des demandeurs d'asile ne réunissant pas les conditions pour entrer dans le territoire national, alors que le Ministère du travail et de la solidarité sociale est compétent vis-à-vis des demandeurs d'asile se trouvant dans le territoire national et dont la demande a été déclarée recevable.

Q.11.B. Indicate precisely for which stage(s) of the asylum procedure the answers on reception conditions you give below are valid.

Au cours de la phase de la recevabilité d'une demande d'asile présentée sur le territoire national, les demandeurs en situation de carence économique sont en principe logés et habillés en nature au CAR et reçoivent du CPR un appui monétaire d'émergence de 30 euros par semaine, pendant huit semaines. Cet appui monétaire vise à assurer le payement des dépenses personnelles et relatives à la nourriture et aux transports. Il s'étend aux demandeurs d'asile résidant chez de la famille ou des amis. Au cours de cette phase de la procédure d'asile, seuls ont droit à une allocation complémentaire pour logement les demandeurs ayant été exclus du CAR pour des raisons disciplinaires ou lorsque le centre est complet.

Au cours de la phase d'appréciation au fond de la demande d'asile, le bénéfice des mêmes conditions matérielles aux demandeurs en situation de carence économique se fait par l'attribution des allocations financières d'appui social. L'allocation d'appui social pour logement constitue la règle. Les demandeurs d'asile résidant hors de la région de Lisbonne ont droit à une telle allocation fournie par le compétent service d'action sociale local. Un adulte seul reçoit un montant d'au moins 70% du salaire minimum national, conformément à la décision ministérielle 1/SESS/87. S'agissant d'une famille, ce montant peut atteindre 100% de ce salaire. Dès lors que cette décision n'a pas été mis à jour depuis 1991, le salaire en référence est toujours de 200 euros, alors que le salaire minimal actuel est de 403 euros et la pension minimale du régime général de la sécurité sociale est de 223 euros. De leur côté, les demandeurs d'asile résidant dans la région de Lisbonne bénéficient, en vertu d'un protocole conclu entre le Centro Distrital de la Sécurité Sociale de Lisbonne et la Santa Casa da Misericórdia de Lisbonne, de l'accompagnement du SES. L'allocation pour logement à laquelle ils ont droit varie entre 150 euros par mois par adulte et 670 euros pour des familles de quatre personnes. Les demandeurs d'asile logeant chez de la famille ou des amis peuvent bénéficier d'une allocation pécuniaire pouvant aller jusqu'à 150 euros par mois.

4. GENERAL RULES ON RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.12.A. Are material reception conditions provided in kind, in money or in vouchers or in a combination of these elements (see article 13, §5 which is an optional provision)? Distinguish between the different elements (housing, food, clothes, health, transportation, pocket money,…). If reception conditions are provided in money (in general or in some cases, for instance when no places are anymore available in accommodation centres), indicate the precise amount given to the asylum seekers. Indicate in your answer what is provided in general and if there are exceptional cases. Specify in your answer if reception conditions are different from the general system of social aid for nationals or aliens and if yes, if and when (which stage of the asylum procedure) can asylum seekers have access to the general system of social aid?

L'article 12, paragraphe 1, de la Loi n.º 20/2006 prévoit en termes généraux que les conditions matérielles d'accueil peuvent revêtir les formes suivantes : (1) logement en nature ; (2) alimentation en nature ; (3) prestation pécuniaire d'appui social, à caractère mensuel, pour les frais d'alimentation, habillement, hygiène et transports ; (4) allocation complémentaire pour logement, à caractère mensuel ; (5) allocation complémentaire pour dépenses personnelles et transports. Selon le paragraphe 2, le logement et l'alimentation en nature peuvent revêtir l'une des trois formes suivantes : (1) dans des installations assimilables à des centres d'hébergement pour des demandeurs d'asile dont la demande a été présentée aux postes de frontière ; (2) dans des centres d'hébergements pour demandeurs d'asile ou installation assimilable, susceptibles de proportionner des conditions de vie appropriées ; (3) dans des maisons particulières, appartements, hôtels, pensions ou d'autres installations adaptées à l'accueil des demandeurs d'asile. Le paragraphe 3 du même article prévoit que peuvent être cumulés (1) le logement et l'alimentation en nature avec l'allocation complémentaire pour frais personnels et transports ; (2) le logement en nature ou allocation complémentaire pour logement avec la prestation pécuniaire d'appui social.

L'article 12, paragraphe 4, prévoit à titre exceptionnel et pour une certaine période, la possibilité d'établir des conditions d'accueil différentes dans les circonstances suivantes : (1) lorsqu'une évaluation initiale des besoins spécifiques des demandeurs d'asile s'avère nécessaire ; (2) lorsque les conditions matérielles d'accueil prévues par le paragraphe 2 ne sont pas disponibles dans la région où se trouve le demandeur d'asile ; (3) lorsque les conditions d'accueil disponibles se trouvent temporairement épuisées ; (4) lorsque les demandeurs d'asile se trouvent en régime de rétention dans un poste de frontière qui ne dispose pas d'installations assimilables à des centres d'hébergement.

Pour ce qui est des conditions matérielles d'accueil fournies en argent, lors de la phase d'admissibilité, les demandeurs d'asile ayant présenté leur requête sur territoire national et séjournant au CAR bénéficient d'une allocation d'émergence de 30 euros par semaine pendant huit semaines, visant à leur permettre de payer leurs dépenses en denrées alimentaires, transports et dépenses personnelles. Cette allocation s'étend aux demandeurs d'asile résidant chez de la famille ou des amis. Au cours de cette phase de la procédure d'asile, seuls ont droit à une allocation complémentaire pour logement les demandeurs qui ont été exclus du CAR pour des raisons disciplinaires ou lorsque le centre est complet. Les demandeurs logeant au CAR reçoivent aussi une carte téléphonique et un titre de transport mensuel à leur arrivée.

Au cours de la phase d'appréciation au fond de la demande d'asile, l'allocation d'appui social pour logement constitue la règle. Les demandeurs d'asile résidant hors de la région de Lisbonne ont droit à une telle allocation fournie par le compétent service d'action sociale local. Un adulte seul reçoit un montant d'au moins 70% du salaire minimum national, conformément au Despacho 1/SESS/87. S'agissant d'une famille de 6 personnes, ce montant peut atteindre 100% de ce salaire. Dès lors que l'arrêté en question n'a pas été mis à jour depuis 1991, le salaire en référence est toujours de 200 euros, alors que le salaire minimal actuel est de 403 euros. En revanche, les demandeurs d'asile résidant dans la région de Lisbonne bénéficient, en vertu d'un protocole conclu entre le Centro Distrital de la Sécurité Sociale de Lisbonne et la Santa Casa da Misericórdia de Lisbonne, de l'accompagnement du SES. L'allocation pour logement à laquelle ils ont droit varie entre 150 euros par mois par adulte et 670 euros pour des familles de quatre personnes. Les demandeurs d'asile logeant chez de la famille ou des amis peuvent bénéficier d'une allocation pécuniaire pouvant aller jusqu'à 150 euros par mois.

Q.12.B. Can the reception conditions in kind, money or vouchers be considered as sufficient "to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence" as requested by article 13, §2 of the directive (which is a mandatory provision but leaves a certain space to Member States)? In order to help to assess the respect of this rule when reception conditions are provided in money, include if necessary in your answer points of comparison with the minimum amount of social aid guaranteed for nationals in your Member State.

Selon l'article 13 de la Loi n.º 20/2006, (1) la prestation pécuniaire d'appui social à caractère mensuel pour des dépenses relatives à l'alimentation, habillement, hygiène et transports, (2) l'allocation complémentaire pour logement à caractère mensuel et (3) l'allocation complémentaire pour dépenses personnelles et transports, sont calculées par rapport à l'allocation d'appui social prévue par la législation nationale. La première ne doit pas dépasser 70% du montant de celle-ci. La seconde et la troisième ne doivent pas dépasser 30% de ce montant. Aucun pourcentage minimum n'est prévu. Il revient au Ministère du travail et de la solidarité sociale de fixer ce pourcentage. À ce stade, cette matière est réglée para le Despacho 1/SESS/87, mis à jour en dernier lieu en 1991.
Les allocations mentionnées en réponse à la Q.11.B. doivent être mis à jour urgemment, car elles ne s'avèrent pas suffisantes pour subvenir aux besoins des demandeurs d'asile. C'est aussi l'opinion généralisée des ONG et des autres acteurs de terrain.

5. PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

Q.13.A. Does the national legislation specifically provide that a request for international protection is presumed to be under the Geneva Convention unless explicitly requested otherwise? (see article 2, b which is a mandatory provision)

Selon l'article 2, sous b), de la Loi n.º 20/2006, la demande d'asile est définie comme une demande présentée par un ressortissant d'un pays tiers ou par un apatride, susceptible d'être comprise comme une demande de protection internationale adressée aux autorités portugaises en vertu de la Convention de Genève ou d'un autre régime subsidiaire de protection internationale prévue par la législation portugaise. Une telle demande de protection internationale doit être considérée comme une demande d'asile, à moins que son auteur ne sollicite explicitement une autre forme de protection pouvant faire l'objet d'une demande séparée.

Q.13.B. Explain if the scope of application of reception conditions is extended to other asylum seekers than refugees in the sense of the Geneva Convention, in particular to persons asking for subsidiary protection or to other forms of protection like humanitarian statuses (see article 3, § 4 which is an optional provision)? If not, explain briefly which the differences between these special regimes and the directive are.

Conformément à son article 1er, paragraphe 2, la Loi n.º 20/2006 n'est pas applicable aux cas relevant de la Loi nº 67/2003, du 23 août, établissant le régime de l'octroi d'une protection temporaire en cas d'afflux massif de personnes déplacées en provenance d'un pays tiers. En revanche, l'article 2, sous g), inclut dans son champ d'application les demandes de protection subsidiaire notamment pour des raisons humanitaires.

Q.13.C. Are there specific provisions in national law for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation (see article 3, §2 which is an optional provision)?

La Loi n.º 20/2006, pas plus que la Loi nº 15/98, ne comprend pas des dispositions relatives aux demandes d'asile diplomatique ou territorial introduites auprès des représentations diplomatiques et consulaires de l'Etat portugais.

Q.14. Are reception conditions available as from the moment one asylum application is introduced? How is article 13, §1 which is mandatory legally understood? Do asylum seekers have to satisfy any other condition in order to get reception conditions?

Il découle de l'article 49 de la Loi nº 15/98, ainsi que de l'article 2, sous b) et c), de la Loi n.º 20/2006 que les demandeurs d'asile ont accès aux conditions d'accueil à partir du moment où leur demande est introduite.

Q.15. Explain when reception conditions end, for instance after refusal of the asylum request (include in your answer the link with the right of appeal against a decision of refusal of the status, in particular the question of its suspensive effect).

Selon l'article 24, paragraphe 1, de la Loi nº 15/98, le recours juridictionnel contre une décision (administrative) de refus d'une demande d'asile a un effet suspensif. Cela signifie que le demandeur d'asile conserve cette qualité jusqu'à ce qu'une décision juridictionnelle en dernière instance soit prononcée sur ce recours.
Cependant, selon l'article 59, paragraphe 1, de la même loi, l'appui social aux demandeurs d'asile cesse, en principe, au moment de la décision administrative finale sur la demande d'asile, « indépendamment de l'introduction d'un recours juridictionnel ». Le paragraphe 2 du même article prévoit néanmoins que la cessation de cet appui n'a pas lieu lorsque qu'il est constaté, après une évaluation de la situation économique et sociale du demandeur, qu'un tel appui doit subsister, en vertu d'une carence économique et sociale prouvée. Le paragraphe 3, pour sa part, prévoit que l'appui social au demandeur d'asile cesse également lorsque (1) sans justification, il ne comparaît pas devant les autorités qui le convoquent, (2) il s'absente ou change de résidence sans en avertir au préalable le SEF.
L'article 16 de la Loi n.º 20/2006 vient compléter ce dispositif. Il précise, d'une part, que les conditions d'accueil peuvent être totalement ou partiellement retirées si le demandeur (1) abandonne le lieu de résidence établi par l'autorité compétente sans en informer le SEF ou sans l'autorisation exigible ; (2) abandonne son lieu de résidence sans en informer l'autorité responsable du logement ; (3) ne respecte pas les obligations de se présenter ; (4) ne prête pas les informations qui lui ont été demandées ou ne comparaît pas aux entretiens individuels auxquels il est convoqué ; (5) a dissimulé ses recours financiers et, par conséquent, a bénéficié indûment des conditions matérielles d'accueil. D'autre part, il est précisé au paragraphe 3 que si, ultérieurement, le demandeur est trouvé ou se présente volontairement aux autorités compétentes, une décision fondée sur les motifs de sa disparition doit être prise à l'égard du rétablissement du bénéfice de quelques ou de toutes les conditions d'accueil. Aux paragraphes 4 et 5, il est précisé que les décisions relatives à la limitation et au retrait de ce bénéfice doivent être prises de façon individuelle, objective et impartiale, être dûment motivées et basées sur la situation particulière de la personne en cause y compris ses besoins particuliers, dans le respect du principe de proportionnalité. Conformément au paragraphe 6, l'accès aux soins de santé urgents n'est pas mis en cause par la limitation ou le retrait des bénéfices en question. Les décisions susmentionnées peuvent faire l'objet d'un recours juridictionnel.

Q.16 Are there special rules or practices regarding reception conditions in case of successive applications for asylum introduced by the same person?

Il n'y a pas de règles ou pratiques spéciales concernant les conditions d'accueil en cas de demandes successives d'asile introduites par la même personne.

Q.17[633]. Information of asylum seekers about their rights and obligations in terms of reception conditions, in particular about established benefits (see article 5 which is to a large extend a mandatory provision; do not confuse this question with the information to be provided to asylum seekers about the asylum procedure):

Q.17.A. Are asylum seekers informed, and if yes about what precisely?

L'article 51 de la Loi nº 15/98 se limitant à disposer que, au début de la procédure d'asile, le SEF doit informer les demandeurs de leurs droits et obligations, l'article 3, paragraphe 1, de la Loi n.º 20/2006 vient le compléter, en précisant que le SEF informe les demandeurs d'asile, immédiatement ou, lorsque la demande a été présentée à une autre autorité, jusqu'à cinq jours à partir de son dépôt, de leurs droits et obligations en matière d'accueil, ainsi que des organisations ou des groupes de personnes qui assurent une assistance juridique spécifique et des organisations disposées à les aider ou informer sur les conditions d'accueil disponibles, y compris les soins médicaux.
En pratique le SEF informe le demandeur d'asile sur son droit à l'appui social pour logement et alimentation, à l'accès au Service national de santé et à l'appui judiciaire. Il l'informe également sur l'appui prêté par le CPR. C'est celui-ci qui assure normalement l'explication détaillée sur le contenu de ces droits et les modalités de leur exercice. Le CPR dispose d'une base de données comprenant une quarantaine d'interprètes capables de communiquer en quarante langues différentes.

Q.17.B. Is the information provided in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

Conformément au paragraphe 2 de l'article 3 de la Loi n.º 20/2006, le SEF fournit au demandeur d'asile, dans une langue qu'il comprenne, une brochure informative ou, le cas échéant, lui fourni ces informations oralement. S'agissant de l'information sur l'appui prêté par le CPR, l'information est orale.

Q.17.C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify the list of languages in which it is available.

Le demandeur d'asile dispose d'informations écrites en portugais, anglais, français, russe et roumain. S'il ne comprend aucune de ces langues, ces informations lui sont prêtées oralement dans sa langue maternelle à travers un interprète.

Q.17.D. Is the deadline of maximum 15 days respected?

Oui, ce délai est respecté. Les informations sont prêtées au demandeur d'asile juste après la présentation de sa demande.

[633] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or to be completed on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Q.18[634]. Information of asylum seekers about the existence of organisations or groups promoting their interest and defending their rights (see article 5 which is to a large extend a mandatory provision):

Q.18.A. Is there a list of organisations dressed by the authorities and if yes is it comprehensive? Is this in particular the case about the possibilities to get legal assistance and health care?

Le SEF ne dispose pas d'une liste de telles organisations et groupes. L'accueil des demandeurs d'asile est effectué par le CPR qui s'articule avec toutes les organisations et groupes participant à l'accueil des demandeurs d'asile. En tout cas, ainsi qu'il a déjà été répondu, tous les demandeurs d'asile sont informés sur les possibilités d'obtenir un appui juridique et d'accéder au Service national de santé pour ce qui est de l'assistance médicale ou en médicaments.

Q.18.B. Is the information provided to the asylum seekers, and if yes, in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

Ces informations sont fournies par écrit, dans les langues susmentionnées, et oralement, moyennant les services d'un interprète, si le demandeur d'asile ne comprend aucune de ces langues.

Q.18.C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify if possible the list of languages in which it is available.

Oui, et ce dans les mêmes langues mentionnées dans la réponse aux Q.17.A. et Q.17.C.

Q.18.D. How many organisations are active in that field in your Member State?

Le CPR (Conselho Português para os Refugiados) est l'organisation la plus importante dans ce domaine au Portugal, qui se dédie à titre exclusif à l'accueil et au soutien des demandeurs d'asile. Outre le CPR, sont à mentionner l'Oeuvre catholique portugaise pour les migrations, le Service jésuite aux réfugiés, les centres d'hébergement et d'accueil de la Mairie de Lisbonne, ainsi que la Santa Casa da Misericórdia, institution privée de solidarité sociale, à travers son SES (Serviço de Emergência Social).

Q.19. Documentation of asylum seekers (see article 6):

Q.19.A. What kind of document is delivered to the asylum seeker? Explain the legal value of this document (just a certification of the status as asylum seeker or also prove of identity?) (see §1 of article 6 which is a mandatory provision).

Selon l'article 4 de la Loi n.º 20/2006, dans un délai de trois jours après le dépôt d'une demande d'asile, son auteur doit recevoir un document certifiant ce dépôt et aussi qu'il est autorisé à demeurer sur le territoire national tant que sa demande est pendante.

[634] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or to be completed on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Après que sa demande a été déclarée recevable, l'article 21 de la Loi nº 15/98 impose au SEF d'émettre en faveur du demandeur d'asile un permis de résidence provisoire.

Q.19B. Are there situations or specific cases in which another equivalent document or even no document is issued? (in particular is there an exception for "procedures to decide on the right of the applicant legally to enter the territory" as made possible by §2 of article 6)?

Il découle des dispositions mentionnées qu'aucun document n'est émis lorsque le demandeur d'asile est maintenu en rétention pendant l'examen d'une demande d'asile présentée à la frontière et dans le cas d'une procédure visant à déterminer le droit du demandeur d'asile à entrer légalement sur le territoire portugais.

Q.19.C. For how long is this document in principle valid and is it necessary to renew it after a certain period?

Le document émis en vertu de l'article 4 de la Loi n.º 20/2006 est en principe valable jusqu'à la prise d'une décision sur la recevabilité de la demande d'asile.
Le permis de résidence provisoire est valable pour une période de 60 jours à partir de la date du dépôt de la demande d'asile et renouvelable pour des périodes de 30 jours jusqu'à la décision finale sur cette demande.

Q.19.D. What is the deadline for the delivery of that document? Is the mandatory deadline of 3 days set by article 6, §1 respected[635]?

Le document prévu par l'article 4 de la Loi n.º 20/2006 doit être émis dans un délai de trois jours après le dépôt de la demande d'asile. Ce délai est en général respecté.

Q.19.E. Is it possible for an asylum seeker to get a travel document for serious humanitarian reasons (see §5 of article 6 which is an optional provision)?

La possibilité pour un demandeur d'asile d'obtenir un document de voyage pour des raisons humanitaires sérieuses n'est pas explicitement prévue par la législation portugaise. Cependant, tout étranger non résident au Portugal qui démontre une impossibilité ou difficulté pour sortir du territoire portugais peut se voir octroyer un sauf-conduit, en vertu de l'article 72 du Décret-loi nº 244/98.

Q.19.F. Is there a central system of registration of asylum seekers and is it or not separate from the registration of aliens? If yes, describe it briefly (content) and indicate in particular if it is an electronic database.

Il y a un système central d'enregistrement de demandeurs d'asile séparé de l'enregistrement des étrangers, comprenant une base de données électronique.

[635] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Q.20. Residence of asylum seekers[636]:

Q.20A. Is in principle an asylum seeker free to move on the entire territory of your Member State or only to a limited part of it and in case, which part? (see article 7, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

Il découle de l'article 5 de la Loi n.º 20/2006, dont le titre est « résidence et liberté de circulation », que les demandeurs d'asile peuvent se déplacer librement sur tout le territoire portugais. Cette disposition, en tant que lex posterior, semble rendre caduque l'exigence faite par l'article 11, paragraphe 5, de la Loi nº 15/98 que chaque demandeur d'asile se présente auprès du SEF de 15 en 15 jours, le jour de la semaine fixé par ce service.

Q.20.B. About the place of residence (see §2 of article 7): explain to which extend the person is free to choose her residence and if this depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance processing of application, attribution of reception conditions,…).

Il découle de l'article 5, sous b), de la Loi nº 20/2006 que les demandeurs d'asile sont en principe libres de choisir leur lieu de résidence. En effet, ils ne sont obligés que de communiquer à l'entité responsable de leur logement tout changement d'adresse. Cela s'applique même si un demandeur d'asile est destinataire d'un appui social pour logement, en raison de sa situation de carence économique et sociale.

Q.20.C. About the place of reception (meaning where the asylum seeker has to stay to benefit from reception conditions) (see § 4 of article 7): explain which are the general rules about the determination of this place (to which extend are the decisions determining the place taken individually and do they take into account the personal situation of the asylum seeker?) and to which extend the person is free to choose it and if it depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance attribution of reception conditions, processing of the application,…).

L'article 6 de la Loi n.º 20/2006 dispose que, s'agissant de l'octroi d'un logement aux demandeurs d'asile en situation de carence économique, des mesures appropriées doivent être prises afin de maintenir tant que possible l'unité de la famille se trouvant sur le territoire national.
Le législateur portugais n'a pas fait usage du paragraphe 4 de l'article 7 de la directive et par conséquent n'a pas prévu que, pour bénéficier des conditions matérielles d'accueil, les demandeurs doivent effectivement résider dans un lieu déterminé fixé par l'autorité compétente.

[636] Nota bene: the case of detention is covered by other questions and should be ignored under this question.

Q.20.D. If all asylum seekers are not placed in accommodation centres because of capacity limits, explain how the persons are distributed between accommodation centres and other accommodation facilities (which authority takes the decisions, on the basis of which elements, can that decision be appealed by the asylum seeker)[637]

Quand le CAR, seul centre d'hébergement de demandeurs d'asile existant au Portugal, est complet, celui-ci loge les demandeurs d'asile dans des pensions. Une telle décision est prise par la direction du CAR selon des critères tenant compte de la vulnérabilité des cas individuels et d'ordre d'arrivée au centre.

Q.20.E. How can an asylum seeker ask to leave temporarily the place of residence or of reception or an assigned area? How is the individual AND impartial character of the decision ensured? (see §5 of article 7 which is a mandatory provision).

La Loi nº 20/2006, pas plus que la Loi nº 15/98, ne prévoit rien à cet égard. Il découle cependant de son article 5, sous b), que le principe est celui de la liberté de changer temporairement d'adresse pourvu que le demandeur d'asile la communique à l'entité responsable de son logement. Selon les règles du CAR, où la majorité des demandeurs d'asile choisit de loger pendant la phase d'admissibilité de la procédure d'asile, les usagers ont le droit de quitter temporairement les installations pour y revenir à un moment postérieur moyennant une demande d'autorisation à la direction du CAR. Les demandes sont analysées individuellement et la décision dépend des justifications présentées.

Q.21.A. Do rules on reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions exist in internal legislation and if yes in which cases (mention in particular if there are cases not foreseen by article 16, § 1 and 2 which are optional provisions)? Distinguish in your answer between cases of reduction and withdrawal and explain which conditions can be reduced and if access to emergency health care is always ensured as requested by article 16, § 4, last sentence.

Il y a en droit portugais des règles relatives à la limitation et au retrait du bénéfice des conditions d'accueil. L'article 16, paragraphe 2, de la Loi n.º 20/2006 prévoit que les conditions d'accueil peuvent être retirés, totalement ou en partie, si le demandeur d'asile, sans justification, (1) abandonne le lieu de résidence établi par l'autorité compétente sans en informer le SEF, ou sans l'autorisation nécessaire ; (2) abandonne son lieu de résidence sans en informer l'entité compétente pour le logement ; (3) ne respecte pas les obligations de se présenter ; (4) ne prête pas les informations qui lui sont demandées ou ne se rend pas aux entretiens individuels, lorsqu'il est convoqué à cette fin ; (5) a dissimulé ses ressources financières et a donc indûment bénéficié des conditions matérielles d'accueil. Le fait qu'un demandeur d'asile a déjà introduit une demande au Portugal ne constitue pas un motif de limitation ou de retrait du bénéfice des conditions d'accueil, pas plus que le fait qu'un demandeur d'asile n'a pas été en mesure de prouver que sa demande a été introduite dans un délai raisonnable après son arrivée au Portugal.

[637] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Selon l'article 16, paragraphe 4, les décisions portant réduction et retrait du bénéfice des conditions d'accueil sont prises de façon individuelle, objective et impartiale et doivent être dûment motivées. La Loi nº 20/2006 n'établit pas des critères de distinction entre réduction et retrait des conditions d'accueil. C'est donc à l'administration qu'il revient de choisir entre les deux possibilités. Toutefois, son article 16, paragraphe 6, prévoit explicitement que la réduction ou le retrait de ce bénéfice n'excluent pas l'accès aux soins médicaux d'urgence.

Q.21.B. Has article 16, §2 dealing with refusal of reception conditions for unreasonably late applications for asylum been transposed by your Member State (or was this case already applicable before transposition)? Are there cases in practice[638]?

Ainsi qu'il a déjà été mentionné, la Loi nº 20/2006 n'a pas transposé l'article 16, paragraphe 2, de la directive. Toutefois, selon l'article 13, paragraphe 1, sous d), de la Loi nº 15/98, une demande d'asile est irrecevable si elle est présentée, sans justification, après le délai de 8 jours prévu par l'article 11, paragraphe 1, de la même loi.

Q.21.C. How is ensured that decisions of reduction or withdrawal are taken individually, objectively AND in particular impartially (for instance through an independent arbitrator) (see article 16, § 4, which is a mandatory provision)?

Il est assuré que les décisions portant limitation ou retrait du bénéfice des conditions d'accueil sont prises objectivement et impartialement par un mécanisme de contrôle a posteriori : toutes ces décisions peuvent faire l'objet d'un recours juridictionnel, conformément au paragraphe 7 de l'article 16 de la Loi nº 20/2006.

Q.21.D. Is statement 14/03 adoted by the Council at the same moment as the directive respected (see the documentation pack you received at our meeting inn Brussels in April)?

La déclaration 14/03, adoptée par le Conseil en même temps que la directive, est respectée par la Loi n.º 20/2006. En effet, d'une part, l'article 16, paragraphe 4, de la directive, auquel se réfère cette déclaration, a été pleinement transposé par l'article 16, paragraphes 4 à 6, de la Loi n.º 20/2006. Il en va de même pour l'article 17 de la directive, lorsqu'on le compare avec l'article 17 de la Loi n.º 20/2006. Finalement, c'est la Constitution portugaise elle-même qui impose à tous les pouvoirs de l'Etat, y compris le législatif, le respect de la Convention européenne des droits de l'homme.

[638] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Q.21.E. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements on cases of reduction, withdrawal or refusal which have been taken, and if yes, what has been the outcome[639]?

Il n'y en a pas.

Q.22.A. Appeal against a negative decision relating to the granting of benefits or based on article 7 (see article 21 which is a mandatory provision): indicate against which decision an appeal can be introduced, describe the system of appeal in general and include in particular in your answer the information given to asylum seekers about possibilities of appealing, deadline for appealing, if the appeal has or not a suspensive effect, if there are different steps (for instance first an administrative appeal and in particular if the guarantee of an appeal before a judicial body in the last instance is respected)?

Aux termes de l'article 21 paragraphe 1, de la Loi n.º 20/2006, les décisions négatives portant sur l'octroi des conditions d'accueil, ainsi que les décisions prises en matière de limitation et de retrait de ces conditions, qui concernent individuellement les demandeurs d'asile, sont soumises à toutes les garanties administratives et juridictionnelles prévues par la loi générale. S'agissant d'actes administratifs, il leur est directement applicable l'article 268, paragraphe 4, de la Constitution, aux termes duquel « la tutelle juridictionnelle effective des droits ou des intérêts légalement protégés des administrés leur est garantie, y compris, notamment, la reconnaissance de ces droits ou intérêts, le recours contre tout acte administratif leur portant atteinte, indépendamment de sa forme, la détermination de la pratique d'actes administratifs légalement dus et l'adoption des mesures conservatoires appropriées ». Ces mesures conservatoires comprennent la possibilité d'une suspension de l'efficacité de telles décisions si les conditions tenant au fumus boni juris et au periculum in mora sont réunies, les recours de ce type n'ayant pas en principe un effet suspensif. Dès que l'acte administratif est susceptible de porter atteinte à l'intéressé, il peut faire directement l'objet d'un recours juridictionnel sans qu'il soit nécessaire de présenter un recours administratif auparavant.
En tout cas, seul le recours juridictionnel introduit contre une décision de refus d'octroi de l'asile a un effet suspensif (article 24, paragraphe 1, de la Loi nº 15/98). Par contre, le recours introduit contre une décision administrative déclarant irrecevable une demande d'asile n'a qu'un effet dévolutif (article 20, paragraphe 4, de la même loi).
Les demandeurs d'asile doivent être informés de tout cela en vertu de l'article 3, paragraphe 1, de la Loi n.º 20/2006. Le destinataire de ce devoir est le SEF.

Q.22.B. Explain which are the possibilities for asylum seekers to benefit from legal assistance when they introduce such an appeal (see article 21, §2 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to Member States)?

Aux termes de l'article 21, paragraphe 2, de la loi n.º 20/2006, c'est la loi générale relative à l'assistance judiciaire qui s'applique dans ces cas. Cette loi a été adoptée en exécution de l'article 20, paragraphe 1, de la Constitution, en vertu duquel « l'accès au droit et aux tribunaux est garanti à toute personne pour la défense de ses droits et de ses intérêts protégés par la loi. La justice ne pourra être refusée pour insuffisance de moyens économiques ». Cette disposition constitutionnelle a été concrétisée en dernier lieu par la Loi nº 34/2004 et par le Décret-loi nº 71/2005, applicables s'agissant de l'assistance judiciaire aux demandeurs d'asile.

[639] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Q.22.C. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones[640]?

Il n'y en a pas.

Q.22.D. Is a mechanism of complaint for asylum seekers about quality of reception conditions in general (even if they are not personally concerned) organised? If yes, before which authority? Is it linked to the system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions (see below question nº 39)?

Un tel mécanisme n'existe pas.

6. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.23. Family unity of asylum seekers: define how a family is defined in relation with article 2, (d) which is a mandatory provision and explain how housing is provided to a family (see articles 8 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to member States and 14, §2, (a) which is a mandatory provision).

Aux termes de l'article 2, sous d), de la Loi n.º 20/2006, la famille préalablement fondée au pays d'origine du demandeur d'asile comprend (1) son conjoint ou son partenaire non marié engagé dans une relation stable depuis plus de deux ans ; (2) les enfants mineurs ou incapables du couple, à condition qu'ils soient non mariés et à charge, indépendamment du fait d'être nés du mariage, hors mariage ou d'avoir été adoptés.
L'article 6 prévoit que, au moment de fournir un logement au demandeur d'asile, il faudra prendre les mesures appropriées pour maintenir dans la mesure du possible l'unité de sa famille sur le territoire portugais, pour lui accorder la protection de sa vie familiale et pour faire en sorte que ses enfants mineurs soient logés avec les parents ou avec le membre adulte de la famille qui les a sa charge.
Dans la pratique, le CPR essaie toujours de garantir dans le CAR, l'unité de la famille des demandeurs d'asile pendant la phase d'admissibilité.

Q.24.A. How is housing of asylum seekers organised: describe the system in general and indicate in particular what is the most frequently system used (see article 14, §1 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space for

[640] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Member States; distinguish between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels places or other premises).

Selon l'article 12, paragraphe 2, de la Loi n.º 20/2006, le logement doit être fourni sous une des formes suivantes : (1) dans des installations assimilables à des centres d'hébergement lorsque la demande d'asile est présentée aux postes de frontière ; (2) dans des centres d'hébergement pour demandeurs d'asile ou assimilables, offrant des conditions de vie appropriées ; (3) dans des maisons, appartements, hôtels ou d'autres installations adaptées à l'hébergement des demandeurs d'asile.

Q.24.B. What is the total number of available places for asylum seekers?[641] Distinguish in your answer between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels or other premises.

Il n'y a qu'un seul centre d'hébergement, le nouveau CAR de Bobadela, Loures, avec 32 places, inauguré en Décembre 2006 et ayant substitué le précédant. Dès que ces places sont occupées, les demandeurs d'asile sont logés dans des pensions ou appartements.

Q.24.C. Is this number of places for asylum seekers sufficient in general or frequently insufficient?[642]

Compte tenu du nombre réduit de demandeurs d'asile au Portugal, le nombre de places qui leur sont destinées semble en général suffisant. Lorsque le CAR devient complet, le recours aux pensions existantes dans la région de Lisbonne donne une réponse satisfaisante.

Q.24.D. Are there special measures foreseen in urgent cases of a high number of news arrivals of asylum seekers (outside the case of application of the directive on temporary protection)?

Il n'y a pas de mesures prévues pour des cas urgents d'arrivée en grand nombre de demandeurs d'asile.

Q.25. Accommodation centres (important note: all the following questions are about open and not closed centres where asylum seekers are detained which are covered by another question)

Q.25.A. Are there different categories of accommodation centres, for instance depending of the stage of the procedure (admissibility and eligibility)?

Il n'y a pas de différentes catégories de centres d'hébergement, mais un seul et unique, le CAR..

[641] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[642] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Q.25.B. Is there a legal time limit for accommodation in a centre after which the asylum seekers have access to private houses or apartments or is this limit linked to a stage of the asylum procedure?

Une telle limite n'existe pas. En général le CPR n'accueillit des demandeurs d'asile dans le CAR que pendant la phase de la recevabilité de la procédure.
Mais il n'est pas rare que des personnes y demeurent après que leur demande d'asile a été déclarée recevable et ce, jusqu'à ce qu'elles se trouvent un hébergement privé grâce aux allocations sociales reçues de la Santa Casa da Misericórdia ou de la Segurança Social.

Q.25.C. Is there a general regulation about the internal functioning of those centres and the rights and duties of the asylum seekers? If yes, is this general regulation applicable to public and private centres? If not, are the centres supposed to adopt an internal regulation and does a central authority have or not a kind of control about its content?

Le CAR, seul centre d'hébergement servant au logement collectif des demandeurs d'asile au sens de l'article 2, sous l), de la directive, est un centre de nature privée, géré par le CPR, qui a établi son propre règlement intérieur.

Q.25.D. Do the regulations foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers in case of breach of the rules? (see article 16, §3) If yes, which sanctions for which rules? Which is the competent authority to decide? How is it ensured that decisions are taken individually, objectively and in particular impartially (for instance through an independent arbitrator) as requested by §4 of article 21 which is mandatory provision*?* Which are the possibilities of appealing against those decisions if the system is different from the general one under question n°22? Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones? [643]

Le règlement intérieur du CAR prévoit l'abandon du centre dans les cas de non respect des règles en vigueur. C'est à la direction qu'il incombe de prendre les décisions correspondantes (après des avertissements préalables et une évaluation de la gravité des infractions). Un recours contre une telle décision peut être introduit devant la présidence du CPR. Il n'y a pas, jusqu'à présent, de tels recours.

Q.25.E. Are asylum seekers involved in the management of these centres? If yes, how (advisory board, appointment or election of representatives)? (see article 14, §6 which is an option provision).

Non, les demandeurs d'asile ne participant pas à la gestion du CAR.

Q.25.F. Do specific rules exist on work of asylum seekers inside the accommodation centres different from the general ones about employment (see below)? If yes, which ones? Can working inside accommodation centres be considered as a (mandatory) contribution of the asylum seekers to the management of the centres, is it or not paid and considered as implying access to the labour market and subject to the same rules?

[643] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Il n'y a pas de règles spécifiques concernant le travail des demandeurs d'asile dans le CAR différentes des règles générales.
Le travail dans ce centre ne peut pas être considéré comme une contribution obligatoire des demandeurs d'asile pour sa gestion. Il ne peut pas être considéré comme impliquant l'accès au marché de travail.

Q.26.A. How can asylum seekers communicate with legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGOs? (see article 14, §2, (b) which is a mandatory provision).

Conformément à l'article 14, paragraphe 1, sous c), de la Loi n.º 20/2006, l'entité responsable de l'octroi du logement en nature doit assurer aux demandeurs d'asile la possibilité de communiquer avec leur famille, leurs conseils juridiques, les représentants du Haut Commissariat des Nations unies pour les réfugiés et du CPR qui est l'organisation non gouvernementale la plus active dans ce domaine.

Q.26.B. What are the rules about access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs regarding access to accommodation centres and other housing facilities (see article 14, §7 which is a mandatory provision).

Aux termes de l'article 14, paragraphe 4, de la Loi n.º 20/2006, les conseillers juridiques des demandeurs d'asile et les représentants de l'UNHCR, du CPR, ainsi que d'autres ONG reconnues par l'Etat qui exercent des activités dans ce domaine, peuvent accéder au centre d'hébergement et à d'autres locaux dans lesquels les demandeurs d'asile sont logés.

Q.26.C. Can the access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs be limited for security reasons or any other reason (see article 14, §7, last sentence)?

Des limites à cet accès ne peuvent être imposées que si dûment motivées et pour des raisons tenant à la sécurité du centre et des locaux, ainsi que des demandeurs d'asile. C'est ce qui dispose le paragraphe 4, in fine, de l'article 14 de la Loi n.º 20/2006.

Q.27.A. Is a medical screening organised by the receiving State, is it mandatory or voluntary? Does it include HIV tests? (see article 9 which is an optional provision).

Aux termes de l'article 7 de la Loi nº 20/2006, les autorités sanitaires peuvent exiger, pour des raisons de santé publique, que les demandeurs d'asile soient soumis à un examen médical dont les résultats sont confidentiels et n'affectent pas la procédure d'asile. Cela n'inclut pas obligatoirement le test HIV.

Q.27.B. Do the legal provisions on reception conditions ensure that asylum seekers receive at least emergency care and essential treatment of illness as requested by article 15 §1 which is a mandatory provision? Do they have a further access to health care?

Pour ce qui est de l'accès aux soins de santé, l'article 15, paragraphe 1, de la Loi n.º 20/2006 se borne à renvoyer à l'article 53 de la Loi n.º 15/98, aux termes duquel il est reconnu aux requérants d'asile l'accès au Service national de santé.

Q.27.C. What is the practice regarding access of asylum seekers to health care and how is it organised? In particular, what is the situation in accommodation centres (are doctors coming to the centres or do asylum seekers go to doctors outside)?[644]

Les demandeurs d'asile ont accès au Service national de santé, à titre gratuit. Il leur est garanti des soins primaires de santé, des moyens de diagnostique et thérapeutiques, internement, appui domiciliaire et médicaments. Ces médicaments sont en général payés par le CPR. Dans le CAR il n'y a pas de médecin, mais seulement une pharmacie.
Le CPR a établi des partenariats notamment avec le Instituto de Higiene e Medicina Tropical pour le dépistage des maladies infecto-contagieuses et avec la Santa Casa da Misericórdia pour l'oftalmologie et la psychologie clinique. Voir réponse à la Q.11.A.

Q.28.A. What is the length of the period determined by the concerned Member State during which asylum seekers have no access to the labour market? (see article 11 which is a mandatory provision).

L'article 9, paragraphe 2, de la Loi n.º 20/2006 dispose que l'accès au marché de travail n'est interdit aux demandeurs d'asile que pour la période entre le dépôt de la demande d'asile et la décision portant sur sa recevabilité, sauf si ce demandeur est titulaire d'un permis de résidence ou d'un autre titre de séjour sur le territoire national, qui lui permette d'exercer une activité professionnelle, subordonnée ou indépendante. Le paragraphe 3 précise qu'une telle période d'interdiction ne peut pas être supérieure à vingt jours à partir de la date du dépôt de la demande d'asile.

Q.28.B. After that period, are asylum seekers or not obliged to obtain a work permit? In case is there a limit for the administration to deliver the permits and how quick are they delivered? What is their length?

Après cette période, les demandeurs d'asile ne sont pas obligés d'obtenir un permis de travail.

Q.28.C. After that period, what are the conditions for access of the asylum seekers to the labour market? (in particular, are there rules concerning the maximum allowed of working hours or days per week, month or year, limits in terms of type of work or of professions authorised?

[644] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Après cette période, les demandeurs d'asile sont soumis aux lois générales du travail, qui prévoient en fait une période maximale de travail et des limites selon le type de travail ou la profession exercée.

Q.28.D. What are the rules in terms of priorities between asylum seekers on the one hand and nationals, EU or EEE citizens and legally third-country nationals on the other?

L'ordre juridique portugais ne comprend pas de règles à cet égard.

Q.28.E. Do asylum seekers have access to vocational training, does this or not depend of their right to access to the labour market, and in case at which conditions? (see article 12 which is optional regarding §1 and mandatory regarding § 2)

Selon l'article 10, paragraphe 1, de la Loi n.º 20/2006, les demandeurs d'asile ont accès à des programmes et à des mesures d'emploi et de formation professionnelle, qu'ils accèdent ou non au marché de travail. Selon le paragraphe 2, l'accès à la formation professionnelle lié à un contrat de travail est subordonné à la possibilité, pour le demandeur, d'accéder au marché de travail.

Q.28.F. Are the rules regarding access to the labour market adopted to transpose the directive more or less generous than the ones applicable previously?

Ces règles sont d'une façon générale plus généreuses que celles appliquées auparavant, prévues par l'article 55 de la Loi nº 15/98.

Q.29. Are reception conditions subject to the fact that asylum seekers do not have sufficient resources? Are asylum seekers requested to contribute to reception conditions when they have personal resources (for instance if they work) or to refund the authorities if it appears that they have resources? (see article 13 §§ 3 and 4 which are optional provisions)

Aux termes de l'article 11, paragraphe 3, de la Loi n.º 20/2006, lorsqu'il est prouvé qu'un demandeur d'asile dispose des ressources suffisantes, il peut lui être exigé une contribution, totale ou partielle, pour la couverture du coût des conditions matérielles d'accueil et des soins de santé. Selon le paragraphe 4, s'il est prouvé qu'un demandeur d'asile disposait de ressources suffisantes pour couvrir le coût des conditions matérielles d'accueil et les soins de santé au moment où ces besoins fondamentaux ont été couverts, l'autorité compétente peut lui demander le remboursement correspondant.

7. SPECIAL NEEDS OF PARTICULAR CATEGORIES OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.30.A. Which of the different categories of persons with special needs considered in the directive are taken into account in the national legislation (see article 17, §1 which is a mandatory provision): disabled people, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence? Include in your answer all other categories envisaged in national law.

L'article 17, paragraphe 1, de la Loi n.º 20/2006, en renvoyant aux articles 56 et 58 de la Loi nº 15/98 établit comme principe général que l'Etat portugais doit tenir compte de la « situation des personnes particulièrement vulnérables », y compris les handicapés, les personnes âgées, femmes enceintes, parents seuls avec des enfants – relevant toutes du champ d'application de l'article 15, paragraphe 2, de la Loi nº 20/2006. L'article 18 est dédié spécifiquement aux mineurs, l'article 19, aux mineurs non accompagnés et l'article 21, aux personnes ayant subi des tortures, des viols ou d'autres formes graves de violence.

Q.30.B. How is their specific situation taken into account (see articles 13, §2, second indent, 16 §4 second sentence and 17 which are mandatory provisions)?

La situation spécifique de ces personnes est prise en compte à travers d'une prestation de conditions matérielles d'accueil et des soins de santé appropriés.

Q.30.C. How and when are the special needs of the concerned persons supposed to be legally identified (see article 17 § 2 which is a mandatory provision and clarify how it has been interpreted by transposition)?

Selon l'article 17, paragraphe 2, de la Loi n.º 20/2006, lors du dépôt de la demande d'asile ou à toute autre phase de la procédure, l'autorité compétente doit identifier les personnes dont les besoins spéciaux doivent être pris en compte, moyennant une évaluation individuelle de leur situation.

Q.30.D. Is the necessary medical and other assistance provided to persons with special needs as requested by article 15, §2 which is a mandatory provision and in particular to victims of torture and violence as requested by article 20 which is a mandatory provision?

L'article 17, paragraphe 1, de la Loi nº 20/2006, combiné avec l'article 20, ainsi qu'avec l'article 58 de la Loi nº 15/98, impose à l'Etat portugais de fournir des soins de santé, un traitement spécial et un accompagnement par le centre de sécurité sociale compétent aux personnes ayant été victimes de torture et de violence. Conformément à l'article 15, paragraphe 2, « il est prêté de l'assistance médicale, ou tout autre qui s'avère nécessaire, aux demandeurs d'asile ayant des besoins particuliers ».

Q.31. About minors:

Q.31.A. Till which age are asylum seekers considered to be minor?

Jusqu'à 18 ans.

Q.31.B. How is access of minor asylum seekers to the education system ensured? Is it at school or in case inside accommodation centres and can it be considered as similar to the conditions for nationals as requested by article 10, §1?

Selon l'article 8, paragraphe 1, de la Loi nº 20/2006, qui complète l'article 57 de la Loi nº 15/98, les mineurs demandeurs d'asile ainsi que les enfants mineurs des demandeurs d'asile ont accès au système d'enseignement public obligatoire dans les mêmes conditions des ressortissants portugais. Si, au vu de la situation spécifique du mineur, cet accès n'est pas possible, le département ministériel compétent doit prendre les mesures nécessaires pour lui fournir des formes d'enseignement appropriées (paragraphe 3 de l'article 8).

Q.31.C. Is access to education ensured not later than 3 months as requested by article 10, §2 (or after maximum one year if specific education for asylum seekers is provided) and till an expulsion decision is really enforced?

Conformément à l'article 8, paragraphe 2, de la Loi nº 20/2006, l'accès au système d'enseignement doit être assuré jusqu'à trois mois à compter de la date de la présentation de la demande d'asile par le mineur ou par ses parents. Cet accès doit se maintenir tant que leur situation ne subit pas des changements pour ce qui est du statut qui leur a été accordé.

Q.31.D. Is specific education (like language classes) available for asylum seekers, in particular to facilitate their effective access to the education system of the reception Member State (see article 10, §2 which is an optional provision)?

L'article 8, paragraphe 3, de la Loi nº 20/2006 permet d'accorder une éducation spécifique au mineur en vue de faciliter son accès effectif au système d'enseignement. Cette éducation spécifique inclut l'enseignement de la langue portugaise.

Q.31.E. Are minors in general accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them? (see article 14, § 3)

L'article 14, paragraphe 1, sous b), de la Loi nº 20/2006 établit le principe selon lequel les enfants mineurs des demandeurs d'asile ou les demandeurs d'asile mineurs sont logés avec leurs parents ou avec le membre adulte de la famille qui est responsable pour eux.

Q.31.F. Do minors with special needs enumerated by article 18, §2 which is a mandatory provision, have access to appropriate mental health care and qualified counselling?

En vertu de l'article 18, paragraphe 2, de la Loi nº 20/2006, les mineurs ayant été victimes de toute forme d'abus, de négligence, d'exploitation, de torture, de traitements cruels, inhumains et dégradants, ou de conflits armés, ont accès au services de réhabilitation, à l'assistance psychologique et au soutien qualifié.

Q.31.G. How and when is organised the representation of unaccompanied minors (guardianship, special organisation) and regularly assessed? (see article 19, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

Aux termes de l'article 56 de la Loi nº 15/98, « sans préjudice des mesures de protection applicables en vertu de la législation concernant la tutelle des mineurs, et lorsque les circonstances l'exigent, les demandeurs d'asile mineurs peuvent être représentés par une entité ou une organisation non gouvernementale ». L'article 19, paragraphe 1, de la Loi nº 20/2006, en renvoyant à cet article, vient préciser que de telles entités ou organisations doivent « assurer efficacement les soins et le bien-être des mineurs » et évaluer régulièrement leur situation. La législation concernant la tutelle des mineurs est appliquée, en vertu du principe de l'égalité établi par la constitution, aux mineurs étrangers non accompagnées. Les demandeurs d'asile mineurs sont d'office représentés par le Ministère public.

Q.31.H. How is placement of unaccompanied minors organised (with adult relatives, a foster family, in special accommodation centres or other suitable accommodation)? (see article 19, §2 which is mandatory provision)

Selon l'article 19, paragraphe 3, de la Loi nº 20/2006, les mineurs non accompagnés qui présentent une demande d'asile doivent être placés, à compter de la date à laquelle ils sont admis sur le territoire national jusqu'à celle à laquelle ils doivent le quitter, (1) auprès de membres adultes de leur famille ; (2) au sein d'une famille d'accueil ; (3) dans des centres d'hébergement avec des installations spéciales pour mineurs ; (4) dans d'autres lieux d'hébergement disposant d'installations appropriées pour des mineurs et, dès que justifié, dans des institutions d'accueil de personnes ayant des besoins particuliers.
Le paragraphe 4 prévoit que les mineurs non accompagnés âgés de seize ou de plus de seize ans peuvent être placés dans des centres d'hébergement pour demandeurs d'asile adultes.
Finalement le paragraphe 5 dispose que les frères doivent être maintenus ensemble, compte tenu des intérêts supérieurs du mineur et, en particulier, de leur âge et de leur maturité, les changements de lieux de résidence des mineurs non accompagnés devant être limités au minimum.

Q.31.I. How is the tracing of the family members of the unaccompanied minors organised? Are measures taken to protect confidentiality of information when necessary? (see article 19, §3 which is a mandatory provision)

Conformément à l'article 19, paragraphe 6, de la Loi nº 20/2006, le SEF en articulation avec les autres autorités participant à la procédure d'asile, ainsi qu'avec le Ministère des affaires étrangères, doit déployer tous les efforts pour trouver les membres de la famille du mineur non accompagné, en vue de protéger ses intérêts supérieurs.
Selon le paragraphe 7 du même article, au cas où la vie ou l'intégrité physique d'un mineur ou de ses proches pourraient être en risque, notamment s'ils sont restés dans leur pays d'origine, la collecte, le traitement et la diffusion d'informations concernant ces personnes sont effectués à titre confidentiel pour éviter de compromettre leur sécurité. Finalement, en vertu du paragraphe 8, le personnel travaillant avec des mineurs non accompagnés doit avoir ou recevoir une formation appropriée aux besoins de ces mineurs et est soumis à un devoir de confidentialité pour ce qui est des informations dont il prend connaissance dans l'exercice de ses fonctions.

8. EXCEPTIONAL MODALITIES OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.32. Apart from detention covered by the next question, are there exceptional modalities for reception conditions in the following cases and if yes, which ones and for how long are they applicable, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)?

En vertu de l'article 12, paragraphe 4, de la Loi nº 20/2006, peuvent être établies des conditions matérielles d'accueil différentes de celles prévues en termes généraux, « à titre exceptionnel et pour une période déterminée ». Cette disposition laisse à l'administration la compétence pour établir au cas par cas les différences pratiques entre les quatre modalités d'accueil exceptionnelles et transitoires énoncées ci-après.

Q.32.A. Persons with specific or special needs, regarding in particular the period of assessment of those needs?

Il y a lieu d'établir de telles conditions lorsqu'une évaluation initiale des besoins spécifiques des demandeurs s'avère nécessaire [paragraphe 4, sous a)].

Q.32.B. Non availability of reception conditions in certain areas.

Il en va de même lorsque, dans la région géographique où se trouve le demandeur d'asile, si les conditions matérielles générales d'accueil ne sont pas disponibles [paragraphe 4, sous b)].

Q.32.C. Temporarily exhaustion of normal housing capacities.

Idem, lorsque les capacités de logement normalement disponibles sont temporairement épuisées [paragraphe 4, sous c)].

Q.32.D. The asylum seeker is confined to a border post.

Idem, lorsque les demandeurs d'asile se trouvent en régime de rétention dans un poste de frontière ne disposant pas d'installations assimilables à des centres de hébergement [paragraphe 4, sous d)].

Q.32.E. All other cases not mentioned in the directive (for instance urgent situation in case of a sudden high number of applicants outside a case of application of the directive on temporary protection).

Il n'y a pas d'autres cas d'octroi de conditions matérielles d'accueil différentes de celles prévues en termes généraux.

Q.33.A. Detention of asylum seekers (we do not cover the situation of rejected asylum seekers detained for the purpose of their return) (see articles 6 §2, 7 §3, 13, §2 2nd indent and 14 §8 which implies that the directive is in principle applicable in case of detention):

A. In which cases or circumstances and for which reasons[645] (identity verification in particular if the persons have no or false documents, protection of public order or national security, refugee status determination, way of entry into the territory, etc) can an asylum seeker be detained during the asylum procedure till his request has been finally rejected. Quote precisely in English in your answer the legal basis for detention of asylum seekers in national law.

Les demandeurs d'asile qui se trouvent sur le territoire national ne sont pas soumis à un régime de détention. Ils ne sont obligés qu'à communiquer leur adresse au SEF.
Aux termes de l'article 20, paragraphe 1, de la Loi n.º 15/98, ceux qui ne réunissent pas les conditions pour être admis sur le territoire national restent en régime de rétention dans la zone internationale du port ou de l'aéroport , pour un délai maximale de cinq jours. Si a la fin de ce délai, aucune décision de refus d'admission ne leur est pas communiquée par le SEF, l'article 20, paragraphe 3, de la Loi nº 15/98 leur permet d'entrer dans le territoire national, afin que la procédure d'asile se poursuive.
Il en découle clairement que ce régime respecte l'article 18, paragraphe 1, de la directive relative aux procédures d'asile, en vertu duquel les Etats membres ne détiendront pas une personne par le seul fait qu'elle est un demandeur d'asile.

Q.33.B. Has your member State adopted measures to transpose §3 of article 7 which is an optional provision? If yes, how has this provision been legally understood (is it a case of detention or an obligation to stay in and not leave a certain place?) and for which reasons can an asylum seeker be "confined" in such a place?

Cet article de la directive n'a pas été transposé par le législateur portugais.

Q.33.C. Are there legally alternatives to detention, like obligation to report to the authorities, obligation to stay in a place, provision of a guarantor or of a financial guarantee?

Ainsi qu'il a déjà été dit, la seule obligation imposée au demandeur d'asile se trouvant sur le territoire national est celle de communiquer au SEF l'adresse et tout changement y afférent. En tout état de cause, il ne s'agit pas à proprement parler d'une alternative à une détention.

Q.33.D. Which is the competent authority to order the detention of an asylum seeker? Explain if different authorities are involved to first take and later confirm the decision.

Si le demandeur d'asile se trouve sur le territoire national, il ne peut pas être détenu pour la seule raison qu'il est un demandeur d'asile. Si, en revanche, il [645] Please specify if article 18 §1 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 which specifies that "Member States shall not hold a person in detention for the sole reason that he/she is an applicant for asylum" is or not respected (even if has not yet to be transposed).

se trouve à un poste de frontière en attendant une décision concernant la recevabilité de sa demande, il ne pourra y rester que pour un délai maximal de cinq jours. L'autorité compétente pour ordonner la détention d'un demandeur d'asile à la frontière est le SEF, sous contrôle d'un tribunal. Aux termes des dispositions combinées des articles 20, paragraphe 1, de la Loi nº 15/98 et 4, paragraphe 2 de la Loi nº 34/94, les autorités informeront les tribunaux compétents aussitôt que la présence du demandeur d'asile dans la zone internationale du port ou de l'aéroport excède les 48 heures.

Q.33.E. For how long and till which stage of the asylum procedure can an asylum seeker be detained?

Voir réponse à la question précédente.

Q.33.F. In which places (can we call them "closed centres"?) are asylum seekers detained (places in a special closed centres reserved only to asylum seekers, together with returnees like illegal aliens or even in a normal prison, in case within separated areas or with the other detainees)? Indicate if a difference has to be made following the location of the "closed centres" at the border or on the territory? Which is the authority managing those places and is it the same as the one in charge of reception conditions?

Il n'y a pas de centres de détention pour des demandeurs d'asile au Portugal. Un demandeur d'asile retenu à la frontière ne peut demeurer dans un centre d'installation temporaire pour plus de 48h sans une décision juridictionnelle validant cette rétention. En l'absence d'une telle décision il peut entrer dans le territoire national.
En vertu de la résolution du Conseil des ministres nº 76/97 portant création de zones de détention séparées pour demandeurs d'asile dans les aéroports nationaux, des travaux de construction ont été effectués dans l'aéroport international de Lisbonne en 2000. Les nouvelles conditions offertes par ce centre d'accueil représentent une nette amélioration par rapport aux conditions précaires précédentes qui étaient offertes aux demandeurs d'asile qui présentaient leur demande à l'aéroport international de Lisbonne. Elles permettent de satisfaire les besoins basiques.
Plus récemment un nouveau centre temporaire d'accueil a été créé en 2006 à Porto avec les mêmes fonctions de celui de Lisbonne, auquel est également applicable la résolution du Conseil des ministres mentionnée ci-dessus.
Ces centres d'accueil sont gérés par la même autorité qui gère les aéroports, à savoir la ANA – Aeroportos de Portugal, S.A. En revanche, c'est au ministère du travail et de l'assurance sociale, ainsi qu'au ministère de la santé qu'il incombe de fournir les prestations correspondantes.

Q.33.G. Does UNHCR and NGOs have access to the places of detention and under which conditions?

En vertu de la résolution du Conseil des ministres nº 76/97, paragraphe 4, les demandeurs d'asile qui se trouvent dans les centres d'accueil des aéroports ont droit à l'appui juridique prêté directement par le CPR en sa qualité de partenaire du HCNUR.

Q.33.H. What appeal(s) can asylum seekers introduce against the fact he is detained? Is article 18 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Where an applicant for asylum is held in detention, Member States shall ensure that there is a possibility of speedy judicial review" respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed)?

L'article 24 de la Loi nº 20/2006 ayant supprimé le poste de Commissaire national pour les réfugiés (CNR), les demandeurs d'asile dont la demande a été considérée non-admissible par le directeur-général du SEF n'ont plus droit à un recours administratif contre ces décisions avec effet suspensif devant le CNR. À présent, tous les recours doivent être introduits devant les tribunaux administratifs et n'ont pas d'effet suspensif automatique. Seul un sursis à l'exécution peut être demandé dans le cadre d'un référé.
Pour ce qui est des demandeurs d'asile qui se trouvent aux frontières et qui ont fait l'objet d'une décision de non-admissibilité, il devient souvent impossible de demander un sursis à l'exécution à temps, puisque la procédure de nomination d'un avocat à titre d'appui judiciaire est relativement lente. Par conséquent, il n'est pas rare que ces demandeurs d'asile soient écartés du territoire national sans avoir eu l'occasion de saisir un tribunal afin d'obtenir des mesures conservatoires leur permettant, le cas échéant, d'entrer dans le territoire national.

Q.33.I. Is the directive on reception conditions considered to be in principle applicable to the places where asylum seekers are detained? In particular which information do they receive about their rights, which access do they have to legal advice and health care?

L'article 11, paragraphe 3, de la Loi nº 20/2006 étend l'application des conditions matérielles d'accueil aux demandeurs d'asile qui sont retenus aux postes de frontières.

Q.33.J. Apart from freedom of movement, what are the main differences between normal reception conditions and exceptional modalities for reception conditions in case of detention, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)? If it is about closed centres, are the regulations of those places in line with the requirements of the directive (is article 13, §2, second indent of the directive following which "Member States shall ensure that standards of living is met (…) in relation to the situation of persons who are in detention" respected?).

Voir réponse à la Q.33.F. Ainsi qu'il a été répété à plusieurs reprises, les demandeurs bénéficient en principe d'une ample liberté de circulation et de résidence, ne pouvant en aucun cas être mis en détention du seul fait qu'ils sont des demandeurs d'asile, qu'ils soient mineurs ou majeurs d'âge.

Q.33.K. Are measures taken to avoid detention of asylum seekers with special needs (if yes, which ones?) or are special measures taken because of their needs?

Même si l'article 20, paragraphe 1, de la Loi nº 15/98 ne le prévoit pas explicitement, sur demande du CPR normalement satisfaite par le directeur du SEF, les mineurs et femmes enceintes qui sont des demandeurs d'asile ne doivent pas en principe rester à la frontière, pouvant entrer immédiatement dans le territoire national. Au cours de 2006, sur demande du CPR, l'entrée exceptionnelle dans le territoire nationale de trois demandeurs a été accordée à trois – deux enfants mineurs et leur grand-mère – lesquels ne satisfaisaient pas aux conditions d'entrée requises.

Q.33.L. Can minor asylum seekers be detained together with relatives? Can unaccompanied minor asylum seekers be detained? If yes, are there special measures which take into account that children are concerned?

Voir réponse aux Q.33.F, J et K.

Q.33.M. In particular is article 10 regarding access to education of minors respected in those places?

Voir réponse aux Q.33.F, J et K.

Q.33.N. How many asylum seekers are for the moment detained in your Member State? Which proportion does this represent in comparison of the total number of asylum seekers at the same moment?

Voir réponse aux Q.33.F et J.

9. ORGANISATION OF THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.34. Explain if the system of providing reception conditions is centralised or decentralised (which levels of government do provide practically reception conditions?) (do not confuse this question with question number 3 about the competence to make rules about reception conditions).

Conformément à l'article 22, le système d'octroi de conditions d'accueil est centralisé au gouvernement. La compétence est repartie entre trois ministères. Le Ministère des affaires intérieures se charge des conditions d'accueil des demandeurs d'asile aux postes de frontière et le Ministère du travail et de la sécurité sociale se charge des conditions d'accueil pour ceux qui se trouvent à l'intérieur du territoire portugais. L'accès aux soins de santé est assuré par le Ministère de la santé et l'accès à l'éducation par le Ministère de l'éducation.

Q.35. In case, are accommodation centres public or/and private (managed by NGOs? If yes, are the NGOs financially supported by the State?)[646]

[646] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Le seul centre d'hébergement au sens de la directive est privé, géré par le CPR et reçoit un soutien financier de l'Etat. Le centre est financé à 75% par le Fond européen pour les réfugiés et à 25% par le Ministère des affaires intérieures.

Q.36. In case, how many accommodation centres are there in your Member State (distinguish in your answer between public and private centres)?[647]

Voir réponse à la Q.35.

Q.37. Is there in the legislation a plan or are there rules in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory of your Member State to avoid their concentration in some areas like big cities or to share the costs of their reception between central, regional and local authorities?

Il n'y a pas de législation ou de plan pour disséminer les demandeurs d'asile à travers le territoire national.

Q.38. Does a central body representing all the actors (like NGOs) involved in reception conditions exist? Does it play a consultative role for the State authorities, a coordination role for the actors or any other role?[648]

Un tel organisme central n'existe pas. Mais le CPR, en tant que principale entité compétente pour l'accueil des demandeurs d'asile, est consulté régulièrement par les autorités nationales.

Q.39.A. Which is the body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions as requested by article 23 which is mandatory provision? Include in your answer which is the competent ministry (Interior, Social affairs, etc) for reception conditions?

La Loi nº 20/2006 ne prévoit aucun organisme spécifique d'orientation, de surveillance et de contrôle du niveau des conditions d'accueil. Toutefois, les quatre ministères compétents en la matière (de l'intérieur, du travail et de la solidarité sociale, de la santé et de l'éducation) sont a priori à même d'exercer une orientation et un contrôle effectifs et suffisants sur les conditions d'accueil. Une appréciation précise à cet égard ne peut pas être produite à ce stade dès lors que la loi de transposition n'est entrée en vigueur que le 24 juin 2006. En tout état de cause, aucun indice n'est apparu jusqu'à présent dans le sens qu'un système effectif et qui fonctionne réellement n'a pas été mis en place.

Q.39.B. Has your Member State (like the Czech Republic did recently) approved quality standards (not necessary legally binding) for housing services (for instance about the number of persons per bedroom on the basis of its size, number of accessible toilets, bathrooms, showers and washing machines per number of persons, existence of common rooms with radio, television, newspapers, books, computers, accessibility of telephone, existence of recreative rooms for children,…) to be respected in particular in accommodation centres?[649]

[647] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[648] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Non, de telles normes de qualité n'ont pas été adoptées par l'Etat portugais.

Q.39.C. How is this system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions organised?[650]

Voir réponse à la Q.39.A.

Q.39.D. Does the body in charge of guidance, control and monitoring produce reports about the level of reception conditions? If yes, how frequently and are they public?[651]

Voir réponse à la Q.39.A.

Q.40.A. What is the total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions for the last year for which figures are available (see article 22 obliging Member States to calculate those statistics about which we also asked the Commission to require them from Member States for mid June)?

Selon les données obtenues, depuis le début de 2006, 53 demandes d'asile ont été enregistrées. Ont été octroyés 18 statuts de réfugié en vertu de la Convention de Genève et 6 statuts de résidents pour des raisons humanitaires. 34 demandes d'asile ont été refusées.
De 2000 à 2005, 32 demandeurs d'asile ont obtenu le statut de réfugié en vertu de la Convention de Genève.

Q.40.B. What is the total budget of reception conditions in euro for the last year for which figures are available?[652]

Le budget total du CPR a été de 209 011, 42 euros pour 2005.

Q.40.C. What is the average cost of reception conditions in euro per asylum seeker for the last year for which figures are available?[653]

2.049,13 euros pour demandeur d'asile en 2005.

Q.40.D. Are the costs of reception conditions of asylum seekers supported by the central/federal or federated government or are they shared with regional and/or local authorities?

[649] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[650] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[651] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[652] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[653] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Les coûts afférents aux conditions d'accueil sont supportés par le gouvernement central.

Q.40.E. Is article 24 § 2 of the directive following which "Member States shall allocate the necessary resources in connection with the nationals provisions enacted to implement this directive" respected?[654].

La Loi nº 20/2002 n'est en vigueur que depuis le 24 juin. Il est donc trop tôt pour pouvoir donner une réponse sûre.

Q.41.A. What is the total number of persons working for reception conditions? [655]

Il y a 12 personnes qui travaillent à titre permanent dans le domaine de l'accueil au CPR : 1 directrice, 1 assistante sociale, 1 assistant pour l'intégration, 4 vigils, 2 réceptionnistes, une gouvernante et 2 professeurs (1 de langue portugaise et 1 d'informatique).

Q.41.B. How is the training of persons working in accommodation centres organised? Does it take into account specific needs of unaccompanied minors when relevant as well as the gender dimension? (see article 14 §5, 19 § 4 and also 24 §1 which are mandatory provisions)?[656]

Conformément aux articles 19, paragraphe 8, et 23 de la Loi nº 20/2006, les ministères participant à l'octroi de conditions d'accueil aux demandeurs d'asile doivent fournir à leurs fonctionnaires une formation de base adéquate aux besoins des demandeurs d'asile des deux sexes, y compris en particulier aux mineurs.

Q.41.C. Are there rules about the deontology of persons working in accommodation centres, in particular on confidentiality?[657]

Oui. L'article 19, paragraphes 7 et 8, de la Loi nº 20/2006 impose la confidentialité au personnel travaillant avec des demandeurs d'asile en situation de risque et des mineurs non accompagnés.

10. IMPACT OF THE DIRECTIVE

Legal impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.42. Specify if there are or not big problems with the translation of the directive in the official language of your Member State and give in case a list of the worst examples of provisions which have been badly translated? (please note that this

[654] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[655] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[656] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[657] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

question has in particular been added to the questionnaire concerning the new Member States)

Le portugais étant une langue officielle de l'Union européenne, la version portugaise de la directive ne peut pas être considérée comme une traduction d'aucune autre version linguistique. Il peut, tout au plus, être appréciée à son égard la qualité du portugais pratiqué dans l'UE. Dans le cas d'espèce il se trouve dans la moyenne.

Q.43. Where there precise legal rules on reception conditions for asylum seekers before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the directive (if yes, specify what the nature of those rules was (legislation, regulation, administrative instructions,…)?

Ainsi qu'il a déjà été mentionné à plusieurs reprises, la Loi 15/98 contient des dispositions sur les conditions d'accueil des demandeurs d'asile. Cette loi demeurera pour l'essentiel en vigueur même après l'entrée en vigueur de la loi transposant la directive.

Q.44. Did the legal rules applicable to reception conditions become more clear, precise, coherent or detailed with the adoption of the transposition norms (for instance do you now have after the transposition one basic text dealing with reception conditions instead of numerous different texts in the past?

La Loi nº 20/2006 précise et complète plusieurs règles en la matière, en les rendant donc plus claires, cohérentes et détaillées. Malheureusement même après son entrée en vigueur, il n'y a pas un seul et unique texte législatif en la matière.

Q.45. Did the transposition of the directive imply important changes in national law or were the changes of minor importance? In case, list the most important changes that have been introduced.

(1) une clarification du champ d'application du nouveau régime, par l'inclusion des demandeurs de protection subsidiaire ;
(2) une répartition plus claire des compétences en la matière ;
(3) explicitation de l'accès à la formation professionnelle pour les demandeurs d'asile ;
(4) une meilleure protection de l'unité familiale ;
(5) une détermination plus claire des prestations matérielles fournies aux demandeurs d'asile ;
(6) l'imposition d'une formation spécifique au personnel travaillant dans ce domaine.

Political impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.46. Explain briefly if there has been an important debate about the transposition of the directive (in particular in the Parliament, but possibly also in the government, between political parties, including in medias, etc; underline in case the main points which have been discussed or have created difficulties).

Le nombre des demandeurs d'asile n'étant pas très significatif au Portugal, la transposition de la directive n'a pas suscité un débat politique important.

Q.47. Did the transposition of the directive contribute to make the internal rules stricter or more generous? In particular, did your Member State use the occasion of the transposition to abolish more favourable provisions of national law? Does your Member State still have rules more favourable than the provisions of the directive (if yes, try to give the more important examples).

La transposition de la directive a contribué pour rendre le régime d'accueil plus généreux, surtout en ce qui concerne la garantie des conditions matérielles d'accueil. Elle n'a donc pas été utilisée pour introduire des nouvelles restrictions ou pour supprimer des dispositions plus favorables.
Parmi les dispositions portugaises plus favorables sont à mentionner :
(1) l'interdiction de détention des demandeurs d'asile de ce seul fait ;
(2) un accès au marché de travail dans les mêmes conditions que les nationaux ;
(3) la possibilité d'accéder aux conditions d'accueil jusqu'à une décision juridictionnelle de dernière instance en cas de rejet d'une demande d'asile.

11. ANY OTHER INTERESTING ELEMENT

Q.48. What are in your view the weaknesses and strengths of the system of reception conditions in your Member State?[658]

L'aspect le plus faible de la Loi nº 20/2006 est la non-institution expresse d'un système d'orientation, de surveillance et de contrôle du niveau des conditions d'accueil. Un autre point faible est la dispersion du régime par deux textes juridiques.
Les points forts sont indiqués dans la réponse à la question 45.

Q.49. Mention any good practice in your Member State which could be promoted in other Member States[659]

(1) L'existence, dans le CAR cabinet destiné à prêter des informations juridiques et sociales aux demandeurs d'asile.
(2) L'existence dans le CAR de lieux de rencontre entre les demandeurs d'asile et la communauté des résidents, afin de combattre la ségrégation et de faciliter l'intégration.
(3) Le fait que le jardin école et la nursery du nouveau CAR inauguré en décembre 2006 avec une capacité respectivement pour 33 et 40 enfants soient ouverts non seulement aux enfants des demandeurs d'asile, mais aussi aux enfants en provenance de la communauté locale, afin d'intensifier les contacts entre les deux communautés.

[658] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.
[659] To be answered with the help of UNHCR local office competent for your Member State or on the basis of the answers of NGOs and accommodation centres to the practical questionnaire.

Q.50. Please add here any other interesting element about reception conditions in your Member State which you did not had the occasion to mention in your previous answers.

QUESTIONNAIRE FOR THE NATIONAL REPORT ON THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE DIRECTIVE :
RECEPTION CONDITIONS OF 27 JANUARY 2003

IN: ROMANIA

by

National Rapporteur and National Coordinator: Corneliu-Liviu POPESCU-Professor, University of Bucharest - Faculty of Law liviu.popescu@drept.unibuc.ro

January 20th, 2008

1. NORMS OF TRANSPOSITION

Q.1. Identify the main norm of transposition (indicate the title, date, number, date of entry into force and references of publication into the official journal) and indicate its legal nature (legislative, regulatory, administrative); indicate in your answer if this norm was only devoted to the directive or if it has been included in a more general text and indicate in that case by quoting precisely the numbers of the provisions adopted to transpose the directive.

1. The Law regarding the Asylum in Romania no. 122/May 4, 2006, published in the Official Gazette of Romania, Section I, no. 428/May 18, 2006; rectification in the Official Gazette of Romania, Section I, no. 68/January 29, 2007 (hereinafter L122/2002).

- date of entry into force: in principle, within 90 days from the publication in the Official Gazette of Romania; exceptionally, some articles enter into force at the date of adhesion of Romania to the EU, meaning January 1st, 2007;

- transposes the CE Directive 2001/55/CE; CE Directive 2003/9/CE; CE Directive 2003/86/CE and CE Directive 2004/83/CE;

- has a legislative nature.

2. The Government Decision no. 1251/September 13, 2006 on the approval of the Methodological Norms regarding the implementation of the Law no. 122/2006, published in the Official Gazette of Romania, Section I, no. 805/September 25, 2006; rectification in the Official Gazette of Romania, Section I, no. 833/October 10, 2006 (hereinafter GD1251/2006);

- date of entry into force: in principle, within 3 days from the publication in the Official Gazette of Romania; exceptionally, some articles enter into force at the date of adhesion of Romania to the EU, meaning January 1st, 2007;

- transposes the CE Directive 2001/55/CE; CE Directive 2003/9/CE and CE Directive 2004/83/CE; creates the legal frame necessary for the direct application of the Regulations no. 1030/2002 and no. 2252/2004;

- it is a regulation.

3. The Government Emergency Ordinance no. 55/June 20, 2007 regarding the foundation f the Romanian Office for Immigration, published in the Official Gazette of Romania, Section I, no. 424/June 26, 2007 (hereinafter GEO 55/2007);

- date of entry into force: the day of the publication in the Official Gazette of Romania;

- organization and functioning of the Romanian Office for Immigration;

- has a legislative nature.

Q.2. List by order of importance by using numbers (1, 2, 3) the others norms of transposition if there are more than one (indicate for each norm the title, date, number and references of publication into the official journal; include in your answer the administrative measures taken to ensure implementation of the directive and of the transposition norms like regulations, administrative circulars, special instructions,…)

Q.3. Explain which level of government is competent to adopt the legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers (specify in particular in case of a federal or regional State, if it is the federal/central power or the components; in case, specify below when it is impossible for you to answer a question because it is about the competence of the components and it is impossible for you to gather reliable information about all of them)

Q.4. Explain the legal technical choices done to transpose the directive (comment on the nature and level of the norms used to do the transposition: legislative, regulatory, administrative like instructions, etc). Add any other element about the technique of transposition of the directive which is interesting for the implementation of Community law.

The directive was transposed through a law, subsequently whose provisions have been subsequently developed by regulations.

Q.5. Mention if there is a general tendency to just copy the provisions of the directive into national legislation without redrafting or adaptation them to national circumstances? If yes, give some of the worst examples and explain if there is a risk that those provisions remain unapplied or will create difficulties of implementation in the future.

The general tendency was to just translate and copy the provisions of the directive.

Q.6. Have all the texts necessary to ensure the effective implementation of the new rules of transposition been adopted, prepared or at least foreseen in the future (for example a regulation completing a new law and the necessary instructions telling the administration how to apply the new rules)?

There are adopted: a law of transposition; the regulatory norms of application; the norms for organizing and functioning of the competent authority.

2. BIBLIOGRAPHY

Q.7. Has an in-depth preparatory study been made public about the changes at the occasion of the transposition? If yes, thanks for trying to provide us a copy (please contact to answer this question adequately the body and person who was responsible for the preparation of the transposition of the directive in the public administration).

Q.8. Quote any recent scientific book or article published about the directive, the transposition rules or the question of reception conditions for asylum seekers in general (answer even if this literature is only available in your language and provide the complete title in your language (without translation) with all references; indicate author, title, in case name of periodical, year and place of publication).

Q.9. Quote any interesting decision of jurisprudence based on the implementation of the new rules of transposition of the directive (indicate references of publication if any)?

It does not exist yet relevant jurisprudence, whereas Romania became EU member starting with January 1st, 2007.

3. GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

The purpose of the following two questions is to help the reader to understand easily and quickly the system of reception conditions in your Member State and also to avoid that you have to repeat general elements in other parts of the questionnaire. Please do not write more than one or maximum two pages and do not include large historical developments.

Q.10. Describe in general the system of reception conditions in your Member State (in particular which are the main actors in charge of reception conditions?)

The competent authority on asylum procedures is the Romanian Office for Immigration. This is a public body depending on the Ministry of Internal Affaires and Administrative Reform.

Q.11. Q11. A. Explain if you have different types and levels of reception conditions following the different stages of the asylum procedure (this implies that you have to give briefly the necessary explanations about the asylum procedure). Make if relevant for reception conditions a distinction between the following procedural stages: determination of the responsible Member State on the basis of the Dublin II regulation, special procedures at the border (including transit zones in airports), accelerated procedures, admissibility procedures, eligibility procedures and the different possibilities of appeals (suspensive or not) against a refusal of the asylum request. Indicate what the main differences of reception conditions are between the different stages (if necessary by detailing between the different elements of reception conditions, in particular housing) and explain what the evolution of reception conditions is following the different stages of the procedure.

The procedure regarding the asylum is initiated with an application lodged by the asylum seeker. The application may be lodged either with the Romanian Office for Immigration, either with other public bodies (national police, national boarder police etc.).
There are two main stages of the procedure: an administrative stage and a judicial stage. During the administrative stage the Romanian Office for Immigration takes the decision regarding the recognition or not of the statute of refugee. The administrative decision adopted by the Romanian Office for Immigration may be challenged before judicial courts.

Q 11. B. Indicate precisely for which stage(s) of the asylum procedure the answers on reception conditions you give below are valid.

In principle, the reception conditions are the same, irrespective of situation and procedure.

4. GENERAL RULES ON RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.12.

Q 12. A. Are material reception conditions provided in kind, in money or in vouchers or in a combination of these elements (see article 13, §5 which is an optional provision)? Distinguish between the different elements (housing, food, clothes, health, transportation, pocket money,…). If reception conditions are provided in money (in general or in some cases, for instance when no places are anymore available in accommodation centres), indicate the precise amount given to the asylum seekers. Indicate in your answer what is provided in general and if there are exceptional cases. Specify in your answer if reception conditions are different from the general system of social aid for nationals or aliens and if yes, if and when (which stage of the asylum procedure) can asylum seekers have access to the general system of social aid?

There are two main material reception conditions: money and the insurance of accommodation in accommodation centres.
The ordinary situation is granting of money.
The amounts are divided as follows:
- 3 Romanian Lei (RON) per day for food;
- 1.80 RON per day for accommodation;
- 0.60 RON per day for other expenses.
TOTAL: 5.40 RON per day, meaning under 2 EUR.
This amount is granted in cash.
In case when the asylum seekers do not have the necessary possibilities for living, then they shall be granted with accommodation in the accommodation centres. In the accommodation centres must exist conditions for living, preparing of food, sanitary conditions for the persons and their belongings.

Q 12. B. Can the reception conditions in kind, money or vouchers be considered as sufficient "to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence" as requested by article 13, §2 of the directive (which is a mandatory provision but leaves a certain space to Member States)? In order to help to assess the respect of this rule when reception conditions are provided in money, include if necessary in your answer points of comparison with the minimum amount of social aid guaranteed for nationals in your Member State.

The amount cannot be considered sufficient. The amounts are lower than the national social aid for poverty.

5. PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

Q.13. Q 13. A. Does the national legislation specifically provide that a request for international protection is presumed to be under the Geneva Convention unless explicitly requested otherwise? (see article 2, b which is a mandatory provision)

The solution is implicitly provided by the L122/2006, in art. 13 par. 2:
(2) Any request for asylum shall be analysed individually and successively from the perspective of the statute of refugee and the subsidiary protection, under the conditions provided by this law, except the case when it starts the procedure for granting temporary humanitarian protection.

Q. 13. B. Explain if the scope of application of reception conditions is extended to other asylum seekers than refugees in the sense of the Geneva Convention, in particular to persons asking for subsidiary protection or to other forms of protection like humanitarian statuses (see article 3, § 4 which is an optional provision)? If not, explain briefly which the differences between these special regimes and the directive are.

A request includes also forms of subsidiary protection, not only that of recognition of the statute of refugee.

Q. 13. C. Are there specific provisions in national law for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation (see article 3, §2 which is an optional provision)?

There are no explicit provisions in the law of transposition.

Q.14. Are reception conditions available as from the moment one asylum application is introduced? How is article 13, §1 which is mandatory legally understood? Do asylum seekers have to satisfy any other condition in order to get reception conditions?

Reception conditions are available from the moment the asylum application is introduced.
According to the L122/2006, art. 17 par. 1, letter j):
(1) During the procedure of asylum, the alien which requests to be granted a form of protection has the following rights: [...] the right to benefit from, upon request, of the necessary assistance for his/her living/maintenance, if he/she does not have the necessary material means, the amounts granted for food, accommodation and other expenses being determined by government decision and made available from the state budget, through the budget of the Ministry of Internal Affaires and Administrative Reforms.

Q.15. Explain when reception conditions end, for instance after refusal of the asylum request (include in your answer the link with the right of appeal against a decision of refusal of the status, in particular the question of its suspensive effect)

The rights end after all available recourses have been used; the decision to leave the territory shall be issued after solving the recourse.

Q.16 Are there special rules or practices regarding reception conditions in case of successive applications for asylum introduced by the same person?

There is a procedure for granting access to a new application for asylum. If a person is allowed to access a new procedure for asylum, he/she shall benefit from the corresponding rights. The material reception conditions shall be granted until the refoullment from the Romanian territory, which implies the situation of a new application for asylum. There is a possibility to deprivation of freedom in the second procedure for asylum.

Q.17. Information of asylum seekers about their rights and obligations in terms of reception conditions, in particular about established benefits (see article 5 which is too large extend a mandatory provision; do not confuse this question with the information to be provided to asylum seekers about the asylum procedure):

Domestic legislation provides that the asylum seekers have the right to be informed.

Q. 17. A. Are asylum seekers informed, and if yes about what precisely?

The asylum seekers must be informed about their rights and obligations during the procedure for analysing their request (not only those related to the procedure of asylum).

Q. 17. B. Is the information provided in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

The information must be provided in writing.

Q.17. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify the list of languages in which it is available.

The information must be provided in a language known by the asylum seeker or, as the case may be, a language which is supposed to be known by the asylum seeker. There is no list of those languages.

Q. 17. D. Is the deadline of maximum 15 days respected?

The L122/2006 provides that the information shall be done at the moment of lodging the request.

Q.18. Information of asylum seekers about the existence of organisations or groups promoting their interest and defending their rights (see article 5 which is to a large extend a mandatory provision):

Q. 18. A. Is there a list of organisations dressed by the authorities and if yes is it comprehensive? Is this in particular the case about the possibilities to get legal assistance and health care?

The asylum seekers have the right to be assisted by non-governmental organizations. There is no list of such non-governmental organizations.

Q. 18. B. Is the information provided to the asylum seekers, and if yes, in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

The information is provided to the asylum seekers in writing.

Q. 18. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify if possible the list of languages in which it is available.

The information must be provided in the language known by the asylum seeker, or, as the case may be, in a language he/she is supposed to understand.

Q. 18. D. How many organisations are active in that field in your Member State?

Approximately 5 organizations strictly specialized.

Q.19. Documentation of asylum seekers (see article 6):

Q.19. A. What kind of document is delivered to the asylum seeker? Explain the legal value of this document (just a certification of the status as asylum seeker or also prove of identity?) (see §1 of article 6 which is a mandatory provision)

A temporary identification document, proving the statute of asylum seeker and his/her identity.

Q.19. B. Are there situations or specific cases in which another equivalent document or even no document is issued? (in particular is there an exception for "procedures to decide on the right of the applicant legally to enter the territory" as made possible by §2 of article 6)?

No temporary identification document is issued for the persons seeking asylum at the frontier, as long as no access has been granted on the Romanian territory, as well as for the persons being in public custody for reasons of national security and public order. In this case it is issue only a certificate attesting the capacity as asylum seeker.

Q.19. C. For how long is this document in principle valid and is it necessary to renew it after a certain period?

The temporary document has a validity period which can be periodically extended. The extension shall be done up to 15 days after the expiry of the procedure.

Q.19. D. What is the deadline for the delivery of that document? Is the mandatory deadline of 3 days set by article 6, §1 respected[660]?

The term of delivery is 3 days.

Q.19. E. Is it possible for an asylum seeker to get a travel document for serious humanitarian reasons (see §5 of article 6 which is an optional provision)?

There is no explicit norm in the legislation of transposition.

Q.19. F. Is there a central system of registration of asylum seekers and is it or not separate from the registration of aliens? If yes, describe it briefly (content) and indicate in particular if it is an electronic database.

The registration of asylum seekers is separate from the registration of aliens. There is an electronic database.

Q.20. Residence of asylum seekers :

Q.20. A. Is in principle an asylum seeker free to move on the entire territory of your Member State or only to a limited part of it and in case, which part? (see article 7, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

The asylum seeker has, in principle, the freedom of movement on the entire Romanian territory. In special cases, the asylum seeker is provided with a fixed locality of residence which he/she cannot leave without the approval of the Romanian Office for Immigration.

The law does not explicitly provide that the fixed locality of residence shall not infringe some rights, such as: access to a lawyer, the right to private life, the right to reception conditions.

Q.20. B. About the place of residence (see §2 of article 7): explain to which extend the person is free to choose her residence and if this depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance processing of application, attribution of reception conditions,…).

A certain locality is determined, where the asylum seeker can freely chose his/her domicile. The L122/2006 does not provide for the reasons.

Q.20. C. About the place of reception (meaning where the asylum seeker has to stay to benefit from reception conditions) (see § 4 of article 7): explain which are the general rules about the determination of this place (to which extend are the decisions determining the place taken individually and do they take into account the personal situation of the asylum seeker?) and to which extend the person is free to choose it and if it depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance attribution of reception conditions, processing of the application,…).

If the asylum seeker does not have material means for living, the Romanian Office for Immigration may determine a place of residence and makes available the material assistance. The first option provided by the law is that of granting amounts of money; if the asylum seeker has not sufficient resources for living, than he/she shall have the possibility to be accommodated in an accommodation centre.

Q.20. D. If all asylum seekers are not placed in accommodation centres because of capacity limits, explain how the persons are distributed between accommodation centres and other accommodation facilities (which authority takes the decisions, on the basis of which elements, can that decision be appealed by the asylum seeker,…)

If the asylum seeker does not have material means for living, the Romanian Office for Immigration may determine a place of residence and makes available the material assistance. The first option provided by the law is that of granting amounts of money; if the asylum seeker has not sufficient resources for living, than he/she shall have the possibility to be accommodated in an accommodation centre.

Q.20. E. How can an asylum seeker ask to leave temporarily the place of residence or of reception or an assigned area? How is the individual AND impartial character of the decision ensured? (see §5 of article 7 which is a mandatory provision)

The asylum seeker requests the authorisation of the Romanian Office for Immigration, which is obliged to make an individual analysis, objective and impartial and to motivate the refuse.

Q.21. Q.21. A. Do rules on reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions exist in internal legislation and if yes in which cases (mention in particular if there are cases not foreseen by article 16, § 1 and 2 which are optional provisions)? Distinguish in your answer between cases of reduction and withdrawal and explain which conditions can be reduced and if access to emergency health care is always ensured as requested by article 16, §4, last sentence.

The asylum seekers benefit of rights that cannot be withdrawn.

Q.21. B. Has article 16, §2 dealing with refusal of reception conditions for unreasonably late applications for asylum been transposed by your Member State (or was this case already applicable before transposition)? Are there cases in practice?

This norm of the directive has not been transposed.

Q.21. C. How is it ensured that decisions of reduction or withdrawal are taken individually, objectively AND in particular impartially (for instance through and independent arbitrator) (see article 16, §4 which is a mandatory provision)?

Not applicable.

Q.21. D. Is statement 14/03 adopted by the Council at the same moment as the directive respected (see the document attached to our sending)?

Q.21. E. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements on cases of reduction, withdrawal or refusal which have been taken, and if yes, what has been the outcome?

Not applicable.

Q.22. Q.22. A. Appeal against a negative decision relating to the granting of benefits or based on article 7 (see article 21 which is a mandatory provision): indicate against which decision an appeal can be introduced, describe the system of appeal in general and include in particular in your answer the information given to asylum seekers about possibilities of appealing, deadline for appealing, if the appeal has or not a suspensive effect, if there are different steps (for instance first an administrative appeal and in particular if the guarantee of an appeal before a judicial body in the last instance is respected)?

Any administrative measure may be appealed within 30 days with the administrative courts. The judgement shall be made in two stages - first instance and then recourse to the superior court.

Q.22. B. Explain which are the possibilities for asylum seekers to benefit from legal assistance when they introduce such an appeal (see article 21, §2 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to Member States)?

Legal assistance shall be granted to the persons with poor living means, if the interests of justice so require, according to the Romanian Code of Civil Procedure.

Q.22. C. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

There is not yet relevant jurisprudence on the transposed rules, as Romania became EU member on January 1st, 2007.

Q.22. D. Is a mechanism of complain for asylum seekers about quality of receptions conditions in general (even if they are not personally concerned) organised? If yes, before which authority? Is it linked to the system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions (see below question n° 39)?

There is provided for an administrative complaint with the superior administrative body. This administrative complaint has no jurisdictional character.

6. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.23. Family unity of asylum seekers: define how a family is defined in relation with article 2, (d) which is a mandatory provision and explain how housing is provided to a family (see articles 8 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to member States and 14, §2, (a) which is a mandatory provision).

Same definition as in the directive, except of the unmarried partner. The unmarried partner has not the same status, under the domestic law, as a spouse. Therefore, there are no problems with the transposition.

Q.24. Q.24. A. How is housing of asylum seekers organised: describe the system in general and indicate in particular what is the most frequently system used (see article 14, §1 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space for Member States; distinguish between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels places or other premises).

According to art. 17 par. 5 of the L122/2006:
(5) If the asylum seeker does not have material means, the Romanian Office for Immigration may determine a place of residence and make available to him/her the necessary material assistance for maintenance, for the entire duration of the asylum procedure.
The only legal possibility for accommodation is in the accommodation centres, the law does not provide, as alternatives, for private houses and apartments, hotels places or other premises.

Q.24. B. What is the total number of available places for asylum seekers? Distinguish in your answer between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels or other premises.

1,478 places in 5 accommodation centres, administered by the Romanian Office for Immigration. Other places in transit centres nearby the border.

Q.24. C. Is this number of places for asylum seekers sufficient in general or frequently insufficient?

Taking into consideration the number of applications and the duration of the procedure, the statistical data show that the number of places is sufficient, in general.

Q.24. D. Are there special measures foreseen in urgent cases of a high number of news arrivals of asylum seekers (outside the case of application of the directive on temporary protection)?

In principle, there are no special measures foreseen in urgent cases. No general mechanism decided in advance.

Q.25. Accommodation centres (important note: all the following questions are about open and not closed centres where asylum seekers are detained which are covered by another question)

Q.25. A Are there different categories of accommodation centres, for instance depending of the stage of the procedure (admissibility and eligibility)?

No.

Q.25. B. Is there a legal time limit for accommodation in a centre after which the asylum seekers have access to private houses or apartments or is this limit linked to a stage of the asylum procedure?

No.

Q.25. C. Is there a general regulation about the internal functioning of those centres and the rights and duties of the asylum seekers? If yes, is this general regulation applicable to public and private centres? If not, are the centres supposed to adopt an internal regulation and does a central authority have or not a kind of control about its content?

The accommodation centres have internal regulations.

Q.25. D. Do the regulations foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers in case of breach of the rules? (see article 16, §3) If yes, which sanctions for which rules? Which is the competent authority to decide? How is it ensured that decisions are taken individually, objectively and in particular impartially (for instance through an independent arbitrator) as requested by §4 of article 21 which is mandatory provision*?* Which are the possibilities of appealing against those decisions if the system is different from the general one under question n°22? Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

For serious or repeated misdemeanours, the respective person is evacuated from the accommodation centre. The interested person may appeal against this sanction to the competent administrative court.

Q.25. E. Are asylum seekers involved in the management of these centres? If yes, how (advisory board, appointment or election of representatives)? (see article 14, §6 which is an option provision)

It is possible, according to the internal regulations of each accommodation centre.

Q.25. F. Do specific rules exist on work of asylum seekers inside the accommodation centres different from the general ones about employment (see below)? If yes, which ones? Can working inside accommodation centres be considered as a (mandatory) contribution of the asylum seekers to the management of the centres, is it or not paid and considered as implying access to the labour market and subject to the same rules?

It may exist such rules in the internal regulations of each centre.

Q.26. Q.26. A. How can asylum seekers communicate with legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGOs? (see article 14, §2, (b) which is a mandatory provision).

Yes, they do.

Q.26. B. What are the rules about access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs regarding access to accommodation centres and other housing facilities (see article 14, §7 which is a mandatory provision)

UNHCR, NGOs representatives, as well as legal advisers has access in the accommodation centres.

Q.26. C. Can the access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs be limited for security reasons or any other reason (see article 14, §7, last sentence)?

The access of legal advisers and UNHCR representatives cannot be limited.

Q.27. Q.27. A. Is a medical screening organised by the receiving State, is it mandatory or voluntary? Does it include HIV tests? (see article 9 which is an optional provision)

If the authorities so decide, the asylum seeker must be subject to a medical screening. The law does not provide for the types of medical examinations.

Q.27. B. Do the legal provisions on reception conditions ensure that asylum seekers receive at least emergency care and essential treatment of illness as requested by article 15 §1 which is a mandatory provision? Do they have a further access to health care?

According to art. 17 par. 1 letter m) from the L122/2006:
(1) During the asylum procedure, aliens who apply for being granted a form of protection have the following rights:
m) to receive free of charge primary and emergency hospital medical aid, as well as medical assistance and free of charge treatment in the case of acute or chronic diseases that put their life in imminent danger.

Q.27. C. What is the practice regarding access of asylum seekers to health care and how is it organised? In particular, what is the situation in accommodation centres (are doctors coming to the centres or do asylum seekers go to doctors outside)?

In principle, the health care assistance is insured in the same conditions as for the Romanian citizens. The asylum seekers have access to any hospital and any physician without discrimination. In practice, it seems not to be any special problems.

Q.28. Q.28. A. What is the length of the period determined by the concerned Member State during which asylum seekers have no access to the labour market? (see article 11 which is a mandatory provision)

One year.

Q.28. B. After that period, are asylum seekers or not obliged to obtain a work permit? In case is there a limit for the administration to deliver the permits and how quick are they delivered? What is their length?

Access on the labour market after 1 year is done under the same conditions as in case of the Romanian citizens.

Q.28. C. After that period, what are the conditions for access of the asylum seekers to the labour market? (in particular, are there rules concerning the maximum allowed of working hours or days per week, month or year, limits in terms of type of work or of professions authorised?

Access on the labour market after 1 year is done under the same conditions as in case of the Romanian citizens.

Q.28. D. What are the rules in terms of priorities between asylum seekers on the one hand and nationals, EU or EEE citizens and legally third-country nationals on the other?

Access on the labour market after 1 year is done under the same conditions as in case of the Romanian citizens.

Q.28. E. Do asylum seekers have access to vocational training, does this or not depend of their right to access to the labour market, and in case at which conditions? (see article 12 which is optional regarding §1 and mandatory regarding § 2)

Access on the labour market after 1 year is done under the same conditions as in case of the Romanian citizens.
There are no specific provisions regarding the access to vocational training. The law does not forbids to the asylum seekers vocational training, but it does not provides for special explicit facilities.

Q.28. F. Are the rules regarding access to the labour market adopted to transpose the directive more or less generous than the ones applicable previously?

In principle, there is statu quo.

Q.29. Are reception conditions subject to the fact that asylum seekers do not have sufficient resources? Are asylum seekers requested to contribute to reception conditions when they have personal resources (for instance if they work) or to refund the authorities if it appears that they have resources? (see article 13 §§ 3 and 4 which are optional provisions)

According to the L122/2006, art. 17 par. 1 letter j:
(1) During the asylum procedure, aliens who apply for being granted a form of protection have the following rights:
j) to benefit, upon request, from necessary assistance for maintenance, if she/he does not have the necessary material means, the amounts of money granted for food, accommodation and other expenditures shall be determined by government decision and provided from the state's budget through the budget of the Ministry of Internal Afaires and Administrative Reforms.

7. SPECIAL NEEDS OF PARTICULAR CATEGORIES OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.30.

Q.30.A. Which of the different categories of persons with special needs considered in the directive are taken into account in the national legislation (see article 17, §1 which is a mandatory provision): disabled people, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence? Include in your answer all other categories envisaged in national law.

There is provided for a general expression: "person with special needs". There are two special categories: "unaccompanied minor" and "minor".

Q.30. B. How is their specific situation taken into account (see articles 13, §2, second indent, 16 §4 second sentence and 17 which are mandatory provisions)?

- specific adapted accommodation conditions;
- specific adapted medical aid;
- psychological assistance.

Q.30. C. How and when are the special needs of the concerned persons supposed to be legally identified (see article 17 § 2 which is a mandatory provision and clarify how it has been interpreted by transposition)?

The asylum seekers are examined by the specialized personnel of the Romanian Office for Immigration, for the purpose of their inclusion in the category of persons with special needs. Normally, the specialized personnel of the Romanian Office for Immigration is trained to identify the persons with special needs. Normally, the special needs of the concerned persons are taken into consideration from the moment of lodging the application.

Q.30. D. Is the necessary medical and other assistance provided to persons with special needs as requested by article 15, §2 which is a mandatory provision and in particular to victims of torture and violence as requested by article 20 which is a mandatory provision?

Adequate medical and psychological aid. There are no specific provisions for the victims of torture. Art. 15 para. 2 of the directive indicates persons with special needs, without any particular reference for victims of torture. On the other hand, art. 20 of the directive concerns especially victims of torture. The Romanian legislation of transposition takes into consideration persons with special needs, but without any particular reference for victims of torture. For this reason, art. 15 para. 2 of the directive is well transposed, but the transposition of art. 20 of the directive raised a legal problem.

Q.31. About minors:

Q.31. A. Till which age are asylum seekers considered to be minor?

18 years old.

Q.31. B. How is access of minor asylum seekers to the education system ensured? Is it at school or in case inside accommodation centres and can it be considered as similar to the conditions for nationals as requested by article 10, §1?

Course of initiation in the Romanian language, than enrolment in the compulsory national education system.
Within 3 months from lodging the application for asylum, the minor asylum seeker shall be registered in a course of initiation in the Romanian language. The course of initiation is for 1 year, and is free of charge. The course is organized by the Ministry of Education, Research and Youth and the Romanian Office for Immigration. At the end of the course, an evaluation commission evaluates the level of knowledge of the Romanian language and decides in what school grade shall be enrolled the minor.

Q.31. C. Is access to education ensured not later than 3 months as requested by article 10, §2 (or after maximum one year if specific education for asylum seekers is provided) and till an expulsion decision is really enforced?

The enrolment is done within 3 months and it lasts until expulsion.

Q.31. D. Is specific education (like language classes) available for asylum seekers, in particular to facilitate their effective access to the education system of the reception Member State (see article 10, §2 which is an optional provision)?

Course of initiation in the Romanian language

Q.31. E. Are minors in general accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them? (see article 14, § 3)

Accommodation together with the accompanying relatives.

Q.31. F. Do minors with special needs enumerated by article 18, §2 which is a mandatory provision, have access to appropriate mental health care and qualified counselling?

Law provides psychological aid for persons with special needs. The persons with special needs are considered only in a general manner, without any particular mention for minors.

Q.31. G. How and when is organised the representation of unaccompanied minors (guardianship, special organisation) and regularly assessed? (see article 19, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

The Authority for Child Protection must appoint a legal representative. The appointment shall be done as soon as the authorities became aware about an unaccompanied minor.

Q.31. H. How is placement of unaccompanied minors organised (with adult relatives, a foster family, in special accommodation centres or other suitable accommodation)? (see article 19, §2 which is mandatory provision)

The unaccompanied minor is accommodated with the relatives, and if there are no relatives, in accommodation centres.

Q.31. I. How is the tracing of the family members of the unaccompanied minors organised? Are measures taken to protect confidentiality of information when necessary? (see article 19, §3 which is a mandatory provision)

The Romanian Office for Immigration has the obligation to identify the family of the unaccompanied minor and to keep the confidentiality.

8. EXCEPTIONAL MODALITIES OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.32. Apart from detention covered by the next question, are there exceptional modalities for reception conditions in the following cases and if yes, which ones and for how long are they applicable, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)?

Q.32. A. Persons with specific or special needs, regarding in particular the period of assessment of those needs?

There are no specific norms in the law of transposition.

Q.32. B. Non availability of reception conditions in certain areas

There are no specific norms in the law of transposition.

Q.32. C. Temporarily exhaustion of normal housing capacities

There are no specific norms in the law of transposition.

Q.32. D. The asylum seeker is confined to a border post

The asylum seeker may be accommodated in special centres located in the proximity of the border post, these special centres having the special legal regime of a transit zone. Legally, the asylum seeker has not received the permission to entry to the Romanian territory. The reception conditions are in principle the same. The maximum period of time of this special regime is 20 days. We appreciate that this regime is compatible with art. 14 para. 8 of the directive. It is a special regime, witch derogates from the general regime, but for a very short period of time and the reception conditions are in principle the same.

Q.32. E. All other cases not mentioned in the directive (for instance urgent situation in case of a sudden high number of applicants outside a case of application of the directive on temporary protection).

There are no specific norms in the law of transposition.

Q.33. Detention of asylum seekers (we do not cover the situation of rejected asylum seekers detained for the purpose of their return) (see articles 6 §2, 7 §3, 13, §2 2nd indent and 14 §8 which implies that the directive is in principle applicable in case of detention):

Q.33. A. In which cases or circumstances and for which reasons[1] (identity verification in particular if the persons have no or false documents, protection of public order or national security, refugee status determination, way of entry into the territory, etc) can an asylum seeker be detained during the asylum procedure till his request has been finally rejected. Quote precisely in English in your answer the legal basis for detention of asylum seekers in national law.

In case of national security, national safety; public heath and morality; the protection of the rights and freedoms of other persons; the public interest, as provided by the L112/2006 art. 17 par. 1 letter h), point (ii), art. 17 par. 6, art. 38 par. 4.

Q.33. B. Has your member State adopted measures to transpose §3 of article 7 which is an optional provision? If yes, how has this provision been legally understood (is it a case of detention or an obligation to stay in and not leave a certain place?) and for which reasons can an asylum seeker be "confined" in such a place?

For reasons of public interest, it may be determined a compulsory place of residence.

Q.33. C. Are there legally alternatives to detention, like obligation to report to the authorities, obligation to stay in a place, provision of a guarantor or of a financial guarantee?

No.

[1] Please specify if article 18 §1 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Member States shall not hold a person in detention for the sole reason that he/she is an applicant for asylum" is or not respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed).

Q.33. D. Which is the competent authority to order the detention of an asylum seeker? Explain if different authorities are involved to first take and later confirm the decision.

The Romanian Office for Immigration.

Q.33. E. For how long and till which stage of the asylum procedure can an asylum seeker be detained?

Until the end of the procedure.

Q.33. F. In which places (can we call them "closed centres"?) are asylum seekers detained (places in a special closed centres reserved only to asylum seekers, together with returnees like illegal aliens or even in a normal prison, in case within separated areas or with the other detainees)? Indicate if a difference has to be made following the location of the "closed centres" at the border or on the territory? Which is the authority managing those places and is it the same as the one in charge of reception conditions?

In special centres. The asylum seekers cannot be detained in normal prisons for convicted criminals or for persons accused for crimes. In the special centres for asylum seekers are accommodated only asylum seekers.

Q.33. G. Does UNHCR and NGOs have access to the places of detention and under which conditions?

UNHCR has access without any conditions, NGOs representatives with authorisation.

Q.33. H. What appeal(s) can asylum seekers introduce against the fact he is detained? Is article 18 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Where an applicant for asylum is held in detention, Member States shall ensure that there is a possibility of speedy judicial review" respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed)?

Complaint lodged to the court.

Q.33. I. Is the directive on reception conditions considered to be in principle applicable to the places where asylum seekers are detained? In particular which information do they receive about their rights, which access do they have to legal advice and health care?

The directive is applicable. They have normal access to the legal assistance and medical aid.

Q.33. J. Apart from freedom of movement, what are the main differences between normal reception conditions and exceptional modalities for reception conditions in case of detention, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)? If it is about closed centres, are the regulations of those places in line with the requirements of the directive (is article 13, §2, second indent of the directive following which "Member States shall ensure that standards of living is met (…) in relation to the situation of persons who are in detention" respected?).

In principle, the only major difference concerns the deprivation of liberty. There are no differences regarding the material conditions.

Q.33. K. Are measures taken to avoid detention of asylum seekers with special needs (if yes, which ones?) or are special measures taken because of their needs?

There are no specific norms. The law does not explicitly forbid the detention of asylum seekers with special needs. The authorities must ensure that the deprivation of liberty of such person do not represent an inhuman or degrading treatment, according the general principles of internal law.

Q.33. L. Can minor asylum seekers be detained together with relatives? Can unaccompanied minor asylum seekers be detained? If yes, are there special measures which take into account that children are concerned?

There are no specific norms. The detention is an individual measure, therefore, if there are no reasons for the detention of the minor, the minor cannot be detained only because his/her relatives are detained. The law does not forbid the detention of an unaccompanied minor. The law does not provide for special measures in case of the detention of a minor or of an unaccompanied minor. The authorities must ensure that the deprivation of liberty of such person do not represent an inhuman or degrading treatment, according the general principles of internal law, and is not contrary to the principle of the superior interest of the child.

Q.33. M. In particular is article 10 regarding access to education of minors respected in those places?

Normal access to education.

Q.33. N. How many asylum seekers are for the moment detained in your Member State? Which proportion does this represent in comparison of the total number of asylum seekers at the same moment?

No available information, for the specific situation of the detained asylum seekers, but only for aliens in general. Therefore, no proportion can be determined.

9. ORGANISATION OF THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.34. Explain if the system of providing reception conditions is centralised or decentralised (which levels of government do provide practically reception conditions?) (do not confuse this question with question number 3 about the competence to make rules about reception conditions).

Centralized system - the Romanian Office for Immigration within the Ministry of Internal Affaires and Administrative Reform

Q.35. In case, are accommodation centres public or/and private (managed by NGOs? If yes, are the NGOs financially supported by the State?)

They are public, under the coordination of the Romanian Office for Immigration

Q.36. In case, how many accommodation centres are there in your Member State (distinguish in your answer between public and private centres)?

5 public accommodation centres and 2 detention centres for asylum seekers, administrated by the Romanian Office for Immigration. No private centres.

Q.37. Is there in the legislation a plan or are there rules in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory of your Member State to avoid their concentration in some areas like big cities or to share the costs of their reception between central, regional and local authorities?

No.

Q.38. Does a central body representing all the actors (like NGOs) involved in reception conditions exist? Does it play a consultative role for the State authorities, a coordination role for the actors or any other role?

No.

Q.39. Q.39. A. Which is the body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions as requested by article 23 which is mandatory provision? Include in your answer which is the competent ministry (Interior, Social affairs, etc) for reception conditions?

The Romanian Office for Immigration within the Ministry of Internal Affaires and Administrative Reform is charged with the application of the law regarding the reception conditions.
A special body from the Ministry of Internal Affaires and Administrative Reform directly depending on the Minister is in charge with monitoring and controlling all bodies of the Ministry, including the Romanian Office for Immigration.
There is no administrative link between the Romanian Office for Immigration and the special body in charge with monitoring and controlling its activity.

Q.39. B. Has your Member State (like the Czech Republic did recently) approved quality standards (not necessary legally binding) for housing services (for instance about the number of persons per bedroom on the basis of its size, number of accessible toilets, bathrooms, showers and washing machines per number of persons, existence of common rooms with radio, television, newspapers, books, computers, accessibility of telephone, existence of recreative rooms for children,…) to be respected in particular in accommodation centres?

There are no explicit norms in the legislation of transposition.

Q.39. C. How is this system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions organised?

The control over the Romanian Office for Immigration is done by a special body within the Ministry of Internal Affaires and Administrative Reform. This special body is directly supervised by the Minister.

Q.39. D. Does the body in charge of guidance, control and monitoring produce reports about the level of reception conditions? If yes, how frequently and are they public?

Reports are drafted and submitted to the Ministry of Internal Affaires and Administrative Reforms, to which the public may have access as information of public interest. There are no explicit provisions regarding the periodicity of the reports, or the obligation to make them public ex officio.

Q.40. Q.40. A. What is the total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions for the last year for which figures are available (see article 22 obliging Member States to calculate those statistics about which we also asked the Commission to require them from Member States for mid June)?

The number of applications for asylum: 2003 – 1,077; 2004 – 662; 2005 – 593; 2006 - 464. For 2006, from the 464 applications, 83 represented double applications. It results for 2006, 381 asylum seekers.

Q.40. B. What is the total budget of reception conditions in euro for the last year for which figures are available?

There is no information available.

Q.40. C. What is the average cost of reception conditions in euro per asylum seeker for the last year for which figures are available?

There is no information available.

Q.40. D Are the costs of reception conditions of asylum seekers supported by the central/federal or federated government or are they shared with regional and/or local authorities?

The costs are supported from the state budget.

Q.40. E. Is article 24 § 2 of the directive following which "Member States shall allocate the necessary resources in connection with the nationals provisions enacted to implement this directive" respected?

The legislation provides for the obligation to include these amounts in the state budget.

Q.41. Q.41. A. What is the total number of persons working for reception conditions?

The information is not public.

Q.41. B. How is the training of persons working in accommodation centres organised? Does it take into account specific needs of unaccompanied minors when relevant as well as the gender dimension? (see article 14 §5, 19 § 4 and also 24 §1 which are mandatory provisions)?

The legislation provides for the obligation of professional training of the personnel, but there are no specific norms regarding the specialization.

Q.41. C. Are there rules about the deontology of persons working in accommodation centres, in particular on confidentiality?

The general norms applicable to public officers.

10. IMPACT OF THE DIRECTIVE

Legal impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.42. Specify if there are or not big problems with the translation of the directive in the official language of your Member State and give in case a list of the worst examples of provisions which have been badly translated? (please note that this question has in particular been added to the questionnaire concerning the new Member States)

The translation is correct.

Q.43. Where there precise legal rules on reception conditions for asylum seekers before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the directive (if yes, specify what the nature of those rules was (legislation, regulation, administrative instructions,…)?

YES, the Government Ordinance no. 102/2000.

Q.44. Did the legal rules applicable to reception conditions become more clear, precise, coherent or detailed with the adoption of the transposition norms (for instance do you now have after the transposition one basic text dealing with reception conditions instead of numerous different texts in the past?

In principle, the previous legislation was clear, precise, coherent and detailed, so, from this point of view, there is a status quo.

Q.45. Did the transposition of the directive imply important changes in national law or were the changes of minor importance? In case, list the most important changes that have been introduced.

The most important changes regarded the cooperation between Romania and other EU member states, and between Romania and EU institutions.

Political impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.46. Explain briefly if there has been an important debate about the transposition of the directive (in particular in the Parliament, but possibly also in the government, between political parties, including in medias, etc; underline in case the main points which have been discussed or have created difficulties)

No.

Q.47. Did the transposition of the directive contribute to make the internal rules stricter or more generous? In particular, did your Member State use the occasion of the transposition to abolish more favourable provisions of national law? Does your Member State still have rules more favourable than the provisions of the directive (if yes, try to give the more important examples).

In principle, there is a status quo regarding the content of the norms regarding the asylum.
In principle, the norms from the law of transposition are in line with the directive (nor more favourable, nor more restrictive).

11. ANY OTHER INTERESTING ELEMENT

Q.48. What are in your view the weaknesses and strengths of the system of reception conditions in your Member State?

The legislation transposes almost integrally the directive. However, there is a weak point: the absence of specific provisions regarding the categories of persons with special needs.

Q.49. Mention any good practice in your Member State which could be promoted in other Member States

Nothing to be mentioned.

Q.50. Please add here any other interesting element about reception conditions in your Member State which you did not had the occasion to mention in your previous answer.

Nothing to be mentioned.

Observation: The evolution of the legislation, the jurisprudence and the practical aspects need to take into consideration the fact that Romania became an EU member only from January 1st, 2007.

QUESTIONNAIRE FOR THE NATIONAL REPORT ON THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE DIRECTIVE :
RECEPTION CONDITIONS OF 27 JANUARY 2003

IN: SLOVAK REPUBLIC

by Skamla Martin
Lawyer
skamla@gmail.com
15/05/2007

1. NORMS OF TRANSPOSITION

Q.1. Identify the main norm of transposition (indicate the title, date, number, date of entry into force and references of publication into the official journal) and indicate its legal nature (legislative, regulatory, administrative); indicate in your answer if this norm was only devoted to the directive or if it has been included in a more general text and indicate in that case by quoting precisely the numbers of the provisions adopted to transpose the directive.

The main norm of transposition is a legislative norm - Law No 1/2005 from 2 December 2004 amending Law No 480/2002 on asylum and on amendments of some laws as amended, and on amendments of some laws - zákon č. 1/2005 Z. z. z 2. decembra 2004, ktorým sa mení a dopĺňa zákon č. 480/2002 Z. z. o azyle a o zmene a doplnení niektorých zákonov v znení neskorších predpisov a o zmene a doplnení niektorých zákonov (Collection of Laws (Zbierka zákonov), Vol. 1 (2005)).

The Law No 1/2005 entered into force on 1 February 2005.

According to the Explanatory Report to the draft law, the aim of the amendment of the Law on Asylum was to ensure the harmonisation of the Slovak legislation on asylum with the Directive 2003/9/EC, and to update some provisions of the Law on Asylum, which should, according to a practical experience, make the asylum procedure in Slovakia more effective.

Following provisions were adopted to transpose the directive:
Section I, §§ 8, 10, 19, 30, 31, 32, 35, 37, and 44; Section II, §§ 1-5; and Section III, § 2.

Q.2. List by order of importance by using numbers (1, 2, 3) the others norms of transposition if there are more than one (indicate for each norm the title, date, number and references of publication into the official journal; include in your answer the administrative measures taken to ensure implementation of the directive and of the transposition norms like regulations, administrative circulars, special instructions,…)

Other laws – norms of transposition:

1. The Act No. 480/2002 on Asylum and on Amendments of Some Acts from 20 June 2002 (as amended
2. The Act No. 29/1984 on the Framework of Primary and Secondary Schools from 22 March 1984 (zákon č. 29/1984 Zb. o sústave základných a stredných škôl – Collection of Laws (Zbierka zákonov), Vol. 5 (1984)) as amended
3. The Act No. 48/2002 on Residence of Foreigners and on Amendments of Some Acts from 13 December 2001 (zákon č. 48/2002 Z. z. o pobyte cudzincov – Collection of Laws (Zbierka zákonov), Vol. 23 (2002)) as amended
4. The Act No. 99/1963 Code on Civil Procedure from 4 December 1963 (zákon č. 99/1963 Zb. Občiansky súdny poriadok - Collection of Laws (Zbierka zákonov), Vol. 56 (1963)) as amended
5. The Act No. 305/2005 on Socio-legal Protection of Children and on Social Tutelage and on Amendments of Some Acts from 25 May 2005 as amended (Act on Protection of Children)

Administrative measures:
There is a regulation of the Ministry of Interior implementing the Law No 480/2002 on asylum (Asylum Law) - Regulation of the Ministry of Interior of the Slovak Republic No 4/2003 regulating conduct of the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior of the Slovak Republic and of departments of the Police Corps when implementing the Law No 480/2002 on asylum and on amendments of some laws. The consolidated version of the regulation was published in the Bulletin of the Ministry of Interior of the Slovak Republic on 10 March 2005 (Vol 19/2005).

This regulation was amended after adoption of the Law No 1/2005 by following regulation - Regulation of the Ministry of Interior of the Slovak Republic No 6/2005 amending Regulation of the Ministry of Interior of the Slovak Republic No 4/2003 regulating conduct of the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior of the Slovak Republic and of departments of the Police Corps when implementing the Law No 480/2002 on asylum and on amendments of some laws as amended by Regulation of the Ministry of Interior of the Slovak Republic No 31/2004. The regulation was published in the Bulletin of the Ministry of Interior of the Slovak Republic on 1 February 2005 (Vol 6/2005). It is an internal regulation.

Two other internal documents of the Ministry of Interior are worth mentioning with this regard:
1. No PPZ-153-21/HCP-CP/2005 - Methods of Conduct of the departments of the Office of the Border and Foreigners Police according to Regulation of the Commission of the EC No.343/2003 and in the asylum procedure – methodical guide; and

2. Direction of the Director of the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior of the Slovak republic No.11/2005 published on 12 April 2005 in the Collection of the Directions of the Director of the Migration Office, valid since 20.5.2005 which issued Internal Order of the Asylum Centre.

Q.3. Explain which level of government is competent to adopt the legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers (specify in particular in case of a federal or regional State, if it is the federal/central power or the components; in case, specify below when it is impossible for you to answer a question because it is about the competence of the components and it is impossible for you to gather reliable information about all of them)

It is the national (central) government, who are competent to adopt the legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers.

Q.4. Explain the legal technical choices done to transpose the directive (comment on the nature and level of the norms used to do the transposition: legislative, regulatory, administrative like instructions, etc). Add any other element about the technique of transposition of the directive which is interesting for the implementation of Community law.

The directive was transposed by a legislative norm adopted by the National Council of the Slovak Republic - Law No 1/2005.

Q.5. Mention if there is a general tendency to just copy the provisions of the directive into national legislation without redrafting or adaptation them to national circumstances? If yes, give some of the worst examples and explain if there is a risk that those provisions remain unapplied or will create difficulties of implementation in the future.

No such tendency was observed.

Q.6. Have all the texts necessary to ensure the effective implementation of the new rules of transposition been adopted, prepared or at least foreseen in the future (for example a regulation completing a new law and the necessary instructions telling the administration how to apply the new rules)?

All texts necessary to ensure the implementation have already been adopted, and no other texts will be prepared for the adoption. However, there are two issues, where the transposition was not done correctly; the first one is regarding the actual application for asylum, where the applicant has to state explicitly that he/she applies for asylum. The applications for international protection in general are not presumed to be applications for asylum until the word asylum is not mentioned. The other issue is connected with decisions according to Article 7 § 5 of the directive and possible appeals against them. These decisions are not given in writing and than there is no information or actual possibility for appeals. Also the issue of clothing for asylum seekers is not explicitly mentioned in Slovak law, which may cause problems in practice. Several other provisions are transposed in very general terms, and this could cause also problems in practical implementation.

2. BIBLIOGRAPHY

Q.7. Has an in-depth preparatory study been made public about the changes at the occasion of the transposition? If yes, thanks for trying to provide us a copy (please contact to answer this question adequately the body and person who was responsible for the preparation of the transposition of the directive in the public administration).

No such study has been prepared; it is not a common practice in Slovakia.

Q.8. Quote any recent scientific book or article published about the directive, the transposition rules or the question of reception conditions for asylum seekers in general (answer even if this literature is only available in your language and provide the complete title in your language (without translation) with all references; indicate author, title, in case name of periodical, year and place of publication).

There was nothing published in Slovakia with regard to the directive, the transposition rules or the question of reception conditions for asylum seekers in general recently.

Q.9. Quote any interesting decision of jurisprudence based on the implementation of the new rules of transposition of the directive (indicate references of publication if any)?

No such decision is known.

3. GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

The purpose of the following two questions is to help the reader to understand easily and quickly the system of reception conditions in your Member State and also to avoid that you have to repeat general elements in other parts of the questionnaire. Please do not write more than one or maximum two pages and do not include large historical developments.

Q.10. Describe in general the system of reception conditions in your Member State (in particular which are the main actors in charge of reception conditions?)

The main actor in charge of the system of reception conditions is the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior (if anywhere in the text "Ministry" or "Migration Office" is mentioned, it means the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior). They provide accommodation for asylum seekers, ensure that asylum seekers have necessary health care, inform asylum seekers on their rights and obligations, and provide them with identification documents.

An asylum application has to be submitted at a department of Border and Foreigners Police. Therefore, before placement in a reception centre, it is department of Border and Foreigners Police in cooperation with The Ministry, which is responsible to provide necessary survival conditions, such as food, drinking water and necessary health care for asylum seekers in his disposal.

Q.11. Q11. A. Explain if you have different types and levels of reception conditions following the different stages of the asylum procedure (this implies that you have to give briefly the necessary explanations about the asylum procedure). Make if relevant for reception conditions a distinction between the following procedural stages: determination of the responsible Member State on the basis of the Dublin II regulation, special procedures at the border (including transit zones in airports), accelerated procedures, admissibility procedures, eligibility procedures and the different possibilities of appeals (suspensive or not) against a refusal of the asylum request. Indicate what the main differences of reception conditions are between the different stages (if necessary by detailing between the different elements of reception conditions, in particular housing) and explain what the evolution of reception conditions is following the different stages of the procedure.

The only body deciding on the status of refugee is the Migration office of the Ministry of Interior. First instance decision, except for granting or not granting asylum, can also reject application as inadmissible, manifestly unfounded or can terminate the procedure. Any decision, except for termination of the procedure, is reviewable by court, but only appeal against decision on not granting asylum has suspensive effect. Decision on termination of the procedure can be challenged by appeal to the Minister of Interior, but in case of a successive asylum application, appeal has no suspensive effect.

Until any decision in the first instance of the asylum procedure is issued, the same reception conditions apply to all asylum seekers (with an exception of those, who applied for asylum after being administratively detained – see the specific answers on detention below). Then, it depends on the content of the decision.

If asylum was not granted, an appeal against such decision has suspensive effect, which means that the reception conditions apply to the asylum seeker concerned until a final decision of courts is taken.

If an asylum application was rejected as inadmissible, was rejected as manifestly unfounded, an appeal against such decision has no suspensive effect, and it depends on action or omission of the Foreigners Police, if the reception conditions will further apply to the asylum seeker concerned, as the decision is enforceable even if the appeal was lodged.

If the appeal has no suspensive effect, the Foreigners Police can expel or return the asylum applicant concerned, even if the appeal was lodged. It is difficult to report on a common practice in such cases, as there are not many of them, and if there are some, the asylum seekers concerned often leaves the centre by himself/herself. The Foreigners Police is notified about all the decisions issued by the Ministry, and it depends on them, if they act with regard to the expulsion or return, as they are allowed to do so by law, or not. If such persons are not expelled, they can remain in the reception centres until final decision of a court. According to the Internal rules of the Asylum Centre, asylum seeker is obliged to leave the centre only if the asylum procedure has been validly finished.

Asylum seekers who decide for voluntary return to their country of origin are also receiving reception conditions in the asylum centre, until their return is not arranged, although their procedure is legally terminated and they remain in the country on a tolerated stay.

Q 11. B. Indicate precisely for which stage(s) of the asylum procedure the answers on reception conditions you give below are valid.

The answers are valid for the first stage of the asylum procedure - until a first instance decision is delivered, and they are also valid for the next stages of the asylum procedure, if the first instance decision was about not granting asylum.

4. GENERAL RULES ON RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.12. Q 12. A. Are material reception conditions provided in kind, in money or in vouchers or in a combination of these elements (see article 13, §5 which is an optional provision)? Distinguish between the different elements (housing, food, clothes, health, transportation, pocket money,…). If reception conditions are provided in money (in general or in some cases, for instance when no places are anymore available in accommodation centres), indicate the precise amount given to the asylum seekers. Indicate in your answer what is provided in general and if there are exceptional cases. Specify in your answer if reception conditions are different from the general system of social aid for nationals or aliens and if yes, if and when (which stage of the asylum procedure) can asylum seekers have access to the general system of social aid?

The majority of asylum seekers are accommodated in asylum centres, reception and accommodation camps, where food, basic health care, and basic hygienic and material needs necessary for living are provided for them. They also receive pocket money in the sum of 12 SKK per day for adults, and 8 SKK per day for children. The pocket money is not provided in cases, if the asylum application was filled repeatedly and the previous asylum procedure had been terminated, or if the asylum applicant tried to enter unlawfully the territory of a different country, or if the asylum applicant voluntarily left the territory of the Slovak Republic and was returned by the authorities of the neighbouring country.

The rest of asylum seekers are detained in detention centres of the Bureau of the Border and Foreign Police of the Police Corps of the Slovak Republic. The main reason for that fact is that they applied for asylum while being already detained, because of their illegal entry of the country or illegal presence in the country.

As the reception conditions are provided in kind, they differ completely from the general system of social aid for nationals or foreigners, and asylum seekers cannot have access to the general system of social aid while being in the asylum procedure.

Q 12. B. Can the reception conditions in kind, money or vouchers be considered as sufficient "to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence" as requested by article 13, §2 of the directive (which is a mandatory provision but leaves a certain space to Member States)? In order to help to assess the respect of this rule when reception conditions are provided in money, include if necessary in your answer points of comparison with the minimum amount of social aid guaranteed for nationals in your Member State.

The reception conditions in kind can be considered as sufficient within the meaning of Article 13 (2) of the directive, however, sometimes difficulties with clothing arise. Provision of clothing is not explicitly mentioned in the law; other things necessary for living are just mentioned in Article 22 (4) of the Asylum Law. Clothes are usually provided by NGOs, but there is not always enough clothes for everyone, who needs them, which might be a problem especially in winter.

5. PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

Q.13. Q 13. A. Does the national legislation specifically provide that a request for international protection is presumed to be under the Geneva Convention unless explicitly requested otherwise? (see article 2, b which is a mandatory provision)

There is no such specific provision, but the Asylum Law as amended by the Law. No. 692/2006 is construed in a way implying such presumption.

According to Article 2 (a) of the Asylum Law, international protection means granting of asylum or subsidiary protection. Article 2 (h) provides that applicant means a foreigner declaring to the police department to seek granting of asylum or subsidiary protection on the territory of the Slovak Republic.

There is just one procedure for assessing the grounds for international protection, whether it is asylum, or subsidiary protection. Asylum grounds are always assessed at first.

Q. 13. B. Explain if the scope of application of reception conditions is extended to other asylum seekers than refugees in the sense of the Geneva Convention, in particular to persons asking for subsidiary protection or to other forms of protection like humanitarian statuses (see article 3, § 4 which is an optional provision)? If not, explain briefly which the differences between these special regimes and the directive are.

The reception conditions apply to all applicants - those, who stated before a police department that they ask for international protection (asylum or subsidiary protection).

As asylum can be granted also for humanity reasons, the scope of application of reception conditions is extended also to persons applying for asylum for humanity reasons.

Q. 13. C. Are there specific provisions in national law for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation (see article 3, §2 which is an optional provision)?

There are no such provisions in national law.

Q.14. Are reception conditions available as from the moment one asylum application is introduced? How is article 13, §1 which is mandatory legally understood? Do asylum seekers have to satisfy any other condition in order to get reception conditions?

According to Article 22 (4) of the Asylum Law, asylum applicants shall be provided with accommodation, food, and basic hygienic products and other things necessary for living, in course of the asylum procedure. According to Article 3 (6) of the Asylum Law, the asylum applicant is obliged to arrive at the reception camp within 24 hours from making the statement that he/she seeks asylum.
There is no other condition in law to be satisfied in order to get reception conditions.

Before arriving to the reception camp, asylum applicants stay for a short time (should not exceed 24 hours) at Border and Foreigners Police stations. In most of the situations asylum seeker comes into first contact with a department of the Border and Foreigners Police (at the border point, asylum police unit competent to receive application for asylum after entering Slovak republic) and his position as asylum seeker has been already established. In those situations, asylum unit is responsible in cooperation with the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior to provide food and drinking regime for asylum seekers and in case of need also health care. At the border point, the department of the Border and Foreigners Police is responsible to provide health care in case there is a need.

Q.15. Explain when reception conditions end, for instance after refusal of the asylum request (include in your answer the link with the right of appeal against a decision of refusal of the status, in particular the question of its suspensive effect)

According to Article 22 (4) of the Asylum Law, asylum applicants shall be provided with accommodation, food, and basic hygienic products and other things necessary for living, in course of the asylum procedure. Therefore, reception conditions end, when the decision of the Ministry in the asylum procedure is enforceable.
According to Article, 21 (1), a remedy against a decision not to grant asylum shall have suspensive effect.
According to Article 21 (2) to (4), a remedy against a decision rejecting an application for asylum as inadmissible, or against a decision rejecting an application for asylum as manifestly unfounded, shall not have suspensive effect, if courts decides otherwise.

If an appeal against a decision rejecting an application for asylum as inadmissible, or against a decision rejecting an application for asylum as manifestly unfounded, was submitted, there are two possible situations for an asylum seeker concerned. As appeals in above mentioned cases have no suspensive effect, it is possible to start an expulsion procedure even if an appeal was lodged. It depends then on the Foreigners Police, if they start an expulsion procedure or not. If expulsion procedure was started and an expulsion order was issued, the asylum seeker concerned is usually transferred to a detention centre, where he/she is waiting for expulsion to be executed. If the Foreigners Police does not act, the asylum seeker concerned can remain in an asylum centre and enjoy all the reception conditions. There is no common practice established or observed by the NGO's.

Q.16 Are there special rules or practices regarding reception conditions in case of successive applications for asylum introduced by the same person?

There are no special rules or practices regarding reception conditions in case of successive applications for asylum introduced by the same person with one exception regarding pocket money. The pocket money is not provided in cases, if the asylum application was filled repeatedly and the previous asylum procedure had been terminated.

Q.17. Information of asylum seekers about their rights and obligations in terms of reception conditions, in particular about established benefits (see article 5 which is too large extend a mandatory provision; do not confuse this question with the information to be provided to asylum seekers about the asylum procedure):

Q. 17. A. Are asylum seekers informed, and if yes about what precisely?

Asylum seekers are generally informed about their rights and obligations in terms of reception conditions. The information leaflet in English and addendum to it is attached to this questionnaire. Following is the extract of it, which regards reception conditions:

"While your asylum application is being examined, you must remain, unless the law stipulates otherwise, in the asylum facility (reception centre or residential centre), where you will receive accommodation, food, urgent medical care, basic requirements for hygiene and pocket money, to which, however, you may not be entitled in certain cases specified in the Asylum Act. On arrival at the reception centre you must allow yourself to be photographed and undergo a medical examination. You must remain in the camp that the ministry assigns you to and abide by its internal regulations. You must also cooperate with measures necessary to determine the status of your assets and finances.

On arrival at the reception centre you will be given an identity card as an asylum seeker, which you must keep with you while your application is being examined and must present it on request to the relevant bodies in order to establish your identity. You are obliged to protect this identity card against loss, theft, damage, destruction or abuse and if the card is lost, stolen, damaged, destroyed or abused you must report this to the migration office without delay. On completion of the examination of your application you must return the identity card in the asylum facility where you end your stay.

You may leave the asylum facility only on the basis of permission issued by the ministry. Before applying for permission to leave the facility for periods longer than 24 hours and at most 7 days, you must attend an interview, and you must state the address where you will reside. You may be given permission to reside outside the camp if you make a written application and meet the criteria laid down in the Asylum Act."

Addendum, which is communicated to asylum seekers since January 2007 as regards reception conditions provides:

"The applicant whose application was not lawfully resolved during the asylum granting procedure within one year as of the beginning of the proceeding, except for the case if the application is declined as an evidently unfounded or inadmissible one, he is entitled to enter into labour relation. He is obliged to notify the establishment, change or termination of labour relation immediately to the migration office. During the duration of the labour relation the applicant is not entitled for pocket money, and the migration office might decide on his duty to pay accordingly his costs related to his stay in the asylum institution or integration centre.

The migration office issues to the applicant after his arrival to the asylum camp a document on his right for the provision of health care. The applicant is obliged to protect the on health care provision right against loss, alienation, damage, destruction or abuse, and in case that such situation occurs, he is obliged to notify the migration office immediately. After the establishment of labour relation or after the termination of the asylum granting proceeding is obliged to hand in the document on health care provision right to the asylum institution where he is located or where he was last located or to the migration office."

There is also obligation to get asylum seekers acquainted with the Internal rules of the asylum centre and law states that Migration Office shall acknowledge those accommodated in such centre with Internal rules of the asylum centre in the language they understand. In practice, Internal rules are translated into English, French, Russian, Arabic and Chinese language and asylum seekers are acknowledged with it by displaying these 5 language versions on the board in the asylum centre.

Q. 17. B. Is the information provided in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

The information is generally provided in writing. According to the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior, if the information is not available in a language understood by asylum seekers, information is provided orally.

Q.17. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify the list of languages in which it is available

In general, the information is provided in a language understood by asylum seekers. The information is available in following languages: English, Bengali, French, Pashto, Romanian, Albanian, Ukrainian, Bulgarian, Hindi, Chinese, Urdu, Arabic, Dari, Punjabi, Russian, Turkish, and Vietnamese.

Q. 17. D. Is the deadline of maximum 15 days respected?

Yes, the deadline is respected.

Q.18. Information of asylum seekers about the existence of organisations or groups promoting their interest and defending their rights (see article 5 which is to a large extend a mandatory provision):

Q. 18. A. Is there a list of organisations dressed by the authorities and if yes is it comprehensive? Is this in particular the case about the possibilities to get legal assistance and health care?

Generally, there is a list of organisations providing legal, social, and psychological assistance, however, it is not updated.

As regards health care, it is provided by the Ministry of Interior itself. Health care is mostly provided by the asylum centre nurse and in more complicated cases, other health institutions are available. Since the Migration Office pays for the health care of asylum seeker through direct payments, it is not up to the choice of asylum seeker to contact health care institution.

Q. 18. B. Is the information provided to the asylum seekers, and if yes, in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

The information is provided in writing in the form of leaflets posted on notice boards in asylum centres, which are, as already stated before, not updated, and also orally by employees of the centres, if they are asked about it.

Q. 18. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify if possible the list of languages in which it is available.

The information in writing in the form of leaflets is available in English, Russian, French, Arabic, and Slovak.
The information on rights and obligations is available in following languages: English, Bengali, French, Pashto, Romanian, Albanian, Ukrainian, Bulgarian, Hindi, Chinese, Urdu, Arabic, Dari, Punjabi, Russian, Turkish, and Vietnamese.

Q. 18. D. How many organisations are active in that field in your Member State?

There are four non-governmental organisations providing legal aid - the Human Rights League, the Law Clinic of the Trnava University, the Slovak Humanitarian Council, and the Society of Goodwill. The Slovak Humanitarian Council and the Society of Goodwill are also providing social and psychological assistance, together with the Slovak Refugee Council.

Q.19. Documentation of asylum seekers (see article 6):

Q.19. A. What kind of document is delivered to the asylum seeker? Explain the legal value of this document (just a certification of the status as asylum seeker or also prove of identity?) (see §1 of article 6 which is a mandatory provision)

To the asylum seeker is delivered a document, which is considered as an identity document. According to Article 5 (1) and (2) of the Asylum Law, the Ministry of Interior shall issue, to a foreigner over 15 years of age, an applicant's card that will be his/her identity document during the period of the asylum procedure. The applicant's card shall contain the following data: name, surname, sex, date and place of birth and the applicant's citizenship, the card's date of issuance and expiration date, name of the asylum facility that issued the card and the names, surnames and dates of birth of the applicant's children under 15 years of age, provided that they are also applicants. The Ministry shall issue the applicant's card within three days from initiation of the procedure. The Ministry shall issue an applicant under 15 years of age such a card, when he/she is unaccompanied by his/her representative at law on the territory of the Slovak Republic.

Q.19. B. Are there situations or specific cases in which another equivalent document or even no document is issued? (in particular is there an exception for "procedures to decide on the right of the applicant legally to enter the territory" as made possible by §2 of article 6)?

According to Article 5 (1) (b) of the Asylum Law, the document is issued to an asylum seeker after applicant's arrival to the reception camp only, when the competent authority which received an asylum application was:
a) when entering the territory of the Slovak Republic the police department at the place of border check point,
c) when the foreigner concerned arrived to the territory of the Slovak Republic by plane and he/she fails to satisfy requirements for entering the territory of the Slovak Republic the police department in the transit area of an international airport.
d) the police department at a facility for foreigners, in the case of a foreigner placed in such facility (detention centre for illegal migrants),
e) the police department according to the place of the foreigner's stay, in the case of the foreigner placed in a health care institution, the foreigner in execution of custody on remand or the foreigner in execution of imprisonment.

Before arriving to a reception camp, this document is not issued to the asylum applicants concerned.

For purposes of showing identity during journey to the reception camp, when application was made at the border or after release from detention centre, health care institution, custody, imprisonment, asylum seeker is issued a temporary document with 24-hours validity.

In other case (when the competent authority which received an asylum application was after entering the territory of the Slovak Republic the police department established at the reception camp), the identity document is issued within three days from initiation of the procedure (Article 5 (1) (a) of the Asylum Law).

Q.19. C. For how long is this document in principle valid and is it necessary to renew it after a certain period?

The document is valid for three months, and it is necessary to renew it every three months.

Q.19. D. What is the deadline for the delivery of that document? Is the mandatory deadline of 3 days set by article 6, §1 respected[661]?

The deadline for delivery of the document is, according to Article 5 (1) (a) of the Asylum Law, three days, and is, according to the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior, fully respected.

Q.19. E. Is it possible for an asylum seeker to get a travel document for serious humanitarian reasons (see §5 of article 6 which is an optional provision)?

There is no such provision in Slovak law, which would allow an asylum seeker to get a travel document for humanitarian reasons.

Q.19. F. Is there a central system of registration of asylum seekers and is it or not separate from the registration of aliens? If yes, describe it briefly (content) and indicate in particular if it is an electronic database.

There is an electronic system of registration of asylum seekers, which is separate from the registration of foreigners. Following information are in the system: name, photograph, sex, date of birth, citizenship, nationality, religion, number of passport, family members, reasons for applying for asylum, name of the case-worker, code, number of protocol, date of the asylum application and other data regarding the procedure (date, when the decision was issued; delivery of the decision; type of the decision, etc.), information on movements of the applicant).

Q.20. Residence of asylum seekers :

Q.20. A. Is in principle an asylum seeker free to move on the entire territory of your Member State or only to a limited part of it and in case, which part? (see article 7, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

According to Article 23a (1) of the Asylum Law, an applicant may leave the asylum facility only based on a permit issued by the Ministry. The applicant may request the Ministry for issuance of the permit for leaving the asylum facility for more than 24 hours, but maximally seven days, only after being interviewed; in the request, he/she shall be obliged to state the place where he/she will stay. Until the interview with Migration office, applicant can leave facility based on permission granted by staff of the centre for less than 24 hours. The general regulation on administrative procedure shall not apply to the permit's issuance.

According to Article 23a (2) of the Asylum Law, the Ministry may refuse to issue the permit under Paragraph 1 only due to a public order or due to the need for the applicant's personal attendance at the asylum procedure.

If the permit has been issued, the applicant can move on the entire territory of Slovakia.

According to Article 23 (3) (c) and (d) of the Asylum Law, unless otherwise decided by the Ministry, the applicant shall be obliged to stay in the reception camp until announcement of the result of the medical examination, and also to stay in the asylum facility, if for the purposes of preventing contagious diseases, isolation or quarantine measure is ordered to the applicant.

The result of the medical examination is usually announced in up to one month, but there is no legal provision stating the maximum period, in which the result should be announced.

Q.20. B. About the place of residence (see §2 of article 7): explain to which extend the person is free to choose her residence and if this depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance processing of application, attribution of reception conditions,…).

An applicant is obliged to stay in the reception camp, where he was placed, until announcement of the result of the medical examination.

According to Article 22 (2) of the Asylum Law, the applicant, after end of stay in a reception camp, shall be placed in the accommodation camp or shall be permitted to reside outside of the accommodation camp. The Ministry may place the applicant in the integration centre for the necessary period of time.

If the applicant is placed in the accommodation camp or in the integration centre, the choice of the camp or of the centre is up to the Ministry.

According to Article 22 (3) of the Asylum Law, the Ministry may permit the applicant to stay outside of the accommodation camp upon a written request, if he/she is capable of covering all his/her expenses related to the stay out of the accommodation camp of his/her own funds, or a citizen of the Slovak Republic with a permanent residence on the territory of the Slovak Republic or an foreigner with a residence permit on the territory of the Slovak Republic submits a written solemn declaration that he/she shall facilitate the accommodation of the applicant and cover all expenses relating to the applicant's stay on the territory of the Slovak Republic.
Then, the person concerned is free to choose her residence. The permission is usually granted for 1 month and needs to be renewed every month.

Q.20. C. About the place of reception (meaning where the asylum seeker has to stay to benefit from reception conditions) (see § 4 of article 7): explain which are the general rules about the determination of this place (to which extend are the decisions determining the place taken individually and do they take into account the personal situation of the asylum seeker?) and to which extend the person is free to choose it and if it depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance attribution of reception conditions, processing of the application,…).

In reception camps, applicants are placed on a geographical basis depending on in which part of the country they applied for asylum.

Applicants have no chance to influence the choice of the place of accommodation.

According to Article 39 (2) of the Asylum Law, the Ministry, when placing a foreigner in an asylum facility, shall consider his/her age, health, and relatives, religious, ethnic and national specific features. Men shall be placed separately from women, minors from adults while taking into account family ties. Transfer of foreigners from one asylum facility to another asylum facility shall only be executed in the necessary cases.

Q.20. D. If all asylum seekers are not placed in accommodation centres because of capacity limits, explain how the persons are distributed between accommodation centres and other accommodation facilities (which authority takes the decisions, on the basis of which elements, can that decision be appealed by the asylum seeker,…)

Such a situation did not happen yet, and is not foreseen in the law. It is expected that the capacity of the centres should be sufficient.

Q.20. E. How can an asylum seeker ask to leave temporarily the place of residence or of reception or an assigned area? How is the individual AND impartial character of the decision ensured? (see §5 of article 7 which is a mandatory provision)

According to Article 22 (3) of the Asylum Law, the Ministry may permit the applicant to stay outside of the accommodation camp upon a written request, if he/she is capable of covering all his/her expenses related to the stay out of the accommodation camp of his/her own funds, or a citizen of the Slovak Republic with a permanent residence on the territory of the Slovak Republic or a foreigner with a residence permit on the territory of the Slovak Republic submits a written solemn declaration that he/she shall facilitate the accommodation of the applicant and cover all expenses relating to the applicant's stay on the territory of the Slovak Republic.

According to Article 23a (1) of the Asylum Law, an applicant may leave the asylum facility only based on a permit issued by the Ministry. The applicant may request the Ministry for issuance of the permit for leaving the asylum facility for more than 24 hours, but maximally seven days, only after being interviewed; in the request, he/she shall be obliged to state the place where he/she will stay. The general regulation on administrative procedure shall not apply to the permit's issuance.

According to Article 23a (1) of the Asylum Law, the Ministry may refuse to issue the permit under Paragraph 1 only due to a public order or due to the need for the applicant's personal attendance at the asylum procedure.

There is no specific assurance with regard to impartiality. In case of refusal, no decision on refusal is issued, and no reasoning is provided to asylum applicants.

Q.21. Q.21. A. Do rules on reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions exist in internal legislation and if yes in which cases (mention in particular if there are cases not foreseen by article 16, § 1 and 2 which are optional provisions)? Distinguish in your answer between cases of reduction and withdrawal and explain which conditions can be reduced and if access to emergency health care is always ensured as requested by article 16, §4, last sentence.

According to Article 23 (5) of the Asylum Law, the Ministry may decide, that the applicant is obliged to adequately cover the expenses relating to his stay in the asylum facility or integration centre, or the cost of medical care provided, if his/her financial and proprietary circumstances are such, that it is possible to request from him/her at least a partial payment of the expenses relating to this stay.

In practice, this provision was not applied yet.

There is also a provision, according to which the Ministry shall withdraw a pocket money for an applicant. The pocket money is not provided in cases, if the asylum application was filled repeatedly and the previous asylum procedure had been terminated, or if the asylum applicant tried to enter unlawfully the territory of a different country, or if the asylum applicant voluntarily left the territory of the Slovak Republic and was returned by the authorities of the neighbouring country. The Ministry may also withdraw a pocket money for an applicant for violating obligations under the Asylum Law. An appeal against the decision on the withdrawal of the pocket money does not have a suspensive effect. The decision is issued only in the latter case. In other cases, an applicant is informed only that the pocket money is not provided.

Access to emergency health care is ensured by Article 22 (5) of the Asylum Law. According to this provision, the Ministry shall pay for an urgent health care on behalf of an applicant, who does not have a public insurance. There is no derogation from this obligation.

Reception conditions are connected to asylum seeker's stay in asylum centre. In case permission to leave the centre is issued for more than 24 hours, asylum seeker is not entitled to receive food for that time. Also in case of asylum seeker permitted to stay outside the asylum centre (long-term permission), he is not entitled to receiving reception conditions, except for health care and education.

Q.21. B. Has article 16, §2 dealing with refusal of reception conditions for unreasonably late applications for asylum been transposed by your Member State (or was this case already applicable before transposition)? Are there cases in practice?

No, this provision was not transposed.

Q.21. C. How is it ensured that decisions of reduction or withdrawal are taken individually, objectively AND in particular impartially (for instance through and independent arbitrator) (see article 16, §4 which is a mandatory provision)?

There is no such assurance in the law with regard to withdrawal of pocket money. The decision is taken by the Ministry (in particular, director of an asylum centre). An appeal without a suspensive effect is possible, but it is the Minister of Interior who decides in the appeal procedure. Only then, a complaint to a court can be lodged.

Q.21. D. Is statement 14/03 adopted by the Council at the same moment as the directive respected (see the document attached to our sending)?

As only pocket money can be withdrawn from an asylum applicant, the statement 14/03 is respected.

Q.21. E. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements on cases of reduction, withdrawal or refusal which have been taken, and if yes, what has been the outcome?

No such decisions or judgements are known.

Q.22.

Q.22. A. Appeal against a negative decision relating to the granting of benefits or based on article 7 (see article 21 which is a mandatory provision): indicate against which decision an appeal can be introduced, describe the system of appeal in general and include in particular in your answer the information given to asylum seekers about possibilities of appealing, deadline for appealing, if the appeal has or not a suspensive effect, if there are different steps (for instance first an administrative appeal and in particular if the guarantee of an appeal before a judicial body in the last instance is respected)?

There are no individual decisions made, if based on Article 7. As there is no decision, no appeal can be lodged. In general, complaints against any illegal acts or omissions of administrative bodies can be lodged with a court. No information about this possibility is given to asylum seekers, the complaint has no suspensive effect, and there is a deadline of 30 days with regard to complaint against an illegal act of an administrative body.

Q.22. B. Explain which are the possibilities for asylum seekers to benefit from legal assistance when they introduce such an appeal (see article 21, §2 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to Member States)?

Legal aid is provided to asylum seekers by several non-governmental organisations in the centres and outside of them.

When an asylum seeker is bringing a case before a court, he can also ask for legal aid and representation under the same conditions as Slovak citizens (if it is reasonable in the view of the material situation of the person concerned, and if the application of law is not arbitrary or clearly without a possibility to succeed).

Q.22. C. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

There are no such decisions or judgements known.

Q.22. D. Is a mechanism of complain for asylum seekers about quality of receptions conditions in general (even if they are not personally concerned) organised? If yes, before which authority? Is it linked to the system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions (see below question n° 39)?

There is no special formal mechanism of complaint about quality of reception conditions in general. An asylum seeker can complain in writing to the director of the Migration Office through a director of an asylum centre, through UNHCR, or through NGOs. A general complaint system for administrative bodies falling under Ministry of Interior can be used. There is a special body at the Ministry of Interior responsible for complaints.

6. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.23. Family unity of asylum seekers: define how a family is defined in relation with article 2, (d) which is a mandatory provision and explain how housing is provided to a family (see articles 8 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to member States and 14, §2, (a) which is a mandatory provision).

There is no specific definition of a family in the Asylum Law.

Article 10 (1) of the Asylum Law provides, who should be granted asylum for the purpose of family reunification. Article 10 (1) reads:
"The Ministry shall grant asylum for the purpose of family reunification to
a) the spouse of the person granted asylum if their marriage is continuing to exist in the country the person granted asylum left for reasons under Section 8, and the person granted asylum gave his/her prior written consent,
b) unmarried children of the person granted asylum or the person according to the letter a) younger than 18 years of age or
c) parents of an unmarried person granted asylum younger than 18 years of age, if the person granted asylum agrees."

According to Article 39 (1) and (2), appropriate conditions shall be created for families with children. When placing a foreigner in asylum facility, family relationship shall be considered, and family ties shall be taken into account.

Q.24. Q.24. A. How is housing of asylum seekers organised: describe the system in general and indicate in particular what is the most frequently system used (see article 14, §1 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space for Member States; distinguish between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels places or other premises).

In general, asylum seekers are accommodated in asylum centres – reception and accommodation camps. The Ministry may place the applicant in the integration centre for the necessary period of time. An asylum applicant may be also permitted to reside outside of the accommodation camp.

Q.24. B. What is the total number of available places for asylum seekers? Distinguish in your answer between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels or other premises.

Reception camps - places for 818 persons
Accommodation camps - places for 370 persons

Accommodation in private houses and apartments and hotels is not provided, it is up to the applicant to find for him/her a suitable accommodation, if he/she does not want to stay in an accommodation camp.

Q.24. C. Is this number of places for asylum seekers sufficient in general or frequently insufficient?

Existing number of places is sufficient. In case of an increase of asylum applications, the number of places in one of the centres can be increased by 250 additional places.

Q.24. D. Are there special measures foreseen in urgent cases of a high number of news arrivals of asylum seekers (outside the case of application of the directive on temporary protection)?

No such measures are foreseen in the law.

Q.25. Accommodation centres (important note: all the following questions are about open and not closed centres where asylum seekers are detained which are covered by another question)

Q.25. A Are there different categories of accommodation centres, for instance depending of the stage of the procedure (admissibility and eligibility)?

There are two different categories of centres: (i) reception camps, where applicants are accommodated until result of medical examination is announced, and (ii) accommodation camps, where are applicants placed after the end of stay in a reception camp.

These two categories of centres, accommodation and reception camps, have become mixed lately. Many asylum seekers although received already a positive result of the medical screening, remain on the premises of reception camps, but their regime changes into accommodation regime and are allowed to leave the reception camp based on permission.

Q.25. B. Is there a legal time limit for accommodation in a centre after which the asylum seekers have access to private houses or apartments or is this limit linked to a stage of the asylum procedure?

Asylum seekers have access to private houses or apartments after a result of medical examination is announced.

Q.25. C. Is there a general regulation about the internal functioning of those centres and the rights and duties of the asylum seekers? If yes, is this general regulation applicable to public and private centres? If not, are the centres supposed to adopt an internal regulation and does a central authority have or not a kind of control about its content?

There are only public centres in Slovakia, which are administered by the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior.

According to Article 41 of the Asylum Law, the Ministry shall regulate the details concerning the conditions of foreigners' stay in the asylum facility in internal rules. In the internal rules the Ministry shall regulate in particular: (a) time table for food delivery, (b) the amount of the pocket money and a time table for its disbursement, (c) time table for delivery and distribution of documents, (d) conditions, under which the asylum facility may be left.

Q.25. D. Do the regulations foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers in case of breach of the rules? (see article 16, §3) If yes, which sanctions for which rules? Which is the competent authority to decide? How is it ensured that decisions are taken individually, objectively and in particular impartially (for instance through an independent arbitrator) as requested by §4 of article 21 which is mandatory provision*?* Which are the possibilities of appealing against those decisions if the system is different from the general one under question n°22? Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

There is a possibility to withdraw pocket money from an applicant. According to Article 51 of the Asylum Law, the Ministry may withdraw away pocket money from the applicant for violating obligations under this Law. An appeal against the decision on the withdrawal of the pocket money does not have a suspensive effect. The decision is taken by the Ministry, and it is the Minister of Interior who decides in the appeal procedure. Only then, a complaint to a court can be lodged.

Q.25. E. Are asylum seekers involved in the management of these centres? If yes, how (advisory board, appointment or election of representatives)? (see article 14, §6 which is an option provision)

Internal rules of a camp give a possibility for the applicants to be involved in the activities of the self-administration, and its task is to organise free time activities, solving of disputes and inferring of consequences in case of breach of the internal rules.

Q.25. F. Do specific rules exist on work of asylum seekers inside the accommodation centres different from the general ones about employment (see below)? If yes, which ones? Can working inside accommodation centres be considered as a (mandatory) contribution of the asylum seekers to the management of the centres, is it or not paid and considered as implying access to the labour market and subject to the same rules?

If an applicant works inside accommodation camp, director of the camp may increase the sum of the pocket money up to 36 SKK per day. Such a work is not considered as a work in employment relations, and therefore applicants do not have to wait for a year in the asylum procedure in order to work in the camp, as it is the case in the labour market, where access to employment is allowed after a year spent in the asylum procedure only.

Q.26. Q.26. A. How can asylum seekers communicate with legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGOs? (see article 14, §2, (b) which is a mandatory provision).

According to Article 42 of the Asylum Law, the authorised representative of UNHCR can participate in the asylum procedure at any stage, and establish contact with a party to the procedure.

According to Article 40 (2) of the Asylum Law, a foreigner shall have the right to talk with authorised UNHCR representative, his/her representative or guardian in the absence of third persons.

According to Article 45 of the Asylum Law, the Ministry shall co-operate with non-governmental organisations in ensuring care for applicants.

According to Article 17 (1) of the Asylum Law, a party to the asylum procedure shall have the right to be in contact with the Office of United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (hereinafter „UNHCR“) and non-governmental organisations involved in care for applicants and persons granted asylum on the territory of the Slovak Republic during the procedure.

In practice, legal advisors and NGO employees visit asylum centres on a weekly basis.

Q.26. B. What are the rules about access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs regarding access to accommodation centres and other housing facilities (see article 14, §7 which is a mandatory provision)

According to Article 40 (1) of the Asylum Law, a stranger may enter the asylum facility only with a permission of the Ministry. The general regulation concerning administrative procedure shall not apply to permitting entry of an asylum facility.

In practice, permissions are issued for NGOs and legal advisers for a specified period of time.

Q.26. C. Can the access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs be limited for security reasons or any other reason (see article 14, §7, last sentence)?

No such limitations have been used so far.

Q.27. Q.27. A. Is a medical screening organised by the receiving State, is it mandatory or voluntary? Does it include HIV tests? (see article 9 which is an optional provision)

A medical screening is mandatory, an applicant is obliged to undergo a medical examination (Article 23 (3) (b) of the Asylum Law). According to the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior, it does not include HIV test. HIV is made if medical examination has brought some suspicion concerning the illness but test may be only done upon asylum seeker's consent.

Q.27. B. Do the legal provisions on reception conditions ensure that asylum seekers receive at least emergency care and essential treatment of illness as requested by article 15 §1 which is a mandatory provision? Do they have a further access to health care?

Access to health care is governed by Article 22 (5) of the Asylum Law. According to this provision, the applicant shall be provided with an urgent health care. In the cases requiring special attention, if based on an individual examination of the applicant's health condition there are determined special needs for health care, the Ministry shall pay, on behalf of the applicant, the costs of its provision exceeding the limit under the first sentence. The Ministry shall provide a due health care to minor asylum seekers who are victims of abuse, neglect, exploitation, torture or a cruel, inhuman and humiliating treatment or who suffered consequences of an armed conflict.

Q.27. C. What is the practice regarding access of asylum seekers to health care and how is it organised? In particular, what is the situation in accommodation centres (are doctors coming to the centres or do asylum seekers go to doctors outside)?

A nurse is working in the centres on a full time basis; a medical doctor is coming to the centres in a specified time, usually once a week. Specific medical examinations are executed in relevant medical institutions.

Asylum seekers do not participate in the general system of health insurance, if they do not work. The Ministry of Interior is responsible to provide urgent health care via direct payments to the health institution. In cases of special circumstances, when based on individual assessment of health state of asylum seeker special need of health care has been ascertained, Migration office pays for the health care beyond the standard of urgent health care. There is no choice for asylum seeker to decide on health institution. However, there is no problem to undergo further health care according to own choice, in case asylum seeker is able to pay for it.

Q.28. Q.28. A. What is the length of the period determined by the concerned Member State during which asylum seekers have no access to the labour market? (see article 11 which is a mandatory provision)

Asylum seekers have no access to labour market during the first year of the asylum procedure. According to Article 23 (6) of the Asylum Law, the applicant must not enter any employment relation until the decision on granting asylum comes into effect; however, he/she shall be entitled to enter labour-law relations, if no final decision is made on his/her application for asylum within one year from initiation of the procedure, except for the case when the application for asylum was dismissed as manifestly unfounded or inadmissible.

Q.28. B. After that period, are asylum seekers or not obliged to obtain a work permit? In case is there a limit for the administration to deliver the permits and how quick are they delivered? What is their length?

Asylum seekers are not obliged to obtain a work permit, it is not necessary for them. They can enter work relations without a permit. The Migration Office just issues on a written request of an applicant a certification letter that the applicant is entitled to enter the labour market. The applicant can enter the labour market even without the certification letter, the letter is issued for the purposes of employer, for him to know that the applicant is entitled to enter the labour market.

Q.28. C. After that period, what are the conditions for access of the asylum seekers to the labour market? (in particular, are there rules concerning the maximum allowed of working hours or days per week, month or year, limits in terms of type of work or of professions authorised?

According to Article 21 (1) (b) of the Law No 5/2004 on services of employment (zákon č. 5/2004 Z. z. o službách zamestnanosti - Collection of Laws (Zbierka zákonov), Vol. 4 (2004)), asylum seekers entitled to enter labour market have the same legal position as Slovak citizens as regards employment.

Q.28. D. What are the rules in terms of priorities between asylum seekers on the one hand and nationals, EU or EEE citizens and legally third-country nationals on the other?

Asylum seekers with access to labour market, as well as EU and EEA citizens and their family members, have the same legal position as Slovak citizens with regard to services of employment (Article 2 (2) and Article 21 (1) (b) of the Law No 5/2004 on services of employment as amended).

There is no prioritisation between asylum seekers and legally third country nationals. EU and EEA citizens do not need any work permit.

Q.28. E. Do asylum seekers have access to vocational training, does this or not depend of their right to access to the labour market, and in case at which conditions? (see article 12 which is optional regarding §1 and mandatory regarding § 2)

After gaining access to labour market, asylum seekers have also access to vocational training under the same conditions as Slovak citizens.

Q.28. F. Are the rules regarding access to the labour market adopted to transpose the directive more or less generous than the ones applicable previously?

The rules are more generous, as there was no access to the labour market for asylum applicants before the transposition of the directive.

Q.29. Are reception conditions subject to the fact that asylum seekers do not have sufficient resources? Are asylum seekers requested to contribute to reception conditions when they have personal resources (for instance if they work) or to refund the authorities if it appears that they have resources? (see article 13 §§ 3 and 4 which are optional provisions)

According to Article 23 (5) of the Asylum Law, the Ministry may decide, that the applicant is obliged to adequately cover the expenses relating to his stay in the asylum facility or integration centre, or the cost of medical care provided, if his/her financial and proprietary circumstances are such, that it is possible to request from him/her at least a partial payment of the expenses relating to this stay.

In practice, this provision was not applied yet.

7. SPECIAL NEEDS OF PARTICULAR CATEGORIES OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.30.

Q.30.A. Which of the different categories of persons with special needs considered in the directive are taken into account in the national legislation (see article 17, §1 which is a mandatory provision): disabled people, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence? Include in your answer all other categories envisaged in national law.

Unaccompanied minors and families with children are explicitly mentioned in Article 39 (1) of the Asylum Law with regard to appropriate conditions for accommodation and care. In addition to this, persons requiring special care are mentioned in this context. No other categories are mentioned in the Asylum Law.

According to Article 39 (1): ”The Ministry shall create appropriate conditions for the accommodation of minors unaccompanied by their representative at law on the territory of the Slovak Republic, for families with children and persons requiring special care in asylum facilities.”

Q.30. B. How is their specific situation taken into account (see articles 13, §2, second indent, 16 §4 second sentence and 17 which are mandatory provisions)?

They shall have appropriate conditions for accommodation and care created.

Q.30. C. How and when are the special needs of the concerned persons supposed to be legally identified (see article 17 § 2 which is a mandatory provision and clarify how it has been interpreted by transposition)?

This issue is not specified in Slovak legislation. Special needs might be identified in following procedures:

Medical examination
According to Article 23 (3) (b), an asylum applicant is obliged to undergo a medical examination provided by the Ministry without undue delay after his/her arrival to the reception centre.

Entrance interwiev
According to Article 4 (1) of the Asylum Law, after making application for asylum, the Ministry shall make an entrance interview with the applicant. However, there are no specific questions in the official form regarding special needs of the asylum applicant. As the Article 4 (1) further provides, in the course of the entrance interview, the applicant shall be obliged to provide truthfully and fully all requested information necessary for a decision on the application for asylum. The provided information shall be recorded on an official form. The specimen of the official form is enclosed in the Annex No. 2 to the Asylum Law.

Q.30. D. Is the necessary medical and other assistance provided to persons with special needs as requested by article 15, §2 which is a mandatory provision and in particular to victims of torture and violence as requested by article 20 which is a mandatory provision?

The issue of special medical assistance explicitly for victims of torture and violence is regulated only with regard to minors.

With this regard, Article 22 (5) of the Asylum Law provides:

“The Ministry shall pay for an urgent health care on behalf of an applicant, who does not have a public insurance; if based on individual examination of the applicant’s health condition there are determined special needs for provision of health care, the Ministry shall also cover the costs of such health care in the cases worth special attention. The Ministry shall provide a due health care to minor asylum seekers who are victims of abuse, neglect, exploitation, torture or a cruel, inhuman and humiliating treatment or who suffered consequences of an armed conflict."

According to the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior, persons with special needs are considered individually. Sick and elderly people are provided with advanced health care and persons handicapped otherwise are provided with psychological assistance and increased individual care by social workers in a camp.

Q.31. About minors:

Q.31. A. Till which age are asylum seekers considered to be minor?

According to a general rule provided in the Civil Code, asylum seekers are considered to be minors till 18. There is no special provision on different consideration of asylum seekers.

Q.31. B. How is access of minor asylum seekers to the education system ensured? Is it at school or in case inside accommodation centres and can it be considered as similar to the conditions for nationals as requested by article 10, §1?

According to Article 23 (3) (f) of the Asylum Law, an asylum applicant is obliged to attend a Slovak language course, if it is an applicant to whom the compulsory school attendance applies.

According to Article 34a (2) of the Law No. 29/1984 on the system of elementary and secondary schools as amended, which relates to education of foreigners, children of persons granted asylum and children of asylum applicants are provided with education in elementary and secondary schools under the same conditions as citizens of Slovakia.

Q.31. C. Is access to education ensured not later than 3 months as requested by article 10, §2 (or after maximum one year if specific education for asylum seekers is provided) and till an expulsion decision is really enforced?

Yes, Article 34a (4) of the Law No. 29/1984 on the system of elementary and secondary schools as amended was amended while transposing the directive to include the three months time limit.

Q.31. D. Is specific education (like language classes) available for asylum seekers, in particular to facilitate their effective access to the education system of the reception Member State (see article 10, §2 which is an optional provision)?

According to Article 23 (3) (f) of the Asylum Law, an asylum applicant is obliged to attend a Slovak language course, if it is an applicant to whom the compulsory school attendance applies.

The Slovak language courses are given in accommodation centres.

Q.31. E. Are minors in general accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them? (see article 14, § 3)

In general, minors are accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them. According to Article 39 (1) and (2), appropriate conditions shall be created for families with children. When placing a foreigner in asylum facility, family relationship shall be considered, and family ties shall be taken into account.

Q.31. F. Do minors with special needs enumerated by article 18, §2 which is a mandatory provision, have access to appropriate mental health care and qualified counselling?

According to Article 22 (5), a due health care to minor asylum seekers who are victims of abuse, neglect, exploitation, torture or a cruel, inhuman and humiliating treatment or who suffered consequences of an armed conflict shall be provided.

Q.31. G. How and when is organised the representation of unaccompanied minors (guardianship, special organisation) and regularly assessed? (see article 19, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

According to the Law No. 99/1963 Code on Civil Procedure as amended, a guardian will be appointed by the court, within 24 hours after the minor was found to be in Slovakia, to perform legal acts on behalf of the minor in his/her best interest. Until a guardian has been appointed unaccompanied minors stay at the police station. Guardians are either relatives or professionals with experience of working with children. The guardian makes the final decision on whether the unaccompanied minor applies for asylum or not.

Guardians of minors are established preferably from among close adult relatives, if not, then it is usually an employee of a closest Office of the labour, social welfare and family. Employees of the Office of the labour, social welfare and family who act as guardians in cases of unaccompanied minors are professionals with experience of working with minors; however they do not undergo special training and often are not familiar with asylum procedure and legislation regulating minor aliens.

Q.31. H. How is placement of unaccompanied minors organised (with adult relatives, a foster family, in special accommodation centres or other suitable accommodation)? (see article 19, §2 which is mandatory provision)

Article 39 (1) and (2) is the only provision, which provides for placement of unaccompanied minors. According to this Article, appropriate conditions shall be created for the accommodation of minors unaccompanied by their representative at law on the territory of the Slovak Republic, and for families with children. When placing a foreigner in asylum facility, family relationship shall be considered, and family ties shall be taken into account.

There is a reception camp and an accommodation camp specially designed for families, minors, and other vulnerable groups in Slovakia. In general, those groups of applicants are placed in the special centres, and this is especially the case with regard to the accommodation camps. In reception camps, applicants are placed on a geographical basis depending on in which part of the country they applied for asylum. However, not only those groups are placed in the special accommodation camp. If there is room enough, single men are also placed there.

Q.31. I. How is the tracing of the family members of the unaccompanied minors organised? Are measures taken to protect confidentiality of information when necessary? (see article 19, §3 which is a mandatory provision)

The Law No. 305/2005 on social and legal protection of children and on social guardianship and on amendments of some acts regulates among other issues also the social and legal protection of unaccompanied minors.

According to Article 29 of this act, the authority concerned (the authority on social and legal protection of children and on social guardianship) shall inform the embassy of the country, in which the unaccompanied minor usually resides about the measures adopted in order to return or remove the unaccompanied minor, and requests his/her return or removal into the country of his/her usual residence, if it is clear that he resides in a safe country according to the list of safe countries of origin or if the Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction does not apply for him/her; or the authority concerned shall suggest to the embassy of a country, in which the unaccompanied minor does not reside, and in which is his/her parent or a person personally taking care of him/her, their reunification and informs about measures adopted regarding this reunification. If the authority concerned cannot follow the procedures mentioned above, or on the request of the unaccompanied minor, the authority submits an asylum application, and secures his/her placement in an asylum facility. The authority concerned participates on the search for parents or other family members of the unaccompanied minor for the purposes of family reunification.

There are no specific provisions on the confidentiality with this regard. Also no provisions regarding the issue, when the authority concerned cannot follow the procedures mentioned in previous paragraph.

If the authority concerned submits an asylum application, and an unaccompanied minor has his relatives in an EU country, family reunification is regulated by the Dublin Regulation.

8. EXCEPTIONAL MODALITIES OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.32. Apart from detention covered by the next question, are there exceptional modalities for reception conditions in the following cases and if yes, which ones and for how long are they applicable, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)?

There are no exceptional modalities for reception conditions regulated by the law.

Q.32. A. Persons with specific or special needs, regarding in particular the period of assessment of those needs?

Q.32. B. Non availability of reception conditions in certain areas

Q.32. C. Temporarily exhaustion of normal housing capacities

Q.32. D. The asylum seeker is confined to a border post

When an asylum seeker is confined, even though for short time (it should be maximum 24 hours), to a border post, department of the Border and Foreigners police ensures essential health care in case there is a need. Neither in the provisions of law, nor in the Methods of Conduct of the departments of the Office of the Border and Foreigners Police in the asylum procedure, there are obligations concerning provision of material reception conditions, such as food and drinking water, embedded.

Q.32. E. All other cases not mentioned in the directive (for instance urgent situation in case of a sudden high number of applicants outside a case of application of the directive on temporary protection).

Q.33. Detention of asylum seekers (we do not cover the situation of rejected asylum seekers detained for the purpose of their return) (see articles 6 §2, 7 §3, 13, §2 2nd indent and 14 §8 which implies that the directive is in principle applicable in case of detention):

Q.33. A. In which cases or circumstances and for which reasons[1] (identity verification in particular if the persons have no or false documents, protection of public order or national security, refugee status determination, way of entry into the territory, etc) can an asylum seeker be detained during the asylum procedure till his request has been finally rejected. Quote precisely in English in your answer the legal basis for detention of asylum seekers in national law.

[1] Please specify if article 18 §1 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Member States shall not hold a person in detention for the sole reason that he/she is an applicant for asylum" is or not respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed).

According to Article 23 § 3 (a) of the Asylum Law, an asylum applicant is obliged to remain in the police department in the transit area of an international airport, when the foreigner concerned arrived to the territory of the Slovak Republic by plane and he/she fails to satisfy the requirements for entering the territory of the Slovak Republic.

Asylum seekers are obliged to remain in the reception camp until a medical check has been performed and the result thereof is known. There is no time limit for the performance of the medical examination, in practice this usually takes three weeks. Asylum seekers are also obliged to remain in the centre if isolation or quarantine is ordered for the purpose of preventing infectious diseases (Article 23 (3) (c) and (d)).

Furthermore, if someone applies for asylum while in administrative detention, the application can, but does not have to constitute a ground for release. The grounds for detention are set by the Law No. 48/2002 on Residence of Foreigners as amended (Foreigners Law). Article 62 (1) provides:

The police is entitled to take foreigners into custody for the purposes of:

a) execution of his/her administrative expulsion or enforcement of the punishment of expulsion,
b) execution of his/her transportation according to the Dublin regulation or
c) his/her return according to readmission agreements, provided that he/she entered the territory of the Slovak Republic without authorisation or stays on the territory of the Slovak Republic without authorisation.

It follows that foreigners may be detained before they formally lodge their asylum applications when decision on expulsion has been already issued, or in accordance with letter (c).
The foreigner may be taken into custody for the time needed, with a maximum of 180 days.

There is always a reason for detention of asylum seekers other than the sole fact that they are asylum seekers. It is either one of the reasons specified in Article 62 (1) of the Foreigners Law; or freedom of movement of an asylum seeker can be restricted also according to Asylum Law. There, public health (Article 23 (3) (c), (d), or public order (Article 23a (2)) are the reasons for restriction of the freedom of movement.

Q.33. B. Has your member State adopted measures to transpose §3 of article 7 which is an optional provision? If yes, how has this provision been legally understood (is it a case of detention or an obligation to stay in and not leave a certain place?) and for which reasons can an asylum seeker be "confined" in such a place?

Slovakia has adopted measures to transpose Article 7 (3). The provision in question was understood as an obligation to stay and not leave a certain place. The reasons are following:

Article 23a of the Asylum Law:
"(1) The applicant may leave the asylum facility only based on a permit issued by the Ministry. The applicant may request the Ministry for issuance of the permit for leaving the asylum facility for more than 24 hours, but maximally seven days, only after being interviewed; in the request, he/she shall be obliged to state the place where he/she will stay. The general regulation on administrative procedure shall not apply to the permit's issuance. In the course of the applicant's absence in the asylum facility, the applicant shall not be entitled to the benefits under Section 22 Paragraph 4 Subparagraph b).

(2) The Ministry may refuse to issue the permit under Paragraph 1 only due to a public order or due to the need for the applicant's personal attendance at the asylum procedure."

Article 23 (3) (c) and (d) of the Asylum Law:
"Unless otherwise decided by the Ministry, the applicant shall be obliged

…

c) to stay in the reception camp until announcement of the result of the medical examination,
d) to stay in the asylum facility, if for the purposes of preventing contagious diseases, isolation[11a)] or quarantine measure[11b)] is ordered to the applicant, …"

Q.33. C. Are there legally alternatives to detention, like obligation to report to the authorities, obligation to stay in a place, provision of a guarantor or of a financial guarantee?

There is no legal alternative to detention of asylum seekers.

Q.33. D. Which is the competent authority to order the detention of an asylum seeker? Explain if different authorities are involved to first take and later confirm the decision.

The competent authority is, according to the Foreigners Law, Bureau of the Border and Foreign Police of the Police Corps. The decision on detention can be reviewed by a court, but it is not done automatically, the detained person has to lodge an appeal first (within 15 days). The appeal has no suspensive effect.

Q.33. E. For how long and till which stage of the asylum procedure can an asylum seeker be detained?

According to Article 62 (3) of the Foreigners Law, a foreigner may be taken into custody for the time inevitably needed, at maximum for 180 days. There is no legal provision stating until which stage the asylum procedure can go on in detention, however, in general, an asylum seeker was released, when it was made quite obvious that asylum procedure will not be finished by valid decision until the last day of detention (usually when appeal with suspensive effect has been lodged to the court).

11a) Section 16 of the Order of the Ministry of Health Care of the Slovak Republic No. 79/1997 Coll. on Measures for Preventing Contagious Diseases, as amended by the Order of the Ministry of Health Care of the Slovak Republic No. 54/2000 Coll.
11b) Section 17 of the Order of the Ministry of Health Care of the Slovak Republic No. 79/1997 Coll.

Q.33. F. In which places (can we call them "closed centres"?) are asylum seekers detained (places in a special closed centres reserved only to asylum seekers, together with returnees like illegal aliens or even in a normal prison, in case within separated areas or with the other detainees)? Indicate if a difference has to be made following the location of the "closed centres" at the border or on the territory? Which is the authority managing those places and is it the same as the one in charge of reception conditions?

1. Detention according to Foreigners Law – asylum seekers are detained together with illegal foreigners, and they are not separated. The Bureau of the Border and Foreign Police of the Police Corps is managing those places – police custodies for foreigners.
2. Restrictions on freedom of movement according to Asylum Law – asylum seekers are placed in asylum centres (reception and accommodation camps). The Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior is managing those places.

Q.33. G. Does UNHCR and NGOs have access to the places of detention and under which conditions?

UNHCR and NGOs have access to the places of detention. They usually get permission to enter the places from the bodies responsible for respective places for a specified period of time, e. g. one year. No problems with access to those places were observed.

Q.33. H. What appeal(s) can asylum seekers introduce against the fact he is detained? Is article 18 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Where an applicant for asylum is held in detention, Member States shall ensure that there is a possibility of speedy judicial review" respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed)?

Those, who are detained under the Foreigners Law, can lodge an appeal to a court within 15 days following the delivery of the decision on detention. However, the judicial review cannot be regarded as a speedy one. There is no time limit for a court to decide provided in the law, and in practice, courts sometimes decide only, when the foreigner concerned is not in the detention anymore.

There is an obligation of the Foreigners Police to prove whether grounds for detention still exist during the entire time of detention, however, it would be quite difficult to enforce them to do so, if they are not.

Q.33. I. Is the directive on reception conditions considered to be in principle applicable to the places where asylum seekers are detained? In particular which information do they receive about their rights, which access do they have to legal advice and health care?

The access to legal advice and health care is similar to those, who are not detained.

After applying for asylum, they receive the same information about their rights, as not detained asylum seekers do, although it is not very useful in their situation, as they are detained under Foreigners Law.

Immediately after placing into detention, an alien should be acknowledged with nature of the facility he is placed in, with his rights and obligations relating to detention and with internal order of the facility in the language he understands.

Q.33. J. Apart from freedom of movement, what are the main differences between normal reception conditions and exceptional modalities for reception conditions in case of detention, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)? If it is about closed centres, are the regulations of those places in line with the requirements of the directive (is article 13, §2, second indent of the directive following which "Member States shall ensure that standards of living is met (…) in relation to the situation of persons who are in detention" respected?).

Asylum seekers in detention do not receive any pocket money, and minors do not have access to education. Except of the fact regarding education, standards of living are met.

Food is provided to detained aliens for the first time when detention lasts for more than 6 hours. Food is provided according to internal rules of the facility with regards to age, health condition and religion of detained alien. Expenses concerning food are covered by detained alien himself from his belongings. In case detained alien does not have any financial sources, it is covered by the state. Accommodation is provided with regards to his age, health condition, and family relations, religious or ethnic differences. Men and women are accommodated separately, the same applies to minor and adult with exemption of family relations.

Q.33. K. Are measures taken to avoid detention of asylum seekers with special needs (if yes, which ones?) or are special measures taken because of their needs?

Unaccompanied minors are not detained. No other measures are taken.

Q.33. L. Can minor asylum seekers be detained together with relatives? Can unaccompanied minor asylum seekers be detained? If yes, are there special measures which take into account that children are concerned?

Unaccompanied minors are not detained. Minor asylum seekers, who are together with their relatives, can be detained, and if the relatives are detained, they are detained together with them.

Q.33. M. In particular is article 10 regarding access to education of minors respected in those places?

Article 10 is not respected as there is no access to education for children detained in detention centres for foreigners.

Q.33. N. How many asylum seekers are for the moment detained in your Member State? Which proportion does this represent in comparison of the total number of asylum seekers at the same moment?

On 30 April 2007, 61 asylum seekers were detained; the total number of those in reception and accommodation camps, detention, and pre-trial detention (9) was 515 asylum seekers.

9. ORGANISATION OF THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.34. Explain if the system of providing reception conditions is centralised or decentralised (which levels of government do provide practically reception conditions?) (do not confuse this question with question number 3 about the competence to make rules about reception conditions).

Provision of reception conditions is centralised, central government, in particular Ministry of Interior, is responsible for provision of reception conditions. All asylum centres are facilities of the Ministry of Interior

Q.35. In case, are accommodation centres public or/and private (managed by NGOs? If yes, are the NGOs financially supported by the State?)

Asylum centres are public only; they are managed by the Ministry of Interior.

Q.36. In case, how many accommodation centres are there in your Member State (distinguish in your answer between public and private centres)?

There are 5 centres for asylum seekers in Slovakia.

Q.37. Is there in the legislation a plan or are there rules in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory of your Member State to avoid their concentration in some areas like big cities or to share the costs of their reception between central, regional and local authorities?

There is nothing like that in legislation itself. In the past, all the centres were located in the western part of the country, however, two centres were opened in central Slovakia in last three years, and one centre was opened in the eastern part of the country recently.

Q.38. Does a central body representing all the actors (like NGOs) involved in reception conditions exist? Does it play a consultative role for the State authorities, a coordination role for the actors or any other role?

There is no such organisation or body right now.

Q.39. Q.39. A. Which is the body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions as requested by article 23 which is mandatory provision? Include in your answer which is the competent ministry (Interior, Social affairs, etc) for reception conditions?

It is the Ministry of Interior, specifically Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior, who is in charge of guidance of the system of reception conditions, and it has its own internal control system. Furthermore, if a particular complaint is lodged regarding the bodies in charge of reception conditions, the Inspection of the Ministry of Interior is the body investigating such complaints. As regards the hygienic standards of the accommodation centres, Major Sanitation Officer of the Ministry of Interior oversees meeting the standards mentioned above.

UNHCR, together with NGOs, are monitoring the system of reception conditions.

Q.39. B. Has your Member State (like the Czech Republic did recently) approved quality standards (not necessary legally binding) for housing services (for instance about the number of persons per bedroom on the basis of its size, number of accessible toilets, bathrooms, showers and washing machines per number of persons, existence of common rooms with radio, television, newspapers, books, computers, accessibility of telephone, existence of recreative rooms for children,…) to be respected in particular in accommodation centres?

There is a quality standard approved in Slovakia by way of the Regulation of the Government of Slovak Republic No 353/2006 from 10 May 2006 on details of requirements for internal environment of buildings, minimum requirements for apartments of lower standard, and for housing facilities – nariadenie č. 353/2006 z 10. mája 2006 o podrobnostiach o požiadavkách na vnútorné prostredie budov a o minimálnych požiadavkách na byty nižšieho štandardu a na ubytovacie zariadenia (Collection of Laws (Zbierka zákonov), Vol. 124 (2006)).

Q.39. C. How is this system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions organised?

According to the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior, guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions are performed together with UNHCR.

Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior was established as a central governmental authority in the field of asylum. As such, the Migration Office is in charge of guidance of reception conditions. As a body responsible for all reception centres in Slovakia, and responsible for organised movement of asylum seekers within the country, the Migration Office has a direct impact on all actors dealing with reception conditions of asylum seekers.

The system of control was described under Q. 39 C. above.

UNHCR, together with NGOs, are monitoring the system of reception conditions. The system of monitoring is not specifically institutionalised, but general provisions on cooperation between the Ministry of Interior and UNHCR and NGOs allowing monitoring of reception conditions are established in the Asylum Law.

Q.39. D. Does the body in charge of guidance, control and monitoring produce reports about the level of reception conditions? If yes, how frequently and are they public?

According to the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior, reports are produced for internal use. They can be published upon request.

Q.40.

Q.40. A. What is the total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions for the last year for which figures are available (see article 22 obliging Member States to calculate those statistics about which we also asked the Commission to require them from Member States for mid June)?

2 871 foreigners applied for asylum in 2006 in Slovakia.

Q.40. B. What is the total budget of reception conditions in euro for the last year for which figures are available?

The total budget for 2006 was approximately 3 916 500 EUR. In the budget are included not only expenses for accommodation, food, pocket money, hygienic and other items, and health care, but also operational costs.

Q.40. C. What is the average cost of reception conditions in euro per asylum seeker for the last year for which figures are available?

The average cost per asylum seeker is approximately 20 EUR. In the budget are included not only expenses for accommodation, food, pocket money, hygienic and other items, and health care, but also operational costs.

Q.40. D Are the costs of reception conditions of asylum seekers supported by the central/federal or federated government or are they shared with regional and/or local authorities?

The costs are covered by the central government.

Q.40. E. Is article 24 § 2 of the directive following which "Member States shall allocate the necessary resources in connection with the nationals provisions enacted to implement this directive" respected?

According to the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior, Article 24 (2) of the directive is respected.

Q.41. Q.41. A. What is the total number of persons working for reception conditions?

According to the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior, there are 155 employees of this body working for reception conditions, plus up to 30 persons working for NGOs.

Q.41. B. How is the training of persons working in accommodation centres organised? Does it take into account specific needs of unaccompanied minors when relevant as well as the gender dimension? (see article 14 §5, 19 § 4 and also 24 §1 which are mandatory provisions)?

According to the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior, the training is organised, following training activities were provided:
- trainings organised by the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior;
- individual schedules;
- furthermore, in course of last year, educational activities in order to strengthen the administrative capacities in the field of Gender Mainstreaming were organised by the Ministry of Interior, and training activities focused on relaxation and abreaction were organised by the Ecumenical Council of Churches, and some other training activities.

Q.41. C. Are there rules about the deontology of persons working in accommodation centres, in particular on confidentiality?

According to the Migration Office of the Ministry of Interior, its employees are governed by internal rules and regulations, by the ethical code of civil servants, and personal data of asylum applicants are used only for official purposes.

According to a general provision applying to public servants – Article 8 (1) (c) of the Act No. 552/2003 on service under public interest (zákon č. 552/2003 o výkone práce vo verejnom záujme) (Collection of Laws (Zbierka zákonov) Vol. 226 (2003)) as amended, the public servant is obliged to keep in discretion the facts, he/she learned while executing his/her service under public interest, and which cannot be communicated to other persons.

10. IMPACT OF THE DIRECTIVE

Legal impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.42. Specify if there are or not big problems with the translation of the directive in the official language of your Member State and give in case a list of the worst examples of provisions which have been badly translated? (please note that this question has in particular been added to the questionnaire concerning the new Member States)

No big problems with the translation of the directive were observed.

Q.43. Where there precise legal rules on reception conditions for asylum seekers before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the directive (if yes, specify what the nature of those rules was (legislation, regulation, administrative instructions,…)?

The rules on reception conditions for asylum seekers were incorporated in the legislation even before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the directive.

Q.44. Did the legal rules applicable to reception conditions become more clear, precise, coherent or detailed with the adoption of the transposition norms (for instance do you now have after the transposition one basic text dealing with reception conditions instead of numerous different texts in the past?

The rules became a bit more clear and detailed.

Q.45. Did the transposition of the directive imply important changes in national law or were the changes of minor importance? In case, list the most important changes that have been introduced.

The most important change that was introduced by the transposition of the directive was the fact that asylum seekers are allowed to work, although after being one year in the procedure only. Also the fact that minor asylum seekers shall be included into the education system within three months is important; the time limit was not in Slovak legislation before.

Political impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.46. Explain briefly if there has been an important debate about the transposition of the directive (in particular in the Parliament, but possibly also in the government, between political parties, including in medias, etc; underline in case the main points which have been discussed or have created difficulties)

There was almost no public debate about the transposition of the directive; the debate was only on a professional level.
There was a provision in the draft law, according to which it would be possible to place an asylum seeker in a special centre, if he/she would have breached the internal order of an accommodation centre, behave violently, or would be reasonably suspected of committing a criminal offence. The NGOs together with UNHCR succeeded with a help of some members of parliament to exclude the relevant provision from the draft law.

Q.47. Did the transposition of the directive contribute to make the internal rules stricter or more generous? In particular, did your Member State use the occasion of the transposition to abolish more favourable provisions of national law? Does your Member State still have rules more favourable than the provisions of the directive (if yes, try to give the more important examples).

The transposition of the directive contributed to make the rules more generous, especially with regard to access to employment, and more precise with regard to access to education and appointment of guardians for unaccompanied minors.

11. ANY OTHER INTERESTING ELEMENT

Q.48. What are in your view the weaknesses and strengths of the system of reception conditions in your Member State?

As a main weakness I would see the legal framework regarding restriction of freedom of movement. The reasons for which are asylum seekers kept in detention and the possibilities they have to have the detention reviewed, are in my view not only in breach of the directive, but also of the European Convention on Human Rights.

As regards material reception conditions, provision of clothing should be regulated more precisely, and pocket money for asylum seekers should be increased on a level above a symbolic one.

The following strengths and weaknesses are outcomes of the SWOT analyse made in the course of the project in 2005 (Twinning Light with Swedish partners – Swedish Migration Board) within Unallocated Institution Building Facilities 2003

Weaknesses:
Administrative structures
- Inadequate long-term planning
- Not enough career incentives due to national legislation
- Lack of interpreters in Slovakia
- Logistical shortcomings (delays in delivery of files etc)

Facilities
- Insufficient electronic connections between the MO and the different facilities (Comment: the problem has been already solved)
- Missing of internal monitoring system for prevention of damage of property

Services
- Too extensive entry health examinations resulting in high costs for health care (Comment: the problem has been solved partially)

Strengths:
Administrative structures
- Adoption of the Migration Policy Concept
- Creation of the Asylum Departments in Vlachy, Adamov-Gbely and Rohovce
- Good co-operation with municipalities involved

- Enthusiastic staff in MO and BBAP
- Improved co-operation between MO and BBAP

Facilities
- Accommodation centre in Brezova pod Bradlom: designed for vulnerable groups such as unaccompanied minors
- Accommodation centre in Gabcikovo: flexibility in case of emergency situations and could be expanded into a reception centre
- RC Rohovce: designed for vulnerable groups such as unaccompanied minors

Services
- Good co-operation with the municipalities
- Good co-operation with NGOs

Q.49. Mention any good practice in your Member State which could be promoted in other Member States

Q.50. Please add here any other interesting element about reception conditions in your Member State which you did not had the occasion to mention in your previous answer.

QUESTIONNAIRE FOR THE NATIONAL REPORT ON THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE DIRECTIVE : RECEPTION CONDITIONS OF 27 JANUARY 2003

IN: SLOVENIA

by
Vita HABJAN
Rapporteur for Slovenia, lawyer vita.habjan@pic.si
(the report completed in May 14, 2007)

1. NORMS OF TRANSPOSITION

Q.1. Identify the main norm of transposition (indicate the title, date, number, date of entry into force and references of publication into the official journal) and indicate its legal nature (legislative, regulatory, administrative); indicate in your answer if this norm was only devoted to the directive or if it has been included in a more general text and indicate in that case by quoting precisely the numbers of the provisions adopted to transpose the directive.

Act amending the Asylum Act (ZAzil-D), Number: 2006-01-0626, adopted on February 6, 2006, published in the Official Journal of the Republic of Slovenia (RS), No. 17/06, February 17, 2006, entered into force on March 4, 2006. The act of transposition is of a legislative nature. The act amended the existing Asylum Act (see Asylum Act – consolidated text, Number: 2006-01-2179, the Official Journal of the Republic of Slovenia, No. 51/06, May 18, 2006, hereinafter: Asylum Act) which besides the reception conditions for asylum seekers also contains provisions on refugee status determination procedure (RSDP) and rights and obligations of refugees.

The norms of the Asylum Act transposing the directive are: 1, 2, 15.a, 16, 27, 42, 43, 45, 45.b, 46, 46.a, and 46.b. The norms of the Asylum Act transposing directive 2005/85/EC, which directly concern the reception conditions, are: 26, 37, 38, 40, 40.a, 41, and 56.

The norms of the Asylum Act which concern the reception conditions and were already included in the Asylum Act before the transposition of the directive, are: 3, 7, 8, 9, 11, 14, 15, 18, 28, 36, 44, 45.a, 57, 58, 63.b, 63.e, and 64.

After adoption of the Act amending the Asylum Act (ZAzil-D) the Constitutional Court issued an Order of the Constitutional Court, No. U-I-59/06-11, dated April 3, 2006, published in the Official Journal of the Republic of Slovenia (RS), No. 37/06, April 7, 2006, entered into force on April 8, 2006, by which it temporarily withheld implementation of Paragraphs 1, 2, 3 and 4 of the Article 26, the second sentence of the Paragraph 2 of the Article 37 and the second sentence of Paragraph 2 of the Article 41 of the Asylum Act.

The Act amending the Asylum Act (ZAzil-D) also defined an obligation to harmonise Instructions on the procedure and method of dealing with aliens who enter the Republic of Slovenia and wish to lodge asylum applications, and on receiving, contents and processing of applications lodged by asylum seekers and statements put on record (the Official Journal of the RS, No. 65/00), Rules on the criteria for remuneration and reimbursement of expenses to refugee counsellors (the Official Journal of the RS, No. 103/04), Rules on manners and conditions to guarantee the rights of asylum applicants and aliens granted a special protection (the Official Journal of the RS, No. 80/02) and Decree on the rights and duties of refugees in the Republic of Slovenia (the Official Journal of the RS, No. 33/04 and 129/04) with provisions of the Act amending the Asylum Act in six months after its entry into force. See below Q.2.

The proposal of the Act on International Protection[662]: when adopted (the adoption is foreseen till November 2007), the proposal will replace the currently valid Asylum Act. By this Act the Council Directive 2003/9/EC of 27 January 2003, the Council Directive 2003/86/EC of 22 September 2003, the Council Directive 2004/83/EC of 29 April 2004 and the Council Directive 2005/85/EC of 1 December 2005 will be transposed into the Act on International Protection. By this Act basic principles, procedure for granting and withdrawal of international protection, duration and content of international protection and on rights and duties of applicants for international protection and of personas granted international protection will be set.

Q.2. List by order of importance by using numbers (1, 2, 3) the others norms of transposition if there are more than one (indicate for each norm the title, date, number and references of publication into the official journal; include in your answer the administrative measures taken to ensure implementation of the directive and of the transposition norms like regulations, administrative circulars, special instructions,…)

The Decree amending the Decree on the rights and duties of refugees in the Republic of Slovenia (hereinafter: Decree on the rights and duties), Number: 2006-01-4735, was adopted on October 19, 2006, published on November 3, 2006 (the Official Journal of the Republic of Slovenia (RS), No. 112/2006), entered into force on November 18, 2006.

The Rules on the criteria for remuneration and reimbursement of expenses to refugee counsellors (hereinafter: Rules on reimbursement to refugee counsellors), Number: 2006-01-3187, was adopted on July 7, 2006, published on July 14, 2006 (the Official Journal of the Republic of Slovenia (RS), No. 74/2006), entered into force on July 29, 2006.

The Rules on manners and conditions to guarantee the rights of asylum applicants (hereinafter: Rules on reception conditions), Number: 2006-01-5185, was adopted on November 9, 2006, published on November 24, 2006 (the Official Journal of the Republic of Slovenia (RS), No. 121/2006), entered into force on December 24, 2006. Article 17 of the Rules entered into force on January 1, 2007.

The new Instructions on the procedure and method of dealing with aliens who enter the Republic of Slovenia and wish to lodge asylum applications, and on receiving, contents and processing of applications lodged by asylum seekers and statements put on record has not been adopted yet. Until then, the previous Instructions, Number: 2000-01-3003, adopted on [662] At the moment the proposal has been debated over by the Ministry of the Interior, the NGOs and UNHCR. It has not been submitted to the Parliament to be adopted yet.

July 7, 2000, published on July 21, 2000 (the Official Journal of the Republic of Slovenia (RS), No. 65/2000), entered into force on July 29, 2000 are still valid.

The Internal Regulations of the Asylum Home (hereinafter: Internal regulations) adopted September 19, 2006.

Q.3. Explain which level of government is competent to adopt the legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers (specify in particular in case of a federal or regional State, if it is the federal/central power or the components; in case, specify below when it is impossible for you to answer a question because it is about the competence of the components and it is impossible for you to gather reliable information about all of them)

Since Slovenia is a centralized state the competency for adopting legal norms on reception conditions in a form of legislative provisions lies with the National Assembly of the Republic of Slovenia. The competency for the adoption of administrative (implementing) norms lies within the Ministry of the Interior of the Republic of Slovenia: the norms are adopted by the Minister of the Interior, after a consultation with other relevant ministries. The competency for adopting Internal Regulations of the Asylum Home also lies with the Minister of the Interior

Q.4. Explain the legal technical choices done to transpose the directive (comment on the nature and level of the norms used to do the transposition: legislative, regulatory, administrative like instructions, etc). Add any other element about the technique of transposition of the directive which is interesting for the implementation of Community law.

The directive was transposed in a form of legislative amendments to the existing Asylum Act. Acts (laws, statutes) are the main form of regulation in Slovenia since according to paragraph 2 of the article 15 of the Constitution of the Republic of Slovenia, only the law can define the manner of implementation of constitutional rights (including the right to asylum). Furthermore, the methods of implementation of legislative provisions are defined with the administrative regulations or instructions, adopted by the Minister of Interior.

Q.5. Mention if there is a general tendency to just copy the provisions of the directive into national legislation without redrafting or adaptation them to national circumstances? If yes, give some of the worst examples and explain if there is a risk that those provisions remain unapplied or will create difficulties of implementation in the future.

The tendency of just copying the provisions of the directive while transposing it into the national legislation is not general. However, there are cases where the provisions introducing new measures were simply copied into the national law without a thorough examination of possibilities for actual implementation. For example, according to article 15.a of the Asylum Act, vulnerable groups should receive specific treatment and counselling after an individual assessment of their needs, but neither counselling neither the process of assessment are defined nor are they existent in practice. The psychologists and social workers, employed in the Asylum Home (three staff members all together), are busy with accommodation checkups and other tasks (e.g. counting the applicants every morning) and are not able to engage in individual treatment of asylum seekers with an intention to find out whether they have been subject to abuse or domestic violence or whether they have special needs. Identification of their special needs mostly depends on the assertiveness of the applicants.

Generally, in the processes of legal transposition of the directives in Slovenia there is a tendency of taking the most extreme positions, foreseen with the directive, even if it is not mandatory for the state to adopt such extreme measures (e.g. access to the right to work after one year since lodging the asylum application). In addition, all transposition procedures in the National Assembly are carried out in urgent procedures which allows for one debate in a parliamentary committee, one chance to submit amendments to the proposal and one plenary discussion (contrary to three discussions and three opportunities to submit amendments, available in regular legislative procedures). The directives are being used as a justification for lowering the achieved standards.

As required by the official position of the government of the Republic of Slovenia, that in decision making the authorities have to cooperate with the civil society, both UNHCR and NGOs had an opportunity to comment extensively on the proposed draft amendments and appeared before the parliamentary select committee that reviews the legislation. Most of the comments were not accepted.

Q.6. Have all the texts necessary to ensure the effective implementation of the new rules of transposition been adopted, prepared or at least foreseen in the future (for example a regulation completing a new law and the necessary instructions telling the administration how to apply the new rules)?

The new Instructions on the procedure and method of dealing with aliens who enter the Republic of Slovenia and wish to lodge asylum applications, and on receiving, contents and processing of applications lodged by asylum seekers and statements put on record has not been adopted yet.

2. BIBLIOGRAPHY

Q.7. Has an in-depth preparatory study been made public about the changes at the occasion of the transposition? If yes, thanks for trying to provide us a copy (please contact to answer this question adequately the body and person who was responsible for the preparation of the transposition of the directive in the public administration).

Yes, the preparatory study, prepared by the Asylum Sector of the Directorate for Internal Administrative Affairs (which is an organizational unit within the Ministry of Interior) has been made public: In the process of drafting the amendments the study has been sent to both UNHCR and the non-governmental organizations (NGOs), active in the field of asylum, that were invited to submit comments. When the proposed amendments were submitted by the Ministry of Interior to the Slovenian Government for a confirmation, the study and the proposed amendments were published on the official website of the Government (http://193.2.236.95/dato3.nsf/ OC/0511291400363/$file/50v5.doc). During the legislative procedure at the National Assembly, the study and the proposed amendments were published at the official website of the National Assembly (www.dz-rs.si). Both, the representatives of UNHCR and NGOs appeared before a parliamentary committee discussing the proposed amendments and presented their views on the proposal.

At the time of writing of this report (May 2007) a Proposal of the Act on International Protection is in the process of drafting. At the moment, opinions of NGOs, UNHCR and the Government about the Proposal are being harmonised, since NGOs and UNHCR were invited to submit comments. The Proposal of the Act on International Protection is being published on the official website of the Ministry of the Interior[663].

Q.8. Quote any recent scientific book or article published about the directive, the transposition rules or the question of reception conditions for asylum seekers in general (answer even if this literature is only available in your language and provide the complete title in your language (without translation) with all references; indicate author, title, in case name of periodical, year and place of publication).

Bardutzky, Samo: "Implementacija acquisa na področju azila", Pravna praksa, No. 43/2005, 2005, Ljubljana, Slovenia.
Mrak, Andreja: "Še o spremembah zakona o azilu", Pravna praksa, No. 4/2006, 2006, Ljubljana, Slovenia.
Vrbnjak Urška: "Subsidiarna zaščita, EU in mednarodno pravo človekovih pravic", Pravna praksa, No. 10/2006, 2006, Ljubljana, Slovenia.
Zagorc, Saša: "Ustavno sporna ureditev predhodne policijske obravnave v azilnem postopku", No. 3/2006, 2006, Ljubljana, Slovenia.

Q.9. Quote any interesting decision of jurisprudence based on the implementation of the new rules of transposition of the directive (indicate references of publication if any)?

Immediately after the directive was transposed and the Asylum Act amended (March 2006), it has been sent into revision to the Constitutional Court by the opposition parliamentary parties and by a group of asylum seekers. Upon the request for interim measures the Constitutional Court suspended the application of several new provisions of the Asylum Act which were added pursuant to the transposition, until its final decision on the case. The suspended provisions are: the newly introduced police pre-procedure which would give the police the authority to consider whether the reasons for applying for asylum are in accordance with the Geneva Convention and decide whether or not a person is allowed to apply for asylum at all; and the newly adopted provision allowing for a non-suspensive effect of appeals in manifestly unfounded cases and safe third country cases (allowing for the execution of a first instance decision on asylum application).[664]

There was an interesting decision issued by the Slovenian Constitutional Court extending the reception conditions (but only accommodation and food) beyond a final decision on the asylum application. The applications of two asylum seeking families were rejected with a final decision issued by the Supreme Court. The families were (together with minor children) transferred from the Asylum Home to the Deportation Centre (a prison-like facility). Their legal representative filed a complaint to the Constitutional Court jointly with a request for interim measure to suspend the execution of the final decision and release the children and their parents from the Deportation Centre. The Constitutional Court, invoking Article 3 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child (best interest of the child) and Article 8 of the European Convention of Human Rights (family reunion), decided in favour of the request for interim measure, suspended the execution and ordered the Ministry of Interior to re-accommodate the families in the Asylum Home until the final decision of the Constitutional Court is issued. With these two decisions the Constitutional Court extended reception conditions (accommodation and food) for rejected asylum seekers beyond the final decision on asylum applications.[665]

[663] http://www.mnz.gov.si/fileadmin/mnz.gov.si/pageuploads/SOJ/2007/word/ZMZ___obrazlozitve_174.doc
[664] Decision of the Constitutional Court of the Republic of Slovenia, No. U-I-59/06-11 of 3 April 2006.

3. GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

The purpose of the following two questions is to help the reader to understand easily and quickly the system of reception conditions in your Member State and also to avoid that you have to repeat general elements in other parts of the questionnaire. Please do not write more than one or maximum two pages and do not include large historical developments.

Q.10. Describe in general the system of reception conditions in your Member State (in particular which are the main actors in charge of reception conditions?)

Asylum seekers are accommodated in the Asylum Home in Ljubljana which is a state-ran accommodation centre. There are no other accommodation centres in Slovenia, either state or private. The Asylum Home is under the authority of the Asylum Sector of the Directorate for the Administrative Internal Affairs (an organizational unit within the Ministry of Interior). The Ministry of Interior is responsible for all issues concerning the reception conditions. In specific fields of reception conditions the Ministry of Interior coordinates its activities with other responsible ministries (e.g. in issues of health with the Ministry of Health, in issues of labour with the Ministry of Labour, Family and Social Affairs, in issues of schooling with the Ministry of Education). In the course of urgent daily matters, the Asylum Sector cooperates directly with elementary schools Vič and Livada (attended by asylum seeking minors) and the public health centre Vič (visited by the asylum seekers in need of medical treatment). But, until 18 years of age, children and unaccompanied minors visit the public health centre Tabor, located in the centre of Ljubljana, which is farther away from the Asylum Home than the public health centre Vič. When 18 years old, the visit the public health centre Vič. All the stated institutions are the closest available to the Asylum Home, although they are still several bus stops away.

Asylum Home is the only open-type accommodation centre in Slovenia. It includes a detention unit. In addition, a limited number of asylum seekers (there were none on May 15, 2007), whose right to move is restricted and who have been previously issued an expulsion decision (before they applied for asylum), are detained in the Centre for Aliens in Postojna, which is under the authority of the Police (hereinafter: Deportation Centre). It is not unimportant where asylum seekers are detained since the level of reception conditions is de facto higher in Asylum Home (even for those who are detained). Also, communication with refugee counsellors and NGOs from the Deportation Centre is often limited.

[665] Decisions of the Constitutional Court of the Republic of Slovenia, No. Up-956/06 of 7 July 2006 and No. Up-859/06 of 7 July 2006.

Article 45b.(§2) of the Asylum Act also stipulates a possibility for asylum seekers to be accommodated in private apartments on conditions that appropriate accommodation is not available in the Asylum Home or other such facilities and the hearing of an asylum seeker has already taken place. Vulnerable groups may be granted accommodation in private facilities for health reasons even when above stated conditions are not met (Article 45b., §3). In case of emergency circumstances the Government may issue a conclusion allowing asylum seekers to be accommodated in private apartments even when above mentioned conditions are not met (Article 45b., §4). When accommodated in private facilities and being without any income and free accommodation and care, asylum seekers receive a financial aid (Article 45b., §5). A number of those, who were living in private apartments has decreased in the last few months due to an appeal sent to them by the Asylum Home management, stating they have to return to the Asylum Home where a reassessment will be done whether they still meet requirements defined in the Asylum Act for accommodation in private apartments.

In general, the NGOs play an important role in ensuring the awareness of rights and obligations of the asylum seekers, in providing services, legal aid, leisure and education activities as well as carrying out monitoring of reception conditions.

Q.11. Q11. A. Explain if you have different types and levels of reception conditions following the different stages of the asylum procedure (this implies that you have to give briefly the necessary explanations about the asylum procedure). Make if relevant for reception conditions a distinction between the following procedural stages: determination of the responsible Member State on the basis of the Dublin II regulation, special procedures at the border (including transit zones in airports), accelerated procedures, admissibility procedures, eligibility procedures and the different possibilities of appeals (suspensive or not) against a refusal of the asylum request. Indicate what the main differences of reception conditions are between the different stages (if necessary by detailing between the different elements of reception conditions, in particular housing) and explain what the evolution of reception conditions is following the different stages of the procedure.

Legally, there is one uniformed level of reception conditions for all stages of the asylum procedure with an exception of legal assistance offered by the refugee counsellors which is only provided in appeal procedures before the Administrative and the Supreme Court. However, there are several situations when asylum seekers are subject to de facto lower level of reception conditions:

- when accommodated in the pre-reception area;
- when returned to Slovenia pursuant to the Dublin Regulation;
- when detained in the detention unit of the Asylum Home; and
- when detained in the Deportation Centre in Postojna because their applications are considered manifestly unfounded and abusive.

Pre-reception area: Upon their arrival to the Asylum Home the asylum seekers are accommodated in the pre-reception area where they wait for up to 12 hours for their asylum application to be taken. The pre-reception area is separated from the rest of the Asylum Home and is kept locked. The asylum seekers must sign a statement saying that they agree their asylum application will be deemed withdrawn if they leave the pre-reception area. This measure is foreseen neither with the Asylum Act nor with any of the implementing acts and can therefore be considered de facto limitation of movement. If asylum seekers, accommodated in the pre-reception area, ask the guards to open the door, they are free to go but in that case they are not considered as asylum seekers anymore. During the time of waiting in the pre-reception area they receive one daily food package, consisting of water, toast, chocolate, and tuna fish can per day (and not warm cooked meals as received by other asylum seekers in the Asylum Home) which altogether amounts to 1200 Kcal. Upon the first 12 hours since the arrival they are treated less favourably than later in the procedure. Except for the Legal Information Centre for NGOs, which is also an implementing partner of UNHCR, none of the NGOs has access to the pre-reception area.

The asylum application of the asylum seekers who leave Asylum Home and do not return on time (i.e. within three days – see also the withdrawal of reception conditions, Q. 21. A), is deemed withdrawn, consequently their reception conditions are withdrawn and the asylum procedure is terminated. If they are returned to Slovenia pursuant to the Dublin Regulation, their asylum procedure does not continue but they must lodge another asylum application. Such application is considered a repeat application and they have to wait for a decision detained in the Deportation Centre in Postojna (Article 41, § 3 of the Asylum Act). In practice their applications are considered as manifestly unfounded, abusive and lodged for the sole reason to suspend the deportation.

Asylum seekers detained for filing repeat applications or asylum seekers detained for other reasons, are entitled to de facto lower level of reception conditions. E.g. detained minors cannot attend elementary school; detained asylum seekers cannot choose to settle outside accommodation centre and receive financial aid. This does not concern only asylum seekers detained in the Deportation Centre in Postojna, but also those detained in the detention unit of the Asylum Home. In addition, for the asylum seekers detained in the Deportation Centre, health care is limited to the capacity of the nurses and a physician visiting the centre. Their access to NGOs and the access of NGOs to them are limited. In addition, the asylum seekers detained in Deportation Centre are entitled to one hour recreation outside (although for prisons there is a legal minimum of two hours for adults and three hours for minors). Those detained in the detention unit of the Asylum Home have the right to exercise outdoors for two hours but mostly do not go outside at all. Namely, from the detention unit of the Asylum Home it is only possible to exit into a compound cage-like area of 4 x 15 square meters which is not protected from the sun. There is no organized recreation time available for them. For more information on reception conditions in detention please see Q. 33. I. – M.

The Proposal also foresees all above mentioned types and levels of reception conditions. The types are described later in the report.

Q 11. B. Indicate precisely for which stage(s) of the asylum procedure the answers on reception conditions you give below are valid.

Asylum procedure in Slovenia consists of three stages: the first (administrative) stage is carried out before the Asylum Sector of the Ministry of Interior, the second is the appeal procedure before the Administrative Court and the third is the appeal procedure before the Supreme Court. The answers on reception conditions are valid for all three stages of the asylum procedure from lodging an asylum application to the final decision issued by the Supreme Court. Below, it is made clear when the information is given for the pre-reception area, for the detention unit of the Asylum Home, or for the Deportation Centre in Postojna. The answers include appeal procedures in Dublin and Safe Third Country cases since currently (as of May 2007) until a decision of the Constitutional Court is issued, these appeals still have a suspensive effect.

4. GENERAL RULES ON RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.12. Q 12. A. Are material reception conditions provided in kind, in money or in vouchers or in a combination of these elements (see article 13, §5 which is an optional provision)? Distinguish between the different elements (housing, food, clothes, health, transportation, pocket money,…). If reception conditions are provided in money (in general or in some cases, for instance when no places are anymore available in accommodation centres), indicate the precise amount given to the asylum seekers. Indicate in your answer what is provided in general and if there are exceptional cases. Specify in your answer if reception conditions are different from the general system of social aid for nationals or aliens and if yes, if and when (which stage of the asylum procedure) can asylum seekers have access to the general system of social aid?

In general, material reception conditions are provided in kind (Articles 43-46 of the Asylum Act). Most asylum seekers are accommodated in Asylum Home under the same conditions (except for those detained in the Deportation Centre). Reception conditions are provided in money, only if asylum seekers are accommodated in private apartments. This is only allowed for medical reasons or if other type of accommodation in Asylum Home or its branch office is not available, and if the hearing of the asylum seeker has already taken place. In this case (if an asylum seeker has no money of his or her own) he or she has the right to financial aid, provided by the state (Article 45. of the Asylum Act) in the amount of a minimal income, set by the Minister of Labour, Family and Social Affairs according to the index of growth of living expenses in the past year (on June 5, 2006 the financial aid allowance was 48.062,00 SIT – approximately 200 EUR per person per month). This amount is lowered by 15% if the asylum seeker has free housing, by 40 % if he or she has free food, 55% if he or she has free housing and food. The asylum seekers have to apply for financial aid at the Centre for social work. Financial aid is paid to the asylum seeker each month (article 20 of the proposal of the Regulations on Reception Conditions).

Besides accommodation, asylum seekers have the right to food, clothing and footwear, articles for personal hygiene, humanitarian assistance, emergency health care, elementary schooling, work and legal assistance in appeal procedures (Article 43 of the Asylum Act and Article 3 of the Rules on Reception Conditions). Before they have also received bus tokens to go to the city centre, but now the practice changed and receiving bus tokens is rare. Before the transposition of the directive, the asylum seekers also had the right to pocket money in allowance of approximately 8 EUR per month which enabled them to afford a telephone card, a bus ride to the city centre or other small things that maintain a dignity of a person. With the transposition the pocket money was cancelled due to a reason of rationalization of asylum procedure and the fact that the reception conditions in kind suffice for all the needs asylum seekers have in the course of asylum procedure.[666] This represents a problem concerning the transposition of the directive.

Transportation costs of asylum seekers (to the police station, from the police station to the Deportation Centre, from the police station to the Asylum Home, to and from health centres, to and from school, etc.) are covered by the state. However, the budget for bus tokens needed to accompany children to school is low and many times the parents need to cover these expenses from their own resources (for more information see Q. 31. B.).

The same elements of material reception condition are foreseen in the Proposal of the Act on International Protection. The state provides accommodation facilities (articles 80 and 81), but in exceptional cases accommodation in private apartments is possible (article 83). Applicants accommodated in private apartments that have no income or whose accommodation and care are not provided free of charge, shall obtain financial assistance in the amount set by the regulation from the third paragraph of Article 78 of this Law (article 83(4)). The regualtion has not been even a project at the time of writing of this report (May 2007). Besides accommodation, applicants also have a right to basic care which entails food, clothing and footwear and personal hygiene necessities, humanitarian assistance, emergency health care, elementary schooling, work and legal assistance in appeal procedures (articles 79, 84, 85, 86, 87 and 13(1)).

Q 12. B. Can the reception conditions in kind, money or vouchers be considered as sufficient "to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence" as requested by article 13, §2 of the directive (which is a mandatory provision but leaves a certain space to Member States)? In order to help to assess the respect of this rule when reception conditions are provided in money, include if necessary in your answer points of comparison with the minimum amount of social aid guaranteed for nationals in your Member State.

Accommodation is generally well provided for. The Asylum Home was built in September 2004. The centre and the reception conditions in kind are in principle sufficient to ensure a basic standard of living adequate for the health of the applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence (except for the vulnerable groups with special needs which are often not met). The Asylum Home has four wards; separate accommodation is foreseen for unaccompanied minors, women, families and single men. The Asylum Home staff generally follows the principle of accommodating each asylum seeker in the department specially foreseen for his or her group. Although the capacity of the Asylum Home is rarely exceeded, the capacity of each ward often is and it is therefore not always possible to separate all the groups. In principle, single women are separated from the rest of the applicants, but are also accommodated in the same ward as unaccompanied minors (including males). Special premises and restrooms for disabled persons are available, but since disabled persons are rarely accommodated in the Asylum Home, single men are put in the rooms intended for the disabled (because the ward for single men is usually overcrowded). Other vulnerable groups are accommodated with regard to their needs if there are free facilities available, e.g. elderly people are accommodated on the ground floor and pregnant women and other vulnerable groups who need a more peaceful and quiet environment are accommodated with less people in the room or in more peaceful parts of the Asylum Home, if the capacities are available. In the ward for unaccompanied minors and single women there are also single parents with children and couples with no children. This way, families have more room (although it needs to be stressed that lack of availability of the facilities often requires two families to share the same room).[667]

[666] As it was indicated in the justification of the legislative amendments, transposing the directive.

Legally, besides accommodation, the asylum seekers have the right to food, clothing, footwear, and articles for personal hygiene. The ~~proposal of the Regulations~~ Rules on Reception Conditions foresees for vulnerable groups to have the right to additional or different meals, if that will be approved by the social or medical worker; children under the age of 14 will have the right to two additional snacks (which already exists in practice); asylum seekers with specific health needs will be, upon confirmation from the doctor, receive meals suitable for his health; and if possible, meals will be prepared in accordance with the asylum seeker's religious belief (article 11 of the proposal of the Regulations on Reception Conditions). In practice, they receive three meals per day, one thereof is a warm meal, but many asylum seekers are buying additional food in stores. The calorie value of the meals amounts to 2100 – 2300 Kcal per day. Concerning the asylum seekers' beliefs with regard to food it is assured that there is no pork meat on the menu (only chicken, beef and tuna) but otherwise the menu is standard. Many complaints have been made by asylum seekers that food is not tasty, it is sometimes cold and it is not enough. These complaints have been especially made by adult men who would need more portions. Due to complaints, since April 1, 2007, a new company has been preparing and distributing food in the Asylum Home and so far the food has been assessed as better. ~~For other provisions stipulated in the proposal of the Regulations it is not possible to assess if and how they will function in practice.~~

Clothing and footwear, which is mostly provided by Red Cross or Caritas, is stored in a warehouse. Generally, the amount of clothing is sufficient but there is a lack of rules on how the articles from the warehouse should be distributed. Consequently the asylum seekers often experience arbitrary and discriminatory manner of distribution by the warehouse manager. They also receive articles for personal hygiene but if they run out of them it is often problematic to obtain additional articles because sufficient resources are not allocated for this purpose. Problems such as insufficiency of hygienic napkins or baby napkins have occurred.

With regard to the right to health care (Article 46 of the Asylum Act) there are applicants whose needs are not met because the level of health care is limited to emergency health care and essential treatment of disease. E.g. the applicants with serious health conditions the treatment of which is not considered as urgent or essential; the applicants in need of medicine that is not enlisted on the "positive list" – i.e. list of medicine, fully covered by health insurance; and the applicants with special needs are in danger of health deterioration. For that purpose (as well as for other purposes when the asylum seekers need financial assistance to meet their basic needs which are not provided by the state) in the past the NGOs carried out supplementary programs funded by UNHCR and by the NGOs' own resources. One of them was ~~is~~ the eligibility committee, a program organized by the NGO Slovene Philanthropy. The eligibility committee was ~~is~~ receiving and considering applications for financial assistance to those asylum seekers whose needs were ~~are~~ not covered by the emergency health care or reception conditions in general. The eligibility committee had ~~has~~ mostly been granting financial assistance to mothers with small children and people with health issues (e.g. who were in need of glasses, crutches, specific medicine, vitamins for the babies, etc.).

[667] Report of the Human Rights Ombudsman of the Republic of Slovenia on visiting the Asylum Home on 23.05.2006.

The Rules on Reception Conditions provide for a possibility for asylum seekers with special health conditions to be granted additional health care services. The request for additional health care services has to be lodged at a commission of the Asylum Home (Article 15, § 3 of the Rules on Reception Conditions). The purpose of this commission is to replace the eligibility committee, organized by the NGO Slovene Philanthropy, funded by UNHCR.
Also, Rules in Reception Conditions foresee for asylum seekers to exercise their right to health care by submitting a valid asylum seeker ID card and in some emergency cases, also upon submission of a receipt that he or she has lodged an asylum application. In the past some problems occurred since public health centres did not want to provide medical care merely upon submission of the asylum seeker ID card since they have not been notified by the Ministry of Health on this matter (other patients receive medical care upon submission of their health care card). Also, the Asylum Section, the competent body for accepting asylum applications, does not issue receipts to asylum seekers who have lodged asylum applications. It is therefore impossible to prove the asylum seeker status while seeking medical assistance before an asylum seeker ID card is issued.

When reception conditions are provided in money, the amount stated under Q.12.A, equals the minimum amount of social aid guaranteed for nationals of Slovenia. However, it is questionable whether 205,57 EUR per month can maintain a dignity of a person.

The Proposal of the Act on Temporary Protection (article 78(1)) stipulates the following rights of applicants that would ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence: basic care in the case of accommodation in the Asylum Home; financial assistance in the case of private accommodation; health care.

A right to basic care entails: accommodation, food, clothing and footwear and personal hygiene necessities. (article 79)

The Asylum Home shall be designated for the accommodation of applicants (article 80(1)). After his application was taken, the competent authority may in exceptional cases accommodate an applicant outside the Asylum Home if accommodation cannot be provided at the Asylum Home or its branches (article 83(1)). Asylum applicants accommodated outside the Asylum Home that have no income or whose accommodation and care are not provided free of charge, shall obtain financial assistance in the amount set by the regulation (article 84(4)).

Article 84(1): The extent of health care services shall include the right to:

1. Emergency medical care, emergency ambulance transportation upon a doctor's decision, and emergency dental care;
2. Essential treatment according to the decision by the physician responsible for treatment, which shall consist of:

- The preservation of vital functions, stopping serious bleeding or preventing fatal bleeding;

- The prevention of a sudden deterioration of health that could cause permanent damage to individual organs or vital functions;
- Treatment of shock;
- Services relating to chronic diseases and states of illness the abandonment of which could directly and imminently result in disability and other permanent health defects and in death;
- Treatment of states of fever and prevention of the spread of an infection that could lead to a septic state;
- Treatment and prevention of poisoning;
- Treatment of bone fractures, sprains and other injuries requiring emergency medical assistance;
- Medications included in the positive list in accordance with a list of exchangeable medications' substitutes issued on the basis of a prescription for treatment of the states specified above;
- Medical care for women: contraceptives, abortion and medical care during pregnancy and at giving birth.

Article 84(2): A vulnerable person with special needs and exceptionally some other applicant shall have the right to additional medical services, approved and defined by the commission referred to in the third paragraph of the previous Article of this Law.

At the time of writing of this report no regulations have been in the process of preparation.

5. PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

Q.13. Q 13. A. Does the national legislation specifically provide that a request for international protection is presumed to be under the Geneva Convention unless explicitly requested otherwise? (see article 2, b which is a mandatory provision)

The national legislation specifically states that the request for international protection is presumed to be under the Geneva Convention and the New York Protocol (article 1, §2 of the Asylum Act). Only if the applicant does not meet the criteria for a refugee status, the decision-making body examines the eligibility for subsidiary protection, i.e. if there is a justified reason to believe that the applicant would risk a serious harm if returned to his or her country of origin (article 1, § 3 of the Asylum Act). Both examinations (for refugee status and for subsidiary protection) are carried out in a single procedure (article 1, § 4 of the Asylum Act).

Article 2(1) of the Proposal of the Act on International Protection defines "international protection in the Republic of Slovenia" as "refugee status and subsidiary protection status". Refugee status is recognised to a third-country national or a stateless person who fulfils the requirements as set in the Geneva Convention. Subsidiary protection is granted to a third-country national or a stateless person who does not meet the criteria for recognition of the refugee status, when a well-founded reason exists that this person would face a well-founded risk of serious harm if returned to a country of origin or the country of the last permanent residence. (article 2(2 and 3) of the Proposal of the Act on International Protection) The competent authority establishes grounds for recognition of international protection in an unified procedure, where it first establishes grounds for refugee status recognition and only then, if these grounds are non-existent, grounds for subsidiary protection recognition (article 34).

Q. 13. B. Explain if the scope of application of reception conditions is extended to other asylum seekers than refugees in the sense of the Geneva Convention, in particular to persons asking for subsidiary protection or to other forms of protection like humanitarian statuses (see article 3, § 4 which is an optional provision)? If not, explain briefly which the differences between these special regimes and the directive are.

The scope of reception conditions described above is also extended to those applicants who apply for or are only eligible for subsidiary protection. In practice, all applicants first apply for asylum according to the Geneva Convention. Subsidiary protection is considered once it is established they do not meet the criteria for a refugee in the meaning of the Geneva Convention. Even if an applicant first applies for subsidiary protection, he or she would enjoy the same scope of reception conditions. There are no special regimes for different types of applicants.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection will apply both to persons granted refugee status and persons granted subsidiary protection (article 2(1) of the Proposal – a right to international protection).

Q. 13. C. Are there specific provisions in national law for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation (see article 3, §2 which is an optional provision)?

No, in Slovenian legislation there are no specific provisions for reception conditions in case of applying for a diplomatic or territorial asylum.

No specific provisions for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum foreseen in the Proposal.

Q.14. Are reception conditions available as from the moment one asylum application is introduced? How is article 13, §1 which is mandatory legally understood? Do asylum seekers have to satisfy any other condition in order to get reception conditions?

In practice, asylum seekers are divided into two categories: 1) those who expressed their intention to apply for asylum but their asylum application has not yet been taken, 2) and those who already lodged their asylum application. The first group of people is accommodated in the pre-reception area and is treated less favourably than the asylum seekers. According to the national legislation, foreigners who at their entry into Slovenia declare their intention to apply for asylum must be treated as asylum seekers, have to be allowed to enter the country (article 7, §1 of the Asylum Act), and reception conditions have to be available for them (article 43,

§1 of the Asylum Act). Accordingly, a person becomes an asylum seeker as soon as he or she expresses the intention to apply for asylum.

In practice, they are not treated as asylum seekers until the asylum application is taken which has to be done in 12 hours at the latest after their arrival to the Asylum Home (article 12, §1 of the Instruction on the Procedure). Lodging (taking) the asylum application means conducting a short interview with the applicant, taking his or her statement and writing it in the application, and issuing a confirmation that the asylum application has been lodged. According to law, the reception conditions are therefore available to the applicant from the moment of lodging the asylum application, but not during the time of waiting in the pre-reception area. Since doctors who medically examine persons who expressed their intention to apply for asylum (category 1) as stated above) only come in the morning, the 12-hour time limit is not respected in cases when persons arrive or are brought to the Asylum Home and accommodated in the pre-reception area in the afternoon.

It is important to mention that with the transposition of the directives a new police pre-procedure was introduced (article 26 of the Asylum Act). The provisions introducing the police pre-procedure are at the moment of completing this study (~~October 2006~~ May 2007) being reviewed by the Constitutional Court which has already suspended their application in practice since it is not clear whether or not they are in accordance with the Constitution of the Republic of Slovenia. The provisions under scrutiny give the police the authority to treat the applicant as an illegal immigrant if (inter alia) the reasons for which an applicant would be entitled to international protection (the refugee status in accordance with the Geneva Convention and the subsidiary protection) are not evident from the applicant's statement. Whether or not the reasons are evident the police would establish together with the RSD authority (i.e. Asylum Sector of the Ministry of Interior) before the asylum procedure would even begin (article 26, §3 of the Asylum Act). In practice this means that the applicant whose statement on the face does not reflect the reasons from the Geneva Convention or the reasons for the subsidiary protection, would not be allowed to lodge the asylum application, would be treated as an illegal immigrant and would therefore not be entitled to reception conditions under the directive (although the RSDP carried out by a competent body has not even been conducted yet). Such measure, enabling the police to return foreigners without a thorough examination of their claim would increase the possibility of a violation of the principle of non-refoulement. As already stated, these specific provisions should currently not be in use because of the on-going procedure before the Constitutional Court. If the Constitutional Court does not annul the stated provisions, the applicant – in order to get the reception conditions – will have to satisfy the preliminary police test on whether his or her reasons correspond to the reasons for a refugee status or for subsidiary protection.

Article 78(2) stipulates that the applicant becomes eligible for the rights as defined in paragraph 1 of the same article (residence, being able to use the procedure in a language for which it is justifiable to assume the person understands, information, basic care when accommodated in the asylum home, financial aid when accommodated in private apartments, free legal aid in procedures before the administrative and the supreme court until a final decision is issued, health care, education, work and employment, humanitarian aid) with submitting a complete application and will remain eligible until the execution of the decision of the responsible authority or at most until the decision becomes final.

Q.15. Explain when reception conditions end, for instance after refusal of the asylum request (include in your answer the link with the right of appeal against a decision of refusal of the status, in particular the question of its suspensive effect)

In regular asylum procedures the reception conditions end with issuing a final decision on the asylum application. The decision is final with the expiration of a deadline for the appeal to the Administrative Court, if the appeal was not submitted or, if it was submitted, after the deadline and the delay is not justified; with the expiration of a deadline for the appeal to the Supreme Court, if the appeal was not submitted or if it was submitted after the deadline and the delay is not justified; and with serving the Supreme Court decision dismissing or rejecting the appeal (article 40, §2 of the Asylum Act).

In the regular asylum procedures the appeals have a suspensive effect. In Dublin and Safe Third Country procedures, however, pursuant to the 2006 amendments to the Asylum Act, the appeals to the Administrative Court do not have a suspensive effect (articles 37, §2 and 40.a, § 2 of the Asylum Act). These provisions are also under the scrutiny of the Constitutional Court and until its final decision the appeals will have a suspensive effect.

The ~~proposed~~ adopted implementing acts stipulate that the asylum seeker may remain in the Asylum Home until the expiration of the deadline to leave the country (article 10, § 2 of the ~~proposal of the~~ Regulations on Reception Conditions). If the asylum seeker does not leave the country, he or she is relocated to the Deportation Centre in Postojna.

Article 78(2) obliges the state to provide reception conditions from the time of lodging a complete application and until the execution of the decision of the responsible authority or at most until the decision becomes final.

The decision is final with the expiration of a deadline for the appeal to the Administrative Court, if the appeal was not submitted or, if it was submitted, after the deadline and the delay is not justified; with the expiration of a deadline for the appeal to the Supreme Court, if the appeal was not submitted, or if it was submitted after the deadline and the delay is not justified; and with serving the Supreme Court decision dismissing or rejecting the appeal (article 74 of the Proposal).

The reception conditions are also withdrawn in a case when the applicant withdrawns his application. The procedure will be stopped by the order of the responsible authority and the applicant shall leave the Republic of Slovenia immediately after the order becomes final. (article 50 of the Proposal)

Q.16 Are there special rules or practices regarding reception conditions in case of successive applications for asylum introduced by the same person?

In case of successive (repeat) applications the applicants are detained in the Deportation Centre (article 41, §3 of the Asylum Act) – a prison like facility for illegal migrants. They are detained because they are considered to be abusing asylum procedure, their repeat applications are considered manifestly unfounded and they are considered to be only lodging repeat applications with a purpose to suspend the execution of a negative decision. Although legally they enjoy the same reception conditions, the fact that they are detained means de facto lower level of reception conditions (see also Q. 33.).

The person who lodges a request for the introduction of the procedure of subsequent application shall be accommodated with the body, responsible for persons' removal from the country (article 57(4) of the Proposal).

Q.17. Information of asylum seekers about their rights and obligations in terms of reception conditions, in particular about established benefits (see article 5 which is too large extend a mandatory provision; do not confuse this question with the information to be provided to asylum seekers about the asylum procedure):

Q. 17. A. Are asylum seekers informed, and if yes about what precisely?

Legally, the asylum seeker has to be informed about his or her rights and obligations (article 9, §2 of the Asylum Act). They receive information before the asylum application is taken. They are informed about the rights they are entitled to (residence, basic subsistence, financial assistance if they live in a private apartment, basic health care, free legal aid, humanitarian assistance, primary education, right to work – each right is described in a short paragraph) and their obligations.

As one of the "Basic procedural guarantees of asylum seekers" (article 8) is defined an obligation of the state to inform in a language, for which it can be justifiable to assume that the asylum seeker understands, about the procedure in the Republic of Slovenia, about rights and duties during the procedure, and possible consequences in a case when the asylum seeker disregards duties and does not cooperate with competent authorities (indent 1).

Q. 17. B. Is the information provided in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

The Asylum Sector provides the information to them in writing. The applicants are given a brochure when they are placed in the pre-reception area where they wait for their asylum application to be taken. The brochures are given to the applicants by the guards. In the process of taking asylum application the competent official asks them whether they have received the brochure and whether they have understood the information provided to them orally by an NGO representative. In 2007 Legal Information Centre for NGOs (implementing partner of UNHCR and the only NGO that has access to the pre-reception area) has started implementing a project, co-financed by the European Refugee Fund and The Ministry of the Interior, providing information sessions before lodging asylum applications. Information sessions take place before each lodging of the asylum application with each asylum seeker. Information sessions are conducted by a representative of the above mentioned NGO where an interpreter is present. After conclusion of the information session the asylum seeker signs the record of the information session stating he/she has understood rights and obligations according to the Asylum Act have been presented in an understandable manner. The record is used by the Ministry of the Interior as an evidence to prove the fact of the asylum seeker being well informed.

While waiting in the pre-reception area the applicants are visited by a representative of the Legal Information Centre for NGOs. The representative of the NGO talks to the applicants, explains their rights and obligations to them in detail, and makes sure the applicants understood the information. This activity is conducted upon the initiative of the NGO and ~~is~~ has been financially supported by UNHCR.[668] When negotiations between NGOs and the Ministry of Interior on the projects activities that would be financed by the Ministry of Interior through ERF funds took place, NGOs repeated the necessity to regard persons who expressed the intent to apply for asylum as asylum seekers, having the same rights and obligations as those asylum seekers who have already lodged the application. The basis for such treatment of those persons lies, according to UNHCR's and NGOs' point of view, in article 7 of the Asylum Act (see above Q. 14.). Nevertheless, the Ministry of Interior did not accept this notion and providing of free legal aid in the pre-reception area could not be included in project proposals on providing free legal aid which were later approved and are now financed by the Ministry of Interior and by ERF funds.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection obliges the state to provide to an applicant seeking international protection a brochure with information on the procedures defined in this act, rights and duties of applicants, possible consequences of disregard of duties and of lack of cooperation with competent authorities and about time-limits for enforcement of legal remedies, a list of refugee counsellors as well as a list of NGOs working in the field of asylum. The brochure has to be served to a person in a language for which it is justifiable to assume that the applicant understands, so that the applicant becomes acquainted with the information before he submits the application. If the applicant is illiterate or the content is not understandable to the applicant, the content is read to him and additionally, with a help of an interpreter, explained in a language, for which it is justifiable to assume that the applicant understands. (article 9)

Q.17. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify the list of languages in which it is available

Information on rights and obligations is provided in writing in most of the languages that the asylum seekers who come to Slovenia speak: Serbian/Croatian, Russian, Albanian, Turkish, Kurdish, Arab, Persian, Bengali, Urdu, English and French. There are no brochures provided in a language of Georgians, Bangladeshi, Roma and Kurds.

Information sessions are conducted in a language understood by asylum seekers since an interpreter is present.

For the Proposal of the Act on International Protection see Q.17.B.

Q. 17. D. Is the deadline of maximum 15 days respected?

Information on the rights and obligations of the asylum seekers are made available to them in writing as soon as they are brought to the pre-reception area of the Asylum Home and before their application is taken. Normally, that is within the 12-hour deadline after they are brought to the pre-reception area. ~~At~~ Before the acceptance of the application (normally within the 12-hour deadline at the latest), during the information session, they have the opportunity to ask additional questions. Formally, the 15-day deadline is respected (please see Q. 17. B.).

[668] The visits in the pre-reception area are a replacement for the information sessions that were held in the Asylum Home until May 2005. The sessions were conducted jointly by the Asylum Home employee and an NGO representative. At the sessions, the Asylum Home staff and the NGOs made sure the asylum seekers received and understood the information about their rights and obligations which, according to the NGOs, often proved useful later in the procedure. In May 2005 the information sessions were discontinued by a decision made unilaterally by the Asylum Sector. There was no official explanation for the cancellation provided.

The brochure will be submitted before the application for international protection is submitted so that the applicant becomes acquainted with the content (article 9(2) of the Proposal of the Act on International Protection).

Q.18. Information of asylum seekers about the existence of organisations or groups promoting their interest and defending their rights (see article 5 which is to a large extend a mandatory provision):

Q. 18. A. Is there a list of organisations dressed by the authorities and if yes is it comprehensive? Is this in particular the case about the possibilities to get legal assistance and health care?

According to the law, the applicants must be informed about the possibility to contact the NGOs, offering assistance to asylum seekers, in a language they understand (article 9, § 2 of the Asylum Act). In practice the applicants do not receive a list of organizations offering assistance to asylum seekers nor are they systematically informed about the NGOs by the Asylum Home employees. This problem has been addressed by the NGOs on many occasions, demanding from the Asylum Home employees to hand out information sheets with information on NGOs working in the refugee field to every asylum seeker. The NGOs approach the applicants on their own initiative and provide information to them. The activities of the NGOs differ: some are more focused on legal counselling (e.g. Legal Information Centre for NGOs, Foundation GEA 2000), some offer psycho-social assistance to the applicants (e.g. Slovene Philanthropy, Novi Paradoks), while others organize various activities and classes (e.g. Mozaik, Slovene Philanthropy, Jesuit Refugee Service, etc). There are no specialized NGOs for health care in Slovenia.

See above Q.17.A.

Q. 18. B. Is the information provided to the asylum seekers, and if yes, in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

There is no organized system of providing comprehensive information on the NGOs, their role or their activities neither in writing nor orally. The applicants get the information on NGOs because they approach them themselves or because NGOs organize activities and are present in the Asylum Home. During information sessions the representative of Legal Information Centre for NGOs points out that two NGOs (Legal Information Centre for NGOs and Slovene Philanthropy) are daily present in the Asylum Home and can thus be easily accessible. The applicants may also receive the information from the social workers or from other asylum seekers but the information is not provided to them in an organized way.

Q. 18. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify if possible the list of languages in which it is available.

There is a schedule of the NGO activities hung on the board in a format of a chart (specifying the days and hours of the activities) but there is no written translation available into other languages. Upon request the charts are explained to the applicants by the social workers in a language they understand, which is mostly in Serbian and English (currently, most of the asylum seekers in the Asylum Home are from Serbia, Montenegro as well Bosnia and Herzegovina).

Also, Legal Information Centre for NGOs has put on notice boards in different wards of the Asylum Home information on providing free legal aid, when and where it can be obtained. Information is provided in several foreign languages.

Q. 18. D. How many organisations are active in that field in your Member State?

In the field of asylum there are currently twelve active NGOs:
- Amnesty International Slovenia (monitoring, lobbying)
- Association Ključ (prevention and assistance to victims of trafficking)
- Association Mozaik (activities for children)
- Foundation GEA 2000 (legal assistance, monitoring activities)
- Institute for African Studies
- Jesuit Refugee Service (leisure activities for women and single men)
- Legal Information Centre for NGOs – PIC (legal assistance, providing information about the rights, obligations and asylum procedure, monitoring activities)
- Matafir – Association for Intercultural Relations (research, monitoring activities)
- Peace Institute (private research institute, also conducts monitoring activities)
- Racio Social (psycho-social assistance)
- Slovene Philanthropy (psychosocial assistance, guardianship).

In general, the NGOs active in the field of asylum have a limited capacity. On one hand, there is a lack of funding (they receive only 10% of the grant provided to the Republic of Slovenia by the European Refugee Fund) and a lack of skilled personnel (which is connected to the lack of funding and consequently the instable working environment). Two of these NGOs (Slovene Philanthropy and Legal Information Centre for NGOs) are extensively funded by UNHCR and are functioning as their implementing partners which enables them to provide the most essential activities such as guardianship, psycho-social assistance to vulnerable groups, eligibility committee, providing information, monitoring activities etc. For many of their activities they engage students and volunteers.

Q.19. Documentation of asylum seekers (see article 6):

Q.19. A. What kind of document is delivered to the asylum seeker? Explain the legal value of this document (just a certification of the status as asylum seeker or also prove of identity?) (see §1 of article 6 which is a mandatory provision)

Asylum seekers receive a certificate of the submission of an asylum application and documents; and asylum applicant identification card (article 56, § 1 of the Asylum Act). The certificate of the submission of the asylum application confirms the fact that a person is an asylum seeker and that the application has been lodged. The identification card which, according to the law, should be issued to the applicant within 12-hours after his or her arrival to Asylum Home is mandatory (article 60, § 1 of the Asylum Act). It serves as a proof of identity and as a permission for temporary residence in Slovenia until the end of asylum procedure, i.e. until the final decision upon the asylum application is served to the applicant (articles 11 and 57, § 1 and 3 of the Asylum Act; article 2, § 1 and 2 Rules on Reception Conditions).

Still, in cases when an asylum seeker is detained due to lack of established identity, the Ministry of Interior, the Asylum Sector does not issue an asylum applicant identity card, because, as they explain it in the argumentation of the detention decision, it is not possible to allow such person to move freely in the territory of the Republic of Slovenia and to provide to such asylum seeker all rights as provided to other asylum seekers. Legal Information Centre for NGOs has argued this argumentation in several appeals against restriction of movement and the Administrative Court has confirmed the practice as being incorrect, but so far the Asylum Sector has ignored the Court's opinion.

The Proposal of the Act of the International Protection foresees in its article 112(1) issuing of an applicant card which no longer proves identity of an asylum seeker but only proves his legal status of an asylum seeker and serves as a permission for temporary residence in Slovenia.

Q.19. B. Are there situations or specific cases in which another equivalent document or even no document is issued? (in particular is there an exception for "procedures to decide on the right of the applicant legally to enter the territory" as made possible by §2 of article 6)?

According to the Asylum Act issuing an ID card to asylum seekers is mandatory (article 60, § 1 of the Asylum Act). There are no situations foreseen with the law when the ID would not be mandatory. The ID cards of the asylum seekers detained in the Deportation Centre are kept by the management of the Deportation Centre.

In addition, if the provisions of article 26 of the Asylum Act which introduced the police pre procedure, remain valid (i.e. if the Constitutional Court does not annul them), the applicants might need to spend some time at the border or in other police-controlled premises in order to be allowed to legally enter Slovenia. In such case, no identification document for the time of waiting on such decision will be issued. However, in the moment of completing of this study (~~October 2006~~ May 2007) it is still not clear whether or not the police pre-procedure will remain valid since the Constitutional Court has not yet decided upon the constitutional complaint against these provisions.

Q.19. C. For how long is this document in principle valid and is it necessary to renew it after a certain period?

There is a discrepancy in the provisions of the Asylum Act and the Rules on Reception Conditions. On one hand the Asylum Act states that the identification document is valid until the end of the asylum procedure (i.e. until the decision upon the asylum application becomes final – see also Q. 15.) (article 57, § 3 of the Asylum Act). It does not mention any duty of the asylum seeker to apply for extension of the document. On the other hand, the Rules on Reception Conditions foresee the issuing of the identification document of the asylum seeker with a validity of a maximum of 60 days with a possibility of extension. The applicant must apply for the extension of the identification document in person in official hours of the competent body before the expiration (article 2, § 3 of the Rules on Reception Conditions). Such procedure may be too bureaucratic. In practice, in official hours no official is present in the office that is intended for administrative affairs of the asylum seekers. If the applicants wish to talk to the officials of the Asylum Sector, they must notify the guards that they want to see one of the officials and tell the guards about what they need. The guards then call the official and notify him or her on the asylum seeker's request. The official decides whether he or she would see the applicant. Considering such practice it is questionable how the extensions of the ID cards will be achieved in practice.

It is also not clear what will happen if the applicant will miss the expiration date and apply for extension after that date. As the practice shows, asylum seekers do tend to forget to apply for extension. So far, no problems occurred. But the danger is that the applicant, whose identification document is expired because he or she forgot to apply for extensions, would not be entitled to health care or that he or she would be treated as an illegal migrant by the police although he or she would legally still be an asylum applicant.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection stipulates validity of the applicant card for the maximum 60 days, with a possibility to be extended (article 112(3)). If the Proposal will be adopted in the Parliament, it will then be in conformity with the Rules on Reception Conditions, which are not in conformity with the Asylum Act at the moment.

Q.19. D. What is the deadline for the delivery of that document? Is the mandatory deadline of 3 days set by article 6, §1 respected[669]?

The identity card is issued to the applicant within 12 hours after he or she arrived to the Asylum Home. This deadline is connected to the 12 hour period in which the asylum application must be taken. Until June 2005, there was a lack of staff taking the asylum applications and they were only working on weekdays but not on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. Consequently, both deadlines (12 hours according to Asylum Act and 3 days according to the directive) were often not respected. In June 2005 the Asylum Sector increased the number of officials taking the asylum applications and organized the on-call system of taking the applications on weekends and holidays.[670] Since then the deadline of 3 days is respected.

According to the Proposal of the Act on International Protection the applicant card has to be issued in three days after the application has been lodged at the latest (article 112(2)).

Q.19. E. Is it possible for an asylum seeker to get a travel document for serious humanitarian reasons (see §5 of article 6 which is an optional provision)?

Legally, the possibility of receiving a permit for border crossing for the applicants is foreseen (article 56, § 1 of the Asylum Act), but there are no such cases in practice. In general, the asylum seekers are not allowed to leave Slovenia during the asylum procedure (article 58 of the Asylum Act).

[670] Report of the Human Rights Ombudsman of the Republic of Slovenia on visiting the Asylum Home on 23.05.2006.

No travel document issued to an asylum seeker in cases of serious humanitarian reasons is foreseen in the Proposal of the Act on International Protection.

Q.19. F. Is there a central system of registration of asylum seekers and is it or not separate from the registration of aliens? If yes, describe it briefly (content) and indicate in particular if it is an electronic database.

A central register of asylum seekers is kept in electronic form separately from the registration of aliens. It contains personal data (name, date and place of birth, sex, nationality, personal status, address of residence, ethnicity or tribe, religion, education, profession, membership of a political party or organization, identification documents, criminal record, special needs), route information (countries of residence after leaving the country of origin, date of entry in Slovenia, place and type of entry), data on previous asylum applications in Slovenia and elsewhere, family data of an unaccompanied minor, close family members accompanying the asylum seeker, other relatives accompanying the asylum seeker, relatives of the asylum seeker already residing in the Republic of Slovenia, close family members living in the country of origin, family members living outside the country of origin, statement of the asylum seeker and other findings of the competent body (articles 63.b, § 1 and 63.e of the Asylum Act). Further, the register also contains data on the procedure (rejected or approved applications, deadline to leave the country etc) and some specific data on reception conditions enjoyed by the applicant, e.g. social aid, elementary schooling, and working (article 63.e, § 4 of the Asylum Act).

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection sets up 35 different registries on information regarding asylum seekers, refugees, subsidiary protection seekers and persons enjoying subsidiary protection (article 118 of the Proposal). The register of the applicants will be kept electronic form separately from the registration of aliens.

Q.20. Residence of asylum seekers :

Q.20. A. Is in principle an asylum seeker free to move on the entire territory of your Member State or only to a limited part of it and in case, which part? (see article 7, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

In principle, the asylum seekers are free to move across the entire territory of Slovenia. However, in practice they need to notify the social worker every time they wish to leave the Asylum Home. Leaving and entering is subject to time limitations since it is not allowed to leave the Asylum Home before 6 a.m. and after 10 p.m. (11 p.m. in the summer time). If they want to leave the Asylum Home for periods of up to three days they must obtain a written permission from the Head of Asylum Home. If they wish to leave the Asylum Home for periods longer than three days, they must obtain a written permission from the Head of the Asylum Sector on the proposal of the Head of the Asylum Home (article 5, § 3 and 4 of the Internal Regulations). In addition, every morning at 7.30 the social workers count the asylum seekers and check their IDs. If they are caught outside Ljubljana (especially in a direction closer to the border with Italy) they are considered to be abusing the asylum procedure and their applications are seen as manifestly unfounded. See also Q. 20.E.

In practice, Asylum Sector staff which take the asylum applications, warn asylum seekers not to move close to the border as such action could be understood as an abuse of the procedure. In one case a family was permitted to visit friends during the weekend in a town close to the border with Italy. Because they got lost and already entered Italy (not knowing where exactly they are) they were issued manifestly unfounded decision few days after the incident.

Also, for a few months an ongoing practise is present in the Asylum Home punishing asylum seekers who return to the Asylum Home after 10. p.m. (even if it is at 10.10p.m.) by forcing them to spend the night in the pre-reception area and return to the Asylum Home the next day after 6.00 a.m.

In practice, many male asylum seekers leave the Asylum Home before 6.00 a.m. for work, and at 7.30 a.m. when asylum seeker are counted those men are erased from evidence. But, later in the day, when they return to the Asylum Home they are again listed in the evidence.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection does not foresee limitation of movement to a part of the territory except for limitation on grounds as defined in the article 51 (please see Q.33.A).

Q.20. B. About the place of residence (see §2 of article 7): explain to which extend the person is free to choose her residence and if this depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance processing of application, attribution of reception conditions,…).

Most asylum seekers are accommodated in the only existing Asylum Home in Slovenia (article 45 of the Asylum Act) (some are detained in the Deportation Centre; for detention reasons and reception conditions in detention please see Q. 33). They are allowed to be accommodated in private apartments only if other type of accommodation in Asylum Home or its branch office is not available and if the hearing of the asylum seeker has already taken place, or for health reasons (article 45.b, § 2 and 3 of the Asylum Act). Still, it is not possible for an asylum seeker to be accommodated in a private apartment by himself/herself but only with someone who guarantees for the asylum seeker (owner of the apartment or the tenant who also lives there). Letter of guarantor must be added to the asylum seeker's application to the commission to grant his request to be accommodated in a private apartment. The guarantor must state in his letter whether the accommodation and food are free; if not, asylum seeker will receive financial aid. These provisions were introduced with the transposition. Before that, persons were free to choose their residence.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection also foresees accommodation of asylum seekers in the Asylum Home or its branch office. Those who shall be accommodated in the Asylum Home or its branch office will have to provide (partially) for their accommodation when receiving income. Under the same conditions as in the present Asylum Act asylum seekers will be allowed to accommodate themselves in private apartments (see Q. 10.).

Q.20. C. About the place of reception (meaning where the asylum seeker has to stay to benefit from reception conditions) (see § 4 of article 7): explain which are the general rules about the determination of this place (to which extend are the decisions determining the place taken individually and do they take into account the personal situation of the asylum seeker?) and to which extend the person is free to choose it and if it depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance attribution of reception conditions, processing of the application,…).

The only personal situation taken into account for allowing the applicants to choose their residence are health reasons (please see answer to Q.20. B.). In practice, health reasons are understood very narrow since it is not enough for an asylum seeker to have a doctor's certificate on his health reasons, but the certificate has to include the doctor's opinion that Asylum home is not suitable for him/her and that an accommodation in private apartment is recommended.

In general, the actual presence in Asylum Home is a condition for eligibility for reception conditions. Every morning at 7.30 a.m. the asylum seekers are counted and their presence at the Asylum Home is verified by checking their identification documents. If a person is not present during the counting for three consecutive days his or her asylum application is deemed withdrawn and the asylum procedure is terminated. This is a practical administrative measure, not foreseen in the law.

Q.20. D. If all asylum seekers are not placed in accommodation centres because of capacity limits, explain how the persons are distributed between accommodation centres and other accommodation facilities (which authority takes the decisions, on the basis of which elements, can that decision be appealed by the asylum seeker,…)

Up until the moment of completing this report (May 2007) on a few occasions the number of asylum seekers exceeded the capacity of the Asylum Home. On those occasions the Asylum Sector used measures to transform the multipurpose facilities of the Asylum Home into a temporary accommodation area with foam beds and additional bathrooms until the circumstances normalized. In case of a need to distribute the applicants into other areas (or when the branch offices of the Asylum Home will be established, as foreseen with the law), the competent body to take decisions on the distribution will be the Asylum Sector of the Ministry of Interior. With the Rules on Reception Conditions it is foreseen that the applicants move to other facilities if the Asylum Home cannot ensure the asylum seeker appropriate accommodation and case that would take into consideration his specific circumstances. The Rules on Reception Conditions give examples of such facilities being safe houses, psychiatric institutions, home for the elderly, etc. However, there are no criteria foreseen to define on the basis of which elements the applicants would move to other facilities. In the Rules it is foreseen that the Asylum Sector issues a decision on moving of the applicant to another facility, therefore the applicant should have the right to appeal to the Administrative Court in 30 days in accordance with general provisions on asylum procedure (article 6 of the Rules on Reception Conditions).

Q.20. E. How can an asylum seeker ask to leave temporarily the place of residence or of reception or an assigned area? How is the individual AND impartial character of the decision ensured? (see §5 of article 7 which is a mandatory provision)

The asylum seekers must inform the social worker every time he or she wants to leave Asylum Home or its immediate vicinity. In general it is only allowed to leave the Asylum Home after 6 a.m. and return before 10 p.m. (11 p.m. in the summer time). The asylum seekers are obliged to inform the social worker about the place of their whereabouts and their overnight stay, and a contact telephone number where they can be reached (article 5 of the Internal Rules).

The individuality of the decision is ensured since a social worker is taking decisions on a case by case basis. Impartiality of decision making is not ensured since the social worker is employed by the Asylum Home and is in contact with the asylum seeker every day. Also, there is no appeal possible if temporary leave is not allowed since no written decision is issued which represents a problem concerning the transposition of the directive.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection does not foresee any procedure that would ensure individual and impartial character of the decision. Also, whether it is possible to leave the place of residence temporarily is not defines in the Proposal, but will probably be included in the Internal Rules of the Asylum Home as it is currently.

Q.21. Q.21. A. Do rules on reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions exist in internal legislation and if yes in which cases (mention in particular if there are cases not foreseen by article 16, § 1 and 2 which are optional provisions)? Distinguish in your answer between cases of reduction and withdrawal and explain which conditions can be reduced and if access to emergency health care is always ensured as requested by article 16, §4, last sentence.

Reception conditions are withdrawn when the asylum application is deemed withdrawn for reasons for which the asylum seeker is responsible. In these cases the asylum procedure of the applicant is terminated. Regardless of the stage of the asylum procedure, the reception conditions are withdrawn for two general reasons: if the asylum application is rejected and if the asylum seeker withdraws his or her application. However, the asylum application is deemed withdrawn and consequently the reception conditions withdrawn in case of (article 42, § 1 of the Asylum Act):

- non-compliance with reporting duties or with requests to provide information: if in spite of a received summon, the asylum applicant fails to attend the interview or oral hearing without prior justification; if the asylum applicant fails to notify the change of his or her address which leads to unsuccessful deliveries of summons or other mail; if the asylum applicant refuses to co-operate in establishing his/her identity
- abandoning the place of residence: if it appears clearly from the official record kept by the competent asylum authority that the asylum applicant has without due notice left the Asylum Home or its branch and did not return within 3 days from her/his arbitrary departure; if within three days from the notice made by the landlord to the competent authority for conducting the asylum procedure, the asylum applicant has not returned to his or her declared residence.

In spite of the obligation of asylum seekers who can rely on their own financial means, to bear their expenses (article 45, § 4 of the Asylum Act) there is no specific provision in the Slovenian legislation that the reception conditions would be withdrawn from an asylum seeker who concealed to have had sufficient material means to cover material reception conditions. In practice those asylum seekers accommodated in Asylum Home are not required to pay for reception conditions (although the enforcement of this in measure is already in preparation). On the contrary, this measure has always been enforced in the Deportation Centre in Postojna: the money of asylum seekers detained in Postojna is used to cover their reception conditions.

The possibility of reducing the reception conditions are not foreseen with the Slovenian legislation. In practice though, there are informal ways of reducing reception conditions concerning the right to health care and the right to subsistence. The asylum seekers in need of medical assistance are not aware of the fact that they can visit the public health centres on their own but they go to the nurse employed at the Asylum Home and ask her to make an appointment at the public health centre for them. Whether or not they will get the appointment depends on whether the nurse will believe them that they are sick or in pain. In such cases it is impossible to file an appeal because there are no written decisions issued to the applicants. It is therefore questionable if access to emergency health care is always insured. For more information please see Q. 27. B. and C.

In addition, the asylum seekers who are detained are entitled to de facto lower level of reception conditions which amounts to a reduction of reception conditions (e.g. no right to work, de facto limited access to health care, no right to schooling). For more information please see Q. 33.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection does not foresee any changes regarding withdrawal or reduction of reception conditions. On the other hand, the Proposal foresees the possibility to claim a refund in the amount of all or part of expenses for a person's accommodation if later the competent body establishes the fact that the person had money upon arrival in the Asylum Home or received it later (article 80).

Q.21. B. Has article 16, §2 dealing with refusal of reception conditions for unreasonably late applications for asylum been transposed by your Member State (or was this case already applicable before transposition)? Are there cases in practice?

According to Slovenian legislation it is required to lodge an asylum application without delay (article 8, § 1 of the Asylum Act), but there are no specific provisions sanctioning unreasonably late applications. However, in practice late lodging of the asylum applications can be interpreted as abusing the asylum procedure, although the Constitutional Court in its recent decisions ruled that lodging an application after few days does not automatically mean the abuse of the procedure. Still, most single men - asylum seekers who failed to file an application without delay, that is immediately, are accommodated in the Aliens Centre in Postojna, where the level of reception conditions is automatically lower. Consequently the applications are considered as manifestly unfounded since late lodging of the application is seen as an attempt to postpone a forced deportation (article 36 of the Asylum Act). In practice such cases are numerous.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection does not foresee any change regarding the time in which lodging of the application is necessary. ("An alien who legally entered the Republic of Slovenia shall express his intent to file an application as soon as possible. If an alien entered the Republic of Slovenia illegally, he shall express his intent to file an application as soon as possible. In this case, he shall not be prosecuted for violation of illegal crossing of the state border." – article 35 of the Proposal.

Q.21. C. How is it ensured that decisions of reduction or withdrawal are taken individually, objectively AND in particular impartially (for instance through and independent arbitrator) (see article 16, §4 which is a mandatory provision)?

All first instance decisions on the withdrawal of reception conditions, issued by the Ministry of Interior, can be challenged by filing a complaint to the Administrative Court and afterwards to the Supreme Court. This is only possible, however, if a written decision is issued. In such cases individuality, objectivity and impartiality is secured due to judicial review.

However, an oral decision (which is most common in cases of actual reduction) cannot be appealed against. Therefore the individuality, objectivity and impartiality are not ensured.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection lacks of any provision that would ensure/impose obligation that decisions of reduction or withdrawal are taken individually, objectively and in particular impartially.

Q.21. D. Is statement 14/03 adopted by the Council at the same moment as the directive respected (see the document attached to our sending)?

Some provisions of the Statement 14/03 adopted by the Council are respected while others are insufficiently followed. The prohibition of inhuman and degrading treatment is respected. Neither the NGOs nor the asylum seekers complain in those terms. However, there is a discrepancy between the legal provisions and the reality in terms of respect for human dignity, treatment of vulnerable groups and emergency health care. With respect for human dignity the asylum seekers often experience arbitrary and discriminatory treatment from the nurse and the warehouse manager in the Asylum Home, and there is no possibility to complain against that and receive a written decision. With the transposition of the directive the access to labour market was restricted to after one year since lodging the asylum application while at the same time the pocket money has been cancelled. Consequently, the asylum seekers have been deprived of any legal income which would enable them to afford small things, such as a bus ride to the city centre, a phone call etc., and maintain the minimum level of human dignity. Many asylum seekers are detained in the Deportation Centre without a formal decision on detention issued to them, although they have not been found guilty of any crimes and although the reasons for their detention have not been established. For more information on reception conditions in detention please see Q. 33.

Moreover, arbitrary behaviour of the nurse in Asylum Home and the fact that in the Deportation Centre anti-depressants and pain-killers are massively prescribed to the asylum seekers are facts that de facto restrict the right to emergency health care of the asylum seekers. For more information on health care please see Q. 27. B and Q. 33. I.

With respect to vulnerable groups the discrepancy between the law and the practice is most visible. While the law stipulates special programs and treatment of the vulnerable groups, no such measures exist in practice. There is no procedure for determining that a person belongs to a vulnerable group and there are no programs or specialized counselling sessions available because the two social workers and one psychologist, employed in the Asylum Home, are preoccupied with tasks concerning accommodation and control of the asylum seekers. The only specialized programs for vulnerable groups are conducted by the NGOs and these activities are mostly funded by their own sources or by the UNHCR.

Q.21. E. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements on cases of reduction, withdrawal or refusal which have been taken, and if yes, what has been the outcome?

There are no specific cases on withdrawal or reduction of reception conditions, except for the cases where asylum applications were treated as manifestly unfounded because of an alleged abuse of the asylum procedure. The appeals in these cases do not counter a reduction of reception conditions as such but are filed as any other appeal against a rejection of the asylum application.

It is important to mention again the decisions of the Constitutional Court which extended the duration of reception conditions (accommodation and food) beyond the final decision on asylum application. We experienced four such cases (four families). For more information please see Q. 9. [671]

Q.22. Q.22. A. Appeal against a negative decision relating to the granting of benefits or based on article 7 (see article 21 which is a mandatory provision): indicate against which decision an appeal can be introduced, describe the system of appeal in general and include in particular in your answer the information given to asylum seekers about possibilities of appealing, deadline for appealing, if the appeal has or not a suspensive effect, if there are different steps (for instance first an administrative appeal and in particular if the guarantee of an appeal before a judicial body in the last instance is respected)?

Against all first instance decisions issued by the Ministry of Interior an asylum seeker has the right to file an appeal to the Administrative court and after that to the Supreme Court (both are judicial bodies). However, the possibility to appeal depends on whether the reception conditions are withdrawn or reduced.

If they are withdrawn and consequently the asylum procedure is terminated (due to reasons for which the asylum seekers are responsible – see Q. 21.A), they are issued a written decision against which they can file an appeal to the Administrative court and after that to the Supreme Court. The deadline for appealing to the Administrative court is 3 days (article 38, § 3 of the Asylum Act) and for appealing to the Supreme Court 15 days. Both appeals have a suspensive effect. The asylum seekers are informed about the possibility to appeal against a negative decision and about the appeal procedure in writing through a leaflet they receive in the pre-reception area before lodging their application. The information about the possibility to appeal is also included in the decision on the termination of the procedure.

[671] Decisions of the Constitutional Court of the Republic of Slovenia, No. Up-956/06 of 7 July 2006 and No. Up-859/06 of 7 July 2006.

If the reception conditions are reduced (which is not foreseen by law but happens in practice – see Q. 12. for subsistence and Q. 27. C for health care) there is no possibility to appeal which represents a problem concerning the transposition of the directive.

The same system of appeal is foreseen in the Proposal of the Act on International Protection (article 74(3 and 5)).

Q.22. B. Explain which are the possibilities for asylum seekers to benefit from legal assistance when they introduce such an appeal (see article 21, §2 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to Member States)?

Legally, in the case of withdrawal of the reception conditions the asylum seekers have the right to free legal assistance in the second and third instance of the asylum procedure, i.e. in the appeal procedures before the Administrative and Supreme Court (article 43, § 1 of the Asylum Act). The legal assistance is provided free of charge and is offered by the refugee counsellors, whose expenses and rewards are covered by the state budget (article 16, § 5 of the Asylum Act). The refugee counsellors are appointed by the Ministry of Interior (article 16, § 1 of the Asylum Act) – the same body that also decides upon the asylum applications. Before the transposition, the Ministry of Justice was appointing and paying the refugee counsellors, which may have been more appropriate since the Ministry of Justice is not an interested party in the asylum procedure. Before the directive was transposed the asylum seekers also had the right to free legal assistance, offered by the refugee counsellors, at the first instance of the asylum procedure which might be problematic because if there is no free legal assistance available in the first instance procedure, the asylum seekers without a legal representative often fail to stress certain facts or submit evidence that would be useful for their procedure. Having a legal representative only on the second and third level of procedure is often meaningless because new facts and evidence cannot be invoked in appeal procedures if they were not invoked already in the first instance procedure. Since the free legal assistance is cancelled the NGOs set up programs to supplement for the legal counselling in the first instance that was previously offered by the refugee counsellors. In practice, there are also many problems concerning the right to free legal aid and the refugee counsellors which make the access to free legal aid more difficult. For more information please see Q. 26. B.

In case of reduction of the reception conditions there is no free legal assistance available which represents a problem concerning the transposition of the directive.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection also foresees the right to free legal assistance in the second and third instance of the asylum procedure, but deprives the refugee counsellors of the right to receive a reward for their work and to be compensated for their costs in the procedure in cases when the asylum seeker has his own financial means, when the legal remedy was not successful, or in cases when the refugee counsellor filed an appeal which was not allowable. (article 13 (1 and 6) of the Proposal)

Q.22. C. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

No, there are no appeal judgments concerning the withdrawal of reception conditions (in case of reduction it is not even possible to appeal). There are only appeal judgments concerning the manifestly unfounded applications which result in a withdrawal of reception conditions because of the alleged abuse of the asylum procedure. No appeals have been filed in cases the reception conditions were withdrawn because an applicant had not returned to the Asylum Home for three days, since such person is normally not in the country anymore.

There was a case that needs to be mentioned concerning the refusal of the request to move to a private apartment. The refusal was not issued in a form of an official decision but in a form of an informal letter/notification. The legal representative of the asylum seeker filed an appeal to the Administrative Court asking the court to consider the notification as a decision and to accept the appeal into consideration. Namely, this has been the only written response the applicant has received from the Asylum Home when he requested to be allowed to move. However, the Administrative court declared the appeal inadmissible because according to the opinion of the judges this "notification" could not be understood as a "decision".[672]

Q.22. D. Is a mechanism of complain for asylum seekers about quality of receptions conditions in general (even if they are not personally concerned) organised? If yes, before which authority? Is it linked to the system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions (see below question n° 39)?

Legally, there is no special mechanism for complaints about the quality of the reception conditions foreseen with the law. In practice, if an asylum seeker is not satisfied with the level or quality of the reception conditions he or she can file an anonymous complaint into a box, available for this purpose. The disadvantage of this mechanism is that the asylum seekers who complain do not receive a written response to their complaint. A complaint can also be submitted to the social worker who either acts upon the complaint himself or herself or forwards the complaint to the management of the Asylum Home. It is also possible to file a complaint to the Administrative Inspectorate but there were no such cases so far because the asylum seekers are not informed about this possibility: it is neither mentioned in the information leaflet they receive when accommodated in the pre-reception area, nor is it known by the Asylum Home staff. This system is not linked to the control mechanism because a formal control mechanism of the reception conditions in Slovenia does not exist.

In addition, due to the lack of efficient and impartial complaint mechanism there were occasions when the asylum seekers resorted to signing a petition (e.g. the last petition was being signed in January 2006). Also, in September 2006 detained asylum seekers in the Asylum Home went on hunger strike for a few days as they were unsatisfied with medical care (they complained about the lack of visits by doctors and that they were treated only by a nurse who treated them with tea and antidepressants; the complaint was also made with regard to not being able to talk to the inspectors and the head of the Asylum Home). The strike ended after the head of the Asylum Home and inspectors had individually talked with them, and after they were all examined by the doctor.

6. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.23. Family unity of asylum seekers: define how a family is defined in relation with article 2, (d) which is a mandatory provision and explain how housing is provided to a family (see articles 8 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to member States and 14, §2, (a) which is a mandatory provision).

[672] The author of this report was present at the session of the Administrative Court on 14.12.2005 where such legal reasoning was adopted.

In Slovenia, the status of an asylum seeker is also recognised to the asylum seeker's close family members. The persons considered to be close family members are the asylum seeker's spouse and minor unmarried children as well as parents of a minor asylum seeker. The authorised custodian of a child is regarded as a close family member of an unaccompanied minor (article 3, § 1 and 3 of the Asylum Act). The status of asylum seeker and the right to asylum is recognised to a spouse of the asylum seeker only if the marriage existed before arriving in the Republic of Slovenia (article 3, § 2 of the Asylum Act). The asylum seeker's unmarried partner in a stable relationship is not explicitly mentioned in the Slovenian legislation among the close family members. However, in Slovenia non-married couples are in practice treated as married couples. The couple does not even have to fulfil the condition of being together before lodging asylum application or before entering Slovenia.

In practice, close family members are accommodated together in the same room in the family department of the Asylum Home.

Family unity was also invoked in the recent decision issued by the Constitutional Court which was already mentioned (see Q. 21. E.). With this decision the Constitutional Court extended the reception conditions (accommodation and food) beyond the issuing of the final decision upon the asylum application. It found that in accordance with article 3 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child (best interest of a child) a child cannot be detained in a Deportation Centre while waiting for a decision of the Constitutional Court upon the complaint filed against a negative decision on the asylum application. Respecting the principle of the family unity in accordance with article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights the Court ordered that the child is moved back to the Asylum Home together with his parents. At the time of issuing the decision only the child's mother was present in Slovenia. When his father joined them in Slovenia, the head of the Asylum Sector refused to admit the father into the Asylum Home, arguing that the Constitutional Court decision did not specifically mention the father's name. Later on, in three other similar cases, the Constitutional Court extended the reception conditions beyond the issuing of the final decision.

However, there are also some cases when family members are not accommodated together after one of the family members has been issued a final decision and moved from the Asylum Home to the Deportation Centre in Postojna, but the others still wait for the decision to be issued. Such cases happen when some family members arrive to Slovenia earlier than the others. Although they are accommodated together in the same room as a family, asylum procedures are conducted separately since some members have lodged the application earlier. In such cases, family members that are accommodated in the Asylum Home in Ljubljana are allowed to regularly visit other members in the Deportation Centre in Postojna or vice versa (if their request is granted by the inspector of the Deportation Centre). But such trips are quite costly.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection regards as a close family member also the asylum seeker's unmarried partner in a stable relationship (article 3(1), indent 15). But, the Proposal defines as close family members only children who are unmarried and dependent at the same time, regardless whether they were born in or out of wedlock or adopted, which is different from the present Asylum Act where children are regarded as close family members only if unmarried, regardless whether they were born in or out of wedlock or adopted (article 3).

Regarding the practice how families will be accommodated, assuring protection of their family life, it can be assumed that the practice will not change and that the family members will be accommodated together.

Q.24. Q.24. A. How is housing of asylum seekers organised: describe the system in general and indicate in particular what is the most frequently system used (see article 14, §1 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space for Member States; distinguish between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels places or other premises).

Most asylum seekers are accommodated in the only existing Asylum Home in Slovenia (article 45 of the Asylum Act), except for those that are detained in the Deportation Centre. They can remain in the Asylum Home until the expiration of the deadline to leave the country, if their asylum application is rejected (article 10, § ~~2~~ 1 of the Rules on Reception Conditions). Their right to choose their own residence is limited: they are only allowed to be accommodated in private apartments if other type of accommodation in Asylum Home or its branch office is not available and if the hearing of the asylum seeker has already taken place. Vulnerable groups (e.g. children, unaccompanied children, the elderly, pregnant women, single parents with children, and persons who have survived rape, torture or other forms of psychological, physical or sexual violence) also have the right to chose their own residence if that is required for reasons concerning their health (article 15.a, § 1 and article 45.b, § 2 and 3 of the Asylum Act). In case of emergency, the government may issue a decision to allow asylum seekers to be accommodated in private apartments although the above mentioned conditions are not met (article 45.b, § 4 of the Asylum Act). In the Asylum Home, asylum seekers are accommodated in different wards if possible (article 5, § 2 of the Rules on Reception Conditions).

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection foresees the same accommodation possibilities (articles 80, 81 and 83 of the Proposal).

Each asylum seeker has the right to his or her own bed and to use the accompanying furniture in the rooms. There are also tea kitchens, sanitary premises and laundry rooms that the applicants can use (article 5 of the Rules on Reception Conditions). However, the applicants cannot use the laundry machines by themselves but must hand the laundry over to the Asylum Home staff who ~~do~~ activate the laundry machines for them. But, asylum seekers, especially women, often complain about numerous breakdowns of the laundry machines (although usually asylum seekers cause the breakdowns).

Q.24. B. What is the total number of available places for asylum seekers? Distinguish in your answer between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels or other premises.

The housing capacity of the Asylum Home is 202 persons while accommodation at private addresses is not limited.

Q.24. C. Is this number of places for asylum seekers sufficient in general or frequently insufficient?

Normally, the total number of places for asylum seekers is sufficient. There were cases of overcrowding and some wards of the Asylum Home ~~are~~ were constantly overcrowded (family ward, single men ward). So far, in 2007 the number of places for asylum seekers has been sufficient. See the following question and Q. 48, indent 1.

Q.24. D. Are there special measures foreseen in urgent cases of a high number of news arrivals of asylum seekers (outside the case of application of the directive on temporary protection)?

Occasionally and for shorter periods of time the current housing capacity was exceeded due to an increased number of asylum seekers. In these cases the multipurpose area and the common premises where the asylum seekers spend their free time, were temporarily transformed into accommodation facilities and additional bathrooms were activated. The Human Rights Ombudsman of Slovenia reported that in March 2005 when the capacity of the Asylum Home was temporarily exceeded the accommodation conditions in multipurpose area were inappropriate (instead of beds and mattresses the asylum seekers were offered provisory foam beds and slept on the floor) and hygienic conditions insufficient. Also, on occasions of a higher number of asylum seekers there are two families accommodated in one room of only 6 beds, with parents and children together which completely eradicates a possibility of intimacy between partners. In general, the problem which is more persistent is the constant overcrowding of particular wards of the Asylum Home (e.g. insufficient number of rooms for all the families and for the single men who then have to be accommodated in the wards that are no intended for them).

Currently there are no back up plans set up for urgent situations of a high number of new arrivals. With the adopted rules it is foreseen that the asylum seekers are to be accommodated in other appropriate premises (e.g. homes for elderly persons, safe houses, psychiatric institutions, student dorms, and appropriate social institutions), if the competent body cannot ensure an appropriate accommodation for them. Asylum seekers can only be accommodated in a psychiatric institution on the basis of a referral by their personal physician or psychiatrist (article 6, § 1 of the adopted Rules on Reception Conditions). Also, most elderly homes require a person to have permanent residency in Slovenia and Slovenian citizenship, they are highly overcrowded, and it is therefore not clear how that could function in practice.

Q.25. Accommodation centres (important note: all the following questions are about open and not closed centres where asylum seekers are detained which are covered by another question)

Q.25. A Are there different categories of accommodation centres, for instance depending of the stage of the procedure (admissibility and eligibility)?

Yes, there are two different categories of accommodation: The first is pre-reception (waiting) area for accommodating the asylum seekers who expressed their intention to apply for asylum, before their asylum application is taken. The second (and main) category of accommodation is a residential facility for asylum seekers after their asylum application is taken until the final decision is issued. Both types of facilities are located in the Asylum Home but are physically separated. The period of waiting for the asylum application to be taken is maximum 12 hours. After that the asylum seekers have to be moved to the residential facility. The reception conditions in the pre-reception area are lower than in the reception part: they receive one cold food package per day (consisting of toast, water, chocolate and tuna fish can, amounting to 1200 Kcal per day) and they are not entitled to any of the rights as the asylum seekers. The pre-reception area is locked. When they enter the pre-reception area they must sign a statement that if they leave the pre-reception area their asylum application will be deemed withdrawn. Neither this statement nor locking the pre-reception area have a basis in the law. Except for Legal Information Centre, that is also an implementing partner of UNHCR, the NGOs do not have access to the pre-reception area. Asylum seekers in the pre-reception area are not separated with regard to their age, sex and special needs. But, there are two separate rooms in the pre-reception area, for families and for persons with contagious diseases.

The Proposal also foresees that before an alien lodges a complete application, he will be accommodated in the pre-reception area (37(1) of the Proposal).

Q.25. B. Is there a legal time limit for accommodation in a centre after which the asylum seekers have access to private houses or apartments or is this limit linked to a stage of the asylum procedure?

No, access to private houses is not limited either to a certain period of time or to the stage of the asylum procedure. Asylum seekers are allowed to be accommodated in private apartments only if other type of accommodation in Asylum Home or its branch office is not available and if the hearing of the asylum seeker has already taken place. Vulnerable groups with special needs (e.g. children, unaccompanied children, the elderly, pregnant woman, single parents with children, and persons who have survived rape, torture or other forms of psychological, physical or sexual violence – article 15.a, § 1 of the Asylum Act) may access private apartments even if they do not fulfil these two conditions if that is required for reasons concerning their health (article 45.b, § 2 and 3 of the Asylum Act). The asylum seeker must file an application for accommodation in a private apartment to the Asylum Sector. With the application the applicant has to enclose a renting agreement or a consensus of the apartment owner to receive the applicant and a copy of the apartment owner's ID. If the applicant wishes to move to a private apartment for medical reasons, the proof of his or her health condition must be enclosed as well. The body deciding upon the application to move to a private apartment submits the application to ~~is~~ a special commission of the asylum home, established for giving opinions on this and other issues (article 8 of the Rules on Reception Conditions). After the commission provides its opinion on the application, the competent body issues a decision on accommodation in the private apartment. Against the decision the asylum seeker may file a lawsuit to the Administrative court (article 8, § 3 and 4 of the Rules on Reception Conditions). Before the completion of this report (May 2007) the commission has been in session only twice, once granting the application.

According to the Proposal the access to private apartments is linked to fulfillment of two conditions: accommodation at the Asylum Home or its branches cannot be provided; personal interview with the applicant has already been performed (article 83(2)). Only in exceptional cases (the authority establishes substantiated medical or other reasons supporting that – article 83(3)) the applicant may be accommodated in private apartments although the two conditions are not fulfilled.

Q.25. C. Is there a general regulation about the internal functioning of those centres and the rights and duties of the asylum seekers? If yes, is this general regulation applicable to public and private centres? If not, are the centres supposed to adopt an internal regulation and does a central authority have or not a kind of control about its content?

Yes, there are Internal Regulations adopted regulating the internal functioning of the Asylum Home. These regulations are only applicable to the public accommodation and not to private apartments - private accommodation centres do not exist in Slovenia; the law only provides a possibility for the non-governmental organizations to run and operate accommodation centres (article 45, § 1 of the Asylum Act), however this is also non-existent in practice.

The Internal Regulations define the organization of living in the Asylum Home, the rights and obligations of the asylum seekers regarding their accommodation in the centre, internal regulations and respect thereof, and sanctions for violating its provisions (article 1 of the ~~proposal of~~ Internal Regulations). The obligations of the asylum seekers are: to enable carrying out the control by the competent body, to respect the time restrictions on departure out of and entry into the Asylum Home, to respect the schedule of meals and activities, to take care of personal hygiene and hygiene of their clothes, to clean the room at least once a day and to thoroughly clean the room at least once a week, to clean and manage the common areas and the surroundings of the Asylum Home based on a schedule prepared by a social worker who supervises the implementation of the schedule, to report to the competent body any damage to the premises or equipment, to allow and conduct necessary sanitary and disinfection measures, to notify the competent body on contagious diseases, to use water, electricity and equipment economically, to clean their rooms when moving and to return the bedding and towels to social workers, to notify the competent person about loosing an ID card, to act respectfully towards the employees in the Asylum Home and to other persons, ~~and~~ to respect the conflagration instructions, and to respect instructions and orders of the security service (article ~~9~~ 10 of the Internal Regulations).

With a purpose to maintain order in the Asylum Home it is forbidden to express any kind of intolerance based on race, nationality, sex or political opinion, to possess or use arms, explosives or pyrotechnics, to purposefully destroy equipment, pollute the premises of the Asylum Home and its surroundings or to act violently, to smoke outside of assigned area, to cook in the rooms, to bring in pets or other animals, to bring in heaters, furniture, technical equipment, except for TVs, radios, computers, carpets and other equipment, to bring in and consume alcohol or other intoxicating substances, to bring in food that is easily perishable, to play games for money, to take food and cutlery from the dinning room and tea-kitchen (except if that is specifically allowed for health reasons), to hang clothes on windows, to purposefully write or put stickers on the walls or equipment, to bring visitors into the rooms, to move without authorization in other parts of the Asylum Home, to enable overnight stay or accommodation to other persons (article 12 of the Internal Regulations).

Since there are no other types of centres in Slovenia but one public centre, it is not yet clear what kind of regulations will be in force in other types of centres.

Q.25. D. Do the regulations foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers in case of breach of the rules? (see article 16, §3) If yes, which sanctions for which rules? Which is the competent authority to decide? How is it ensured that decisions are taken individually, objectively and in particular impartially (for instance through an independent arbitrator) as requested by §4 of article 21 which is mandatory provision? Which are the possibilities of appealing against those decisions if the system is different from the general one under question n°22? Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

Yes, the Internal Regulations foresee a possibility of sanctions against the asylum seekers in case of breach of the rules. The breaches of rules from article ~~9~~ 10 and all but the first three prohibitions from article ~~12~~ 13 of the Regulations are considered as minor breaches, while breaches of the first three prohibitions of article ~~9~~ 10 of the Regulations (inflation of intolerance, possessing or using arms, explosives or pyrotechnics, purposefully destroying equipment, polluting the premises of the Asylum Home and its surroundings or acting violently) are considered as serious breaches. The sanctions for minor breaches are: oral reminder, written reminder (which is given for three minor breaches), and denial of possibility to leave the asylum home for up to three days or over three days (given for five minor breaches). The social worker issues these sanctions. Against the decision of the social worker the asylum seeker may file and appeal in three days to the head of the Asylum Home or other authorized person. If the asylum seeker purposefully pollutes or destroys the premises or the equipment, he or she can be required by the social worker to compensate the damages. Against such decision it is also possible to file and appeal in three days to the Head of the Asylum Home or other authorized person. If the asylum seeker brings in heaters, furniture or technical equipment to the rooms, the head of the Asylum Home may order the withdrawal of the objects. Against such decision it is possible to file an appeal with the Head of the Asylum Sector (article 21, 22, 23 and 24 of the Internal Regulations).

For serious breaches the head of the Asylum Home may issue a decision ordering that the asylum seeker is moved to one of the branches of the Asylum Home (when they are established). An appeal to the Minister of Interior is allowed in 5 days. The appeal does not have a suspensive effect. The Minister must issue a decision in 10 days (article 25 of the proposal if Internal Regulations).

In all these cases it is questionable whether the decisions will be taken individually, impartially and objectively since the bodies deciding upon the breaches are interested parties to all these procedures and are therefore not impartial. There is also no independent outside review of the decisions foreseen. In all cases the sanctions are imposed by the staff of the Asylum home (either by a social worker or by the head of the Asylum Home).

Q.25. E. Are asylum seekers involved in the management of these centres? If yes, how (advisory board, appointment or election of representatives)? (see article 14, §6 which is an option provision)

No, asylum seekers are not involved in the management of the accommodation centre.

The Proposal does not foresee any involvement of the applicants in the management.

Q.25. F. Do specific rules exist on work of asylum seekers inside the accommodation centres different from the general ones about employment (see below)? If yes, which ones? Can working inside accommodation centres be considered as a (mandatory) contribution of the asylum seekers to the management of the centres, is it or not paid and considered as implying access to the labour market and subject to the same rules?

Yes, the asylum seeker can help in the Asylum Home with the chores connected to maintenance (article 46.b of the Asylum Act and article 17 of the Rules on Reception Conditions). For this work an asylum seeker may receive remuneration. The type of tasks that can be performed by asylum applicants are: gardening, laundry, ironing, cleaning and managing the surroundings of the Asylum Home, assistance in the warehouse etc. In practice, the asylum seeker would receive two bus tokens for cleaning another person's room after moving or for maintenance work in the Asylum Home's surroundings. Currently, working inside the Asylum Home cannot be considered as a mandatory contribution to the management (since sanctions for not working are only a reminder and limitation of certain benefits).

In general, work of the applicants inside the Asylum Home is not subject to the same rules as labour and it is not considered as access to the labour market.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection also foresees the possibility of the applicants helping with the chores connected to maintenance in the Asylum Home. For their work they may receive remuneration. (article 82 (1) of the Proposal).

Q.26. Q.26. A. How can asylum seekers communicate with legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGOs? (see article 14, §2, (b) which is a mandatory provision).

At lodging an asylum application the asylum seekers receive a leaflet with information on the asylum procedure, and their rights and obligations, generally in a language they can understand (except for Georgian, Bangladeshi, Kurdish and the Roma applicants). At the back of the leaflet there is a list of refugee counsellors whom they can contact to represent them in asylum procedures. The list includes names, ~~and~~ addresses and phone numbers of the refugee counsellors, but some information are not up to date. This list is not updated – there are numerous names on it of lawyers who have not been taking asylum cases for years. Usually the asylum seekers obtain phone numbers of the refugee counsellors from the NGOs and from other asylum seekers, who were already accommodated in the Asylum Home. Usually, the asylum seekers contact the legal advisers by phone. Two phone booths have been placed in the Asylum Home, one in the detention unit. Since asylum seekers receive no pocket money the costs for phone calls can represent an insuperable obstacle for communicating. This forces the asylum seekers to ask social workers to make the call for them or to obtain cellular phones, which makes calls more expensive (either they have a cellular phone from home or they need to use pre-paid cards). Possibilities of communication are therefore extremely limited.

According to the national legislation an asylum seeker has the right to demand to contact his or her refugee counsellor at any time (article 9, § 5 of the Asylum Act). If an asylum seeker asks a social worker to make a phone call, the social workers are present when the applicant phones a legal representative. It is also problematic how the asylum seekers communicate with his or her legal representative since the interpreters are not always available (they are only available in conducting procedures, e.g. interviews, taking the applications, etc): the practice is that the first phone call is made from the social worker's office and if the asylum seeker speaks Slovenian, Croatian or English, he shall be able to communicate with the refugee counsellor. But when he speaks other language, the social worker will explain the problem to the refuge counsellor. Currently, the social workers are also forbidden by the management of the Asylum Home to call a legal representative when requested by an asylum seeker, if he or she has already received a final negative decision from the Supreme Court.

Since UNHCR is not permanently present in Slovenia but is only able to perform occasional visits, the asylum seekers are physically unable to communicate with it. It is only possible to communicate with the NGOs which are implementing partners of the UNHCR. These NGOs are present in the Asylum Home on a daily basis. An NGO Slovene Philanthropy (a UNHCR implementing partner) offers free translators to asylum seekers who need to visit their advocate and do not speak Slovenian, Croatian or English. Since July 2006 a representative of the Legal Information Centre for NGOs (a UNHCR implementing partner) is daily present in the Asylum Home and asylum seekers can contact her for any legal questions in an NGO office in the Asylum Home. The Legal Information Centre for NGOs also has an on duty mobile phone where lawyers can be reached every day.

It is very important to stress that there are many problems with legal advisers (refugee counsellors) and legal representation in Slovenia, which is an issue closely connected to asylum seekers' access to legal assistance. First, with the transposition of the directive free legal aid on the first instance of asylum procedure was cancelled. As a result, refugee counsellors have no interest anymore in representing asylum seekers on the first instance of the asylum procedure since they are not paid for their work (most of the asylum seekers are not able to pay for it). Second, the fee of the refugee counsellors is 50 % of the attorneys' fee in Slovenia which is a deterring factor for taking new cases. Third, the body responsible for paying the refugee counsellors for their work, i.e. the Ministry of Interior, is regularly late in processing the payments while some payments are never processed at all. Consequently, out of more than thirty officially appointed refugee counsellors there are only four that actually represent asylum seekers. Of these four, at least one is not taking new cases because of late payments. Due to poorly paid (or not at all) refugee counsellors the possibility of the asylum seekers (upon whose rights it is deciding) to succeed in asylum procedure is diminished. Fifth, the refugee counsellors are not paid for their work before the asylum procedure is completed. Sixth, before the transposition of the directive, the responsible body for the refugee counsellors was the Ministry of Justice. With the transposition, the competency for the refugee counsellors was transferred to the Ministry of Interior, a body that is also an interested party to the asylum procedure, deciding upon the asylum applications and the opposite party if the case is appealed at the Administrative or Supreme Court. Seventh, the requirements for refugee counsellors are easy to meet and no specific knowledge on asylum procedure and asylum law is required to obtain this status. All the stated problems cause a poor functioning of the legal representation for asylum seekers in Slovenia and decrease their chances in succeeding in asylum procedure.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection foresees the obligation of the state to give to a person seeking international protection a list of refugee counsellors and a list of non-governmental organisations working in the field of asylum (article 9, § 1 of the Proposal). Article 8, indent 3 of the Proposal also obliges the state to allow persons seeking international protection to communicate with UNHCR or organisation, working on its behalf in the Republic of Slovenia pursuant to an agreement with the competent authority in the Republic of Slovenia on the transfer of responsibilities and manner and scope of work in the Republic of Slovenia.

Q.26. B. What are the rules about access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs regarding access to accommodation centres and other housing facilities (see article 14, §7 which is a mandatory provision)

In principle, the representatives of the UNHCR, NGOs and the refugee counsellors have an unlimited access to the asylum seekers accommodated in the Asylum Home. UNHCR and the refugee counsellors can access the asylum seekers anytime (article 9, § 4 of the Asylum Act), while the NGOs can access them according to the schedule, available at the board of the Asylum Home. The asylum seekers have the right to request contact to the representatives of UNHCR and the NGOs as well as their legal representatives at anytime (article 9, § 5 of the Asylum Act).

Since UNHCR does not have a permanent presence in Slovenia and can only engage in occasional monitoring missions, the NGOs which are UNHCR implementing partners are those who have the access in principle. As far as the pre-reception area is concerned only the Legal Information Centre for NGOs has access to it. The NGOs, however, may conduct visits following a schedule which means that they may not pay unannounced visits.

In a case of a Roma family which was being deported to Germany the family informed their legal representative in the course of deportation but was not allowed to enter the Asylum Home to speak with the family and had to observe the deportation from behind the fence.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection obliges the state to grant UNHCR access to persons seeking international protection and applicants in the territory of the Republic of Slovenia and in transit areas of airports and ports (article 14(2) indent 2). Access is granted upon the persons consent (article 14(3)). The same applies for organisations, working on its behalf in the Republic of Slovenia pursuant to an agreement with the competent authority in the Republic of Slovenia on the transfer of responsibilities and manner and scope of work in the Republic of Slovenia (article 14(4)).

There are no rules regarding access of legal advisers to accommodation centres and other housing facilities (the Proposal of the Act on International Protection).

Q.26. C. Can the access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs be limited for security reasons or any other reason (see article 14, §7, last sentence)?

There is no legal basis for limiting the access of NGOs. In practice though, the access of all NGOs but Legal Information Centre for NGOs is limited with regard to pre-reception area. Furthermore, even Legal Information Centre for NGOs has to comply with the schedule agreed with the Asylum Sector which makes the access limited.

Q.27. Q.27. A. Is a medical screening organised by the receiving State, is it mandatory or voluntary? Does it include HIV tests? (see article 9 which is an optional provision)

Legally, the competent body must conduct a physical examination of the applicant while taking the asylum application (article 15, § 1 of the Instructions on the Procedure – see Q. 1, and article 5, § 2 of the Rules on Reception Conditions). The preventive physical examination is conducted by a contract-based doctor who visits the Asylum Home on a daily basis. Each asylum seeker is medically examined before being accommodated in the Asylum Home, that is, after the leave the pre-reception area. The costs of physical examination are covered by the Ministry of Interior. The examination is organized by the state and is obligatory for all applicants. The doctor only checks the applicants for signs of visible diseases on their stomach and hands. The examination does not include an HIV test or any blood or urine examinations.

Q.27. B. Do the legal provisions on reception conditions ensure that asylum seekers receive at least emergency care and essential treatment of illness as requested by article 15 §1 which is a mandatory provision? Do they have a further access to health care?

The extent of health care services includes the right to:
1. emergency medical care, emergency ambulance transport, and emergency dental care;
2. essential treatment based on the decision by the physician in charge of treatment, which shall consist of: the preservation of vital functions, stopping serious bleeding or preventing fatal bleeding; the prevention of a sudden deterioration of health that could cause permanent damage to individual organs or vital functions; treatment of shock; services relating to chronic diseases and states of illness the abandonment of which could directly and imminently result in disability and other permanent health defects and in death; treatment of states of fever and prevention of the spread of an infection that could lead to a septic state; treatment and prevention of poisoning; treatment of bone fractures, sprains and other injuries requiring emergency medical assistance; medications included in the positive list and issued on the basis of a prescription for the treatment of the states specified above; emergency transport using ambulance and other vehicles in the cases specified above;
3. medical care for women: contraceptives, abortions, and medical care during pregnancy and upon giving birth (article 46 of the Asylum Act).

Legally, asylum seekers have no right to further health care. The adopted implementing acts however, foresee a possibility for the asylum seeker to apply for additional health care services. The request must be lodged at a commission of the Asylum Home (article 15, § 3 of the Rules on Reception Conditions). This commission replaced the eligibility committee organized within the NGO Slovene Philanthropy and supported by UNHCR with a purpose of financially assisting asylum seekers who had special needs not covered by the emergency health care (e.g. glasses or crutches).

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection defines a right to health care in article 84(1):
"The extent of health care services shall include the right to:

3. Emergency medical care, emergency ambulance transportation upon a doctor's decision, and emergency dental care;
4. Essential treatment according to the decision by the physician responsible for treatment, which shall consist of:

- The preservation of vital functions, stopping serious bleeding or preventing fatal bleeding;
- The prevention of a sudden deterioration of health that could cause permanent damage to individual organs or vital functions;
- Treatment of shock;
- Services relating to chronic diseases and states of illness the abandonment of which could directly and imminently result in disability and other permanent health defects and in death;
- Treatment of states of fever and prevention of the spread of an infection that could lead to a septic state;
- Treatment and prevention of poisoning;
- Treatment of bone fractures, sprains and other injuries requiring emergency medical assistance;
- Medications included in the positive list in accordance with a list of exchangeable medications' substitutes issued on the basis of a prescription for treatment of the states specified above;

Medical care for women: contraceptives, abortion and medical care during pregnancy and at giving birth."

Q.27. C. What is the practice regarding access of asylum seekers to health care and how is it organised? In particular, what is the situation in accommodation centres (are doctors coming to the centres or do asylum seekers go to doctors outside)?

The Asylum Sector concluded contracts with six doctors who visit the Asylum Home and conduct preventive medical examinations. Curative medical treatment is provided by the doctors working at the competent health centre (according to the address of residence of the asylum seeker; for the applicants living in the Asylum Home that is the health centre Vič in Ljubljana). These doctors do not visit the Asylum Home; for sick asylum seekers the nurse employed in the Asylum Home makes an appointment and the asylum seekers visit the health centres on their own by a city bus for which they receive bus tokens. In practice, the sick asylum seekers often experience barriers in accessing health care due to arbitrary decisions taken by the nurse on whether or not she would believe the asylum seeker is sick or in pain, and whether or not she would make an appointment at the health centre for him or her.

Making appointments is not necessary though since asylum seekers have the right to visit the health centre on their own. However, if they do it they risk being rejected because the health centres are not sufficiently informed about the status of the asylum seekers and their entitlement to receive urgent medical care, essential treatment of disease and special care for women in terms of contraception, abortion, pregnancy and labour.

In addition, by law vulnerable groups are entitled to special additional care in accordance with their special needs. In practice, even their basic needs (glasses, crutches, vitamins for children, sometimes even life-important medicine, etc.) are often not covered and additional sources for them ~~have~~ used to be (until December 31, 2006) provided by the eligibility committee of the Slovene Philanthropy, financed by the UNHCR.

Q.28. Q.28. A. What is the length of the period determined by the concerned Member State during which asylum seekers have no access to the labour market? (see article 11 which is a mandatory provision)

An asylum applicant can work if his or her identity is indisputably established. He or she can begin to work one year after applying for asylum if in this period of time the competent authority did not issue a first instance decision, and this delay can not be attributed to the asylum seeker (article 46.a, § 1 of the Asylum Act). In practice, most asylum seekers are issued the first instance decision within one year after lodging the asylum application and therefore the right to work is de facto non-existent for them. At the time of writing of this report (~~July 2006~~ May 2007) there were only two asylum seekers who have not been issued an asylum decision for long enough to obtain the right to work. In addition to that, when asylum seekers legally obtain the right to work, they must first obtain a confirmation from the Asylum Sector that no decision has been issued in one year. They have to send this confirmation to the Unemployment Office and apply for a work permit. Then they need to look for work on their own since they are not entitled to any employment programs, generally available for Slovenian nationals. Practically, access to work is extremely limited and actually non existent for a large majority of the asylum seekers. Due to a long waiting period (one year) and only minimum needs covered, many asylum seekers engage in illicit work in order to pass the time usefully and obtain at least a minimum income to cover for daily expenses.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection also foresees a right to work gained after one year after the asylum application is submitted if during this period a decision has not been issued and the delay cannot be attributed to the asylum seeker (article 85(1)).

Q.28. B. After that period, are asylum seekers or not obliged to obtain a work permit? In case is there a limit for the administration to deliver the permits and how quick are they delivered? What is their length?

If the first instance decision is not issued in one year the applicant may request the Sector for Asylum for a confirmation that no decision was issued for him in the period of one year and on the basis of this confirmation the applicant can apply for a work permit. The asylum applicant has to acquire a work permit in line with the established regulations in the field of employment and work of aliens. The asylum applicant can obtain a work permit for the period of three months with a possibility of extension and a possibility of cessation in case of finality of his or her asylum procedure (article ~~64. a~~ 46.a, § 2 and 3 of the Asylum Act). The permits need to be delivered in one month (in accordance with the general provisions of the Administrative Procedure Act) and this deadline is usually respected. An asylum seeker who obtains work must report the information about his or her work (employer, working hours, payment) to the Asylum Sector. If the asylum seeker works, he or she is not entitled to free subsistence, except accommodation (article 16 of the Rules on Reception Conditions).

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection stipulates: "To exercise the right to work, the asylum seeker has to obtain a work permit which expires after three months and can be prolonged or cancelled." (article 85(2))

Q.28. C. After that period, what are the conditions for access of the asylum seekers to the labour market? (in particular, are there rules concerning the maximum allowed of working hours or days per week, month or year, limits in terms of type of work or of professions authorised?

There are no specific rules on what type of work or profession the applicant can perform. The rules for maximum working hours per week, month or year are the same as for Slovenian citizens (as long as the time for which the work permit is issued is not exceeded).

Q.28. D. What are the rules in terms of priorities between asylum seekers on the one hand and nationals, EU or EEE citizens and legally third-country nationals on the other?

After obtaining the work permit, the asylum seekers are legally equal in their access to labour market as nationals, EU or EEE citizens and legal third country nationals. However, it is difficult to actually obtain work because usually they do not have diplomas or school certificates with them to have their level of education recognized.

Q.28. E. Do asylum seekers have access to vocational training, does this or not depend of their right to access to the labour market, and in case at which conditions? (see article 12 which is optional regarding §1 and mandatory regarding § 2)

No, the asylum seekers in Slovenia do not have the right to vocational training. Vocational training in Slovenia is part of the regular post-primary education from which adult asylum seekers are excluded and to which minor asylum seekers generally do not have access (see also Q. 31. B.).

But, the Proposal of the Act on International Protection foresees the possibility to allow asylum seekers who have entered into a contract of employment access to courses of vocational training (article 85, § 4 of the Proposal).

Q.28. F. Are the rules regarding access to the labour market adopted to transpose the directive more or less generous than the ones applicable previously?

Previously the rules regarding access of the asylum seekers to the labour market were the same as for the temporarily displaced persons, who were upon their request allowed to engage in temporary and occasional type of work in accordance with the provisions of the Temporary Protection Act. If they wanted to work they received a referral from the Asylum Sector on the basis of which they could conclude a contract with an employer for a maximum of 60 days per year, 8 hours per week. Temporary and occasional work was regulated with the previous Labour Relations Act which was revised on January 1, 2003. In the meantime until March 4, 2006, when the new Asylum Act entered into force, no law regulated the work of the asylum seekers. Arguably, it is questionable whether the rules adopted to transpose the directive are more or less generous than before: under the previous system, the asylum seekers were allowed to start to work immediately and once they were working in practice no one was controlling the working hours. Now they only have the right to access the labour market after one year. In practice many of them are forced to take up illicit work in the meantime. Illicit work enables them to maintain contact with everyday life, pass the time usefully, maintain their working habits and earn some money to cover for their needs and the needs of their families that are not covered by the minimum reception conditions (especially considering that their pocket money was also cancelled).

There is currently (May 2007) only one asylum seeker who was not issued a decision upon the asylum application within one year and obtains a work permit. For all the others whose decisions were issued before the deadline of one year, the right to work is not accessible.

The Proposal does not foresee any change with regard to access to the labour market: the applicant may start working one year after lodging the application, if in this period of time the relevant authority did not yet take a decision and this delay cannot be attributed to the applicant. His identity has to be fully established at that time. (article 85(1))

Q.29. Are reception conditions subject to the fact that asylum seekers do not have sufficient resources? Are asylum seekers requested to contribute to reception conditions when they have personal resources (for instance if they work) or to refund the authorities if it appears that they have resources? (see article 13 §§ 3 and 4 which are optional provisions)

The asylum seekers who can rely on their own financial means or whose living expenses are provided for in a different way, are obliged to bear their expenses or part thereof (article 45, § 4 of the Asylum Act). Although this measure is provided for in the law, it has not yet been exercised in practice.

Asylum applicants who can rely on their own financial resources or whose living expenses are provided for in some different way shall bear their expenses or contribute a proportionate share of funds for covering their cost for accommodation in the Asylum Home or its branches (article 80(5) of the Proposal of the Act on International Protection).

7. SPECIAL NEEDS OF PARTICULAR CATEGORIES OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.30.

Q.30.A. Which of the different categories of persons with special needs considered in the directive are taken into account in the national legislation (see article 17, §1 which is a mandatory provision): disabled people, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence? Include in your answer all other categories envisaged in national law.

According to the law, specific care and attention shall be provided to persons with special needs and vulnerabilities, especially children, unaccompanied children, disabled people, the elderly, pregnant woman, single parents with children, and persons who have survived rape, torture or other forms of psychological, physical or sexual violence (article 15a., § 1 of the Asylum Act).

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection does not foresee any change when listing categories (article 15, § 1 of the Proposal).

Q.30. B. How is their specific situation taken into account (see articles 13, §2, second indent, 16 §4 second sentence and 17 which are mandatory provisions)?

Special needs and vulnerability shall be established on the basis of an individual need assessment of each asylum seeker, refugee or person having subsidiary protection. The accommodation of vulnerable asylum applicants, refugees or persons having subsidiary protection shall take into consideration their specific situation with regard to material conditions of reception, medical and psychological counselling and care (article 15a., § 2 and 3 of the Asylum Act).

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection does not foresee any change with regard to how special needs and vulnerability shall be established and how accommodation will take into account their specific situation (article 15, § 2 and 3 of the Proposal). Regardless of the conditions which have to be fulfiled to be able to allow an applicant to accommodate in a private apartment, the responsible authority may approve the applicant's accommodation at a private address, if the authority establishes substantiated medical or other reasons supporting that. Whether the reasons are substantiated or not shall be established by a commission, appointed by the Minister (article 83(3) of the Proposal). A vulnerable person with special needs and exceptionally some other applicant shall have the right to additional medical services, approved and defined by the commission referred to in the third paragraph of the previous Article of this Law (article 84(2) of the Proposal).

The Asylum Home staff takes into account the special needs of persons while accommodating them in one of the wards foreseen for each particular group (as foreseen with article 5, § 6 of the Asylum Act). Please also see Q. 12. B.

In general, there are no specific programs organized by the Asylum Home with a purpose to deal with vulnerable groups. The Asylum Home employs two social workers and one psychologist (3 people for 150-200 applicants) who cannot perform specialized counselling for vulnerable groups because they are overburdened with tasks such as counting the asylum seekers in the mornings and accommodation of the new arrivals. The only vulnerable groups-related activities are carried out by the NGOs and funded by UNHCR or NGOs' own sources. E.g. an NGO Slovene Philanthropy carries out a project Sex and Gender Based Violence Program (SGBV) aiming at the prevention of gender based violence with women, and association Ključ carries out a Project against Trafficking and Sex and Gender based Violence (PATS), aiming at a prevention of trafficking with human beings and assistance to victims.[673]

There are no specific counselling programs for children, pregnant women and elderly people. Due to a higher number of pregnant women in the Asylum Home non-governmental organisations noticed a necessity to organise a seminar for them on health risks, appropriate food, etc. The Asylum Sector merely complained how negligent they were but did not organise any session.

Q.30. C. How and when are the special needs of the concerned persons supposed to be legally identified (see article 17 § 2 which is a mandatory provision and clarify how it has been interpreted by transposition)?

The Slovenian Asylum Act does not define when the vulnerability of a person should be legally identified. The Asylum Home staff is trying to identify the vulnerability of the asylum seekers on the basis of an individual assessment of their needs either at accommodating them or while accepting their asylum application, or later in the asylum procedure. The identification of vulnerability depends on the perceptivity of individual psychologists, employed by the Asylum Home, and persistence of the applicants. However, as stated above, there are three persons employed (two social workers and one psychologist) to deal with 150-200 applicants, but even these three persons are overburdened with basic reception activities.

The procedure to establish vulnerability legally is also not defined with the Asylum Act, nor is it existent in practice. There are no questionnaires or procedures developed to determine post-traumatic stress disorder, suicidal states or other disorders.

Special needs of the vulnerable groups when being accommodated or to establish the need of proper health care shall be identified by a commission appointed by the Minister (article 83(3) and article 84(2)).

Q.30. D. Is the necessary medical and other assistance provided to persons with special needs as requested by article 15, §2 which is a mandatory provision and in particular to victims of torture and violence as requested by article 20 which is a mandatory provision?

Legally, vulnerable groups have additional rights in terms of health care and counselling (article 15.a, § 3 of the Asylum Act). In practice, the level of medical assistance provided for vulnerable groups is equal to medical assistance provided to other asylum seekers (except for contraception, abortions, treatment during pregnancy and labour which are available for women). Persons with special needs (glasses, crutches and vitamins for children are the most frequent) ~~are~~ were often financially supported by the eligibility committee of the Slovene Philanthropy (an NGO), funded by UNHCR. Dissolution of the eligibility committee since January 1, 2007 has placed vulnerable groups even into a less favourable situation. Medical care for vulnerable groups is therefore often not always sufficient.

[673] The NGOs made attempts to have discussion groups with female migrants with an aim of empowerment and discovered that women know little of the asylum procedures since they are mostly handled by their husbands. Domestic violence, gender related violence, emancipation, abortion, and sometimes even contraception are taboos; women are not prepared to talk about this, which is conditioned by their cultural backgrounds, but they are also not encouraged to deal with such topics.

Regarding minors there were instances when Asylum Home staff contacted a Centre for Counselling for Children and Young People if they dealt with a child whose needs were beyond their expertise. If needed, an interpreter was also provided.

Other programs are not available. The Asylum Home employs a psychologist who is overburdened with other tasks and mostly does not provide individual counselling. In the past there was a case of a female applicant with a post traumatic stress disorder, whose husband insisted she needs to be checked up. A psychologist who was previously employed by the Asylum Home engaged herself and achieved that the applicant was accepted into a group therapy in an external institution, which is a unique case. Please also see Q. 30. C.

Article 84(2) of the Proposal of the Act on International Protection: "A vulnerable person with special needs and exceptionally some other applicant shall have the right to additional medical services, approved and defined by the commission referred to in the third paragraph of the previous Article of this Law."

Q.31. About minors:

Q.31. A. Till which age are asylum seekers considered to be minor?

Asylum seekers are considered as minors until the age of 18 (article 14, § 1 of the Asylum Act).

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection does not foresee any change (article 3, § 1, indent 16 of the Proposal).

Q.31. B. How is access of minor asylum seekers to the education system ensured? Is it at school or in case inside accommodation centres and can it be considered as similar to the conditions for nationals as requested by article 10, §1?

Legally, minor asylum seekers have the right to elementary schooling (article 43 of the Asylum Act). The schooling is carried out in two nearby public schools (Livada and Vič) under the same conditions as the nationals. In Slovenia it is obligatory to attend elementary school between the ages of 6 and 15 which applies to asylum seeking children as well. For older minors (between the ages of 15 and 18) attending schools is no longer mandatory in Slovenia. Minor asylum seekers between 15 and 18 can only attend classes if there are free places available in secondary schools and depending on the readiness of the secondary school to accept them. In practice though the management of the Asylum Home try to enable the asylum seeking minors between the ages of 15 and 18 to attend classes in secondary schools if they express such wish. The main problems encountered are: i) proving the completion of elementary school since asylum seekers are mostly lacking such proofs, ii) differences in the existing knowledge of the asylum seekers, and iii) lack of proficiency in Slovenian language. Due to these problems for minors between the ages of 15 and 18, the right to education is not ensured by law which represents a problem concerning the transposition of the directive.

In practice there are problems in accessing schools. While access to school “Livada” is well organized (children are picked up and brought back by a ~~school~~ mini bus), access to school “Vič” is problematic: it is only possible to access it by a public bus. In accordance with article 91, § 5 of the Road Traffic Safety Act, children in their first year of school have to be accompanied by an adult on their way to school. Since children are taken to the school by bus, parents do not need tokens anymore, except from a mother of a child that attends the school "Vič" who receives bus tokens only when she goes to parents' hours. Otherwise, the child has a monthly bus ticket and is old enough to go to school without being escorted. Occasionally the Asylum Sector is giving the parents additional bus tokens which are otherwise intended for visiting a doctor, a lawyer of for other purposes. At the moment, only one child attends the school "Vič" and receives monthly bus ticket, while his mother receives bus tokens for accompanying him to and from school.

The adopted implementing act stipulates that minor asylum seekers attending schools will have the right to free usage of textbooks. If their parents have no resources of their own, the children may receive workbooks, notebooks and other schooling equipment (article 25 of the Rules on Reception Conditions). In practice there are also numerous problems with insufficient availability of textbooks, workbooks and other school equipment.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection foresees the right to elementary schooling in accordance with laws on obligatory elementary schooling. The applicant is also enabled access to education at the vocational and secondary schools under the same criteria that apply to citizens of the Republic of Slovenia (article 86 of the Proposal).

Q.31. C. Is access to education ensured not later than 3 months as requested by article 10, §2 (or after maximum one year if specific education for asylum seekers is provided) and till an expulsion decision is really enforced?

In practice, the minors start attending school in one month after lodging the asylum application. Legally, schooling must last until the final decision upon their asylum application is issued and served to them. This norm is respected in practice. After that the children are not entitled to go to school although the expulsion decision is not yet enforced.

The proposal of the Act on International Protection also does not put any limitations on when children can start attending schools (article 86).

Q.31. D. Is specific education (like language classes) available for asylum seekers, in particular to facilitate their effective access to the education system of the reception Member State (see article 10, §2 which is an optional provision)?

In Asylum Home the asylum seekers have a possibility to attend classes on Slovenian and English language, and computer classes. Children below the age of 6 and children above the age of 15 who never went to school attend literacy classes. Other children attend classes on Slovenian language from the moment of filing the asylum application and throughout their stay. These classes are organized by the NGOs (association Jesuit Refugee Service carries out classes on Slovenian language for children and Slovene Philanthropy for adults).

NGO Jesuit refugee service carries out classes on Slovenian language twice a week, but there are not many asylum seekers interested. Among those who attend this class, one female asylum seeker learns to read and write. Also NGO Slovene Philanthropy is having Slovene classes twice a week, for single women and single men. They also noticed that interest for this classes is decreasing

The schools have offered to provide afternoon tutoring with a purpose of providing assistance with the language and homework. However, attending the afternoon tutoring is not possible due to the transportation constraints. Those minors attending Livada who are taken to school and brought back by a mini bus cannot attend tutoring lessons because of the early departure of the school bus. The minor attending Vič cannot use the tutoring hours due to a problem connected with monthly bus ticket which is only valid for one specific bus and cannot commute with other buses.

In addition, the NGOs carry out various practical workshops for children and women, and sport activities for single men. However, these classes cannot be considered education classes but more as an active way of passing time.

Q.31. E. Are minors in general accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them? (see article 14, § 3)

Minors, who entered the country together with their parents or other relatives or responsible persons, are accommodated with them in a family ward of the Asylum Home.

There is no provision in the Proposal that would stipulate such obligation.

Q.31. F. Do minors with special needs enumerated by article 18, §2 which is a mandatory provision, have access to appropriate mental health care and qualified counselling?

There are no specific counselling programs for vulnerable groups or for the children available. The only programs that exist are the programs of the NGOs which are mostly not funded by the state. There were instances when Asylum Home staff contacted a Centre for Counselling for Children and Young People if they dealt with a child whose needs were beyond their expertise. If needed, an interpreter was also provided. Please also see Q. 30. B.

Article 84(2) of the Proposal of the Act on International Protection: "A vulnerable person with special needs and exceptionally some other applicant shall have the right to additional medical services, approved and defined by the commission referred to in the third paragraph of the previous Article of this Law." This provision is applicable to all cases when a vulnerable person needs special care. As it is very loose, it can be also applicable to minors with mental problems.

Q.31. G. How and when is organised the representation of unaccompanied minors (guardianship, special organisation) and regularly assessed? (see article 19, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

Legally, a legal guardian should be appointed to an unaccompanied minor before the start of the asylum procedure (article 28, § 1 of the Asylum Act). The competent bodies to deal with guardianship are centres for social work.

In practice, if the unaccompanied minor is accommodated in the Deportation Centre, the police in the Deportation Centre request the centres for social work in Postojna to issue a decision on guardianship for a minor. On the same day they have to notify also the Slovene Philanthropy. Guardianship of the unaccompanied minors is coordinated by Slovene Philanthropy (SF), an NGO specialized in working with minors. The Centre for social work in Postojna should contact the SF in approx. two days to serve the decision on guardianship. Volunteers affiliated with the Slovene Philanthropy are appointed as guardians. The Centre for social work Postojna notifies Slovene Philanthropy on the minor immediately, however it then takes in average two days to issue a decision on guardianship. Before the decision is issued, Slovene Philanthropy is not entitled to access the child.

If an unaccompanied minor is accommodated in the Asylum home the inspector calls the Centre for social work Vič and notifies Slovene Philanthropy. Before lodging an asylum application guardian is given approx. 10-15 minutes to talk to the minor and is present during the information session. Later, at lodging an application, both the guardian and a legal representative are present (usually a representative of Legal Information Centre for NGOs). At the time of lodging the application the guardian the decision on guardianship has not been issued yet, since it is usually issued a week later, but in the mean time, the guardian has free access to the minor. After the application has been lodged the guardian accompanies the minor to his/her room.

A formal system of assessment of guardianship does not exist. Each guardian has to submit regular reports on the guardianship to the Centre for social work Postojna but it depends on the centre whether these reports are reviewed. The Centre for social work Vič does not demand any reports on performing of guardianship.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection foresees appointment of a legal representative of an unaccompanied minor before the procedure (article 16(1) indent 4) and stipulates that a person who may act as legal representatives can be a child's relative or companion or a representative of the organization specializing in working with children and youth (article16, § 3 of the Proposal).

Q.31. H. How is placement of unaccompanied minors organised (with adult relatives, a foster family, in special accommodation centres or other suitable accommodation)? (see article 19, §2 which is mandatory provision)

Unaccompanied minors (minors who are not accompanied by parents or other adult relatives) should be placed in a separate department of the Asylum Home. Internal Rules of the Asylum Home in article 1 (10) mentions as one of the units of the Asylum Home a unit for unaccompanied minors. Due to overcrowded wards, the unaccompanied minors are usually placed in the same ward as single women.

No provision in the Proposal of the Act on International Protection stipulates placement of unaccompanied minors with adult relative, a foster family, etc).

Q.31. I. How is the tracing of the family members of the unaccompanied minors organised? Are measures taken to protect confidentiality of information when necessary? (see article 19, §3 which is a mandatory provision)

The system of tracing of the family members is available through the Red Cross tracing service. In practice, there were only a few cases when Red Cross inquired about family members in Slovenia upon the request of other EU member states. However, there are no cases of Slovenian competent body inquiring through this service which signals that there is a lack of awareness about it. In a few cases where tracing of family members was necessary tracing was carried out on ad hoc basis through contacting UNHCR, NGOs and police in the countries concerned. Generally, confidentiality is respected.

No provision regarding tracing of family members of the unaccompanied minors are in the Proposal of the Act on International Protection. But, the Proposal in article 128(4) obliges the state authorities and other bodies and organisations while collecting, processing and communicating the personal and general data on the applicants and persons who were recognised international protection to obtain and protect the data in accordance with provisions regulating personal data collection.

8. EXCEPTIONAL MODALITIES OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.32. Apart from detention covered by the next question, are there exceptional modalities for reception conditions in the following cases and if yes, which ones and for how long are they applicable, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)?

Q.32. A. Persons with specific or special needs, regarding in particular the period of assessment of those needs?

There are no exceptional modalities foreseen with the law or in practice for persons with special needs.

Also, the Proposal of the Act on International Protection (article 83(3)) foresees a possibility for accommodation in private facilities regardless the conditions set in the paragraph 1 if the authority establishes substantiated medical or other reasons supporting that. Whether the reasons are substantiated or not shall be established by a commission, appointed by the Minister.

Q.32. B. Non availability of reception conditions in certain areas

Slovenia is a very small country which means that most of the asylum seekers are brought to Asylum Home, located in the capital Ljubljana.

Also, the Proposal of the Act on International Protection does not foresee any exceptional modalities for reception conditions in such cases.

Q.32. C. Temporarily exhaustion of normal housing capacities

In the adopted Rules on Reception Conditions it is foreseen that the asylum seekers are accommodated in other appropriate premises (e.g. homes for elderly persons, safe houses, psychiatric institutions, student dorms, and appropriate social institutions), if the Asylum Sector cannot ensure an appropriate accommodation for them (article 6, § 1 of the Rules on Reception Conditions) due to overcrowding. It is not yet clear how this will function in practice.

In exceptional cases, after his application was taken, the competent authority may accommodate an applicant outside the Asylum Home if accommodation cannot be provided at the Asylum Home or its branches (article 83(1)) of the Proposal.

Q.32. D. The asylum seeker is confined to a border post

Slovenia is very small and it would therefore not be reasonable to build detention facilities at the border post. Instead, asylum seekers are brought either to the Asylum Home in Ljubljana or to the Deportation Centre in Postojna.

But the Proposal of the Act on International Protection (article 58(1)) enables the state to confine an alien if he expresses intent to apply for asylum in the transit zone at the airport or on board of a ship anchored in the port or harbor. Until a decision in an accelerated procedure is issued or until a decision in the context of the Dublin procedure or the procedure of the national or the European safe third country or the first country of asylum becomes final, the person shall remain in the area mentioned.

Q.32. E. All other cases not mentioned in the directive (for instance urgent situation in case of a sudden high number of applicants outside a case of application of the directive on temporary protection).

There are no other exceptional modalities foreseen in the legislation neither do they exist in practice.

Q.33. Detention of asylum seekers (we do not cover the situation of rejected asylum seekers detained for the purpose of their return) (see articles 6 §2, 7 §3, 13, §2 2nd indent and 14 §8 which implies that the directive is in principle applicable in case of detention):

Q.33. A. In which cases or circumstances and for which reasons[1] (identity verification in particular if the persons have no or false documents, protection of public order or national security, refugee status determination, way of entry into the territory, etc) can an asylum seeker be detained during the asylum procedure till his request has been finally rejected. Quote precisely in English in your answer the legal basis for detention of asylum seekers in national law.

According to article 27, § 1 of the Asylum Act, if necessary, the movement of an asylum applicant can be temporarily limited on the grounds of: establishing the identity of the applicant; preventing the spread of contagious diseases; suspicion of misleading or abusing asylum procedure; or preventing the threat to other persons' life or property. Formally, detention order is issued to those asylum seekers who have previously been issued a security measure of expulsion. Misleading or abuse of the asylum procedure is presumed when a person applies for asylum when already in the Deportation Centre (because he or she is presumed to be filing the application for a sole reason of suspending the expulsion from the country) and when a person files a repeat application, including a person that is returned on the basis of the Dublin Regulation and wants to re-initiate his or her asylum procedure.

[1] Please specify if article 18 §1 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Member States shall not hold a person in detention for the sole reason that he/she is an applicant for asylum" is or not respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed).

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection foresees the same grounds for limiting one's movement: establishing the identity of the applicant; suspicion on the existence of reasons for rejection of the application in an accelerated procedure as defined in Article 55 of this Law, with an exception of sub-paragraphs 3 and 14 of that Article, prevention the threat to other persons' life or property, prevention of the spread of contagious diseases (article 51, § 1 of the Proposal).

Q.33. B. Has your member State adopted measures to transpose §3 of article 7 which is an optional provision? If yes, how has this provision been legally understood (is it a case of detention or an obligation to stay in and not leave a certain place?) and for which reasons can an asylum seeker be "confined" in such a place?

Beside the reasons for detention, stated under Q. 33. A., when the asylum seeker is detained after lodging asylum application, there is another situation when asylum seekers' freedom of movement is de facto limited. Namely, after they are brought to the Asylum Home and before their asylum application is taken, which should take maximally 12 hours, they are accommodated in a pre-reception (waiting) area – a part of the Asylum Home which is locked and physically separated from the rest of the accommodation facilities. When asylum seekers are brought to the pre-reception area they need to sign a statement that if they leave the pre-reception area their asylum application will be deemed withdrawn. Leaving the pre-reception area means leaving the building itself. This measure (signing of the statement, the fact that the asylum application will be deemed withdrawn) is not defined by the Asylum Act nor any other law.

Q.33. C. Are there legally alternatives to detention, like obligation to report to the authorities, obligation to stay in a place, provision of a guarantor or of a financial guarantee?

According to article 27, § 2 of the Asylum Act, movement of the asylum seekers can be limited by means of prohibition of movement beyond a certain area; by means of prohibition of movement outside the Asylum Home or its branches; or by means of prohibition of movement outside a certain border crossing if accommodation is available there. The latter option is not exercised in practice since there is no accommodation available at the border crossings. The first alternative (prohibition of movement beyond a certain area) has also never been used in practice. The second alternative was exercised in a few cases (prohibition of movement outside the Asylum Home or its branches).

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection foresees only one alternative to limitation of one's movement to a designated facility of the Asylum Home or other appropriate facility of the Ministry, that is limitation of movement to an area of the Asylum Home or its branch (article 51, § 2 of the Proposal).

Q.33. D. Which is the competent authority to order the detention of an asylum seeker? Explain if different authorities are involved to first take and later confirm the decision.

The competent authority to order detention of the asylum seekers is the Asylum Sector of the Ministry of Interior (article 27, § 5 of the Asylum Act).

The same competent authority is foreseen in the Proposal of the Act on International Protection (article 51, § 3 of the Proposal).

Q.33. E. For how long and till which stage of the asylum procedure can an asylum seeker be detained?

Legally, limitation of movement may stay in effect until the grounds for it subsist, but not longer than three months. If the grounds for limitation of movement still exist after the three month period, the limitation can be extended for a further period of one month. Limitation of movement on the ground of preventing the spread of contagious diseases shall stay in effect until the grounds therefore subsist (article 27, § 5). In practice, there are asylum seekers in the Deportation Centre (see the following question) detained for more than four months (in May 2007 there was at least one asylum seeker detained since).

In practice, time limitations for detention of asylum seekers, detained in the detention unit of the Asylum Home, are respected. But, asylum seekers detained in the Deportation Centre in Postojna, are limited in their movement much longer, sometimes even for 6 or more months.

Time limits of limitation of movement as foreseen in the Proposal of the Act on International Protection are the same as in the adopted Asylum Act, with one exception: no longer is foreseen that the limitation of movement on the ground of preventing the spread of contagious diseases shall stay in effect until the grounds therefore subsist. Therefore, we may conclude that limitation on this ground shall also be terminated after four months maximum (article 51, § 3 of the Proposal.

Q.33. F. In which places (can we call them "closed centres"?) are asylum seekers detained (places in a special closed centres reserved only to asylum seekers, together with returnees like illegal aliens or even in a normal prison, in case within separated areas or with the other detainees)? Indicate if a difference has to be made following the location of the "closed centres" at the border or on the territory? Which is the authority managing those places and is it the same as the one in charge of reception conditions?

Limitation of movement outside Asylum Home or its branch is carried out in designated facility of the Asylum Home or other appropriate facility of the Ministry of Interior (article 27, § 3 of the Asylum Act). In practice that means that beside the detention unit of the Asylum Home, where only asylum seekers can be detained, applicants are also detained in a Deportation Centre in Postojna together with illegal migrants. Detention area of the Asylum Home is under the authority of the Asylum Sector of the Ministry of Interior, while Deportation Centre is under a direct authority of the Police. Detention unit of the Asylum Home is located in one of the buildings in the middle of the group of accommodation buildings comprising the Asylum Home. Because it is placed in the middle of the courtyard where children play and other asylum seekers as well as the Asylum Home staff moves freely, Legal Information Centre for NGOs has tried to brought to the Administrative Court's attention in its lawsuits filed against detention orders such placement of the detention unit as inhumane and degrading, since detainees are on one hand visible to everybody who passes by the detention unit, and on the other hand constant exposure to people moving freely can cause psychological disorders and stress because they do not have the same privilege. In two cases, asylum seekers tried to commit suicide due to mental distress.

Limitation of movement based on the prevention of contagious diseases is carried out in the separate facility of the Asylum Home intended for the isolation (article 27, § 4 of the Asylum Act). The facility is under the authority of the Asylum Sector.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection foresees movement of the applicants to be limited to an area of the Asylum Home or its branch or to a designated facility of the Asylum Home or other appropriate facility of the Ministry (article 51(2)). The Proposal does not mention anymore a separate facility of the Asylum Home intended for the isolation of persons with contagious diseases. But, as the Proposal of the Act on International Protection foresees limitation of one's movement to a designated facility (underlined by the rapporteur) of the Asylum Home or other appropriate facility of the Ministry, such persons will probably be accommodated while their movement is limited in the facility intended for the isolation.

The Proposal also foresees accommodation of a person who lodges a subsequent application with the body, responsible for persons' removal from the country (article 57(4)). In such cases the person will be accommodated in the Deportation Centre, managed by the police.

Q.33. G. Does UNHCR and NGOs have access to the places of detention and under which conditions?

Legally, UNHCR and legal representatives have access to all asylum seekers, including those in detention, at all times (article 9, § 4 of the Asylum Act). UNHCR implementing partners, who should also have access because they are authorized by the UNHCR to act in their name, are experiencing limitations in accessing certain premises. In practice, their access to asylum seekers and the places of detention is often restricted on both locations – Asylum Home and the Deportation Centre. There were cases when while trying to access the detention area of the Asylum Home, they were informed that there were no detained asylum seekers in detention at that time and were not let into the premises to check. The UNHCR-authorized NGOs also report that in the Deportation Centre in Postojna they could not access the living premises of detention with an explanation that for practical reasons the asylum seekers were accommodated together with illegal migrants and since access to illegal migrants is forbidden, they could not see the place of detention (although a visit has been previously agreed upon with the authorized inspectors). This way the NGOs never know whether they had access to all asylum seekers or not. Making unannounced visits to Deportation Centre in Postojna is not allowed for NGOs: they must announce the visit and obtain a permission. Legal Information Centre for NGOs has made an agreement both with the Deportation Centre in Postojna and the Asylum Home on the schedule for visiting the detainees. It has also been agreed between this NGO and the Deportation Centre that the NGO representative will be able to visit detained asylum seekers in the living premises.

Q.33. H. What appeal(s) can asylum seekers introduce against the fact he is detained? Is article 18 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Where an applicant for asylum is held in detention, Member States shall ensure that there is a possibility of speedy judicial review" respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed)?

An asylum applicant has the right to appeal against the written detention order to the Administrative Court within three days after a decision has been served to him. The Administrative Court shall call for a hearing and decide on the appeal within three days (article 27, § 6 of the Asylum Act). Provision of article 18 of the Directive on Asylum Procedures of 1 December 2005 (speedy judicial review) is in principle respected although it is questionable whether speedy judicial review also enables short appeal deadlines. The fact that such short deadlines can be easily missed may prevent a person from obtaining any judicial review.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection also foresees the same appellate procedure (article 51, § 4 of the Proposal). But, in the Asylum Act, the time-limit for serving a detention order to a person in writing is within 48 hours from the time when a person has been orally informed about detention order (article 27, § 5 of the Asylum Act). With the Proposal of the Act on International Protection that will be probably changed as the proposal foresees serving of the detention order in writing in three working days since the detention order has been issued to the person orally (article 51, § 3 of the Proposal).

With regard to the time-limit for serving the detention order in writing within 48 hours, two different arguments exist regarding what this time-limit refers to. The Asylum Sector sometimes serves the order to the asylum seeker after more than 48 hours after the asylum seeker has been orally informed about the detention order. They believe that the time-limit of 48 hours obliges them only to write the order, but not to serve it to the asylum seeker, since they have to also translate the order, which is done by the translators. Such arguments and practice lead to a longer waiting period during which the asylum seeker has to wait for a possibility to demand a judicial review by filing a lawsuit because the order has not yet been served to him in writing, he cannot file a lawsuit). On the other hand, Legal Information Centre for NGOs argues such prolongation of time-limit as unlawful, stating the above given argument.

Q.33. I. Is the directive on reception conditions considered to be in principle applicable to the places where asylum seekers are detained? In particular which information do they receive about their rights, which access do they have to legal advice and health care?

The Directive on Reception Conditions is fully applicable to the places where asylum seekers are detained. There are no legal provisions in the Asylum Act or in the implementing acts that would limit the applicability of the directive in detention.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection also does not foresee any legal provisions that would limit the applicability of the directive on reception conditions in detention.

Q.33. J. Apart from freedom of movement, what are the main differences between normal reception conditions and exceptional modalities for reception conditions in case of detention, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)? If it is about closed centres, are the regulations of those places in line with the requirements of the directive (is article 13, §2, second indent of the directive following which "Member States shall ensure that standards of living is met (…) in relation to the situation of persons who are in detention" respected?).

Legally detained asylum seekers have the right to the same level of reception conditions as those who are in open-type accommodation centres (basic subsistence, hygienic goods, clothing, footwear and food), although there is no provision in the Slovenian asylum legislation that would explicitly state this. In practice, however, the level and quality of de facto reception conditions is much lower comparing to those received by asylum seekers in the open-type reception centre.

Asylum seekers detained in the Deportation Centre do not receive any leaflets with information on the asylum procedure, their rights and obligations and refugee counsellors. Their access to information is much more limited comparing to the open-type accommodation centre. Due to lack of information of asylum seekers in the Deportation Centre, Legal Information Centre for NGOs agreed with the Deportation Centre to be able to distribute pamphlets on asylum procedure and asylum seekers' rights and obligations only to asylum seekers in the Deportation Centre. Their access to legal advice is substantially lower, since they have a limited access to phone calls. Although a phone booth has been placed in the detention unit, the asylum seekers do not receive any phone cards. (Many asylum seekers in an open-type accommodation centre are engaged in illicit work. This allows them to provide for them and their families a bit more than they receive from the state. In detention that is not possible. Even if they have their own financial means they are taken away from them to cover for their expenses, therefore they are left with very limited options to contact anyone.) Legal Information Centre for NGOs also makes regular visits to the Deportation Centre (twice per week) to provide legal information to asylum seekers. Usually such visits are encouraged by asylum seekers themselves or by inspectors. An additional restricting factor for those who are in the Deportation Centre in Postojna is the distance of the location from the capital of Slovenia where most active refugee counsellors are located. In detention there are also no books, magazines and newspapers for the detainees to read.

Not only that the freedom of movement of the asylum seekers is limited, they also have restricted possibilities for recreation outdoors. In the Deportation Centre outdoor recreation is allowed ~~only~~ approx. for one hour twice per day (it should be minimum two hours and three hours for the minors as guaranteed by articles 43 and 117 of the Enforcement of Penal Sentences Act, Slovenian national legislation regulating prison regimes). Families and children are allowed to leave the premises and to play outside the fence on a playground next to the Deportation Centre. Furthermore, the applicants detained in the detention unit of the Asylum Home, which is located in the middle of the accommodation area, have no organized recreation activities available. Behind the detention unit there is a fenced cage-like open space of 4 x 15 square meters. Apart from the "cage" which most asylum seekers refuse to enter, there are no organized sport or recreation activities for these detainees. After the detainees in the detention unit went on a hunger strike, the head of the Asylum Home has allowed them to have a two-hour exercise in the open under supervision of guards.

Asylum seekers detained in the Deportation Centre in Postojna complain about the poor quality and quantity of food; they reported on at least two occasions of worms in the food or food with a particularly rotten or non-eatable smell and taste; small portions and the last meal received at 6 p.m.; only one warm meal per day (out of three). They are not allowed to leave the premises and cannot supplement for their food by buying it elsewhere but are depended on the food offered by the institution and the sellers of goods which are let into the detention centre (e.g. in Postojna) to sell goods to the asylum seekers.

The right to work is also limited. If an asylum seeker is detained after already obtaining the right to work (i.e. after one year since lodging asylum application if a first instance decision has not yet been issued), his or her access to the labour market is prevented since work is not available in detention. Due to the nature of detention, confined asylum seekers do not have the right to move to a private address.

The right to health care (which is already low since it is restricted to emergency health care and essential treatment of disease, which is not suitable for those residing under such conditions for a longer period of time) is substantially lower in detention places, especially in Postojna: asylum seekers only have access to the doctors who visit the places of detention (and not to public health centres as those in open-type accommodation centres). Usually, they receive either painkillers or anti-depressants for any illness they suffer from. Moreover, anti-depressant medication is prescribed to them massively. Asylum seekers with serious illnesses are encountering difficulties in accessing treatment they need. For example, an asylum seeker suffering from an advanced stage of hepatitis C complained about a constant pain and insufficient treatment of his disease. Only upon the intervention of an NGO he was taken to the hospital for a liver check and for appropriate treatment.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection also does not stipulate any other distinction in reception conditions apart from being freedom of movement. Article 78(2) stipulates that an applicant becomes eligible for the rights with lodging a complete application and shall remain eligible until the execution of the decision of the responsible authority or at most until the decision becomes final.

Q.33. K. Are measures taken to avoid detention of asylum seekers with special needs (if yes, which ones?) or are special measures taken because of their needs?

Although there are no provisions in the legislation prohibiting detention of vulnerable groups, families, minors, unaccompanied minors and disabled are in principle not detained. However, due to the lack of specific provisions, that will not necessarily always be the case (especially in the case of prevention of transmitting contagious diseases). If a person who is considered to belong to one of the vulnerable groups lodges his or her asylum application in Deportation Centre they are usually immediately transferred from Deportation Centre to Asylum Home. In the legislation there are no special measures foreseen for vulnerable groups in detention and neither are they existent in practice.

At the time of concluding the report (May 2007) one family is accommodated in the Deportation Centre in Postojna after it lodged a subsequent asylum application, although the father is a mental patient.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection does not foresee any provisions prohibiting detention of vulnerable groups.

Q.33. L. Can minor asylum seekers be detained together with relatives? Can unaccompanied minor asylum seekers be detained? If yes, are there special measures which take into account that children are concerned?

In the legislation there is no specific provision prohibiting minors (those with relatives or unaccompanied) from being detained. However, in practice minors are usually not detained

(there was one case of a minor who was detained because he refused to separate from a group of 13 people he entered the country with). There are no special measures for minors in detention foreseen with the law nor are they existent in practice. There was a Constitutional Court decision ordering the Deportation Centre to release a minor and his parents. For more information please see Q. 23.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection does not foresee any provisions prohibiting detention of (unaccompanied) minors.

Q.33. M. In particular is article 10 regarding access to education of minors respected in those places?

In the case of detention of minors, their right to education would be respected, since a right to education is not limited (article 86 of the Proposal of the Act on International Protection). Also, in cases of minors accommodated in the Deportation Centre in Postojna, which is a closed-type facility, children do go to school, but are being escorted by the police. Therefore, I can conclude that the right to education would not be limited, but it is impossible to predict since there have never been any minors detained in the detention unit of the Asylum Home.

Q.33. N. How many asylum seekers are for the moment detained in your Member State? Which proportion does this represent in comparison of the total number of asylum seekers at the same moment?

On May 15, 2007 no asylum seekers were detained in the detention unit of the Asylum Home

(91 asylum seekers were accommodated in the Asylum Home on that day). Four asylum seekers were detained in the Deportation Centre in Postojna.

9. ORGANISATION OF THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.34. Explain if the system of providing reception conditions is centralised or decentralised (which levels of government do provide practically reception conditions?) (do not confuse this question with question number 3 about the competence to make rules about reception conditions).

There is only one Asylum Home in Slovenia and the system of providing reception conditions is centralized and ran by the Asylum Sector of the Ministry of Interior (central government). Many activities contributing to maintaining a basic level of reception conditions are carried out by the NGOs using their own resources or with a support of UNHCR.

Q.35. In case, are accommodation centres public or/and private (managed by NGOs? If yes, are the NGOs financially supported by the State?)

The Asylum Home and the Deportation Centre in Postojna, where some asylum seekers are confined, are managed by the state and financed by the Ministry of Interior. In Slovenia there are no accommodation centres which would be managed by private actors or NGOs.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection foresees the possibility of, on the basis of a public invitation for tenders, transferring the management of the activities and accommodation in the Asylum Home to a selected association, institution, or other non-profit legal entity active in the field of accommodation of applicants (article 80, § 1 of the Proposal).

Q.36. In case, how many accommodation centres are there in your Member State (distinguish in your answer between public and private centres)?

Please see answer to Q. 35.

Q.37. Is there in the legislation a plan or are there rules in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory of your Member State to avoid their concentration in some areas like big cities or to share the costs of their reception between central, regional and local authorities?

The legislation provides for a possibility of additional branches of the Asylum Home in different parts of the country to be established in the future. The Government of the Republic of Slovenia shall determine the number, criteria and conditions for the establishment of Asylum Home's branches by taking into account the possibilities of local communities (article 45.a, § 2 of the Asylum Act).

The same provision is foreseen in the article 81 of the Proposal of the Act on International Protection.

Q.38. Does a central body representing all the actors (like NGOs) involved in reception conditions exist? Does it play a consultative role for the State authorities, a coordination role for the actors or any other role?

None of the NGOs involved in reception conditions represents other NGOs and other actors nor does it speak in their name. All NGOs play a consultative role for the state authorities. The NGOs and the authorities meet on monthly coordination meetings with a purpose to acquaint the authorities with the NGO concerns and to resolve the most pressing issues. Some NGOs which are present in the field on a daily basis (e.g. Legal Information Centre for NGOs, Slovene Philanthropy, Mozaik and others) play a particularly important role in reversing and influencing the practices in a positive direction.

Q.39. Q.39. A. Which is the body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions as requested by article 23 which is mandatory provision? Include in your answer which is the competent ministry (Interior, Social affairs, etc) for reception conditions?

There was no body specifically established with a purpose of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions (neither with the legislation nor in practice). The body which is generally responsible to visit any premises where persons are detained, including Asylum Home and Deportation Centre, is the Office of the Human Rights Ombudsman of the Republic of Slovenia (in accordance with article 159 of the Constitution of the Public of Slovenia). However, no additional resources were allocated to the Ombudsman's Office to monitor and control the reception conditions of asylum seekers. The responsible ministry for the reception conditions is the Ministry of Interior of the Republic of Slovenia.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection does not foresee any body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling.

Q.39. B. Has your Member State (like the Czech Republic did recently) approved quality standards (not necessary legally binding) for housing services (for instance about the number of persons per bedroom on the basis of its size, number of accessible toilets, bathrooms, showers and washing machines per number of persons, existence of common rooms with radio, television, newspapers, books, computers, accessibility of telephone, existence of recreative rooms for children,…) to be respected in particular in accommodation centres?

No, quality standards for reception conditions in Slovenia were not legally adopted or approved. However, the Asylum Home is a modern institution, built in 2004 in accordance with the prescribed legal provisions and standards. In the rooms there are usually four beds except for the family department where the rooms are bigger with six beds. Each floor has modern bathrooms (separated for women, children, and men), showers, a tea kitchen, a washing room and common space with a TV. In practice, more and more asylum seekers have their own TVs, radios and even computers in their rooms.

Q.39. C. How is this system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions organised?

Within the Ministry of Interior, there is no formal system of guidance, monitoring and control of the reception conditions in Slovenia that would be established specifically for the purpose of systematic monitoring the implementation of this directive.

In accordance with its mandate, both the Asylum Home and the Deportation Centre have been visited by the Ombudsman of the Republic of Slovenia, whose activities are based on article 159 of the Constitution. However, these visits are rare, not systematic and are performed following the complaints filed by asylum seekers or NGOs (in 2006 the Ombudsman paid one visit and one follow up visit to both Asylum Home and the Deportation Centre, both on the initiative of the NGOs). Visiting the premises where asylum seekers are accommodated is not at all a priority of the Ombudsman's office; the priority is to visit all detention premises in the country (including prisons, police stations, criminal proceeding detentions, and psychiatric hospitals). However, for visiting the Asylum Home and the Deportation Centre no additional resources were allocated to the Ombudsman's office and no training on reception conditions for the Office of the Human Rights Ombudsman was provided. At its visits, the Ombudsman checked the same type of conditions as in regular prisons but did not perform checks that would be specific for the reception conditions of asylum seekers. For example, reception conditions such as the right to education, the right to enter the labour market, the right to clothes and footwear, access to information, a well as access of UNHCR, NGOs and legal representatives were not checked.

In March 2007 the Ombudsman of the Republic of Slovenia visited the Deportation Centre in Postojna as a response to a media reporting on families with small children being detained in the Deportation Centre. In its public statement the Ombudsman stated that conditions the Deportation Centre were satisfactory and that the Constitutional Court (which stated in its judgement that accommodation of children in such closed-type facility is a violation of children's rights) should not look only into limitation of movement, but also into other conditions for placement of families with small children in such centre. Three NGOs issued a joint statement (Legal Information Centre for NGOs, Slovene Philanthropy and Peace Institute), stating that assessment of some living conditions in such centres as good cannot diminish the importance of violation of other human rights (i.e. right to free movement).

The Asylum Home has also been visited by the European Committee for the Prevention of Torture and Inhuman and Degrading Treatment or Punishment, sanitary inspectorates of the Republic of Slovenia, UNHCR and NGOs. However, these visits can not be considered as a system of guidance, monitoring and control. This represents a problem concerning the transposition of the directive. If the monitoring, guidance and control, required by the directive need to be regular and systematic, the directive is not correctly transposed. If a couple of visits in the Asylum home and the Deportation centre by the Ombudsman's Office, responsible for all other detention facilities in the country, are sufficient, then the directive is correctly transposed.

The Proposal of the Act on International Protection does not foresee any system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions.

Q.39. D. Does the body in charge of guidance, control and monitoring produce reports about the level of reception conditions? If yes, how frequently and are they public?

As already stated, there is no body in charge of guidance, monitoring and control in Slovenia.

The organizations and bodies that visited the reception facilities produce reports on their findings concerning the reception conditions. The report of the Ombudsman is made public once a year. The report of the European Committee for the Prevention of Torture and Inhuman and Degrading Treatment or Punishment is also made public. The reports of the UNHCR and its implementing partners are not made public but remain internal. They are used to conduct demarches with the authorities in line with its mandate responsibilities under the Geneva Convention.

In addition, UNHCR implementing partners and some government counterparts came together in 2005 and in 2006 in multi-functional teams and engaged in the gender, age and diversity participatory assessment with asylum seekers, refugees and other persons of concern. The persons interviewed raised a number of issues concerning quality and standard of reception conditions. These reports were published in English and in the local language. This will now be a regular activity.

Q.40. Q.40. A. What is the total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions for the last year for which figures are available (see article 22 obliging Member States to calculate those statistics about which we also asked the Commission to require them from Member States for mid June)?

In 2005 there were 1674 asylum seekers accommodated in the Asylum Home. In 2006 579 and 98 till May 15, 2007.

Q.40. B. What is the total budget of reception conditions in euro for the last year for which figures are available?

Total budget for reception conditions for 2004 was 1,057,365.21 EUR. ~~The figure for 2005 is not available.~~ In 2005, total budget for reception conditions was 479.781,88 EUR (including 50% contribution of the state) and 532.228,12 EUR in 2006.

Q.40. C. What is the average cost of reception conditions in euro per asylum seeker for the last year for which figures are available?

The average cost of reception conditions in 2005 were approximately 18.19 EUR per asylum seeker per day. In 2006 the number was a bit higher, but the Asylum Sector dos not have the estimation prepared yet.

Q.40. D Are the costs of reception conditions of asylum seekers supported by the central/federal or federated government or are they shared with regional and/or local authorities?

The cost of reception conditions are supported by the central government through the Ministry of Interior.

It is important to mention the activities of the NGOs which contribute significantly to maintain the basic level of the reception conditions and are funded by the European Refugee Fund, UNHCR, local government and the European Commission (EQUAL projects and other tenders).

Q.40. E. Is article 24 § 2 of the directive following which "Member States shall allocate the necessary resources in connection with the nationals provisions enacted to implement this directive" respected?

The necessary resources for building the new Asylum Home and for providing basic reception conditions were allocated in order for the minimal standards to be generally respected. There are issues of concern regarding the areas where there is a lack of funds to ensure a normal functioning of the system (medical care and counselling for the vulnerable groups, textbooks and other necessary equipment for schooling children, bus tokens for the parents, etc.) which is a problem concerning the transposition of the directive. Besides the lack of basic reception conditions in the stated areas there are also issues of concern arising from the attitudes and lack of training of the Asylum Home staff on the sensibility issues concerning diversity and cultural differences.

It is also problematic that 90% of the funds allocated to Slovenia by the European Refugee Fund (ERF) are used by the Ministry of Interior to meet the requirements for the reception conditions. Only 10% of the ERF funds are allocated for the activities of the NGOs. In 2006 the percentage of funds allocated to NGOs was higher, 14%.

Q.41. Q.41. A. What is the total number of persons working for reception conditions?

There are 16 people working for reception conditions in the Asylum Home: one nurse, ~~7~~ 6 people for accommodation and subsistence, ~~7~~ 6 people for processing asylum applications and for other operational matters, and 3 persons for psycho-social matters (1 psychologist and 2 social workers). NGO staff is not included in these numbers.

Q.41. B. How is the training of persons working in accommodation centres organised? Does it take into account specific needs of unaccompanied minors when relevant as well as the gender dimension? (see article 14 §5, 19 § 4 and also 24 §1 which are mandatory provisions)?

All Asylum Home staff that deal with psycho-social work, who are directly involved with managing various departments in Asylum Home, completed university studies or have a college education in the fields of psychology, sociology or social work. Some have Master degrees, PhD or specialization. They passed professional exams under the mentorship of Slovene Social Chamber.

The system of training of the Asylum Home staff is not institutionalized and is carried out on ad hoc basis, depending on the programs of the NGOs, UNHCR, Ombudsman, Faculty of Social Work, Faculty of Social Sciences and other institutions that organize seminars within specific projects. In the beginning of the establishing the Slovenian asylum system (after 1999) there were numerous training programs organized (mainly by UNHCR) for the Asylum Home staff. In the last few years the number of trainings decreased. On average, a staff member participates in two trainings per year. Some members of the staff also take part in international events in the field of asylum. The trainings cover various issues but mostly basic concepts such as international protection. There is a lack of training on sensibility for cultural differences and vulnerable groups.

Q.41. C. Are there rules about the deontology of persons working in accommodation centres, in particular on confidentiality?

All employees of the Asylum Home are obliged to protect personal data of the asylum seekers (article 64, § 3 of the Asylum Act). Personal data collected and obtained during the asylum procedure by competent authorities and other state authorities shall be protected in accordance with the Law on Personal Data Protection and the provisions of this Law. All declarations, statements, explanations and data presented to authorities mentioned in the previous paragraph by an asylum applicant in the asylum procedure shall be considered as confidential. Authorities mentioned in the first paragraph shall use particular care in protecting any declarations, statements, explanations and data presented in the procedure by an asylum applicant from the authorities of his or her country of origin (article 18 of the Asylum Act).

The same provision regarding collection, processing and communication of personal data is foreseen in the Proposal of the Act on International Protection (article 128, § 4 and 130 of the Proposal).

10. IMPACT OF THE DIRECTIVE

Legal impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.42. Specify if there are or not big problems with the translation of the directive in the official language of your Member State and give in case a list of the worst examples of provisions which have been badly translated? (please note that this question has in particular been added to the questionnaire concerning the new Member States)

The assessment is that there are no problems with the translation of the directive into Slovenian. However, there is one remark that needs to be mentioned concerning the translation of all sentences containing "shall" that imply the mandatory nature of the directive provision (e.g. "the Member States shall inform…"). Namely, instead of translating these sentences in a way which would imply their mandatory nature in the Slovenian language as well (e.g. by using the translation of a word "have to" which in Slovenian implies an obligation), they were translated in the same way as any other sentence in present tense would be (e.g. "the Member States inform…"). Such translation might be technically correct and is usually applied in regard to international conventions, but it does not reflect the obligation to the same extent as the word "have to" would.

Q.43. Where there precise legal rules on reception conditions for asylum seekers before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the directive (if yes, specify what the nature of those rules was (legislation, regulation, administrative instructions,…)?

Precise legal rules on the reception conditions for asylum seekers existed even before the directive was transposed. The law regulating the reception conditions was Asylum Act – the same law which was amended as a consequence of the transposition. In addition, the reception conditions were regulated by administrative regulations (Regulations on Reception Conditions, Internal regulations) which will also be changed shortly with an aim of synchronization with the Asylum Act.

Q.44. Did the legal rules applicable to reception conditions become more clear, precise, coherent or detailed with the adoption of the transposition norms (for instance do you now have after the transposition one basic text dealing with reception conditions instead of numerous different texts in the past?

The legal rules applicable to reception conditions became more precise and detailed in certain areas (e.g. the definition of vulnerable groups, the right to work, the right to live in a private apartment, the right to health care), however, it also needs to be mentioned that the level of these rights are more restricted than before the transposition. Otherwise, the number and hierarchy of the legal documents regulating the reception conditions, remains unchanged.

Q.45. Did the transposition of the directive imply important changes in national law or were the changes of minor importance? In case, list the most important changes that have been introduced.

The transposition of the directive implied important negative changes in the national law. The right to work, the right to health care, and the right to live in a private apartment were defined in a clearer but also in a more restrictive way. The right to participate in maintenance work in the Asylum Home was introduced. The right to free legal aid provided by the refugee counsellors in the first instance procedure and the right to pocket money were cancelled.

Generally speaking, the process of transposition has been traumatic for both the asylum seekers and the NGOs. Comments and recommendations submitted by UNHCR, NGOs and even some government bodies with a view to make the legislation more favourable and more humane were not accepted. In the process of transposition, there is a tendency to choose the most extreme positions which are foreseen by the directives. E.g. if the directive stipulates that the asylum seeker should have access to labour market one year after lodging asylum application at the latest, the legislator would choose the period of one year (and not nine months or six months as it would also be a possibility under the directive). Such legislation, which not only forbids the asylum seekers to work, but requires them to obtain work permits, look for work by themselves, takes away the minimum pocket money and free legal counselling in the first instance procedure, drives people underground and enhances the possibility of social exclusion.

Political impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.46. Explain briefly if there has been an important debate about the transposition of the directive (in particular in the Parliament, but possibly also in the government, between political parties, including in medias, etc; underline in case the main points which have been discussed or have created difficulties)

The amendment of the Asylum Act of the Republic of Slovenia due to the transposition of two directives (2003/9/EC and 2005/85/EC) was accompanied by a heated debate throughout the legislative process (in the government, between the Ministry of Interior and the NGOs, in the parliament between coalition and opposition political parties, and consequently in the media). The main characteristic of the debate was that on one hand the government and the coalition political parties were defending the changes as legitimate since they were transposing the directive in accordance with the minimal standards, while on the other hand the opposition political parties and the NGOs were advocating for retaining the standards that existed before and to introduce more favourable provisions than required by the directive. Specifically, the focus was on whether or not the right to free legal assistance provided by the refugee counsellors in the first instance should be kept, whether or not the access to labour market should be restricted, what should be the level of health care, and whether or not the asylum seekers should be free to choose their residence. Also the introduction of the Police pre-procedure was a heated topic, as it would channel asylum seekers away from the asylum procedure into the alien policing procedure with the consequent result of them not having the same level of reception conditions as asylum seekers admitted into the procedure as such.

At the time of writing of this report (May 2007) the Proposal of the Act on International Protection has been debated over by the Government, UNHCR and NGOs. The draft of the Proposal has been made public[674], but has not yet been submitted to the Parliament for adoption.

Q.47. Did the transposition of the directive contribute to make the internal rules stricter or more generous? In particular, did your Member State use the occasion of the transposition to abolish more favourable provisions of national law? Does your Member State still have rules more favourable than the provisions of the directive (if yes, try to give the more important examples).

[674] http://www.mnz.gov.si/fileadmin/mnz.gov.si/pageuploads/SOJ/2007/word/ZMZ___obrazlozitve_174.doc

In certain fields where the previous regulation was more favourable for the asylum seekers, Slovenia used the occasion of the transposition to abolish more favourable provisions (e.g. the right to pocket money was cancelled; previously the asylum seekers also had the right to free legal assistance provided by the refugee counsellors in all three instances of asylum procedure while after the transposition they only kept this right in appeal procedures; the right to work is more restricted than before the transposition, the right to move to a private address is more restricted; the right to health care is restricted to emergency health care and essential treatment which is less than before when they had the right to basic medical treatment). It can also be noted that Slovenia did not use the occasion of transposition to introduce all possibilities for restrictions which are available in the directive (e.g. there are no provisions in the Slovenian legislation for withdrawing the reception conditions if the applicant concealed he or she had sufficient means to cover the material reception conditions as foreseen with article 16, § 1(b) of the directive).

11. ANY OTHER INTERESTING ELEMENT

Q.48. What are in your view the weaknesses and strengths of the system of reception conditions in your Member State?

The weaknesses of the system of reception conditions in Slovenia are:

- Limited capacity of the Asylum Home: with the new premises of the Asylum Home which was built in 2004, the capacity of the Asylum Home significantly increased. However, on a few occasions since 2004 the capacities of the Asylum Home were exceeded. The management of the Asylum Home addressed the situation by transforming other premises which are normally not intended for accommodating the applicants (e.g. the multi-purpose room) to the provisional bedrooms with foam beds. Since these premises were not intended for such purposes the hygienic conditions soon became unacceptable and therefore, other durable solutions for such situations should be identified for the future.
- Incomplete implementation of sanctions foreseen with the Internal Regulations of the Asylum Home: Although there are sanctions foreseen with the Internal Regulations, their implementation is not consistent. The appeal procedure for withdrawing the reception conditions is not appropriate as well and no written decisions on withdrawal are issued.
- The lack of possibilities for the asylum seekers to participate in the management of the Asylum Home: asylum seekers are not allowed to participate in the management of the Asylum Home. The management, however, takes their suggestions into consideration whenever possible.
- Weak continuous training possibilities for the Asylum Home staff.
- No access to secondary schooling for minors between the ages of 15 and 18: Although the directive requires the Member States to provide education for all minors, those minors between the age of 15 and 18, who are no longer entitled to attend elementary school, do not have the access to secondary schooling.
- Elementary schooling is cut when the decision upon the asylum application is final and not when it is executed: A child whose application has been rejected and who has not yet been expelled and therefore has no status, does not have the right to attend elementary school.
- Limited access of NGOs to asylum seekers accommodated in the Deportation Centre in Postojna.

The strengths of the system of reception conditions in Slovenia are:

- Coordination meetings between NGOs and the authorities providing for an opportunity to address issues that need attention.
- Relatively new accommodation facilities.
- Anti-trafficking project carried out by association Ključ.

Q.49. Mention any good practice in your Member State which could be promoted in other Member States

It is important to mention Association Ključ, an NGO carrying out a program for the prevention of trafficking of human beings and sexual harassment (the PATS project). Their work consists of informing all single women and unaccompanied minors with an aim for the victims to recognize themselves as victims of trafficking, to trust them about their problems and seek assistance and protection. In such case the association possesses a special safe house where a person can obtain refuge.

Q.50. Please add here any other interesting element about reception conditions in your Member State which you did not had the occasion to mention in your previous answer.

May 2007

QUESTIONNAIRE FOR THE NATIONAL REPORT ON THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE DIRECTIVE : RECEPTION CONDITIONS OF 27 JANUARY 2003

IN: SPAIN

By
Ph.D. Irene Claro
Lecturer on International Public Law University Pontificia Comillas iclaro@der.upcomillas.es

1. NORMS OF TRANSPOSITION

Q.1. Identify the main norm of transposition (indicate the title, date, number, date of entry into force and references of publication into the official journal) and indicate its legal nature (legislative, regulatory, administrative); indicate in your answer if this norm was only devoted to the directive or if it has been included in a more general text and indicate in that case by quoting precisely the numbers of the provisions adopted to transpose the directive.

On 7 January 2005, a new Aliens Regulation was published in the official gazette. [Royal Decree 2393/2004 of 30 December, which is an enlargement of the Organic Law No. 4/2000 of 11 January, on Rights and Freedoms of Foreigners in Spain and their Social Integration (which was amended by Organic Law No. 14/2003 of 20 November, and by he Organic Law 11/2003 of 20 September 2003)]. This Royal Decree entered into force the 7th February 2005.

Along with it, several provisions of the 1995 Asylum Regulation [Royal Decree 203/1995 of 10 February] were amended. One of the reported intentions of the Government when drafting the amendments to the Asylum Regulation, was to transpose the Reception Conditions Directive, which was mainly done through the modification of article 15 of the Asylum Regulation, but also through an Additional Disposition, the number seventeen, to the Royal Decree by which the Aliens Regulation and amendments to the Asylum Regulation, were approved.

In addition to these articles, articles 163, 164 and 165 of the 2004 Aliens Regulation deals with the establishment of Reception Centres for Refugees as a part of the public Migration Centres network[675].

[675] The translation of the Articles into English in this report has been made by UNHCR.

Q.2. List by order of importance by using numbers (1, 2, 3) the others norms of transposition if there are more than one (indicate for each norm the title, date, number and references of publication into the official journal; include in your answer the administrative measures taken to ensure implementation of the directive and of the transposition norms like regulations, administrative circulars, special instructions,…)

- Approved before the Reception Conditions Directive and still in force:

1. Ministerial Order of 13 January 1989 (Social Affairs Ministry), regulating the Reception Centres for Refugees (CAR).
2. Resolution 6 July 1998, General Department (Dirección General) of the IMSERSO (Institute of Migrations and Social Services depending on the Labour and Social Affairs Ministry), to develop the Ministerial Order of 13 January 1989.
3. Ministerial Order of 18 September 2001 (Labour and Social Affairs Ministry), by which the economic quantities for the beneficiaries of the Reception Centres are established.

- Approved after the Reception Conditions Directive:

4. Resolution 11 February 2005, General Department for Integration of the Immigrants (Dirección General de Integración de los Inmigrantes) (depending on the Labour and Social Affairs Ministry), by which the maximum quantities regarding the economic helps for the beneficiaries of the Reception Centres for Refugees are updated.

Q.3. Explain which level of government is competent to adopt the legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers (specify in particular in case of a federal or regional State, if it is the federal/central power or the components; in case, specify below when it is impossible for you to answer a question because it is about the competence of the components and it is impossible for you to gather reliable information about all of them)

The central Government is competent to adopt legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers. The Reception Centres for Refugees were created by a Ministerial Order.

As a part of the public Migration Centres network, the Reception Centres for Refugees are depending on the Labour and Social Affairs Ministry, specifically on the General Department for Integration of the Immigrants (Dirección General de Integración de los Inmigrantes) (see articles 163, 164 and 165 of the 2004 Aliens Regulation).

Q.4. Explain the legal technical choices done to transpose the directive (comment on the nature and level of the norms used to do the transposition: legislative, regulatory, administrative like instructions, etc). Add any other element about the technique of transposition of the directive which is interesting for the implementation of Community law.

To transpose the Reception Conditions Directive the Government amended the 1995 Asylum Regulation through the 2004 Aliens Regulation.

Besides the previous internal and administrative norms, like the Ministerial Orders or the Instructions, are still in force.

Q.5. Mention if there is a general tendency to just copy the provisions of the directive into national legislation without redrafting or adaptation them to national circumstances? If yes, give some of the worst examples and explain if there is a risk that those provisions remain unapplied or will create difficulties of implementation in the future.

There is not a general tendency to just copy the provisions of this directive into national legislation.

Q.6. Have all the texts necessary to ensure the effective implementation of the new rules of transposition been adopted, prepared or at least foreseen in the future (for example a regulation completing a new law and the necessary instructions telling the administration how to apply the new rules)?

From the Governmental point of view, the transposition of the Reception Conditions Directive has been finished with the amendment of the Asylum Regulation and the internal regulations of the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs.

The directive has been transposed in general with the amendment of the Asylum Regulation and this is a correct way to transpose. The problem is related to the amendment of the internal regulations of the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs. The internal regulations of the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs have been used also to transpose the directive.

In this regard we are waiting for the new Asylum Law, although probably the future Asylum Law will introduce no change or development of the reception conditions regime.

At this moment the first draft of a new Asylum Law is being discussed at the Governmental level. Unfortunately the first draft is not yet available and we have had no access to the project of transposition rules.

2. BIBLIOGRAPHY

Q.7. Has an in-depth preparatory study been made public about the changes at the occasion of the transposition? If yes, thanks for trying to provide us a copy (please contact to answer this question adequately the body and person who was responsible for the preparation of the transposition of the directive in the public administration).

No in-depth preparatory study has been made public.

Q.8. Quote any recent scientific book or article published about the directive, the transposition rules or the question of reception conditions for asylum seekers in general (answer even if this literature is only available in your language and provide the complete title in your language (without translation) with all references; indicate author, title, in case name of periodical, year and place of publication).

"Guía sobre el derecho de asilo" Rafael K. Polo y Virginia Carmona (coords.), Ministerio de Trabajo y Asuntos Sociales, 2005.

"Final Report of the European Open Forum on Reception and Health Care of Asylum Seekers" Vienna, 26-28 January 2006 (www.receptionandhealth.net) (information provided by Spanish Red Cross).

About legal advice: "Informe sobre asistencia jurídica a los extranjeros en España", Defensor del Pueblo (Spanish Ombdusman), Madrid, September 2005.

About minors: "Nuevos retos que plantean los menores extranjeros al Derecho" IV Jornadas sobre Derecho de los Menores, Isable E. Lázaro e Irene Culebras (Coord.), Universidad Pontificia Comillas y Fundación SEUR, 2006.

Q.9. Quote any interesting decision of jurisprudence based on the implementation of the new rules of transposition of the directive (indicate references of publication if any)?

At this moment there is no decision of jurisprudence.

3. GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

The purpose of the following two questions is to help the reader to understand easily and quickly the system of reception conditions in your Member State and also to avoid that you have to repeat general elements in other parts of the questionnaire. Please do not write more than one or maximum two pages and do not include large historical developments.

Q.10. Describe in general the system of reception conditions in your Member State (in particular which are the main actors in charge of reception conditions?)

The Department for the Integration of Immigrants is the organism responsible for the design and management of programmes for attending to the applicants for asylum (Royal Decree 1600/2004, of July 2. Official State Gazette (BOE) of July 3, 2004).

The programme for temporary hosting is carried out at the Centres for Hosting Refugees, at the places agreed to with the Centres for Temporary Stays and custody houses managed by the NGOs (ACCEM, CEAR and Red Cross).

In order to enter a Centre, the following are taken into consideration: the family circumstances, the date of arrival in Spain, the country the person has come from, the grounds for the application for asylum, the financial situation, the projects for the stay in Spain and the psychological aspects.

The main actors in charge of reception conditions are the following Reception Centres:

- Public Reception Centres for Refugees (Centros de Acogida de Refugiados or CAR) (Alcobendas, Madrid, Mislata –Valencia- and Sevilla are directly dependent on the Public Administration);
- Reception Centres for Refugees (Centros de Acogida de Refugiados or CAR) under the supervision of NGOs (for example, Spanish Red Cross is running 7 reception centres, preferably for asylum seekers but to be also used for immigrants in case there are vacancies).
- Temporary Reception Centres (Centros de Estancia Temporal or CETI) in Ceuta and Melilla.
- Temporary Reception Centres (Centros de Acogida Temporal or CAT), under the supervision of the Spanish Commission for Refugee Assistance (CEAR) (6 around Spain).
- Because of lack of vacancies, hotels or apartments.
- When asylum seekers have family members living in Spain they can choose not to stay at the reception centre but to be hosted by their families. They can use the reception centres services or the ones placed at the Spanish Red Cross local branches. They can receive financial support for 6 months, max. 1 year –the same period as if they were at a reception centre[676].

[676] Information provided by the Spanish Red Cross at www.receptionandhealth.net

Q.11. Q11. A. Explain if you have different types and levels of reception conditions following the different stages of the asylum procedure (this implies that you have to give briefly the necessary explanations about the asylum procedure). Make if relevant for reception conditions a distinction between the following procedural stages: determination of the responsible Member State on the basis of the Dublin II regulation, special procedures at the border (including transit zones in airports), accelerated procedures, admissibility procedures, eligibility procedures and the different possibilities of appeals (suspensive or not) against a refusal of the asylum request. Indicate what the main differences of reception conditions are between the different stages (if necessary by detailing between the different elements of reception conditions, in particular housing) and explain what the evolution of reception conditions is following the different stages of the procedure.

Under Spanish legislation, an asylum seeker can apply for asylum at the border or within the territory. In both cases the asylum procedure has two stages. The first one, after the asylum claim is lodged, implies the admission or inadmission to the normal refugee status determination procedure. The second one, after the admission, implies the examination of the refugee status or, when it has been applied, also the humanitarian status (leave to remain for humanitarian reasons).

When asylum seekers lodged their claim at the border, they are hold, not "detained", while the asylum office decides on the admissibility or inadmissibility of the asylum claim.

If the decision, after 4 days, is non-acceptance for admission the asylum seeker can ask for a re-examination on his/her request within the next 24 hours. Within a period of 2 days the re-examination must be decided upon. If the decision is again negative, the applicant has to leave the border post and will be returned to their country of origin or to a third country (i.e. under readmission agreements, flight destination, visas on their passport…).

The maximum length of time for the admissibility procedure at the border is 7 days, from the moment in which the asylum application is lodged. In case of a judicial recourse, this may be extended for one or two additional days.

If UNHCR considers, against the criterion of the administration, that the application should be admitted to the regular Refugee Status determination procedure, the asylum seeker will be allowed to enter Spanish territory to lodge a judicial recourse against the Administration's decision. Should the inadmissibility be agreed by UNHCR, that applicant can still lodge the recourse and the judge will decide on its suspensive effect[677].

Madrid airport is the point in the country where most asylum claims are submitted. The asylum seekers allowed to enter the country are referred to an emergency reception point at Madrid local branch where they are counselled.

[677] Information provided by UNHCR.

They stay in a hostel for a short period and when clinical analysis results are ready they are referred to a reception centre –like those who apply for asylum within the territory.

When applicants apply for asylum within the territory, the Spanish Red Cross local branches are responsible for all the clinical analyses and the referral to a reception centre is made by the headquarters[678].

The accomodation of an asylum seeker in a Reception Centre is not mandatory. According Article 4 of the Ministerial Order of 13 January 1989 regulating the Reception Centres for Refugees "in order to be accepted in these Centres it will be required, besides the availability of places, to fulfill the following requisites:

a) Be a foreigner.

b) Have presented an asylum request or for the recognition of the refugee status in Spain, and that the administrative file has not been decided upon.

c) Lack of economic means for the needs of his/her needs and of his/her family. (...)".

According to Article 13 of the Resolution 6 July 1998, approved to develop the Ministerial Order of 13 January 1989, special cases will have priority (for example, couples with children under 18, persons or families with a serious risk for political reasons in their country of origin, persons with psychosocial problems, etc.).

It should be noted that asylum seekers are allowed to remain in the Reception Centers for Refugees for a period of six months, which may be renewed (six months more) because of particular social circumstances or vulnerability.

The Temporary Reception Centres in Ceuta and Melilla do not normally have the capacity to lodge all asylum seekers, some of which have to wait until places are free, in order to access the Centers. The situation of asylum seekers who are outside the Temporary Reception Centres because of lack of vacancies and the refusal of the Government to move them to the peninsula (Ceuta and Melilla are not Schengen territory), has been precarious.Asylum seekers who lodge their applications in Ceuta and Melilla, remain in the respective Temporary Reception Centers (open Centers) until the admissibility of their claim is decided upon. If admitted to the procedure, they are then transferred to the Mainland where they may, according to the general requisites, be lodged in the Reception Centers for refugees[679].

When asylum seekers overcome the admissibility phase in Ceuta and Melilla (maximum 2 months) they are relocated to a Reception Centre in the mainland[680].

[678] Information provided by the Spanish Red Cross at www.receptionandhealth.net.
[679] Information provided by UNHCR.
[680] Information provided by the Spanish Red Cross at www.receptionandhealth.net

Q 11. B. Indicate precisely for which stage(s) of the asylum procedure the answers on reception conditions you give below are valid.

The answers covered both stages according to the Asylum Regulation (Article 15 introduced to transpose the Directive to the Spanish legislation). The first one, after the asylum claim is lodged until the admission or inadmission to the normal refugee status determination procedure. The second one, after the admission to the normal refugee status determination procedure and till the final administrative resolution granting or denying refugee status or, when it has been applied, also the humanitarian status (leave to remain for humanitarian reasons).

However the practice is different. Asylum seekers are not beneficiaries of the reception conditions during the first stage. They are beneficiaries of the reception conditions only when their applications are admitted to the normal Refugee Status Determination procedure.

In case of application of Dublin II Regulation, they are not beneficiaries of the reception conditions.

4. GENERAL RULES ON RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.12.

Q 12. A. Are material reception conditions provided in kind, in money or in vouchers or in a combination of these elements (see article 13, §5 which is an optional provision)? Distinguish between the different elements (housing, food, clothes, health, transportation, pocket money,…). If reception conditions are provided in money (in general or in some cases, for instance when no places are anymore available in accommodation centres), indicate the precise amount given to the asylum seekers. Indicate in your answer what is provided in general and if there are exceptional cases. Specify in your answer if reception conditions are different from the general system of social aid for nationals or aliens and if yes, if and when (which stage of the asylum procedure) can asylum seekers have access to the general system of social aid?

Only after studying the cases on an individual basis and when there are special and extraordinary circumstances (usually because of psychiatric problems), it is possible to cover part of the material conditions (including some budget money) outside the reception centre.

When there is no place available in any reception centre or it is considered no advisable to access, it is possible to cover part of the material conditions (including some budget money) outside the reception centre, (for example, in hotels or apartments).

It is important to take into account that how the total quantities are distributed to the asylum seekers depends on the organisation (Public Administration or NGO) that manage the centre. For example, one NGO has reported that its policy is to give them a total amount of money at the beginning of the month/week as a salary for everything and they will have to learn how to manage their savings. Public reception centres reported that they have around 300 euros per asylum seeker, but this money is not given immediately to each one.

The total amount in and out the centre should cover certain allowances established by law [See Resolution 11 February 2005, General Department for Integration of the Immigrants, by which the maximum quantities regarding the economic helps for the beneficiaries of the Reception Centres for Refugees are updated]:

The quantities are:

Personal expenses and transport
Asylum seeker: 46 euros/month
Couple: 78 euros/month
Minors under 18: 17/ euros/ month/ person
Child over 18 and other relatives: 30 euros/month/person

Transport: depends on the cost of a monthly ticket

Wardrobe
Clothes and shoes: 62/season/person
Expenses for birth of a child: 162 euros/child

Training and social and cultural skills
Language courses: depending on the specific costs/person
Nursery: depending on the specific costs for every child
Cultural activities: depending on the specific costs
Didactic school Material: 130 euros course/child

Expenses for their support outside the centre
One person: the minimum official wage, around 560 euros/month
Family: Twice the minimum official wage, around 560 euros/month
Family numerous: Twice and a half the minimum official wage, around 560 euros/month

Q 12. B. Can the reception conditions in kind, money or vouchers be considered as sufficient "to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence" as requested by article 13, §2 of the directive (which is a mandatory provision but leaves a certain space to Member States)? In order to help to assess the respect of this rule when reception conditions are provided in money, include if necessary in your answer points of comparison with the minimum amount of social aid guaranteed for nationals in your Member State.

The reception conditions in kind, money or vouchers can be considered sufficient, taking into account that all services are basically covered within the reception centres. In addition certain centres provide psychological assistance and if the centre does not provide the service the person will be sent to whoever may provide him with the proper treatment for free.

Asylum seekers who need it, get their material needs covered through the administration and specialized NGOs that receive funding from the government. Referrals are made by asylum State organs.

Notwithstanding the situation of asylum seekers who are outside the Reception Centres for Refugees because of lack of vacancies is precarious[681].

Spanish legal basis regarding Article 13(2) of the Reception Conditions Directive is Article 15 of the Asylum Regulation (as amended by the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December):

"1. Asylum seekers, provided that that they do not have economic means, shall be able to benefit from the social, educational and health-related services rendered by the competent agencies of the Public Administration, within the means and budget availabilities of these agencies, to ensure a standard of living adequate and capable of ensuring their subsistence. The benefits given could be modulated when the asylum application is pending of admission to the normal Refugee Status Determination procedure, guaranteeing in any case the coverage of the basic needs of the asylum seekers. In general, access to education, to health care, to social security and to social services will be regulated, respectively, according to the dispositions in articles 9, 12 and 14 of the Organic Law 4/2000, of 11 January, on the Rights and Freedoms of foreigners in Spain and their social integration (in the wording given by the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December) (…)

3. In providing the services which are referred to in paragraph 1 of this article, will be taken into consideration the specific situation of persons with a specific vulnerability, such as minors, unaccompanied minors, senior citizens, pregnant women, one-parent families with minor children, and persons who have been subject to torture, rape, or other serious form of psychological, physical o sexual violence, according with the directives that appear in the international recommendations used in harmonizing the treatment of these social groups of refugees or displaced individuals (in the wording given by the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December).

5. PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

Q.13. Q 13. A. Does the national legislation specifically provide that a request for international protection is presumed to be under the Geneva Convention unless explicitly requested otherwise? (see article 2, b which is a mandatory provision)

The national legislation establishes that an application for asylum is an application for the status of refugee under the Geneva Convention (article 2 Asylum Law 1994), unless explicitly required another status.

At this moment the draft of a new Asylum Law is under discussion. This new Law is expected to transpose the Qualification Directive. It could introduce a change in this question. Unfortunately we have had still no access to the draft.

Q. 13. B. Explain if the scope of application of reception conditions is extended to other asylum seekers than refugees in the sense of the Geneva Convention, in particular to persons asking for subsidiary protection or to other forms of protection like humanitarian statuses (see article 3, § 4 which is an optional provision)? If not, explain briefly which the differences between these special regimes and the directive are.

[681] Information provided by NGOs.

There are no different reception conditions. Asylum seekers and beneficiaries of subsidiary protection are covered by the legislation on Reception conditions.

Q. 13. C. Are there specific provisions in national law for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation (see article 3, §2 which is an optional provision)?

There are not specific provisions in national law for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation. Article 4.1 of the Ministerial Order of 13 January 1989 establishes that the beneficiary of the Reception Centres for Refugees must be a foreigner that has presented an asylum request in Spain (that means, at the border or within the territory).

Each person can apply for asylum at the Spanish embassy if he/she is in a third country, different from his/her country of origin. In case of risk for the applicant article 16 of 1995 Asylum Regulation provides that the Interministerial Commission on Asylum and Refuge (Comisión Interministerial de Asilo y Refugio or CIAR), based on a proposal of the Asylum and Refugee Office (Oficina de Asilo y Refugio or OAR), can decide to move him/her to the territory of Spain.

Q.14. Are reception conditions available as from the moment one asylum application is introduced? How is article 13, §1 which is mandatory legally understood? Do asylum seekers have to satisfy any other condition in order to get reception conditions?

The article 13(1) of the Reception conditions Directive makes clear that the reception conditions are available to applicants when they make their application for asylum. Nevertheless, the recently modified article 15(1) of the 1995 Asylum Regulation establishes the possibility to modulate the social, educational and health-related services, when the asylum application is pending admission to the normal Refugee Status Determination Procedure. It has to be noted that prior to the December 2004 amendment of this article, only asylum seekers whose claims had been admitted to the procedure had access to benefits. While the new formulation opens the benefits to all asylum seekers, keeps the possibility of 'modulating' them pending admission of the applicant. The contradiction goes further: article 13(2) establishes that the material reception conditions should be capable of ensuring the subsistence of applicants. It is difficult then to understand the standard set in article 15(1) of the Asylum Regulation when it says that the 'modulation' of benefits for asylum seekers pending the admission of their application to the normal Refugee Status Determination procedure, in any case should cover their basic needs. The only possible explanation is that the 'modulation' could operate only in cases where the benefits for applicants admitted to the normal Refugee Status Determination procedure, are above the standard of ensuring their subsistence[682].

Article 15 of the Asylum Regulation (as amended by the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December) provides that:

"1. Asylum seekers, provided that that they do not have economic means, shall be able to benefit from the social, educational and health-related services rendered by the competent agencies of the Public Administration, within the means and budget availabilities of these agencies, to ensure a standard of living adequate and capable of ensuring their subsistence. The benefits given could be modulated when the asylum application is pending of admission to the normal Refugee Status determination procedure, guaranteeing in any case the coverage of the basic needs of the asylum seekers. (…)" (underlined added).

However, as mentioned above, asylum seekers don't have access in the practice to reception conditions while they are not admitted to the normal refugee status determination procedure.

Q.15. Explain when reception conditions end, for instance after refusal of the asylum request (include in your answer the link with the right of appeal against a decision of refusal of the status, in particular the question of its suspensive effect)

Q.16 Are there special rules or practices regarding reception conditions in case of successive applications for asylum introduced by the same person?

The mere repetition of an application for asylum already rejected in Spain is a reason not to admit the application to proceedings (article 5(6)(c) of the Law on Asylum of 1984 reformed in 1994). The only exception occurs when "new circumstances arise in the country of origin which may entail a substantial change to the basis of the application".

Q.17. Information of asylum seekers about their rights and obligations in terms of reception conditions, in particular about established benefits (see article 5 which is too large extend a mandatory provision; do not confuse this question with the information to be provided to asylum seekers about the asylum procedure):

Q. 17. A. Are asylum seekers informed, and if yes about what precisely?

[682] Information provided by UNHCR.

Article 5 Asylum Regulation of 1995:.

"2. Those asylum-seekers who are inside Spanish national territory will receive information on the need to provide evidence to support their request from the governmental agency that they have addressed. This agency must also provide information on the rights to which asylum-seekers are entitled under Law 5/1984 regulating refugee status and the right to asylum. In particular, they are to be informed of the right to have an interpreter and legal counsel. Likewise, the authority to which they have submitted their request will provide the asylum-seeker with medical attention, when appropriate, and will provide guidance regarding the currently-existing social services intended to cover the asylum-seeker's immediate human needs" (emphasis added).

Asylum seekers are informed as soon as they allocated to a Reception Centre and the latest as soon as they arrive into the Centre.

At the border point (and as mentioned before, the most asylum claims are submitted in Madrid airport), asylum seekers are informed about the asylum procedure, social workers canalise the demands to the police (change of lawer, medical demands, ….), they are informed about their rights and obligations during their stay at the transit zone.

Asylum seekers allowed to enter the country are referred to an emergency reception point at Madrid local branch where they are counselled. They stay in a hostel for a short period and when clinical analysis results are ready they are referred to a reception centre –like those who apply for asylum within the territory. During this period they are informed about the Spanish health care and welfare system, the asylum procedure, their rights and duties, the necessity to be registered with the local population register ("padrón") in order to be entitled to benefit from social benefits and the public health care system; if necessary, they can receive psychological support, etc.[683]

Q. 17. B. Is the information provided in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

The information is generally provided in writing in different languages as soon as they get into the reception centre. The information is provided orally when the information sheet is not available in a language understood by an asylum seeker.

Q.17. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify the list of languages in which it is available

Yes, there is an information sheet in different languages (French, English, Russian, Armenian, Rumanian, Georgian, Arabic and Spanish). If the asylum seeker has another language, he/she will be informed orally by an interpreter[684] .

At the public Centres for Refugees the languages are French, English, Spanish, Arabic and Russian.

[683] Information provided by the Spanish Red Cross, at www.receptionandhealth.net

[684] Information provided by NGOs.

Q. 17. D. Is the deadline of maximum 15 days respected?

The deadline of maximum 15 days is respected when the asylum seeker lodge its application at the Asylum and Refugee Office (OAR) or at Barajas airport.

In and outside Madrid the written information is provided at the time of lodging the asylum application[685].

At the 4 public Centres for Refugees the maximum is 10 days.

Q.18. Information of asylum seekers about the existence of organisations or groups promoting their interest and defending their rights (see article 5 which is to a large extend a mandatory provision):

Q. 18. A. Is there a list of organisations dressed by the authorities and if yes is it comprehensive? Is this in particular the case about the possibilities to get legal assistance and health care?

In order to get legal advice the Asylum and Refugee Office (OAR) provides an information brochure where four NGOs (Spanish Red Cross, CEAR-Spanish Commission for Refugee Assistance, Rescate and ACCEM-Association of Spanish Catholic Commission for Migrations), the UNHCR Madrid Office and the details of the General Department of Immigrant Integration are mentioned.

Q. 18. B. Is the information provided to the asylum seekers, and if yes, in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

As mentioned before there is an information sheet in different languages (French, English, Russian, Armenian, Rumanian, Georgian, Arabic and Spanish). If the asylum seeker has another language, he/she will be informed orally by an interpreter.

Q. 18. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify if possible the list of languages in which it is available.

As mentioned before, they are informed by writing in through an information sheet in different languages (French, English, Russian, Armenian, Rumanian, Georgian, Arabic and Spanish). If the asylum seeker has another language, he/she will be informed orally by an interpreter (information provided by NGOs).

Q. 18. D. How many organisations are active in that field in your Member State?

Spanish Red Cross, CEAR –Spanish Commission for Refugee Assistance, Rescate Internacional and ACCEM –Association of Spanish Catholic Commission for Migrations, and the UNHCR Madrid Office.

[685] Information provided by UNHCR.

Q.19. Documentation of asylum seekers (see article 6):

Q.19. A. What kind of document is delivered to the asylum seeker? Explain the legal value of this document (just a certification of the status as asylum seeker or also prove of identity?) (see §1 of article 6 which is a mandatory provision)

Article 13 of Asylum Regulation provides:

"1. The asylum-seeker will be provided with a duly stamped receipt of his request for asylum. He must attach this receipt to his passport, thereby enabling him to remain in Spain for a term no longer than sixty days. He must notify the competent authority whenever he changes his place of residence.

2. Once the request for asylum has been admitted to the regular refugee status determination procedure, authorization to remain in the country will be accredited through the issuance of a document to the asylum-seeker, thereby enabling him to remain inside Spanish territory while his file is being processed."

The practice is that the receipt and the document are given at the time of formalizing the asylum application and of the notification of admission to the procedure, respectively.

Q.19. B. Are there situations or specific cases in which another equivalent document or even no document is issued? (in particular is there an exception for "procedures to decide on the right of the applicant legally to enter the territory" as made possible by §2 of article 6)?

Q.19. C. For how long is this document in principle valid and is it necessary to renew it after a certain period?

Article 13 of Asylum Regulation establishes that:

"1. The asylum-seeker will be provided with a duly stamped receipt of his request for asylum. He must attach this receipt to his passport, thereby enabling him to remain in Spain for a term no longer than sixty days. He must notify the competent authority whenever he changes his place of residence.

2. Once the request for asylum has been admitted to the regular refugee status determination procedure, authorization to remain in the country will be accredited through the issuance of a document to the asylum-seeker, thereby enabling him to remain inside Spanish territory while his file is being processed." (underlined added).

Q.19. D. What is the deadline for the delivery of that document? Is the mandatory deadline of 3 days set by article 6, §1 respected[686]?

The mandatory deadline of 3 days is respected in the practice. Asylum seekers usually receive the document when they apply for asylum or when they receive the notification of admission to the normal refugee status procedure.

Q.19. E. Is it possible for an asylum seeker to get a travel document for serious humanitarian reasons (see §5 of article 6 which is an optional provision)?

Q.19. F. Is there a central system of registration of asylum seekers and is it or not separate from the registration of aliens? If yes, describe it briefly (content) and indicate in particular if it is an electronic database.

Q.20. Residence of asylum seekers :

Q.20. A. Is in principle an asylum seeker free to move on the entire territory of your Member State or only to a limited part of it and in case, which part? (see article 7, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

The asylum seekers who lodged their applications within the country or at borders and have been admitted to the regular Refugee Status Determination procedure, have freedom of movement.

Q.20. B. About the place of residence (see §2 of article 7): explain to which extend the person is free to choose her residence and if this depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance processing of application, attribution of reception conditions,…).

Article 5 of the Asylum Law: Consequences of the request for asylum at the border:

"7. (…). While the request for asylum or for re-examination is being processed, the asylum-seeker must remain at the border point. Adequate facilities will be provided for this purpose. (…)"

Regarding asylum applications within the territory Article 14 of the Asylum Regulation establishes: (Precautionary measures)

"If the asylum-seeker does not possess the official documents required to reside in Spain, the Ministry of Justice and of the Interior may set an obligatory place of residence for the individual concerned until a final decision on his file is handed down. The asylum-seeker must be informed of the decision to set an obligatory place of residence by the Governor of the province in which he is located. Likewise, for reasons of public safety, the Minister of the Interior has the authority to adopt any of the measures stipulated in article 6 of Constitutional Law 7/1985 (July 1) regarding the Rights and Freedoms of Aliens in Spain." (emphasis added).

It should be noted that this article has never been used[687].

[687] Information provided by UNHCR.

Q.20. C. About the place of reception (meaning where the asylum seeker has to stay to benefit from reception conditions) (see § 4 of article 7): explain which are the general rules about the determination of this place (to which extend are the decisions determining the place taken individually and do they take into account the personal situation of the asylum seeker?) and to which extend the person is free to choose it and if it depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance attribution of reception conditions, processing of the application,…).

Madrid airport is the point in the country where most asylum claims are submitted. The asylum seekers allowed to enter the country are referred to an emergency reception point at Madrid local branch where they are counselled. They stay in a hostel for a short period and when clinical analysis results are ready they are referred to a reception centre –like those who apply for asylum within the territory. When applicants apply for asylum within the territory, the Spanish Red Cross local branches are responsible for all the clinical analyses and the referral to a reception centre is made by the headquarters. When asylum seekers have family members living in Spain they can choose not to stay at the reception centre but to be hosted by their families. The can use the reception centres services or the ones placed at the Spanish Red Cross local branches. They can receive financial support for 6 months, max. 1 year –the same period as if they were at a reception centre[688].

The accomodation of an asylum seeker in a Reception Centre is not mandatory.

According Article 4 of the Ministerial Order of 13 January 1989 regulating the Reception Centres for Refugees "in order to be accepted in these Centres it will be required, besides the availability of places, to fulfil the following requisites:

a) Be a foreigner.

b) Have presented an asylum request or for the recognition of the refugee status in Spain, and that the administrative file has not been decided upon.

c) Lack of economic means for the needs of his/her needs and of his/her family. (…)".

An asylum seeker will be informed and adviced about the Reception Centres for Refugees by the Unit of Social Work placed at the OAR (Asylum and Refugee Office). Afterwards he/she lodge his/her application to be admitted in a Reception Centre. After an interview and taking into account the situation of the applicant, the Reception Centre makes a proposal to the General Department for Integration of the Immigrants, which is the responsible of the final decision of admission (Article 21 of the Resolution 6 July 1998).

[688] Information provided by the Spanish Red Cross at www.receptionandhealth.net.

According to Article 13 of the Resolution 6 July 1998 special cases will have priority (for example, couples with children under 18, persons or families with a serious risk for political reasons in their country of origin, persons with psychosocial problems, etc.).

Q.20. D. If all asylum seekers are not placed in accommodation centres because of capacity limits, explain how the persons are distributed between accommodation centres and other accommodation facilities (which authority takes the decisions, on the basis of which elements, can that decision be appealed by the asylum seeker,…)

Q.20. E. How can an asylum seeker ask to leave temporarily the place of residence or of reception or an assigned area? How is the individual AND impartial character of the decision ensured? (see §5 of article 7 which is a mandatory provision)

The accomodation of an asylum seeker in a reception centre is not mandatory.

An asylum seeker has the duty only to inform the competent authority of any changes of address as soon as possible (article 4(6) Asylum Law and article 9(2) and 13(4)of Asylum Regulation).

Q.21. Q.21. A. Do rules on reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions exist in internal legislation and if yes in which cases (mention in particular if there are cases not foreseen by article 16, § 1 and 2 which are optional provisions)? Distinguish in your answer between cases of reduction and withdrawal and explain which conditions can be reduced and if access to emergency health care is always ensured as requested by article 16, §4, last sentence.

There are no dispositions in the Asylum Law or Regulation on the withdrawal of benefits for asylum seekers.

The only reference to this matter refers to the possibility to 'modulate' the benefits for asylum seekers pending their admissibility to the normal Refugee Status Determination. The recently modified article 15(1) of the Asylum Regulation establishes the possibility to modulate the social, educational and health-related services, when the asylum application is pending admission to the normal Refugee Status Determination Procedure[689].

However it must be taken into account that asylum seekers don't have reception conditions before their applications are admitted to the normal refugee status determination procedure (admissibility phase).

Access to emergency health care is always ensured.

[689] Information provided by UNHCR.

Q.21. B. Has article 16, §2 dealing with refusal of reception conditions for unreasonably late applications for asylum been transposed by your Member State (or was this case already applicable before transposition)? Are there cases in practice?

Article 16(2) has not been transposed. The 1995 Asylum Regulation mentions since its approval that the asylum seeker has one month to apply for asylum within the territory (Article 7).

Q.21. C. How is it ensured that decisions of reduction or withdrawal are taken individually, objectively AND in particular impartially (for instance through and independent arbitrator) (see article 16, §4 which is a mandatory provision)?

Q.21. D. Is statement 14/03 adopted by the Council at the same moment as the directive respected (see the document attached to our sending)?

Q.21. E. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements on cases of reduction, withdrawal or refusal which have been taken, and if yes, what has been the outcome?

Q.22.

Q.22. A. Appeal against a negative decision relating to the granting of benefits or based on article 7 (see article 21 which is a mandatory provision): indicate against which decision an appeal can be introduced, describe the system of appeal in general and include in particular in your answer the information given to asylum seekers about possibilities of appealing, deadline for appealing, if the appeal has or not a suspensive effect, if there are different steps (for instance first an administrative appeal and in particular if the guarantee of an appeal before a judicial body in the last instance is respected)?

There are no legal or by-legal provisions concerning appeals on negative decisions on grant of benefits or on reception conditions, except on cases of article 7 paragraph 3 of the Directive (confinement of the asylum seeker in a particular place).The confinement or detention shall be decided by a judge, and hence appeals are possible according to the general procedural laws. The confinement or detention of asylum seekers normally takes place in the context of a trial for the expulsion or devolution of the asylum seeker that has entered or been caught in the process of entering illegally Spain. Normally the judge will decide on the confinement or detention prior to the lodging of the asylum application, which usually is made in the Internment Centre for Foreigners. In these cases, the admissibility procedure, which in Spain can take up to a maximum of two months, is shortened in order to end before the 40 days maximum confinement. If the asylum seeker is admitted to the procedure he/she is let free.[690]

[690] Information provided by UNHCR.

Q.22. B. Explain which are the possibilities for asylum seekers to benefit from legal assistance when they introduce such an appeal (see article 21, §2 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to Member States)?

Articles 8(4) and 19(2) of Asylum Regulation establish the right to legal assistance for asylum seekers.

Article 2(f) of Organic Law 1/1996 of 10 January, and article 22(1) of Aliens Law establish free legal assistance for asylum seekers.

Q.22. C. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

At this moment there are no administrative decisions or judgements.

Q.22. D. Is a mechanism of complain for asylum seekers about quality of receptions conditions in general (even if they are not personally concerned) organised? If yes, before which authority? Is it linked to the system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions (see below question n° 39)?

If asylum seekers would like to put forward a complain they could send a letter addressed to the General Department for Integration of the Immigrants, the body in charge and dependant of the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs.

The Subdirección General de Intervención Social (at the General Department for Integration of the Immigrants depending on the Labour and Social Affairs Ministry) is the office responsible for management of reception conditions. The Asylum and Refugee Office (OAR) is responsible for housing.

The Social Work Unit (Unidad de Trabajo Social) receives the complains. This Unit belongs to the Labour and Social Affairs Ministry (MTAS), although it is placed at the Asylum and Refuge Office (OAR) (which belongs to the Ministry of Interior).

6. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.23. Family unity of asylum seekers: define how a family is defined in relation with article 2, (d) which is a mandatory provision and explain how housing is provided to a family (see articles 8 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to member States and 14, §2, (a) which is a mandatory provision).

Article 5(7) of the 1994 Asylum Law provides for asylum applications lodged at border that:

"7. (…). While the request for asylum or for re-examination is being processed, the asylum-seeker must remain at the border point. Adequate facilities will be provided for this purpose."

Article 4 of Ministerial Order of 13 January 1989 regulating the Reception Centres for Refugees:

"1. In order to be accepted in these Centers it will be required, besides the availability of places, to fulfil the following requisites:

a) Be a foreigner.
b) Have presented an asylum request or for the recognition of the refugee status in Spain, and that the administrative file has not been decided upon.
c) Lack of economic means for the needs of his/her needs and of his/her family. (...)"

Article 4(2) Ministerial Order of 13 January 1989 regulating the Reception Centers for Refugees defines the family members:

- ascendents and descendants;
- and the spouse of the asylum seeker or his or her unmarried partner in a stable relationship, except legal or voluntary separation, divorce, age of majority or family independence.

In these cases the situation of each family member will be separately examined.

Article 13 of Resolution of 1998 gives priority to couples with children under 18.

At the international airports of Madrid, Barcelona and Las Palmas, there are reception facilities for families, and families reside there until their asylum claims are examined. In-country applicants, who lack financial means, have access to the Reception Centers, and there reside in family rooms. For applications in-country where the asylum seeker is kept in detention pending the decision on admissibility, men and women are kept separate in the Centers for aliens. Minors remain with their mothers. [691]

When asylum seekers have family members living in Spain they can choose not to stay at the reception centre but to be hosted by their families. The can use the reception centres services or the ones placed at the Spanish Red Cross local branches. They can receive financial support for 6 months, max. 1 year –the same period as if they were at a reception centre[692].

[691] Information provided by UNHCR.
[692] Information provided by the Spanish Red Cross at www.receptionandhealth.net.

Q.24. Q.24. A. How is housing of asylum seekers organised: describe the system in general and indicate in particular what is the most frequently system used (see article 14, §1 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space for Member States; distinguish between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels places or other premises).

Article 5 of the 1994 Asylum Law establishes for asylum applications lodged at border that:

"7. (…). While the request for asylum or for re-examination is being processed, the asylum-seeker must remain at the border point. Adequate facilities will be provided for this purpose. (…)"

Article 5 of the 1995 Asylum Regulation provides for asylum applications lodged within the territory that:

"2. Those asylum-seekers who are inside Spanish national territory will receive information on the need to provide evidence to support their request from the governmental agency that they have addressed. This agency must also provide information on the rights to which asylum-seekers are entitled under Law 5/1984 regulating refugee status and the right to asylum. In particular, they are to be informed of the right to have an interpreter and legal counsel. Likewise, the authority to which they have submitted their request will provide the asylum-seeker with medical attention, when appropriate, and will provide guidance regarding the currently-existing social services intended to cover the asylum-seeker's immediate human needs" (emphasis added).

All asylum seekers have appropriate accommodation. It should be noted that asylum seekers are allowed to remain in the Reception Centers for Refugees for a period of six months, which may be renewed because of particular social circumstances or vulnerability.

An asylum seeker will be informed and adviced about the Reception Centres for Refugees by the Unit of Social Work placed at the OAR (Asylum and Refugee Office). Afterwards he/she lodge his/her application to be admitted in a Reception Centre. After an interview and taking into account the situation of the applicant, the Reception Centre makes a proposal to the General Department for Integration of the Immigrants, which is the responsible of the final decision of admission (Article 21 of the Resolution 6 July 1998).

Q.24. B. What is the total number of available places for asylum seekers? Distinguish in your answer between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels or other premises.

The total number of places for asylum seekers at the reception centres is at the moment 2079 (1370 at the public centres, and 700 at the centres managed by NGOs).

Q.24. C. Is this number of places for asylum seekers sufficient in general or frequently insufficient?

It has been usually proved to be sufficient but sometimes may became insufficient depending on the changes on the numbers of asylum applications. For example, just after the Reception Directive came into force there were an overbooked situation of the centres during the first months[693] .

Q.24. D. Are there special measures foreseen in urgent cases of a high number of news arrivals of asylum seekers (outside the case of application of the directive on temporary protection)?

There are no special measures foreseen.

Q.25. Accommodation centres (important note: all the following questions are about open and not closed centres where asylum seekers are detained which are covered by another question)

Q.25. A Are there different categories of accommodation centres, for instance depending of the stage of the procedure (admissibility and eligibility)?

There are only differences between public (managed by Public Administration) and private (managedby NGOs) centres.

Q.25. B. Is there a legal time limit for accommodation in a centre after which the asylum seekers have access to private houses or apartments or is this limit linked to a stage of the asylum procedure?

The time limit for accommodation is linked to a stage of the asylum procedure if its duration is lower than 6 months.

The time limit is 6 months unless they do fall into any sanctions and may be extended to 12 months for cases under special needs (article 5 Ministerial Order 1898). This time limit will no longer be extended after the end of the asylum procedure, only if the asylum seekers get a positive resolution (subsidiary protection or refugee status) their stay can be extended up to one more month to give them time to make all the necessary arrangements to start up outside the centre .[694]

Q.25. C. Is there a general regulation about the internal functioning of those centres and the rights and duties of the asylum seekers? If yes, is this general regulation applicable to public and private centres? If not, are the centres supposed to adopt an internal regulation and does a central authority have or not a kind of control about its content?

Under the General Law the regulations regarding the reception centres are established under:

- Aliens Regulation approved in 2004 (Royal Decree 2393/2004 of 30 December):

Chapter II- Migration Centres

[693] Information provided by NGOs.
[694] Information provided by NGOs.

Article 163-Public network of the migration centres.
Article 164-Legal system of the migration centres.
Article 165-Admission of the migration centres.

- Ministerial Order of 13 January 1989 (Social Affairs Ministry), regulating the Reception Centres for Refugees (CAR).

- Resolution 6 July 1998, General Department of the IMSERSO (Institute of Migrations and Social Services depending on the Labour and Social Affairs Ministry), to develop the Ministerial Order of 13 January 1989.

There are agreements signed by the Central Government with every region (Comunidad Autónoma) in Spain where there is a reception centre for refugees. For example Resolution 19 January 2005, of the General Technical Secretary, by which is Publishes the Additional Protocol to the Collaboration Agreement subscribed between the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs and the Community of Madrid, for the developments of group actions on the assistance to immigrants, refugees, asylum seekers and displaced persons.

Besides there are internal regulations in each Reception Centre (article 24 of Resolution of 1998).

Q.25. D. Do the regulations foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers in case of breach of the rules? (see article 16, §3) If yes, which sanctions for which rules? Which is the competent authority to decide? How is it ensured that decisions are taken individually, objectively and in particular impartially (for instance through an independent arbitrator) as requested by §4 of article 21 which is mandatory provision? Which are the possibilities of appealing against those decisions if the system is different from the general one under question n°22? Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

The regulations foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers in case of serious breach of the rules.

The decisions are taken together with the NGO and the correspondent civil servant in charge of the centres, although there isn't an independent arbitrator as such. [695]

In case of breach of the rules at public reception centres, the competent authority is the direction of the centre.

In case of serious breaches of the rules (when the sanction can be the expulsion from the centre), the General Department for Integration of the Immigrants is the competent authority.

Q.25. E. Are asylum seekers involved in the management of these centres? If yes, how (advisory board, appointment or election of representatives)? (see article 14, §6 which is an option provision)

[695] Information provided by NGOs.

The asylum seekers are involved in the management of the centres. There is a counsel of residents (asamblea de residentes or Junta de Participación) in each Reception Centre for Refugees, with a consultive nature (article 7 Resolution of 1998).

Q.25. F. Do specific rules exist on work of asylum seekers inside the accommodation centres different from the general ones about employment (see below)? If yes, which ones? Can working inside accommodation centres be considered as a (mandatory) contribution of the asylum seekers to the management of the centres, is it or not paid and considered as implying access to the labour market and subject to the same rules?

The contribution to the cleaning, cooking and maintenance of the Reception Centres is the only work developed by the asylum seekers that could be considered as a (mandatory) contribution of them to the management of the Centres. This work is unpaid.

Q.26. Q.26. A. How can asylum seekers communicate with legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGOs? (see article 14, §2, (b) which is a mandatory provision).

In the internal practice asylum seekers have free access to their relatives, legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs. Further specification at legal or by-legal level would be advisable.

Q.26. B. What are the rules about access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs regarding access to accommodation centres and other housing facilities (see article 14, §7 which is a mandatory provision)

There are no legal or by-legal dispositions establishing the possibility of the asylum seeker of communicating with relatives, UNHCR, legal advisers or NGOs.

Notwithstanding asylum seekers have access to UNHCR, specialized lawyers and pro-bono lawyers. In the information brochures established in article 5(1) of the 1995 Asylum Regulation, contact telephones and addresses of UNHCR, specialized NGOs and Bar Associations are included[696].

What usually happens when a NGO runs a Reception Centre for Refugees is that the NGOs' lawyers will be in charge of the cases, but there is no compulsory obligation for the asylum seekers to accept them. If the asylum seeker would like to take another legal adviser, private or NGO worker, he or she will be always free to choose who is going to represent and defend him/her.

[696] Information provided by UNHCR.

Q.26. C. Can the access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs be limited for security reasons or any other reason (see article 14, §7, last sentence)?

No, there are no restrictions to access to the Reception Centres for Refugees.

Q.27. Q.27. A. Is a medical screening organised by the receiving State, is it mandatory or voluntary? Does it include HIV tests? (see article 9 which is an optional provision)

The medical screening is compulsory. It does include the HIV test and it is organised by the Spanish authorities within the Health Public System or in contact with the specialized services already in place.

The asylum seekers allowed to enter the country are referred to an emergency reception point at Madrid local branch where they are counselled. They stay in a hostel for a short period and when clinical analysis results are ready they are referred to a reception centre –like those who apply for asylum within the territory. When applicants apply for asylum within the territory, the Spanish Red Cross local branches are responsible for all the clinical analyses and the referral to a reception centre is made by the headquarters. [697]

Q.27. B. Do the legal provisions on reception conditions ensure that asylum seekers receive at least emergency care and essential treatment of illness as requested by article 15 §1 which is a mandatory provision? Do they have a further access to health care?

The legal provisions on reception conditions ensure that asylum seekers receive emergency care and essential treatment of illness.

Article 5 of the Asylum Regulation, about informing the asylum-seeker of his rights, provides:

"2. Those asylum-seekers who are inside Spanish national territory will receive information on the need to provide evidence to support their request from the governmental agency that they have addressed. This agency must also provide information on the rights to which asylum-seekers are entitled under Law 5/1984 regulating refugee status and the right to asylum. In particular, they are to be informed of the right to have an interpreter and legal counsel. Likewise, the authority to which they have submitted their request will provide the asylum-seeker with medical attention, when appropriate, and will provide guidance regarding the currently-existing social services intended to cover the asylum-seeker's immediate human needs" (emphasis added).

Article 15 of the Asylum Regulation (as amended by the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December) establishes that:

"1. Asylum seekers, provided that that they do not have economic means, shall be able to benefit from the social, educational and health-related services rendered by the competent agencies of the Public Administration, within the means and budget availabilities of these agencies, to ensure a standard of living adequate and capable of ensuring their subsistence. The benefits given could be modulated when the asylum application is pending of admission to the normal RSD procedure, guaranteeing in any case the coverage of the basic needs of the asylum seekers. In general, access to education, to health care, to social security and to social services will be regulated, respectively, according to the dispositions in articles 9, 12 and 14 of the Organic Law 4/2000, of 11 January, on the Rights and Freedoms of foreigners in Spain and their social integration (in the wording given by the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December) (emphasis added). (…)

[697] Information provided by the Spanish Red Cross at www.receptionandhealth.net

3. In giving the services which are referred to in paragraph 1 of this article, will be taken into consideration the specific situation of persons with a specific vulnerability, such as minors, unaccompanied minors, senior citizens, pregnant women, one-parent families with minor children, and persons who have been subject to torture, rape, or other serious form of psychological, physic o sexual violence, according with the directives that appear in the international recommendations used in harmonizing the treatment of these social groups of refugees or displaced individuals (in the wording given by the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December)" (emphasis added).

Article 12 of the Aliens Law, about the right to Health Care, establishes:
"1. Those aliens who are in Spain and registered on the list of residents ("padrón") of the municipality in which they habitually reside have the right to health care under the same conditions as Spaniards.
2. Those aliens who are in Spain have the right to casualty care under the public health service if they contract grave or accidental illnesses, regardless of their cause, and to the continuation of said care until they are considered medically recovered.
3. Those aliens under the age of eighteen years that are in Spain have the right to health care under the same conditions as Spaniards.

4, Pregnant aliens who are in Spain shall have the right to health care during pregnancy, labor and the postpartum period."

Q.27. C. What is the practice regarding access of asylum seekers to health care and how is it organised? In particular, what is the situation in accommodation centres (are doctors coming to the centres or do asylum seekers go to doctors outside)?

In Spain even if you are irregularly within the territory you are entitled to free access to the Public Health Care System in case of an emergency, women during pregnancy and chilbirth, and all minors.

The asylum seekers go through the medical screening before going into the centre and on that interval time they are lodged (covering the expenses by the State or NGO) in hostels. Afterwards they usually go to doctors outside.[698]

In general, Spanish Red Cross provides free medical help and in some cases psychological support to all asylum seekers who are still waiting to benefit from the medical insurance they are granted like any other national or foreigner national who has been registered with the local population register (padrón)[699]

[698] Information provided by NGOs.
[699] Information provided by the Spanish Red Cross at www.receptionandhealth.net

Q.28. Q.28. A. What is the length of the period determined by the concerned Member State during which asylum seekers have no access to the labour market? (see article 11 which is a mandatory provision)

Seventeenth Additional Disposition of the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December, by which the Aliens Regulation is approved:

"The asylum seekers will be authorized to work in Spain, after six months of having lodged the asylum request, in case that it has been admitted to the procedure and has not been decided upon due to a cause not attributable to the applicant. The work authorization will be proven through the inscription "authorizes to work" in the asylum seeker identification card and, if should that be the case, in its successive renewals, and will be conditioned to its validity. In case that the inscription cannot be put in the document because the above mentioned requirements are not fulfilled, the Office for Asylum and Refuge will record this fact in a reasoned decision that will be notified to the applicant." (underlined added).

Q.28. B. After that period, are asylum seekers or not obliged to obtain a work permit? In case is there a limit for the administration to deliver the permits and how quick are they delivered? What is their length?

Article 15 of the Asylum Regulation (as amended by the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December) establishes that:

"2. The asylum-seeker may be granted authorization to work in Spain by the competent authority, in accordance with the rules and regulations in force regarding aliens, depending on the circumstances surrounding his file and current situation."

Q.28. C. After that period, what are the conditions for access of the asylum seekers to the labour market? (in particular, are there rules concerning the maximum allowed of working hours or days per week, month or year, limits in terms of type of work or of professions authorised?

Q.28. D. What are the rules in terms of priorities between asylum seekers on the one hand and nationals, EU or EEE citizens and legally third-country nationals on the other?

Q.28. E. Do asylum seekers have access to vocational training, does this or not depend of their right to access to the labour market, and in case at which conditions? (see article 12 which is optional regarding §1 and mandatory regarding § 2)

Article 9 of the Alien's Law, on the right to Education, establishes that:

"3. Aliens legally resident shall have the right to education of a non-obligatory nature under the same conditions as Spaniards. More specifically, they shall have the right to access the levels of education and training not covered in the previous paragraph, as well as to the obtainment of the corresponding degrees in each instance and to access the public system of scholarships and aid".

Internal regulations of Reception Centres can provide for vocational training.

Vocational training is provided in the Reception Centres runned by the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs. It is also provided by some NGOs that provide assistance to asylum seekers.

Asylum seekers are in this respect in a similar situation to that of Spaniards. There is no specific disposition on special vocational training for asylum seekers designed to improve their possibilities to join the labor market.[700] .

Q.28. F. Are the rules regarding access to the labour market adopted to transpose the directive more or less generous than the ones applicable previously?

The rules goes well beyond the standard set in the Directive in some aspects: the timeframe is six months and there is no discrimination against the asylum seeker, as established in Article 11, paragraph 4 of the Directive.

Q.29. Are reception conditions subject to the fact that asylum seekers do not have sufficient resources? Are asylum seekers requested to contribute to reception conditions when they have personal resources (for instance if they work) or to refund the authorities if it appears that they have resources? (see article 13 §§ 3 and 4 which are optional provisions)

According to Article 15 of the Spanish Asylum Regulation, as amended by the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 of December, asylum seekers could be beneficiaries of the reception programs whenever "they don't have sufficient economics means". Therefore if there is any possibility to prove it, it could imply for them not to be accepted within the reception centre.

In practice asylum seekers are not requested to contribute to reception conditions.

7. SPECIAL NEEDS OF PARTICULAR CATEGORIES OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.30.

Q.30.A. Which of the different categories of persons with special needs considered in the directive are taken into account in the national legislation (see article 17, §1 which is a mandatory provision): disabled people, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence? Include in your answer all other categories envisaged in national law.

Article 15 of the Asylum Regulation (as amended by the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December):

[700] Information provided by NGOs.

"3. In providing the services which are referred to in paragraph 1 of this article, will be taken into consideration the specific situation of persons with a specific vulnerability, such as minors, unaccompanied minors, senior citizens, pregnant women, one-parent families with minor children, and persons who have been subject to torture, rape, or other serious form of psychological, physical o sexual violence, according with the directives that appear in the international recommendations used in harmonizing the treatment of these social groups of refugees or displaced individuals (in the wording given by the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December)."

Q.30. B. How is their specific situation taken into account (see articles 13, §2, second indent, 16 §4 second sentence and 17 which are mandatory provisions)?

Their specific situation is taken into account by giving priority in access to Reception Centres for Refugees (Article 13 Resolution 6 July 1998, General Department of the IMSERSO (Institute of Migrations and Social Services depending on the Labour and Social Affairs Ministry), to develop the Ministerial Order of 13 January 1989)

As said before, asylum seekers have access to Spanish health care in the same conditions as Spanish citizens. The Reception Centres provides monitoring and support for minors with special educational needs and psychosocial support and coordination with other public or private mental health system (at least the Reception Centres runned by Spanish Red Cross, see www.receptionandhealth.net).

Q.30. C. How and when are the special needs of the concerned persons supposed to be legally identified (see article 17 § 2 which is a mandatory provision and clarify how it has been interpreted by transposition)?

The special needs of the concerned persons are identified when they apply for asylum by the Social Work Unit (Unidad de Trabajo Social) of the Labour and Social Affairs Ministry placed at the Asylum and Refuge Office.

Afterwards they could be identified any time since they are assigned to a reception centre through the social workers, psychologist and authorized personal that will be monitoring and providing counselling and assistance in the evolution process of the asylum seeker. [701]

Q.30. D. Is the necessary medical and other assistance provided to persons with special needs as requested by article 15, §2 which is a mandatory provision and in particular to victims of torture and violence as requested by article 20 which is a mandatory provision?

If special needs are identified asylum seekers will be properly referred to the appropriate professionals existing within the Spanish Health System and other possible complementary services provided by other NGOs or specialized organizations.

[701] Information provided by NGOs.

Q.31. About minors:

Q.31. A. Till which age are asylum seekers considered to be minor?

Till 18.

Q.31. B. How is access of minor asylum seekers to the education system ensured? Is it at school or in case inside accommodation centres and can it be considered as similar to the conditions for nationals as requested by article 10, §1?

Minors are attending public school but they can receive educational support at the Reception Centre.

Article 15 of the Asylum Regulation (as amended by the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December):

"1. Asylum seekers, provided that that they do not have economic means, shall be able to benefit from the social, educational and health-related services rendered by the competent agencies of the Public Administration, within the means and budget availabilities of these agencies, to ensure a standard of living adequate and capable of ensuring their subsistence. The benefits given could be modulated when the asylum application is pending of admission to the normal Refugee Status Determination procedure, guaranteeing in any case the coverage of the basic needs of the asylum seekers. In general, access to education, to health care, to social security and to social services will be regulated, respectively, according to the dispositions in articles 9, 12 and 14 of the Organic Law 4/2000, of 11 January, on the Rights and Freedoms of foreigners in Spain and their social integration (in the wording given by the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December)" (emphasis added)

Article 9 of the Alien's Law:

"1. All aliens under the age of eighteen years have the right and obligation to education under the same conditions as Spaniards, including access to a basic, obligatory education free of charge, the obtainment of the corresponding academic degrees and access to the public scholarship and aid system.

2. In the case of the pre-school education, which is of voluntary nature, the Public Administrations will guarantee the existence of a number of vacancies enough for the schooling of the population that requires it.

3. Aliens legally resident shall have the right to education of a non-obligatory nature under the same conditions as Spaniards. More specifically, they shall have the right to access the levels of education and training not covered in the previous paragraph, as well as to the obtainment of the corresponding degrees in each instance, and to access the public system of scholarships and aid.

4. The public powers shall promote that the foreigners legally resident that have need of it, are able to receive teaching for their better social integration, with acknowledgement and respect for their cultural identity".

Fourteenth Additional Disposition of the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December, by which the Aliens Regulation is approved, on access of minors to education of non-mandatory nature, establishes that:

"Without prejudice to article 9.3 of the Organic Law 4/2000, of 11 January, the educational administrations, exercising their competences on educational matters, may facilitate the access of minor foreigners registered on the list of residents ("padrón") of a municipality to levels of post-obligatory non-university education and to the obtainment of the corresponding degrees in equality of conditions than Spaniards of their age."

Q.31. C. Is access to education ensured not later than 3 months as requested by article 10, §2 (or after maximum one year if specific education for asylum seekers is provided) and till an expulsion decision is really enforced?

Minors seeking asylum have access to the obligatory education system when they arrive to the reception centres.

Minors in Spain, included asylum seekers or undocumented migrants, have access to the general education system, immediately after being registered on the list of residents (padrón). The time limits depends on each city and village.

Q.31. D. Is specific education (like language classes) available for asylum seekers, in particular to facilitate their effective access to the education system of the reception Member State (see article 10, §2 which is an optional provision)?

Specific education is available for asylum seekers at the Reception Centre, where the asylum seekers usually have access to Spanish language and social skill courses.

Reception Centres can provide another coursees (like gardening, building, etc.) based on particular agreements with local Councils.

Q.31. E. Are minors in general accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them? (see article 14, § 3)

Yes, as a general rule based on a full respect of the family union principle.

Q.31. F. Do minors with special needs enumerated by article 18, §2 which is a mandatory provision, have access to appropriate mental health care and qualified counselling?

Minors with special needs have access to appropriate mental health case and qualified counselling. They are entitled to benefit form the health care public system and to the psychological support provided by the Spanish Red Cross.

Article 15 of the Asylum Regulation (as amended by the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December):

"3. In providing the services which are referred to in paragraph 1 of this article, will be taken into consideration the specific situation of persons with a specific vulnerability, such as minors, unaccompanied minors, senior citizens, pregnant women, one-parent families with minor children, and persons who have been subject to torture, rape, or other serious form of psychological, physical o sexual violence, according with the directives that appear in the international recommendations used in harmonizing the treatment of these social groups of refugees or displaced individuals (in the wording given by the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December)."

Attention to vulnerability of asylum seekers is ensured in the Reception Centres, but the situation is not so clear in other reception/detention facilities[702].

Q.31. G. How and when is organised the representation of unaccompanied minors (guardianship, special organisation) and regularly assessed? (see article 19, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

Regional Governments are responsible for all unaccompanied minors. There are a number of practical shortcomings linked to the exercise of the legal guardianship for unaccompanied minor asylum seekers. Among the most relevant is the tendency of guardians not to pursue the asylum procedure on behalf of the minor, but to try to regularize their stay in Spain through the aliens regime, in which they evaluate they have better chances that going through a restrictive asylum procedure. While there is no legal impediment to pursue the asylum and aliens ways in parallel, an incorrect interpretation of the Asylum and Refugee Office has resulted until recently in having to choose one of them.

Article 15 of the Asylum Regulation (as amended by the Royal Decree 2393/2004, of 30 December):

"4. Asylum seekers under 18 years of age in situation of abandonment shall be referred to the competent services in matters of minors' protection, communicating this to the Prosecutor's Office. The legal guardian that is legally assigned to the minor shall represent him during the asylum proceedings. The asylum requests shall be processed in conformity with the criteria set in Conventions and International recommendations applicable to the minor asylum seeker."

Q.31. H. How is placement of unaccompanied minors organised (with adult relatives, a foster family, in special accommodation centres or other suitable accommodation)? (see article 19, §2 which is mandatory provision)

[702] Information provided by UNHCR.

Regional Governments are responsible for all unaccompanied minors, so unaccompanied minors who apply for asylum are housed at these facilities. But because of the strict Regional Authorities' interpretation of the osteometric analysis to establish the age of a minor and because Spanish Red Cross considered a specific resource to be a better option for young people (18-23 years old), Spanish Red Cross has been running it for the last 3 years.

Reception Centres for young asylum seekers:

Staying: during all the asylum procedure's length.

Age: between 18 to 23 years old.

Spanish Red Cross is running one centre with 8 places.

Services: Many services are quite similar to the ones at Reception Centres but emphasizing the socio-educational programme (vocational training, sexual and emotional education, fostering healthy habits, proper nutrition, dental care, etc.), the preparation for the transition to adulthood supporting autonomy and fostering labour market integration.[703]

Q.31. I. How is the tracing of the family members of the unaccompanied minors organised? Are measures taken to protect confidentiality of information when necessary? (see article 19, §3 which is a mandatory provision)

See article 92 of Aliens Regulation:

"(...) 4. In accordance with the principle of family regrouping of the minor, the General Administration of the State will hear the minor and, after seeing the report from the services for the protection of minors, it will resolve on the repatriation to his country of origin, or to the country where his family members are, or, failing this, on his permanence in Spain. In accordance with the principle of the greater interest of the minor, the repatriation to his country of origin will only be agreed if the conditions for the effective family regrouping of the minor are present, or due to the proper custody by the services for the protection of minors in the country of origin.

The procedure will commence ex officio by the General Administration of the State or, possibly, on the proposal of the public entity which has the custody of the minor. The organism responsible for the custody of the minor will provide the Governmental authority with any information which it has concerning the identity of the minor, his family, his country or his address, and will inform of the steps it has taken to locate the family of the minor.

The Governmental authority will inform the Attorney General's Office of all the actions carried out in these proceedings.

The General Administration of the State competent for the taking the steps concerning the repatriation of an unprotected minor from Spain will act through the Delegations and Sub-Delegation of the Government, which will request the Police Department for Aliens and Documentation to carry out the work required with the corresponding embassies and consulates in order to locate the families of the minors or, failing this, the services for the protection of minors in their countries of origin which might be responsible for these. If there is no diplomatic representation in Spain, these steps will be channelled through the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Cooperation.

[703] Information provided by the Spanish Red Cross at www.receptionandhealth.net

Once the family of the minor is located, or, failing this, the services for the protection of minors in his country, repatriation will take place through the handover to the border authorities at the country he is repatriated to. This measure will not apply when the existence of risk or danger to the integrity of the minor, or his prosecution or the prosecution of his family members is verified.

(...)

The repatriation of the minor will be agreed to by the Government Delegate or Sub-Delegate, and will be executed by the civil servants of the National Police.

(...)

5. Once nine months have elapsed from the time that the minor has been placed at the disposal of the services competent for the protection of minors, (...), and once repatriation to his family or to the country of origin has been attempted, and if this is not possible, he will be granted the residence permit referred to in article 35.4 of Organic Law 4/2000, of January. In any case, the fact that the minor does nit have a residence permit is not a hindrance to him accessing the education or training activities or programmes which, in the opinion of the entity competent for the protection of minors, is beneficial for him.

(...)

6. If this involves minors applying for asylum, the stipulations in article 15.4" of the Regulations on Asylum of 1995 revised by the Implementation Rules of the Law on Aliens 2393/2004 will apply.

8. EXCEPTIONAL MODALITIES OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.32. Apart from detention covered by the next question, are there exceptional modalities for reception conditions in the following cases and if yes, which ones and for how long are they applicable, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)?

Q.32. A. Persons with specific or special needs, regarding in particular the period of assessment of those needs?

Reception Centres for young asylum seekers. The stay during all the asylum procedure's length. Age: between 18 and 23 year old. Spanish Red Cross is running one reception centre with 8 places.

Q.32. B. Non availability of reception conditions in certain areas

Q.32. C. Temporarily exhaustion of normal housing capacities

Q.32. D. The asylum seeker is confined to a border post

Article 5 of the Asylum Law:

"7. (…). While the request for asylum or for re-examination is being processed, the asylum-seeker must remain at the border point. Adequate facilities will be provided for this purpose. (…)"

Detention conditions for asylum seekers at airports (or, according to the Spanish Constitutional Court, "restriction to personal freedom", which is an intermediate status between detention and personal freedom) are good. Acceptable shelter facilities exist in the Airports of Madrid (where 95% of asylum requests at borders are lodged), Barcelona and Las Palmas. The maximum time of confinement at the border is of seven days. If asylum applications are lodged in other airports, the Police resort to Internment Centres for Foreigners where the asylum seekers remain in detention conditions. [704].

Q.32. E. All other cases not mentioned in the directive (for instance urgent situation in case of a sudden high number of applicants outside a case of application of the directive on temporary protection).

Q.33. Detention of asylum seekers (we do not cover the situation of rejected asylum seekers detained for the purpose of their return) (see articles 6 §2, 7 §3, 13, §2 2nd indent and 14 §8 which implies that the directive is in principle applicable in case of detention):

Q.33. A. In which cases or circumstances and for which reasons[1] (identity verification in particular if the persons have no or false documents, protection of public order or national security, refugee status determination, way of entry into the territory, etc) can an asylum seeker be detained during the asylum procedure till his request has been finally rejected. Quote precisely in English in your answer the legal basis for detention of asylum seekers in national law.

Asylum seekers are never detained when they lodge their claim within the territory. They are detained or arrested if a crime has been committed.

When asylum seekers lodged their claim at the border, they are hold, not "detained", while the asylum office decides on the admissibility or inadmissibility of the asylum claim. The maximum length of time for the admissibility procedure at the border is 7 days. If the final administrative decision is negative, the applicant has to leave the border post and will be returned to their country of origin or to a third country (i.e. under readmission agreements, flight destination, visas on their passport…) (Article 5(7) Asylum Law of 1994).

Detention conditions for asylum seekers at airports (or, according to the Spanish Constitutional Court, "restriction to personal freedom", which is an intermediate status between detention and personal freedom) are good. Acceptable shelter facilities exist in the Airports of Madrid (where 95% of asylum requests at borders are lodged), Barcelona and Las Palmas. The maximum time of confinement at the border is of seven days. If asylum applications are lodged in other airports, the Police resort to Internment

[704] Information provided by the UNHCR.

[1] Please specify if article 18 §1 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Member States shall not hold a person in detention for the sole reason that he/she is an applicant for asylum" is or not respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed).

Centres for Foreigners where the asylum seekers remain in detention conditions.[705]

Asylum seekers who lodge their applications after being confined to an Internment Centre for Foreigners (normally those intercepted attempting to enter Spain or immediately after) are 'detained' [Article 60 of the Aliens Law: Placement in an Internment Center (nb. Relevant for persons who request asylum after the internment order has been issued)].

If the asylum application is admitted to the regular Refugee Status Determination procedure, the asylum seeker is freed and placed in a centre for asylum seekers.

The general conditions of those centres, if not overcrowded, are acceptable according to UNHCR standards.

The situation of asylum seekers in Ceuta and Melilla is particular. They are free within these North African enclaves, but are not free to pass to the Peninsula. It has to be noted that both enclaves are not Schengen territory. Only those asylum seekers admitted to the regular Refugee Status Determination procedure are allowed to pass to the peninsula and then are placed in reception centres[706].

From the UNHCR's point of view, Spanish legislation meets the standards of article 7 Reception Conditions Directive and generally also meets the UNHCR standards on detention of asylum seekers.

Article 60 of the Aliens Law: Placement in an Internment Center (nb. Relevant for persons who request asylum after the internment order has been issued)

"1. If the proceedings on the alien are due to the causes included in sections a), b) and c) of Article 50 herein or section g) of Article 49 herein, and the expulsion of the alien concerned is to be proposed, the governmental authority may propose to the corresponding Examining Judge with jurisdiction that the alien be placed in an internment center until the sanction proceedings have been conducted. The judicial decision with regard to the request for the internment of the alien pending expulsion shall be issued in a reasoned court order ("auto"), following a hearing with the alien concerned.

2. The internment shall continue throughout the time required for the purposes of the proceedings, but may in no case surpass forty days. Nor may the alien's internment be re-ordered for any of the causes provided for in the same proceedings. The court decision authorizing the internment may, depending on the circumstances surrounding each case, establish a maximum term of internment that is shorter than the aforementioned.

3. Minors who are in the circumstances foreseen for internment shall be placed at the disposal of the proper child protection services. Following a favorable report by the Public Prosecutor, the Judge may authorize the minor's placement in an alien internment center if the minor's parents or guardians are there as well, if his or her parents or guardians request the minor's placement there and if special cells exist which guarantee family privacy."

[705] Information provided by the UNHCR.
[706] Information provided by UNHCR.

Article 9 of the Asylum Regulation:

"2. He must also indicate a place of residence and inform the competent authority of any changes of address as soon as possible."

Q.33. B. Has your member State adopted measures to transpose §3 of article 7 which is an optional provision? If yes, how has this provision been legally understood (is it a case of detention or an obligation to stay in and not leave a certain place?) and for which reasons can an asylum seeker be "confined" in such a place?

Spain has not adopted specific measures to transpose article 7(3) of the Reception Conditions Directive. The only case of 'detention', as mentioned above (Q.33.A), takes place when asylum seekers lodged their claim at the border. In this case they are hold, not "detained", while the asylum office decides on the admissibility or inadmissibility of the asylum claim. The maximum length of time for the admissibility procedure at the border is 7 days (Article 5(7) Asylum Law of 1994 Article 5(7) of the 1994 Asylum Law provides that:

"7. (…). While the request for asylum or for re-examination is being processed, the asylum-seeker must remain at the border point. Adequate facilities will be provided for this purpose.")

Q.33. C. Are there legally alternatives to detention, like obligation to report to the authorities, obligation to stay in a place, provision of a guarantor or of a financial guarantee?

Article 14 of the Asylum Regulation: Precautionary measures

"If the asylum-seeker does not possess the official documents required to reside in Spain, the Ministry of Justice and of the Interior may set an obligatory place of residence for the individual concerned until a final decision on his file is handed down. The asylum-seeker must be informed of the decision to set an obligatory place of residence by the Governor of the province in which he is located. Likewise, for reasons of public safety, the Minister of the Interior has the authority to adopt any of the measures stipulated in article 6 of Constitutional Law 7/1985 (July 1) regarding the Rights and Freedoms of Aliens in Spain." (emphasis added).

Q.33. D. Which is the competent authority to order the detention of an asylum seeker? Explain if different authorities are involved to first take and later confirm the decision.

As mentioned above, asylum seekers are never detained when they lodge their claims within the territory. They are only detained or arrested if a crime has been committed.

Q.33. E. For how long and till which stage of the asylum procedure can an asylum seeker be detained?

The only case of 'detention' takes place when asylum seekers lodged their claim at the border. In this case they are hold, not "detained", while the asylum office decides on the admissibility or inadmissibility of the asylum claim. The maximum length of time for the admissibility procedure at the border is 7 days (Article 5(7) Asylum Law of 1994).

Q.33. F. In which places (can we call them "closed centres"?) are asylum seekers detained (places in a special closed centres reserved only to asylum seekers, together with returnees like illegal aliens or even in a normal prison, in case within separated areas or with the other detainees)? Indicate if a difference has to be made following the location of the "closed centres" at the border or on the territory? Which is the authority managing those places and is it the same as the one in charge of reception conditions?

Asylum seekers are only 'detained' at border points at airports during a maximum length of 7 days. Otherwise there are no closed centres for asylum seekers.

Q.33. G. Does UNHCR and NGOs have access to the places of detention and under which conditions?

UNHCR has unhindered access to all locations where asylum seekers are placed or sheltered.

Q.33. H. What appeal(s) can asylum seekers introduce against the fact he is detained? Is article 18 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Where an applicant for asylum is held in detention, Member States shall ensure that there is a possibility of speedy judicial review" respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed)?

As mentioned above (Q.33.A), asylum seekers are never detained when they lodge their claims within the territory. They are only detained or arrested if a crime has been committed.

Q.33. I. Is the directive on reception conditions considered to be in principle applicable to the places where asylum seekers are detained? In particular which information do they receive about their rights, which access do they have to legal advice and health care?

Q.33. J. Apart from freedom of movement, what are the main differences between normal reception conditions and exceptional modalities for reception conditions in case of detention, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)? If it is about closed centres, are the regulations of those places in line with the requirements of the directive (is article 13, §2, second indent of the directive following which "Member States shall ensure that standards of living is met (…) in relation to the situation of persons who are in detention" respected?).

As mentioned above, asylum seekers are never detained when they lodge their claims within the territory. They are only detained or arrested if a crime has been committed.

Q.33. K. Are measures taken to avoid detention of asylum seekers with special needs (if yes, which ones?) or are special measures taken because of their needs?

As mentioned above, asylum seekers are never detained when they lodge their claims within the territory. They are only detained or arrested if a crime has been committed.

Q.33. L. Can minor asylum seekers be detained together with relatives? Can unaccompanied minor asylum seekers be detained? If yes, are there special measures which take into account that children are concerned?

Article 60 of the Aliens Law: Placement in an Internment Centre (nb. Relevant for persons who request asylum after the internment order has been issued):

"3. Minors who are in the circumstances foreseen for internment shall be placed at the disposal of the proper child protection services. Following a favourable report by the Public Prosecutor, the Judge may authorize the minor's placement in an alien internment centre if the minor's parents or guardians are there as well, if his or her parents or guardians request the minor's placement there and if special cells exist which guarantee family privacy."

Q.33. M. In particular is article 10 regarding access to education of minors respected in those places?

There are no closed places for minors.

Q.33. N. How many asylum seekers are for the moment detained in your Member State? Which proportion does this represent in comparison of the total number of asylum seekers at the same moment?

There is no information available, due to the absence of asylum seekers detained.

9. ORGANISATION OF THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.34. Explain if the system of providing reception conditions is centralised or decentralised (which levels of government do provide practically reception conditions?) (do not confuse this question with question number 3 about the competence to make rules about reception conditions).

The system of providing reception conditions is centralised (article 163(3) of 2004 Aliens Regulation; article 2 of Ministerial Order of 1989 and article 21 of Resolution of 1998).

Q.35. In case, are accommodation centres public or/and private (managed by NGOs? If yes, are the NGOs financially supported by the State?)

All Reception Centres are runned either by the Central Government through General Department for Integration of the Immigrants –depending on the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs- or managed by NGOs, that receive funding from the Government.

Q.36. In case, how many accommodation centres are there in your Member State (distinguish in your answer between public and private centres)?

Reception Centres in Spain are distributed around the Spanish territory. Some of them are located in rural areas but the biggest ones are mainly located in urban areas.

Managed by the NGOs: 29
Runned directly by the State (public Centres): 6 .

Q.37. Is there in the legislation a plan or are there rules in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory of your Member State to avoid their concentration in some areas like big cities or to share the costs of their reception between central, regional and local authorities?

There is no specific legislation, plan or rules in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory. But there is a general practice trying not to locate people from the same nationality in the same regions and villages. NGOs in charge try to spread them in different locations[707].

Q.38. Does a central body representing all the actors (like NGOs) involved in reception conditions exist? Does it play a consultative role for the State authorities, a coordination role for the actors or any other role?

It does not exist a central body representing all the actors involved in reception conditions.

The role of coordination is played by Central Government through General Department for Integration of the Immigrants (which depends on the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs).

Q.39. Q.39. A. Which is the body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions as requested by article 23 which is mandatory provision? Include in your answer which is the competent ministry (Interior, Social affairs, etc) for reception conditions?

According to the Royal Decree 1600/2004 of 2 July, developing the structure of the Ministry of Labour and Social Affairs, the body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions is the [707] Information provided by NGOs.

General Department for Integration of the Immigrants (Dirección General de Integración de los Inmigrantes). The competent ministry is the Labour and Social Affairs Ministry. But the Interior Ministry is the competent one for reception conditions at the Internment Centres for Foreigners (*Centros de Internamiento de Extranjero*s or CIE).

UNHCR undertakes regular monitoring of the reception conditions as part of its missions to different regions of Spain. The conclusions and recommendations are shared and discussed with the Spanish Government, notably the General Directorate for the integration of Immigrants, at the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs.[708]

Q.39. B. Has your Member State (like the Czech Republic did recently) approved quality standards (not necessary legally binding) for housing services (for instance about the number of persons per bedroom on the basis of its size, number of accessible toilets, bathrooms, showers and washing machines per number of persons, existence of common rooms with radio, television, newspapers, books, computers, accessibility of telephone, existence of recreative rooms for children,…) to be respected in particular in accommodation centres?

It has not been approved specific quality standards for housing services to be respected in accommodation centres.

Q.39. C. How is this system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions organised?

Q.39. D. Does the body in charge of guidance, control and monitoring produce reports about the level of reception conditions? If yes, how frequently and are they public?

The body in charge produce public reports for the institutions interested. No information has been provided about the frequency.

Q.40.

Q.40. A. What is the total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions for the last year for which figures are available (see article 22 obliging Member States to calculate those statistics about which we also asked the Commission to require them from Member States for mid June)?

The total number of places for asylum seekers at the reception centres is at the moment 2079 (1370 at the public centres, and 700 at the centres managed by NGOs).

Q.40. B. What is the total budget of reception conditions in euro for the last year for which figures are available?

[708] Information provided by the UNHCR

The only information received by the Spanish authorities refers to the information provided by Spain to Eurostat. Relating the target group of article 3.3 European Refugee Fund II, the amounts are in the last three years:

- 2003: 5927.
- 2004: 5553.
- 2005: 5257.

Q.40. C. What is the average cost of reception conditions in euro per asylum seeker for the last year for which figures are available?

Q.40. D Are the costs of reception conditions of asylum seekers supported by the central/federal or federated government or are they shared with regional and/or local authorities?

The costs of reception conditions are supported by the central government, taking into account also the funds of the European Refugee Fund and the ENEAS EQUAL programme.

About financing Reception Centres, see Article 7 of Ministerial Order of 13 January 1989, regulating the Reception Centres for Refugees.

Q.40. E. Is article 24 § 2 of the directive following which "Member States shall allocate the necessary resources in connection with the nationals provisions enacted to implement this directive" respected?

No legal or by-legal provisions refer to these matters. Moreover, concerning the allocation of necessary resources, article 15 of the Asylum Regulation, amended in December 2004, expressly contradicts the standard set in article 24(2) of the Directive.

Article 15 of the Asylum Regulation:

"1. Asylum seekers, provided that that they do not have economic means, shall be able to benefit from the social, educational and health-related services rendered by the competent agencies of the Public Administration, within the means and budget availabilities of these agencies, to ensure a standard of living adequate and capable of ensuring their subsistence. The benefits given could be modulated when the asylum application is pending of admission to the normal Refugee Status Determination procedure, guaranteeing in any case the coverage of the basic needs of the asylum seekers. (…)" (underlined added)

The underlined phrase quoted above contradicts the provision of article 24(2) of the Directive, conditioning the reception conditions to funding availability, instead of ensuring that necessary resources are allocated. It is interesting to note that article 15 of the Asylum Regulation has been amended (30 December 2004), and the underlined phrase that was included in the previous formulation, has remained in the newly amended article[709].

[709] Information provided by the UNHCR.

Q.41. Q.41. A. What is the total number of persons working for reception conditions?

At the public reception centres there are 131 persons working for reception conditions. There is no information available from the centres managed by NGOs.

Q.41. B. How is the training of persons working in accommodation centres organised? Does it take into account specific needs of unaccompanied minors when relevant as well as the gender dimension? (see article 14 §5, 19 § 4 and also 24 §1 which are mandatory provisions)?

Staff at the Reception Centres of Refugees is adequately trained. UNHCR believes that at present there is no shortage of funds for the reception conditions of asylum seekers.[710]

The training of workers takes into account specific needs of unaccompanied minors. At this moment the gender dimension is one of the priorities for the public reception centres for refugees.

Q.41. C. Are there rules about the deontology of persons working in accommodation centres, in particular on confidentiality?

There are no specific rules about the deontology of persons working in reception centres. Each profession has its own general deontological code. Regarding confidenciality, the general rules are applied [Ley Orgánica 15/1999, de 13 de diciembre, de protección de datos de carácter personal (BOE núm. 298, de 14 de diciembre), en su redacción dada por la Ley 62/2003, de 30 de diciembre (BOE núm. 313, de 31 de diciembre)].

10. IMPACT OF THE DIRECTIVE

Legal impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.42. Specify if there are or not big problems with the translation of the directive in the official language of your Member State and give in case a list of the worst examples of provisions which have been badly translated? (please note that this question has in particular been added to the questionnaire concerning the new Member States)

Q.43. Where there precise legal rules on reception conditions for asylum seekers before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the directive (if yes, specify what the nature of those rules was (legislation, regulation, administrative instructions,…)?

The rules on reception conditions before the Directive were the norms regulating the Centres for Refugees. These norms were the Ministerial Order of [710] Information provided by the UNHCR.

1989, the Resolution of 1998 and the Ministerial Order of 2001. They are still in force and don't have legal or by-legal nature.

Q.44. Did the legal rules applicable to reception conditions become more clear, precise, coherent or detailed with the adoption of the transposition norms (for instance do you now have after the transposition one basic text dealing with reception conditions instead of numerous different texts in the past?

The rules are more clear and precise (specially relating to education, health care, work permits) but there is no one basic text dealing with reception conditions. The transposition has been made through the reform of 2004 of the Aliens Regulation. This reform amended only some articles of the Asylum Regulation and the existing norms relating reception centres are still in force.

Q.45. Did the transposition of the directive imply important changes in national law or were the changes of minor importance? In case, list the most important changes that have been introduced.

Several aspects and standards of the Directive need still to be transposed. It appears possible that the transposition of those aspects is undertaken in an overall transposition effort through a new Asylum Law and Regulation with the transposition of the Procedures, Qualification and Reception (in those aspects already not transposed) Directives[711].

The reception conditions have remained unchanged but what have change is the right to access to them for the asylum seekers. Now they do have the right to access them just immediately after formulating their asylum claim. .

Nevertheless, the situation in the internal practice has not changed and asylum seekers must wait until they are admitted to the refugee status determination procedure in order to receive reception conditions.

The information in the brochure for asylum seekers is better than before the Directive was approved.

Asylum seekers are allowed to work automatically after six months the application of asylum was submitted. They will just stamp the inscription "authorised to work" on their asylum seeker card when requested.

Before the implementation of the Reception Directive, asylum seekers were allowed to work after six months, but they needed to lodge an application together with a job offer to obtain the administrative authorisation to work[712].

Political impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.46. Explain briefly if there has been an important debate about the transposition of the directive (in particular in the Parliament, but possibly also in the government, between political parties, including in medias, etc; underline in case the main points which have been discussed or have created difficulties)

[711] Information by UNHCR.
[712] Information by UNHCR.

There has been no important debate about the transposition of the directive. At this moment the draft of a new Asylum Law is under discussion. It has not been made yet public. One reason of the delay of its approval could be related to the need to extend reception conditions to asylum seekers during the admissibility stage.

Q.47. Did the transposition of the directive contribute to make the internal rules stricter or more generous? In particular, did your Member State use the occasion of the transposition to abolish more favourable provisions of national law? Does your Member State still have rules more favourable than the provisions of the directive (if yes, try to give the more important examples).

The transposition has contributed to make the internal rules more generous, specially relating work permits.

11. ANY OTHER INTERESTING ELEMENT

Q.48. What are in your view the weaknesses and strengths of the system of reception conditions in your Member State?

Weaknesses:

1. Asylum seekers must wait until they are admitted to the refugee status determination procedure in order to receive reception conditions. During the first stage of the asylum procedure they are not beneficiaries of reception conditions.

2. A Ministerial Order or a Resolution cannot be considered as a by-legal act through which a Directive (questions like respect to family union principle, regulation of housing or access to UNHCR, legal advisers and NGOs) could be considered transposed, hence the transposition should be made through the Asylum Regulation or Law.

3. Reception conditions in an emergency case: If the number of places is insufficient it is necessary to rent a guest house or apartment and then the reception conditions are worst.

4. One element that could be changed in order to obtain a substantial improvement of the services provided will be the inclusion of a team of professionals specialized on psiquiatric pathologies within the Centres. At present just only certain centres have psychology services. Besides it would be really valuable to have a professional of specific compensatory education for minors under 12 years. (suggestions by NGOs at practical questionnaires).

Strengths:

1. Work permit received automatically six months after the asylum claim (better integration).

2. Generalised access to health care and general education.

Q.49. Mention any good practice in your Member State which could be promoted in other Member States

The standards set in the above quoted articles on health care (Q.27) are higher than those set in the Reception Conditions Directive.

The most relevant aspect of the transposition, in which Spain goes well beyond the standards set in the Directive, is the automatic work permit for asylum seekers six months after lodging their asylum application, with no restrictions whatsoever.

Q.50. Please add here any other interesting element about reception conditions in your Member State which you did not had the occasion to mention in your previous answer.

QUESTIONNAIRE FOR THE NATIONAL REPORT ON THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE DIRECTIVE : RECEPTION CONDITIONS OF 27 JANUARY 2003

IN: Sweden

By Professor, Dr. Örjan Edström
October 26, 2006

Updated May 16th 2007 by Markus Gunneflo

1. NORMS OF TRANSPOSITION

Q.1. Identify the main norm of transposition (indicate the title, date, number, date of entry into force and references of publication into the official journal) and indicate its legal nature (legislative, regulatory, administrative); indicate in your answer if this norm was only devoted to the directive or if it has been included in a more general text and indicate in that case by quoting precisely the numbers of the provisions adopted to transpose the directive.

1. The Act (1994:137) on the reception of asylum seekers (Lagen om mottagande av asylsökande). The Act was issued in March 30, 1994, and came into in force on July 1, 1994.[713] The Act has been subject to certain minor adjustments referring to the Directive 2003/9. The regulations on different relief, benefits, reception conditions etc. in connection with asylum seekers, have been applied already before, and hence the Directive has not contributed to any far going amendments of the Act.

In the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 1, there are regulations regarding the personal scope for the application of reception conditions regulated by the Act. Hence, the Act should apply to foreigners that have applied for residence permit in accordance with the Aliens Act ch. 4 § 1 or 2. Further, the Act should apply to foreigners that have applied for residence permits referring to "particular reasons".

However, the Act should not apply when a child up to the age of 18 is staying with a guardian who has a residence permit in Sweden. Concerning unaccompanied children arriving to Sweden the local authorities may arrange the children's living, and the Migration Board should assign a local authority for that purpose.

2. The Ordinance (1994:361) on the reception of asylum seekers (Förordningen om mottagande av asylsökande). The Ordinance, which was issued on May 11, 1994 and came into force on July 1, 1994, is a more detailed regulation issued by the Government regarding the application of the Act taken by the Riksdag.

[713] Government's proposition 1993/94:94 Mottagande av asylsökande m.m. The Act in 1994 replaced the previous Act (1988:153) on assistance to asylum seekers and more.

3. Concerning the definition of asylum seekers the Act on the reception of asylum seekers refers to the new Aliens Act (2005:716), which came into force on April 30, 2006.[714] Of certain importance is the Aliens Act ch. 4 § 1 with the definition of who is considered to be a refugee, and ch. 4 § 2 with the regulations concerning subsidiary protection; a person applying for a residence permit referring to the Aliens Act ch. 4 §§ 1 and 2 should be considered as an asylum seeker (further, on these matters, see Q.13B).

Basically, the definition of who should be considered to be a refugee refers to the Geneva Convention, although Swedish law in certain matters is going beyond the term used in the Convention. Further, there are regulations in the Aliens Act ch. 5 § 4 dealing with residence permit referring to "particular distressing circumstances" (särskilt ömmande omständigheter).

In the Aliens Act there are also regulations concerning the procedure, appeals against decision taken by the State authorities, certain control and coercive measures and more.

Q.2. List by order of importance by using numbers (1, 2, 3) the others norms of transposition if there are more than one (indicate for each norm the title, date, number and references of publication into the official journal; include in your answer the administrative measures taken to ensure implementation of the directive and of the transposition norms like regulations, administrative circulars, special instructions,…)

Other Acts and Ordinances than those listed above that are directly concerned regarding the reception of asylum seekers are:

1. The Ordinance (2002:1118) on state compensation for asylum seekers. (Förordning om statlig ersättning för asylsökande m.fl.)
2. The Ordinance (1996:1357) on state compensation for health and medical treatment for asylum seekers. (Förordning om statlig ersättning för hälso- och sjuk- vård till asylsökande.)
3. The Ordinance (1994:362) on charge for nursing care for certain foreigners. (Förordning om vårdavgifter m.m. för vissa utlänningar.)
4. The Ordinance (2001:976) on education, pre-school activity and school childcare for asylum seekers. (Förordning om utbildning, förskoleverksamhet och skolbarnsomsorg för asylsökande barn m.fl.)
5. The Health and medical treatment Act (1982:763). (Hälso- och sjukvårdslagen).
6. The School Act (1985:1100).[715] (Skollagen.)
7. The Act (2005:429) on guardian for unaccompanied minors. (Lag om god man för ensamkommande barn.)
8. The Social services Act (2001:453). (Socialtjänstlagen.)
9. MIGRFS 2003:10 The Migration Board's instructions on the reception of asylum seekers. (Migrationsverkets föreskrifter om mottagande av asylsökande m.m.)[716]

[714] Government's proposition 2004/05:170 Ny instans- och processordning i utlännings- och medborgarskapsärenden. The new Aliens Act replaced the previous Aliens Act (1989:529).
[715] See also the Ordinance (1994:1194) on the nine-year compulsory school (Grundskoleförordningen), the Ordinance on the upper secondary school (1992:394; Gymnasieförordningen) and the Ordinance (2002:1012) on local government adult education (Förordningen om kommunal vuxenutbildning).
[716] Including amendments through MIGRFS 02/2005.

10. The National Board of Health and Welfare, General instructions 1995:4 Health and medical care for asylum seekers and refugees. (Socialstyrelsens 1995:4 Allmänna råd Hälso- och sjukvård för asylsökande och flyktingar.)

The grading regarding the importance of each regulation is very rough; for instance it is doubtful to state that the Social services Act should be considered of less importance than the Ordinance on state compensation for asylum seekers.

Further, the following Acts and Ordinances listed are indirectly relevant to or of minor importance regarding the reception of asylum seekers:

- The Aliens Ordinance (2006:97).[717] (Utlänningsförordningen.)
- The Dental service Act (1985:125). (Tandvårdslagen).
- The Act (1991:572) on particular control of foreigners. (Lag om särskild utlänningskontroll.)
- The Ordinance (2001:720) on treatment of personal particulars in activities referring to acts on aliens law and citizenship. (Förordning om behandling av personuppgifter i verksamhet enligt utlännings- och medborgarskapslagstiftningen.)

Q.3. Explain which level of government is competent to adopt the legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers (specify in particular in case of a federal or regional State, if it is the federal/central power or the components; in case, specify below when it is impossible for you to answer a question because it is about the competence of the components and it is impossible for you to gather reliable information about all of them)

Hence, regulations concerning asylum seekers are found in law, ordinances and administrative instructions issued by the competent authorities. Laws – for instance the Act on the reception of asylum seekers – are taken by the Riksdag on the proposal of the Government, but before the Government's proposition is dealt with in the Riksdag's committees, and the Standing committee on civil law legislation (lagutskottet) gives an opinion on the proposal from the Government.

The Government is in charge of the promulgation of Ordinances such as the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers. An Ordinance is founded on law and in practice it is a more practical guidance on how to apply the law in practice.

Further regulations or instructions are presented by the competent authority. Regarding asylum seekers, the Swedish Migration Board is the Swedish State authority in charge of the reception of asylum seekers. The Board issues instructions presented in the Board's statute-book and, further, there is a Migration Board's Aliens handbook, with more internal instructions within the Board.

In accordance with the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 2, the Migration Board has the main responsibility for the reception of foreigners that are under the scope of the application of the Act. Further, in general and in accordance with the Aliens Act ch. 4 § 6, the [717] The Aliens Ordinance (2006:97) replaced the former Aliens Ordinance (1989:547) in April 30, 2006.

Migration Board should take decisions concerning the application of the basic regulations concerning refugees and people otherwise in need of protection (subsidiary protection).

Also otherwise regarding residence permits the Migration Board should take the decision (the Aliens Act ch. 5 § 20). However, also the Government's Office could take decisions on residence permits.[718]

Regarding health care it is the regional County councils that are in charge of public health care services. In accordance with the Health and medical treatment Act § 4, the County councils are obliged to immediately offer treatment to people who are staying in the county council's area of responsibility. Regarding asylum seekers that obligation means a duty to provide acute health care services.[719] Medical treatment that is not acute – or if the risk to wait is considered to be moderate – should not be reimbursed by the State.[720]

Concerning health care further regulations are found in the Ordinance on charge for nursing care for certain foreigners.

Beyond strict acute treatment the asylum seekers' access to health care is regulated in an agreement between the Government and the Swedish Association of Local Authorities and Regions (Svenska Kommunförbundet och Landstingsförbundet i samverkan). The agreement – replacing a former agreement on the matter – came into force at July 1, 2006, and is supposed to regulate asylum seekers' right to health care awaiting a regulation in law on the matter An important aspect of the agreement is that the health care service will be reimbursed for providing health care for the asylum seekers not embraced by the general regulations on the matter. Further, a proposal for a supplementary regulation on the matter is being prepared by the Government.[721]

Following an amendment of the Act on the reception of asylum seekers, which came into force on July 1, 2006, it is the local municipality that should be responsible for the accommodation of unaccompanied asylum seeking children and the children's needs. (amendment of Act on the reception of asylum seekers §§ 2 and 3 made through SFS 2006:177 entered into force on July 1, 2006). [722]

Practically, the Migration Board's accommodation places and living for these children should be transmitted to the local authorities who took over the responsibility. Hence, in principle the Migration Board should restrict its activity to assign the children to municipalities, and then it should be the local authority that will take care of the child, referring to the Social services Act and it is the duty of the local authority to provide for persons staying in the municipality.

Concerning schooling – see Q.31B.

---

[718] Further, the Government has a particular authority to take decisions in very specified and particular situations (see the Aliens Act ch. 23). The regulation will apply for instance in war situations when the Government could issue regulations concerning foreigners' right to enter Swedish territory.

[719] Compare the Ordinance (1996:1357) on State compensation for health- and medical treatment to asylum seekers. Further, see Socialstyrelsens allmänna råd 1995:4 Hälso- och sjukvård för asylsökande och flyktingar.

[720] Government's proposition 1993/94:94 Mottagande av asylsökande m.m.

[721] See Utrikesdepartementet, Sverige, Underrättelse om nationella åtgärder för att uppfylla Sveriges förpliktelser i Europeiska unionen, bilaga 15. (Communication from the Swedish Foreign Ministry to the European Comission, Attachment 15.) See also Government's proposition 1993/94 :94 Mottagande av asylsökande m.fl.

[722] Government's proposition 2005/06:46 Mottagande av ensamkommande barn. Concerning children – see also Q.32A.

Q.4. Explain the legal technical choices done to transpose the directive (comment on the nature and level of the norms used to do the transposition: legislative, regulatory, administrative like instructions, etc). Add any other element about the technique of transposition of the directive which is interesting for the implementation of Community law.

Adjustments have been made both in different Acts, mainly in the Act on the reception of asylum seekers, in the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers and in the instructions issued by the Migration Board. A basic ascertainment regarding the implementation of Directive 2003/9 into Swedish law is that only minor adjustments have been necessary, since the established regulations and practice in the main were in line with the Directive.[723]

Q.5. Mention if there is a general tendency to just copy the provisions of the directive into national legislation without redrafting or adaptation them to national circumstances? If yes, give some of the worst examples and explain if there is a risk that those provisions remain unapplied or will create difficulties of implementation in the future.

Hence, already before the Directive was taken by the Council, Sweden had regulations concerning the reception of asylum seekers. Further, there already was a judicial practice as well as a practice developed by the competent State authority.

Q.6. Have all the texts necessary to ensure the effective implementation of the new rules of transposition been adopted, prepared or at least foreseen in the future (for example a regulation completing a new law and the necessary instructions telling the administration how to apply the new rules)?

In the main all the necessary texts have been taken in order to ensure the effective implementation of the Directive.

2. BIBLIOGRAPHY

Q.7. Has an in-depth preparatory study been made public about the changes at the occasion of the transposition? If yes, thanks for trying to provide us a copy (please contact to answer this question adequately the body and person who was responsible for the preparation of the transposition of the directive in the public administration).

In an Official report presented in 2003 the existing regulations concerning the reception of asylum seekers were examined.[724] Further, the practical dealing with the reception of asylum seekers was investigated. The public investigation was appointed by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The minister in charge was the Migration minister Mrs. Barbro Holmberg and the investigator appointed was (regeringsrådet) Mr. Mats Melin from the Government's office. A practical field study on the reception conditions was presented. The main conclusion from the

[723] Official report SOU 2003:89 EG-rätten och mottagandet av asylsökande.
[724] Official report SOU 2003:89 EG-rätten och mottagandet av asylsökande.

Official report was that Swedish law in the main was in accordance with the Directive and only minor amendments were suggested.[725]

Q.8. Quote any recent scientific book or article published about the directive, the transposition rules or the question of reception conditions for asylum seekers in general (answer even if this literature is only available in your language and provide the complete title in your language (without translation) with all references; indicate author, title, in case name of periodical, year and place of publication).

There is no recent scientific book or article published about the transposition of the Directive into Swedish law.

Q.9. Quote any interesting decision of jurisprudence based on the implementation of the new rules of transposition of the directive (indicate references of publication if any)?

Concerning interesting judicial practice, there are no cases to report on especially concerning the Directive. However, there are some previously judicial decisions that are relevant to refer to; see Q.21E.

3. GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

The purpose of the following two questions is to help the reader to understand easily and quickly the system of reception conditions in your Member State and also to avoid that you have to repeat general elements in other parts of the questionnaire. Please do not write more than one or maximum two pages and do not include large historical developments.

Q.10. Describe in general the system of reception conditions in your Member State (in particular which are the main actors in charge of reception conditions?)

Primary the Migration Board is the authority in charge of the reception of asylum seekers, although the first official representatives the foreigner meets at the border is from the police or maybe a customs officer, but as soon as it is clear that a foreigner seeks protection the Migration Board takes over.

The Migration Board makes an investigation, an application for asylum is drawn up, information on reception conditions etc. should be given, the foreigner's accommodation is arranged etc. A remark to be observed when analysing the reception of asylum seekers, is that also an application for so called subsidiary protection explicitly should be treated as an application for asylum.

An asylum seeker waiting for a decision on the application for asylum can choose between living with relatives or friends or in any of the apartments rented by the Migration Board.

[725] The Official report SOU 2003:89 EG-rätten och mottagandet av asylsökande is available on the Government's webbsite: http://www.regeringen.se/sb/d/108/a/1429
http://www.regeringen.se/sb/d/108/a/1429

During the waiting period the asylum seeker is expected to participate in organised activities, such as learning the Swedish language or practical helping to other foreigners coming to Sweden.

An asylum seeker with money should pay for his or her living, but if the applicant does not have any money he or she is entitled to a daily allowance (dagersättning) and other facilities for daily life.

Asylum seekers are entitled to acute medical treatment and dental service. Asylum seekers under the age of 18 have the right to free medical treatment and dental service. However, all asylum seekers and their relatives are entitled to a free, voluntary examination of health. The aim is to find out if there is an immediate need for medical treatment. Another reason is to see to society's need for infectious measures.

Local authorities are entitled to State financial compensation or reimbursement for the dealing with asylum seekers. The subsidies are – among others – for health care, dental care and schooling.[726] As mentioned above (see Q.3) there is an agreement between the Government and the Swedish Association of Local Authorities and Regions concerning State compensation for health care beyond acute treatment to asylum seekers. Further, a supplementary legislation on the matter is being prepared by the Government (see Q.3).

Asylum seeking children should be kept together with their families and the children are entitled to schooling and health care. Special attention should be paid to unaccompanied children and children having certain needs.[727] Further, the local authority should be responsible for unaccompanied children when the Migration Board has assigned the child to a place in a municipality.

Asylum seekers are entitled to accept employment and work if the Migration Board's dealing with the application for asylum could is calculated to take more than four months. If the employment is somewhere in a place where the Board cannot offer a place to live, the asylum seeker has the right to benefit for housing, if the work lasts for more than three months.

In order to facilitate the introduction of the asylum seeker in society there is a need for co-operation between different authorities. The Swedish Labour Market Board, the Swedish Migration Board, the Swedish Integration Board, the Swedish Board of Education, the Swedish National Agency for School Improvement and the Swedish Association of Local Authorities have agreed to develop an introduction for refugees and other immigrants.[728]

According to the agreement the asylum seeker's educational background and work experience shall be examined. Individuals with working experiences shall have a certain right to consultation at the local employment office. Should the result from the application procedure be the granting of a residence permit, the co-operation between different authorities will continue in accordance with the agreement. However, even if the agreement concerning the [726] See the Ordinance (2002:1118) on state compensation for asylum seekers.

[727] See also the Migration Board's Aliens handbook (ch. 33.8).
[728] Agreement on the development of the introduction of refugees and other immigrants. (Revised in March 1, 2004.)

introduction in society, plans, programmes etc. is very ambitious, there have been problems realising the intentions.[729]

In 2005 a temporary regulation in the former Aliens Act was taken by the Riksdag. Rejected applications for asylum and decisions on expulsion that – for any reason – had not been executed, could be reconsidered in accordance with the new Act, which came into force in November 15, 2005 (see SFS 2005:762).[730] The foreigners embraced – many were keeping away – by the amendment, should hand in another application for a residence permit, or otherwise the Migration Board could bring up the matter for a new consideration before March 31, 2006. Following this temporary procedure around 30,000 foreigners applied for residence permits and the number of occupied places in accommodation centres was increasing temporarily.

Q.11. Q11. A. Explain if you have different types and levels of reception conditions following the different stages of the asylum procedure (this implies that you have to give briefly the necessary explanations about the asylum procedure). Make if relevant for reception conditions a distinction between the following procedural stages: determination of the responsible Member State on the basis of the Dublin II regulation, special procedures at the border (including transit zones in airports), accelerated procedures, admissibility procedures, eligibility procedures and the different possibilities of appeals (suspensive or not) against a refusal of the asylum request. Indicate what the main differences of reception conditions are between the different stages (if necessary by detailing between the different elements of reception conditions, in particular housing) and explain what the evolution of reception conditions is following the different stages of the procedure.

Q 11. B. Indicate precisely for which stage(s) of the asylum procedure the answers on reception conditions you give below are valid.

Answer to Q.11.A and Q.11.B:
In principle, the Migration Board shall offer the asylum seeker a place at an accommodation centre. This follows from the regulation in the Act on the reception of asylum seekers. However, by way of introduction a comment should be made regarding the term "accommodation centre" ("förläggning") used in regulations. Practically, the procedure is that the reception of the asylum seeker will take place in an application centre. When the application for asylum (or subsidiary protection) is made at the centre, the foreigner will be accommodated in an apartment provided by the Migration Board or the foreigner could choose to stay with relatives or friends already in Sweden.

Further, when the application has been made and the foreigner is registered, he or she will be entitled to reception conditions founded on the Act on the reception of asylum seekers, even if there is a temporary and very short stay in an application housing (see below) waiting for a more permanent lodging.

[729] See Integrationsverket (the Swedish Integration Board), Integrationsverkets rapport 2000:5 Integrationsverkets kartläggning av kommunernas introduktionsverksamhet. See also Riksrevisionen (the State Audit Institution), Statliga insatser för nyanlända invandrare, Stockholm 2006.
[730] The Riksdag's standing committee on social questions 2005/06:SfU5 Ny prövning av avvisnings- och utvisningsbeslut.

In Sweden there is no division of accommodation in relation to different stages of the asylum procedure beyond the beginning of the procedure, which starts with a visit at one of the Migration Board's application units (in Stockholm, Göteborg, Malmö, Norrköping or Gävle, where the first steps in the procedure are taken, for instance registration of the application for asylum or protection.[731] (The system with application units as well as application housing [see below] has replaced the former "transition units" from September 1, 2006.)

If the applicant needs an accommodation arranged by the Migration Board, he or she could stay temporary in a so called "application housing" (in Stockholm, Göteborg or Malmö). Further, the reception conditions should apply from the first day when the application for asylum etc. is handed in to the Migration Board.

If the foreigner arrives at the airport and declares that he or she will apply for asylum or protection, the foreigner will meet the Migration Board staff. A refusal of entering Sweden should – regarding an asylum seeker – be taken by the Migration Board (the Aliens Act ch. 8 § 4).

It is also possible that the foreigner applies for asylum after a short stay in Sweden, and if so the application normally is made at the nearest application unit. In such cases the foreigner often already might be living with friends or relatives in Sweden. In fact most of the asylum seekers apply for asylum after staying for a period in Sweden.

Regularly a foreigner seeking asylum will be transmitted to the nearest Migration Board's application unit. The units are open 24 hours and the Migration Board's staff are always ready to help the asylum seekers to satisfy their acute need for lodging, and they will also give basic information regarding the reception of asylum seekers. A stay at an application housing is – as mentioned above – supposed to be short. A practical examination of the asylum procedure has shown that normally the stay a former transit unit could be expected to be not more than five days.[732]

If the foreigners agree, family members should be kept together as far as possible.[733]

The initial examination is concerning the fulfilment of basic requirements for staying in Sweden and the application for asylum is set up. The examination could for instance — referring to the Dublin II regulation – deal with if the application for asylum should be made in Sweden.

When the application for asylum is made, there is an introductory meeting at the application unit and the registration is dealt with. The applicant has to give an account for incomes, cash and other personal circumstances relevant to the decision on assistance and decisions are taken concerning the daily allowance and housing is offered. Further, the asylum seeker should also receive information regarding the right to appeal against decisions taken by the authorities.

[731] See for instance the Official report SOU 2003:89 EG-rätten och mottagandet av asylsökande, p. 47.
[732] Official report SOU 2003:89 EG-rätten och mottagandet av asylsökande.
[733] That is stated in the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers § 2c. Further, in § 2d there is a corresponding regulation concerning unaccompained children and efforts should be made to find family members. (Amended through SFS 2005:16.)

The foreigner gets a receipt of the application of asylum; photographs are taken for the issuing of an LMA card (the document refers to the Directive, article 6.1). Hence, from this point the foreigner is covered by the Act on the reception of asylum seekers (see the Act § 1.1), and he or she is entitled to assistance in accordance with the Act. (See also Q.14.)

Regarding housing the applicants for asylum are asked about how their living should be arranged. Regularly they are offered a place at an accommodation centre, but they are also informed that they are free to stay with relatives or friends.

An important aspect of the procedure is the right to appeal against decisions taken by the State. In April 30, 2006, a new legal procedure concerning appeal against decisions taken by the Migration Board was introduced through the new Aliens Act.[734] The former Aliens Board dealing with appeals against the Migration Board's decision was laid down and a Migration Court should be the new authority dealing with appeals (the Aliens Act ch. 16). Appeals against the decision taken by the Migration Court should be dealt with by the Supreme Migration Court (ch. 16 § 9).

The meaning of the new procedure was to introduce a clear two-party procedure and also to reduce the former order when an asylum seeker after a rejection of the application for asylum could hand in another application and restart the process. The result was often very long time dealing with a case leading to human suffering for the individual.[735]

In accordance with the new Aliens Act ch. 14 § 3 a decision taken by the Migration Board on expulsion, a rejected application for a residence permit and more, may be appealed against at a Migration Court. Further, a decision to keep a foreigner in custody and more should be appealed against in a Migration Court (ch. 14 § 9). If there is an appeal against a decision referring to the Aliens Act ch. 8 § 6 (refused entry because there was obviously no ground for granting asylum) it should be tried if the execution of the decision not to enter Sweden should be inhibited (the Aliens Act ch. 12 § 10).

Also the Government can take a decision to cancel the execution of a decision to refuse entry or to expel a foreigner (see the Aliens Act ch. 12 § 11).

In accordance with the Aliens Act ch. 14 § 2 a decision taken by a police authority can be appealed against at the Migration Board. A decision to refuse entry to Sweden taken by the police can be executed even if there is an appeal against the decision (the Aliens Act ch. 12 § 6). However, regarding asylum seekers a decision to refuse entry – as stated above – should always be taken by the Migration Board.

A general note to be observed is that when taking decisions on expulsion, the refoulment regulations in the Aliens Act ch. 12 §§ 1–3 should always be considered.

When the foreigner's application for asylum is made the right to appeal will focus on other decisions dealing with the asylum seeker's situation. A decision referring to the Act on the reception of asylum seekers, taken by the Migration Board or a Social welfare board, could be appealed against at an Administrative court, more specifically the County administrative court in the district where the asylum seeker was staying at the time the decision was taken (see the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 22). However, a decision on assistance based on the Act on the reception of asylum seekers has immediate effect. (See also Q.22.)

[734] Government's proposition 2004/05:170 Ny instans- och processordning i utlännings- och medborgarskapsärenden.
[735] See Government's proposition 2004/05:170 Ny instans- och processordning i utlännings- och medborgarskapsärenden, pp. 105 f. Further, oral dealing before a decision is taken was emphasised.

Concerning the right to legal assistance there is a regulation in the Legal aid Act (1996:1619). In accordance with § 4 legal aid might be given for two hours by a lawyer (or an assistant lawyer). The client should pay a fee for the advice, but the adviser may set down the fee to 50 percent referring to the client's economic resources. If the client is a minor the fee can be fully reduced for the same reason. Further, the legal adviser is entitled to a reasonable compensation from the State, including compensation for the use of an interpreter.

(On matters concerning expulsion and more, a public assistant (offentligt biträde) should be appointed in accordance with the Aliens Act ch. 18.)

4. GENERAL RULES ON RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.12. Q 12. A. Are material reception conditions provided in kind, in money or in vouchers or in a combination of these elements (see article 13, §5 which is an optional provision)? Distinguish between the different elements (housing, food, clothes, health, transportation, pocket money,…). If reception conditions are provided in money (in general or in some cases, for instance when no places are anymore available in accommodation centres), indicate the precise amount given to the asylum seekers. Indicate in your answer what is provided in general and if there are exceptional cases. Specify in your answer if reception conditions are different from the general system of social aid for nationals or aliens and if yes, if and when (which stage of the asylum procedure) can asylum seekers have access to the general system of social aid?

Different forms of reception conditions are available (compare the Directive, article 13). In accordance with the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 13 assistance is provided for as a:

- daily allowance (dagsersättning),
- particular allowance (särskilt bidrag),
- compensation for housing (bostadsersättning).

The daily allowance is paid in money and should cover expenses for food-stuffs, clothes, free time activities, hygiene products and other articles of consumption (the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers § 4[736]). A precondition for this entitlement is that the foreigner does hot have money to pay for his or her own living.

The daily allowance is 7,6 Euro (SEK 71) for a single person; 6,6 Euro (SEK 61) for a person who is living together with another person; 4 Euro (SEK 37) for children 0–3 years old; 4,6 Euro (SEK 43) for children 4–10 years old; 5,4 Euro (SEK 50) for children 11–17 years old and 6,6 Euro (SEK 61) for a home staying adult. (The amounts are including the foreigner's own food providing; Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers § 6, and a precondition is that the foreigner cannot provide for him or herself; compare the Directive, article 13.3.)

[736] See also the Migration Board's Aliens handbook (ch. 33).

Further the daily allowance should cover health care costs, dental care costs, phone calls, medicine and more, if such costs are not covered by the Ordinance on charge for nursing care for certain foreigners (the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers § 5). The daily allowance is reduced when free food is included in lodging (§ 6). Finally, there are reductions for families with more than two children (§ 6).

The particular allowance should be granted in order to provide for certain needs. The examples presented in the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers § 7 are for instance winter clothes, glasses, handicap equipment and equipment for babies. The allowances can also cover fees for health care, medicine and charges for nursing care.

The housing normally is in flats depending on the circumstances and it is provided in-kind. By "in-kind" I mean that the asylum seeker has a right to accommodation and that he or she will not have to pay if they don't have money to pay with. If the asylum seeker has money he or she should pay a reasonable compensation to the Migration Board (the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 15).

If food is provided the asylum seeker will have a reduction on the daily allowance. The reduction is specified in the Ordinance. In practice the providing for food or money is dependent on for instance the number of asylum seekers living in a flat etc. It is often more practical to let the asylum seeker have a sum of money to by the food, and if so there is no reduction of the daily allowance.

The compensation for housing is only for those who have been granted a working permit, have been employed or offered an employment for at least three months and in order to take the employment must move to a place where the Migration Board cannot offer housing (the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers § 4).[737] The compensation is 37,8 Euro (SEK 350) per month or 91,8 Euro (SEK 850) per month if also the foreigner's family moves to the other place.

A person covered by the Act on the reception of asylum seekers is not entitled to assistance founded on the Social services Act. (See the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 1.) However, unaccompanied children seeking asylum are embraced by the Social services Act. These children should be assigned to a municipality that in practice often has concluded an agreement with the Migration Board concerning the reception of the children.[738]

When a child has been assigned to a municipality, the child is considered to stay in that municipality in accordance with the Social services Act 2 ch. § 2.[739] Hence, the local authority has the responsibility for the child and for providing the child with the support and help that the child needs.[740] The form of the assistance depends on what kind of assistance the child needs. Hence, a certain amount or form for the service is not specified.

[737] Government's proposition 2004/05:28 Bostadsersättning för asylsökande. In accordance with the proposition the compensation for housing was taken away for asylum seekers living on their own and not fulfilling the requirements. See also instructions from the Migration Board, Migrationsverkets föreskrifter om ändring i Migrationsverkets föreskrifter (MIGRFS 2003:10) om mottagande av asylsökande m.m.

[738] Such an agreement is a prerequisite for the local authority's right to certain stereotyped financial contributions for unaccompanied children.

[739] See also the Migration Board's Aliens handbook (ch. 33.8).

Concerning unaccompanied children and the local authorities' responsibility referring to the Social services Act, there are critics on the field fearing that this division of labour between the Migration Board and municipalities on the local level will not work, and that it would be a better solution to assign the Migration Board to have the responsibility for the child.

Q 12. B. Can the reception conditions in kind, money or vouchers be considered as sufficient "to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence" as requested by article 13, §2 of the directive (which is a mandatory provision but leaves a certain space to Member States)? In order to help to assess the respect of this rule when reception conditions are provided in money, include if necessary in your answer points of comparison with the minimum amount of social aid guaranteed for nationals in your Member State.

The amount of money paid as a daily allowance etc. should be sufficient "to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence" (the Directive, article 13.2).

The level of assistance to asylum seekers is fixed by the Government in the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers (§ 6), and a leading word is that the level should secure a "tolerable" standard of living.

Comparatively, the right to assistance in accordance with the Social services Act, should be enough to secure a "reasonable level" considering the receiver's standard of living, the amount of money provided as assistance to asylum seekers is low.[741] Further, critics have pointed out that the levels for assistance to asylum seekers have been fixed since 1994, and that today the level must be considered to be too low.

In order to make a more precise specification you must consider that it is difficult to compare the daily allowance and other compensation to asylum seekers with the norm that follows from the Social services Act. When the Social services Act should apply the amount is specified in the Social services Ordinance (2001:937) ch. 2 § 1, but this amount is based on a calculation of a person's or family's needs and more. In accordance with the Ordinance a single person should have 283 Euro (SEK 2640) per month and a couple 512 Euro (SEK 4770). However, a flat, telephone, TV, newspaper etc. is not included and could lead to more compensation, which could vary for instance referring to the size of a person's flat and more. Further, the amount specified is a minimum and the sum to apply could vary in different municipalities. A Swedish citizen will be reimbursed for more costs dependent on the circumstances in the individual's situation compared with an asylum seeker that will have an allowance on around 226,5 Euros (SEK 2.100) and with a more restricted possibility to have reimbursement for many additional costs.

[740] In Government's proposition 2005/06:46 Mottagande av ensamkommande barn, it is stated that the Migration Board will have the overall responsibility for the child, but the consequences of the division of responsibility between the Board and the local authorities in the municipality should be subject to further investigation by the Board. (See Government's proposition 2005/06:46, p. 39.)

[741] In the Migration Board's Aliens handbook (ch. 33) it is explicitly stated that there is no connection between the level of assistance in accordance with the Act on the reception of asylum seekers and the national standard that is recommended by the the National Board of Health and Welfare for the application of the the Social services Act.

Hence, one could estimate that the allowance granted for an asylum seeker, in accordance with the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers, is around maximum 80 percent of the norm to be applied in accordance with the Social Services Act, but at the same time this comparison is a grave estimation that do not consider the possibility to have extra benefits based on the Social Services Act, and the asylum seeker will not be entitled to these benefits. Hence, in practice the asylum seeker will maybe have not more than 40–50 percent of the norm stipulated in the Social Services Ordinance, but I will emphasize that any specification of an exact figure on the matter could be questioned. (The sums specified above do not include lodging.)

5. PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

Q.13. Q 13. A. Does the national legislation specifically provide that a request for international protection is presumed to be under the Geneva Convention unless explicitly requested otherwise? (see article 2, b which is a mandatory provision)

A request for international protection in accordance with the Aliens Act ch. 4 § 2 should explicitly be dealt with as an application for asylum (see the Aliens Act ch. 1 § 12). This regulation should not apply if the foreigner explicitly requests otherwise. (Compare the Directive, article 2b.)

Q. 13. B. Explain if the scope of application of reception conditions is extended to other asylum seekers than refugees in the sense of the Geneva Convention, in particular to persons asking for subsidiary protection or to other forms of protection like humanitarian statuses (see article 3, § 4 which is an optional provision)? If not, explain briefly which the differences between these special regimes and the directive are.

The scope of application of the Act on the reception of asylum seekers embraces both persons who have applied for residence permit referring to the Aliens Act ch. 4 § 1 as well as persons who have applied for protection referring to ch. 4 § 2 and even other forms of international protection (see the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 1.1–3). Hence, the Act on the reception of asylum seekers also embraces a person who applies for a residence permit referring to "particular distressing circumstances" (the Aliens Act ch. 4 § 6) as well as people who have been granted residence permit for temporary protection (the Aliens Act ch. 21) and some more. If a child should be granted a residence permit referring to the Aliens Act ch. 4 § 6, the requirements for granting the permit could be set lower than for adults.

Q. 13. C. Are there specific provisions in national law for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation (see article 3, §2 which is an optional provision)?

Regarding reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation, there are no regulations found in Swedish law (compare the Directive, article 3.2, which is not mandatory), and there are no regulations concerning reception conditions in such cases found in the Act on the reception of asylum seekers.[742]

Q.14. Are reception conditions available as from the moment one asylum application is introduced? How is article 13, §1 which is mandatory legally understood? Do asylum seekers have to satisfy any other condition in order to get reception conditions?

In principle reception conditions should be available from the moment the asylum application is made (in accordance with the Directive, article 13.1) (see section 1 in the The law on the reception of asylum seekers (1994:137). Beyond the daily allowance regulated in the Act on reception of asylum seekers, there is a certain contribution for special needs (§ 18; for instance for winter clothes at the arrival).

A precondition for the entitlements is that the foreigner is registered at an accommodation centre; in practice an application centre (the Act on reception of asylum seekers § 8). (Concerning the point of time for access to benefits, see also Q.11, and concerning the term "accommodation centre", see also Q.23.) Further, more detailed regulations concerning for instance the periodizing of benefits and more are found in the Migration Board's statute-book.[743]

The public investigation presented in 2003 shows that in practice more than 50 percent of the asylum seekers had access to benefits, for instance the daily allowance, within one to three days.[744] In practice sometimes delays for different reasons had occurred, uncertainty regarding the application, misunderstanding etc. that may have caused imperfections. However, the conclusion from the public investigation was that Swedish law fulfils the requirements from the directive.[745]

Q.15. Explain when reception conditions end, for instance after refusal of the asylum request (include in your answer the link with the right of appeal against a decision of refusal of the status, in particular the question of its suspensive effect)

In principle the right to assistance will cease if the foreigner is granted a residence permit or if the foreigner leaves Sweden (the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 11).

A foreigner that has been granted a residence permit but still is staying in a Migration Board accommodation centre, is entitled to assistance if he or she has not been assigned a place – or has not been able to utilize such an assignment – in a local municipality (§ 8). A foreigner that is not staying in a Migration Board accommodation centre is entitled to assistance during a month after a residence permit has been granted (§ 8).

[742] Looking back, in exceptional situations in the 1970s there were cases when Chileans applied for asylum directly at the Swedish embassy in Santiago.
[743] See also MIGRFS 2003:10 Migrationsverkets föreskrifter om mottagande av asylsökande m.m.
[744] Official report SOU 2003:89 EG-rätten och mottagandet av asylsökande, p. 139.
[745] Official report SOU 2003:89 EG-rätten och mottagandet av asylsökande, p. 144.

A foreigner that is keeping away or is hiding so that a deportation order cannot be executed, is not entitled to assistance (§ 12).

Further, the daily allowance can be reduced or withdrawn if the asylum seeker refuses to take part in organised activities without a valid reason, if he or she obstructs the investigation in the case, does not cooperate to clarify the personal identity or makes it difficult to carry out the investigation concerning the right to residence permit by keeping away (the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 10).[746]

Concerning reduced allowances the reason presented by the foreigner for not, for instance, participating in organised activities should be considered.[747] If the foreigner is offered a place in a Migration Board accommodation centre and free food is included, the daily allowance might be withdrawn (the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 10). (Concerning reduction or withdrawal of assistance – see also Q.21A.)

An appeal introduced by the asylum seeker against a decision (see also Q.22), will not lead to a withdrawal or a reduction of the assistance. The person will still be considered as an asylum seeker and is entitled to the assistance in connection to that legal status. That follows indirectly from the Act on the reception of asylum seekers §§ 10–12 where the basis for possible reductions etc. of assistance are stipulated.

Q.16 Are there special rules or practices regarding reception conditions in case of successive applications for asylum introduced by the same person?

Regarding reception conditions in case of successive applications for asylum introduced by the same person, the Act on the reception of asylum seekers should apply. A successive application means that the person as an asylum seeker will be embraced by the Act.

A considerable consequence is that in such cases the Act on the reception of asylum seekers (§ 1) stipulates that the person should not be embraced by the Social services Act (see also Q.12A). Hence, in case of successive application the asylum seeker will lose his or her benefits founded on the Social services Act, for instance the right to housing supplementary allowance.

In an integration perspective this could be very negative for the individual, since he or she may not be able to pay the rent for an apartment, which might lead to a report and execution from the enforcement service and, further, to a record for non-payment of debt. Following this, in the future the person will have trouble getting for instance a bank loan.

Such consequences will often occur, according to informants. However, practically in certain municipalities the parties await the registration of the asylum seeker in order not to put the individual concerned in an awkward situation, although this dealing with the matter is not in accordance with law, it is more a humanitarian way to deal with the situation.

[746] In the Official report 2003:89 EG-rätten och mottagandet av asylsökande it was discussed whether the possibility to reduce or withdraw allowances was in accordance with the Directive. However, a precondition was that the foreigner's need could be met in any other way, and a recommendation from the investigation was to clarify this in an instruction on the application of the regulations concerned. (See the Official report, p. 152 ff.)
[747] Compare Government's proposition 1993/94:94 Mottagande av asylsökande m.m., p. 49.

Q.17. Information of asylum seekers about their rights and obligations in terms of reception conditions, in particular about established benefits (see article 5 which is too large extend a mandatory provision; do not confuse this question with the information to be provided to asylum seekers about the asylum procedure):

Q. 17. A. Are asylum seekers informed, and if yes about what precisely?

In accordance with the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers (amendment through SFS 2005:16), the Migration Board should inform the asylum seeker on different benefits and forms for assistance and how to obtain them (§ 2a). Before the amendment made in 2005 Swedish law did not explicitly regulate this right to information in certain respects.[748]

In the Migration Board's Aliens handbook (ch. 33) there is a detailed list of the content of the information provided. For instance, information should be presented concerning the Act on the reception of asylum seekers, including the entitlements referring to the Act, the right to health and medical care, regarding work permits, information on parenthood, Swedish legislation and more.

Q. 17. B. Is the information provided in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

Q.17. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify the list of languages in which it is available

(Answer to Q.17 B-C)
The asylum seeker should obtain written information on different benefits etc.[749] If there is a need for it information should also be presented orally (the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers § 2a).

Also in the Migration Board's Aliens handbook there are instructions that the foreigner at the registration at a Migration Board accommodation centre should be informed about allowances, right to health and dental care and more. In practice also written information is provided in many languages.[750] Regarding languages, translation to new languages is continuously made depending on what nationalities that for the moment are seeking asylum.

[748] Official report SOU 2003:89 EG-rätten och mottagandet av asylsökande, pp. 50 f.
[749] An example is Migrationsverket (the Migration Board), Reception of asylum seekers in Sweden (fact sheet), see (in English) http://www.migrationsverket.se/infomaterial/asyl/allmant/mottagandet_en.pdf
[750] The Migration Board's introducing fact sheet on these matters was at a certain point of time in 2003 available in seven languages: Albanian, Arabic, English, Frensch, Spanish and in a commonly understood version for people from Bosnia, Croatia and Serbia. See Official report SOU 2003:89 EG-rätten och mottagandet av asylsökande, p. 46. In 2006 there are examples in practice that some fact sheets are presented in more languages. The number of languages is depending on the number of nationalities of the asylum seekers atthe moment.

Further, at the local Migration Board centres information on the local society is provided (local map, where social and commercial service is situated etc.).

However, from NGOs there are reports that there are sometimes problems in getting correct information, and both UNHCR and NGO representatives underline the need for current information and to make sure that the asylum seeker really understands the information, which is a practical problem to consider.

Q. 17. D. Is the deadline of maximum 15 days respected?

In accordance with the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers, the information should be provided as soon as possible and not later than 15 days after the application for a residence permit (§ 2a).

The practical evaluation of the application of the asylum seeker's right to information, made by a public investigation and which was presented in 2003, showed that the asylum seekers in practice obtained the information requested, as soon as possible and not later than 15 days after the application for residence permit.

In 2006-2007 the Swedish Migration Board performed an internal investigation on the exercise of authority in the reception of asylum seekers. According to this investigation there are divergences between the different reception centres on both the content and the ways to inform asylum seekers. The investigation concludes that there is a need for a more thorough investigation in order to have a more uniform practice in these aspects and to be able to determine if the standards of the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers and the Directive is met in practice.[751]

Q.18. Information of asylum seekers about the existence of organisations or groups promoting their interest and defending their rights (see article 5 which is to a large extend a mandatory provision):

Q. 18. A. Is there a list of organisations dressed by the authorities and if yes is it comprehensive? Is this in particular the case about the possibilities to get legal assistance and health care?

Q. 18. B. Is the information provided to the asylum seekers, and if yes, in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

(Answers to Q.18.A-B)
In accordance with the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers, the asylum seeker should have information about organisations or groups providing judicial assistance. Further, information should be given concerning organisations giving support or information on the right to reception conditions, health care and medical service (§ 2a; amendment through SFS 2005:16; compare the Directive, article 5.1).

The Swedish representatives from UNHCR have the impression that asylum seekers are informed about different organisations, although it is underlined that the information could be improved. Further, there are examples that NGOs have been invited to inform about the organisations' activities concerning asylum seekers. A practical problem regarding information about NGOs etc. follows from the fact that the asylum seekers are dispersed, living in different places, in apartments etc., which however from other points of view is considered to be positive.

[751] See Översyn av myndighetsutövningen inom Migrationsverkets mottagningsverksamhet p. 14 2007-01-22 www.migrationsverket.se/swedish/press/dokument/översyn_myndighetsutovning.pdf

An example of regular meetings, exchange of information and planning between the Migration Board and NGOs, is the activity at the accommodation centre in Boden (a town in the north of Sweden). Once a month or at least every second month the Migration Board staff meets NGO representatives, and once a year they arrange a day devoted to a particular theme or topic.

In practice there is no existing central list of organisations. Practitioners on the field report that the information provided is very much dependent on local initiatives, and this impression is confirmed by the NGOs in Sweden. An informant from an accommodation centre has indicated that in practice it is up to the official dealing with a case to inform the asylum seeker regarding supporting organisations. Hence, a recommendation from the reporter is to set up a central list of the NGO organisations and other groups supporting asylum seekers and to make it open for completion on the local level.

Q. 18. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify if possible the list of languages in which it is available.

The Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers does not stipulate anything about the language regarding this kind of information. However, an informant from an accommodation centre reports that information is available in different languages that varies depending on what nationalities that are seeking asylum. (Compare Q.17B-C.)

Q. 18. D. How many organisations are active in that field in your Member State?

Six or more NGOs are active in Sweden and are working with asylum seekers and refugees.[752] However, beside there are also other groups such as local organisations, temporary groups and people active within the church.

Q.19. Documentation of asylum seekers (see article 6):

Q.19. A. What kind of document is delivered to the asylum seeker? Explain the legal value of this document (just a certification of the status as asylum seeker or also prove of identity?) (see §1 of article 6 which is a mandatory provision)

[752] Amnesty, Caritas Sverige (Caritas Sweden), Flyktinggruppernas och Asylkommittéernas Riksråd (FARR ; not in English), Rådgivningsbyrån (Swedish Refugee Advice Centre), Rädda Barnen (Save the Children Sweden) and Röda Korset (Red Cross Sweden) have been contacted for the present study. However, the reporter will point out that the list of organisations active on these matters is not complete.

The asylum seeker is provided with an LMA card issued by the Migration Board (compare the Directive, article 6.1). Regulations on the issuing of the card are found in the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers and – in detail – in the Migration Board's statute-book.[753]

The LMA card certifies the foreigner's right to entitlements granted to an asylum seeker, including the right to stay on Swedish territory until the application for a residence permit has been dealt with. The LMA card does not fulfil the requirements of a legal identity card, although there is a photograph on the document showing the card holder. (Concerning these matters the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers was amended in 2005 through SFS 2005:16.)

Q.19. B. Are there situations or specific cases in which another equivalent document or even no document is issued? (in particular is there an exception for "procedures to decide on the right of the applicant legally to enter the territory" as made possible by §2 of article 6)?

Further, the receipt of the application for asylum (see Q.11) is a temporary document that certifies the asylum seeker's legal status as an asylum seeker waiting for the LMA card to be issued, which should be done within fourteen days (compare the Directive, article 6.2.).[754] In practice the receipt is connected to a document with a photograph of the asylum seeker, and the receipt works as a proof of the asylum seeker's right to health and medical care, discount on pharmacy products in pharmacies etc.

Q.19. C. For how long is this document in principle valid and is it necessary to renew it after a certain period?

The LMA card's period of validity varies depending on the estimation of how long the dealing with the application will take. However, in accordance with the Migration Board's statute-book the maximum valid period is 6 months.[755] Further, the card could be renewed after the 6 months period or if the card is lost.

Q.19. D. What is the deadline for the delivery of that document? Is the mandatory deadline of 3 days set by article 6, §1 respected[756]?

In line with the Directive, article 6.1, there is a regulation in the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers § 2b, stating that the asylum seeker should within three days be provided with a document that certifies his or her status as asylum seeker. However, the public investigation in 2003 claimed that there sometimes were practical obstacles to issuing a card within three days.[757]

[753] See MIGRFS 07/2005 Migrationsverkets föreskrift om Tillfälligt LMA-kort för utlänning i Sverige och dokument som intygar att innehavaren är asylsökande. (The Migration Board's instruction on Temporary LMA-card for foreigners in Sweden and a document showing that the holder is an asylum seeker.)
[754] MIGRFS 07/2005 Migrationsverkets föreskrift om Tillfälligt LMA-kort för utlänning i Sverige och dokument som intygar att innehavaren är asylsökande § 7.
[755] MIGRFS 07/2005 Migrationsverkets föreskrift om Tillfälligt LMA-kort för utlänning i Sverige och dokument som intygar att innehavaren är asylsökande.

[757] Official report SOU 2003:89 EG-rätten och mottagandet av asylsökande.

When the application for asylum is made, the foreigner will have a written receipt showing that he or she has applied for residence permit referring to the Aliens Act. The receipt shows that the foreigner is applying for asylum, but it is not a formal document that can be compared with an LMA card.

Informants from accommodation centres have claimed that the issuing of an LMA card normally takes at least 1–2 weeks. However, the receipt on the application for asylum serves as a temporary document in most situations. Hence, the basic requirements from the Directive should be fulfilled (see Q.19B).

Q.19. E. Is it possible for an asylum seeker to get a travel document for serious humanitarian reasons (see §5 of article 6 which is an optional provision)?

A travel document making it possible for an asylum seeker to travel to another State for "serious humanitarian reasons" referring to the Directive, article 6.5, was suggested by the public investigation in 2003.[758]

In the new Aliens Ordinance, that came into force in 2006, there is a regulation in § 12 considering a certain travelling document. If a foreigner does not have a document for travelling that corresponds to a passport and the foreigner has no possibility otherwise to be granted such a document or if particular circumstances are present, the Migration Board might issue an Alien's passport (främlingspass) for travelling. Further, the Migration Board might issue a temporary Alien's passport if a foreigner has an immediate need to travel to or from Sweden (14 §).

The Alien's passport should be issued for at the longest a period of five years (the Aliens Ordinance § 13). Further, there might be a note in the alien's passport restricting the territory. It should also be possible to make a note in the passport if the foreigner's identity is not verified.[759]

Q.19. F. Is there a central system of registration of asylum seekers and is it or not separate from the registration of aliens? If yes, describe it briefly (content) and indicate in particular if it is an electronic database.

A precondition to be entitled to the assistance granted asylum seekers, is that the foreigner is registered at a Migration Board accommodation centre (the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 8). Hence, there is registration both on the local and central level, and the registration could be expected to be computerized.

However, there are restrictions concerning the aim with the register as well as what kind of information that should be stored. (See the Ordinance on treatment of personal particulars in activities referring to acts on aliens law and citizenship.[760])

[758] See Official report SOU 2003:89 EG-rätten och mottagandet av asylsökande.
[759] The latter was introduced in order to counteract the situation where asylum seekers throw away their passports or other identity documents.
[760] Förordning (2001:720) om behandling av personuppgifter i verksamhet enligt utlännings- och medborgarskapslagstiftningen.

Q.20. Residence of asylum seekers :

Q.20. A. Is in principle an asylum seeker free to move on the entire territory of your Member State or only to a limited part of it and in case, which part? (see article 7, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

In principle the asylum seeker is free to move on the entire territory of Sweden. An exception (which in practice is extraordinary) is of course if the foreigner is taken into custody, for instance if it is necessary for an investigation (the Aliens Act ch. 10 §§ 1–2). (See also Q.33B.)

The freedom to move on the entire territory is ultimately guaranteed by the Instrument of government chapter 2 art. 22 paragraph 2 point 4 stating that unless it follows otherwise from special provisions of law, a foreign national within the Realm is equated with a Swedish citizen in respect of protection against deprivation of liberty. Apart from the cases mentioned above where the foreigner is taken into custody there are no hindrance of significance to the freedom to move on the entire territory of Sweden for asylum seekers.

Q.20. B. About the place of residence (see §2 of article 7): explain to which extend the person is free to choose her residence and if this depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance processing of application, attribution of reception conditions,…).

The asylum seeker is free to arrange his or her living, for instance with friends or relatives during the asylum procedure and around half of the asylum seekers prefer to arrange their stay in that way.[761]

Q.20. C. About the place of reception (meaning where the asylum seeker has to stay to benefit from reception conditions) (see § 4 of article 7): explain which are the general rules about the determination of this place (to which extend are the decisions determining the place taken individually and do they take into account the personal situation of the asylum seeker?) and to which extend the person is free to choose it and if it depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance attribution of reception conditions, processing of the application,…).

A precondition for the right to assistance in accordance with the Act on the reception of asylum seekers, is that the foreigner is registered at a Migration Board accommodation centre (the Act § 8). However, from the right to arrange his or her living follows that the asylum seeker does not have to stay in the Migration Board accommodation centre in order to be entitled to assistance.

[761] Compare Migrationsverket (the Migration Board), Årsredovisning 2005 (Annual report), p. 16.

Q.20. D. If all asylum seekers are not placed in accommodation centres because of capacity limits, explain how the persons are distributed between accommodation centres and other accommodation facilities (which authority takes the decisions, on the basis of which elements, can that decision be appealed by the asylum seeker,…)

The Migration Board rents apartments for accommodation, if the asylum seeker does not him- or herself choose to arrange the accommodation.

The Board's aim is to spread the accommodations throughout the local municipality and certain employees at the Board are responsible for accommodation and for planning organised activities, in which the asylum seekers are expected to participate.

The UNHCR experience is that there is enough capacity in the Swedish reception system. However, problems have occurred when the inflow of asylum seekers has peaked, for instance in the beginning of the 1990s. Further, certain disadvantages have been reported regarding asylum seekers living outside the accommodation centers, since difficulties have occurred in the contact between the Migration Boards officials and the asylum seeker when he or she has not been available.

Q.20. E. How can an asylum seeker ask to leave temporarily the place of residence or of reception or an assigned area? How is the individual AND impartial character of the decision ensured? (see §5 of article 7 which is a mandatory provision)

In principle there are no restrictions on the asylum seekers right to travel on Swedish territory (see Q.20.A) (except for situations when an asylum seeker is taken into custody etc. – see Q.33B). However, in practice the asylum seeker should take part in the investigation etc., which means that for practical reasons there could be restrictions. Further, in practice the asylum seeker should take part in organised activities depending among other things on the way the living is organised.

In November 2005 43 percent of the asylum seekers participated in organised activities. A total of 10,192 persons (including 2,996 women) participated; 3,660 persons studied the Swedish language, 2,237 persons were educated in return back matters, 492 persons took part in self management in accommodation centres and 1,470 in occupational practice.[762]

Q.21. Q.21. A. Do rules on reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions exist in internal legislation and if yes in which cases (mention in particular if there are cases not foreseen by article 16, § 1 and 2 which are optional provisions)? Distinguish in your answer between cases of reduction and withdrawal and explain which conditions can be reduced and if access to emergency health care is always ensured as requested by article 16, §4, last sentence.

The assistance granted in accordance with the Act on the reception of asylum seekers could be reduced or withdrawn for different reasons (compare the Directive, article 16). If the foreigner refuses – without any valid reason – to participate in activities organised by the Migration Board, or makes it difficult to carry through the investigation on residence permit, or does not contribute to clarify his or her identity or is keeping away, the daily allowance could be reduced (the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 10). (See also Q.15 regarding reduction or withdrawal of assistance.)

[762] Migrationsverket (the Migration Board), Årsredovisning 2005 (Annual report), p. 15.

Further, for the same reasons the allowance could be withdrawn. In addition to that, the assistance could be fully reduced if a foreigner who is obstructing is offered a place in an accommodation where food is included. The allowance could also be fully reduced if the foreigner without any valid reason does not cooperate to execute a decision on expulsion (amendment in 2004 through SFS 2004:1377[763]). (See also Q.15.)

In 2003 a public investigation showed that the same year the Migration Board at the accommodation centre in Malmö during one month took the decision to reduce the daily allowance in 250 cases. The reason was that the asylum seekers had not participated in organised activities arranged by the Board.[764]

Concerning health care the County council should provide health care to persons who are staying in the district (the Health and medical treatment Act § 4) (See also Q.3.) The County councils will always provide acute health care, in practice even for asylum seekers that are keeping away.

Since the year 2000 children (up to the age of 18) have full entitlements concerning health and medical care (mental care included) as well as dental care on the same conditions as other children in Sweden, and the entitlements also embrace those who keep away (concerning certain problems regarding this, see Q.27B). Further, the County councils' cost should be reimbursed by the State in accordance with the Ordinance on state compensation for health and medical treatment for asylum seekers.

There has been a discussion concerning children's schooling when the family is keeping away, and it has been suggested that it should not be restricted in such situations. The matter is dealt with in an ongoing investigation.

However, the Migration Board claims that in practice the local authorities already have received compensation even for hidden children's schooling as a part of the extra compensation for asylum seeking children that was granted to local authorities in 2005, even though this purpose was not explicitly expressed in the decision.[765] However, if the family and the child is keeping away so that a decision on expulsion cannot be executed, the right to schooling should not apply (see Q.31B).

Q.21. B. Has article 16, §2 dealing with refusal of reception conditions for unreasonably late applications for asylum been transposed by your Member State (or was this case already applicable before transposition)? Are there cases in practice?

[763] Government's proposition 2004/05:28 Bostadsersättning för asylsökande.
[764] Official report SOU 2003:89 EG-rätten och mottagandet av asylsökande, p. 150.
[765] Concerning the extra compensation, see Government's propostion 2005/06:1 Budgetpropositionen för 2006 Bilaga 11. See also Migrationsverket (the Migration Board), PM 2006-05-04 Utbetalning av ersättning för sociala insatser till asylsökande barn.

Refusal of reception conditions or assistance referring to "unreasonable late applications" (compare the Directive, article 16.2) has not, as far as the reporter knows, been applied to asylum seekers in Sweden, and there is no such regulation to apply for that reason. Neither have the UNHCR representatives any information saying that this kind of reason for a refusal has occurred.

Q.21. C. How is it ensured that decisions of reduction or withdrawal are taken individually, objectively AND in particular impartially (for instance through and independent arbitrator) (see article 16, §4 which is a mandatory provision)?

The Migration Board is taking the decision to reduce or make a withdrawal of assistance referring to the Act on the reception of asylum seekers. Further, decisions on assistance based on the Act should have an immediate effect, even if a decision could be appealed against at the County administrative court in the relevant court district where the foreigner was staying when the decision was taken (the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 22). The sa§ 9 regulates that the exercising of authority should be based on objective and impartial grounds.

In 2006-2007 the Swedish Migration Board performed an internal investigation on the exercise of authority concerning the reception of asylum seekers. The reduction or withdrawal of the daily allowance was one of the areas pointed out as a problem since there are divergences in practice between the different reception centres on when to withdraw or reduce the daily allowance.[766] me applies to decisions taken by a social welfare board referring to the Social services Act (the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 22). Fundamentally the Constitution ch. 1

Q.21. D. Is statement 14/03 adopted by the Council at the same moment as the directive respected (see the document attached to our sending)?

In Statement 14/03 the Council dealt with the withdrawal of reception conditions referring to the Directive, article 16. In accordance with the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 10, the daily allowance could be reduced if the asylum seeker refuses to take part in organised activities. Regarding this the Swedish standpoint – according to officials at the Foreign Ministry – is that the level of assistance after the reduction fulfils the requirements raised by the Directive (the Foreign Ministry).

Q.21. E. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements on cases of reduction, withdrawal or refusal which have been taken, and if yes, what has been the outcome?

From the former judicial practice, there are some examples of cases to report on concerning assistance to asylum seekers. In Case 3565-1995 the Administrative court of appeal in Stockholm rejected an appeal concerning assistance for buying winter clothes. The applicant had had daily allowances for six months, and it should have been possible to save money for buying winter clothes.

[766] See Översyn av myndighetsutövningen inom Migrationsverkets mottagningsverksamhet p. 17 2007-01-22 www.migrationsverket.se/swedish/press/dokument/översyn_myndighetsutovning.pdf

In Case 1229-1995 the Administrative court of appeal in Jönköping rejected an appeal concerning assistance for buying maternity wear. The Court did not find the clothes necessary for a "tolerable living". (Compare Q.12B.)

In a judgement in July 8, 1996, the Administrative court of appeal in Stockholm approved an appeal concerning particular assistance on 104,6 Euro (SEK 970) for repairing a pair of glasses.

Q.22. Q.22. A. Appeal against a negative decision relating to the granting of benefits or based on article 7 (see article 21 which is a mandatory provision): indicate against which decision an appeal can be introduced, describe the system of appeal in general and include in particular in your answer the information given to asylum seekers about possibilities of appealing, deadline for appealing, if the appeal has or not a suspensive effect, if there are different steps (for instance first an administrative appeal and in particular if the guarantee of an appeal before a judicial body in the last instance is respected)?

As stated above a decision taken referring to the Act on the reception of asylum seekers, taken by the Migration Board could be appealed against at an Administrative court, more specifically the County administrative court in the district where the asylum seeker was staying at the time the decision was taken (the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 22).

Since a decision on assistance taken by the Board has an immediate effect, an appeal against such a decision does not have a suspensive effect. (Regarding asylum seeking children staying in a municipality there is a corresponding regulation in the Social services Act ch. 16 § 3 on the local authority's responsibility concerning assistance referring to the Act ch. 4 § 1.)

Concerning the deadline for an appeal against a decision there is a general rule in the Public administration Act (1986:223) § 23. The appeal should be in writing and it should be handed in not later than three weeks from the day the complainant took part of the decision.

Regarding the Directive, article 7, and the Member State's possibility to put restrictions on the asylum seeker's right to choose where he or she will stay, there are in principle no such restrictions in Swedish law. However, the asylum seeker must participate in the investigation and he or she should take part in the activities organized by the Board etc. Hence, from these requirements restrictions could follow in practice (concerning the freedom of movement, see Q.20E, and concerning the right to choose where to live, see Q.24A).

Q.22. B. Explain which are the possibilities for asylum seekers to benefit from legal assistance when they introduce such an appeal (see article 21, §2 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to Member States)?

Concerning the right to legal assistance (compare the Directive, article 21.2) there is a regulation in the Legal aid Act (1996:1619). In accordance with § 4 legal aid might be given for two hours by a lawyer (or an assistant lawyer). Regarding the fee for legal assistance, the reporter refers to Q.11.

Further, in the Aliens Act ch. 18 there are regulations on the appointment of a public assistant (offentligt biträde), but this regulation should apply in matters concerning expulsion and more.

Q.22. C. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

Concerning the judicial practice – see Q.21E and the cases referred to (Case 3565-1995; the Administrative court of appeal in Stockholm concerning assistance for buying winter clothes, Case 1229-1995; the Administrative court of appeal in Jönköping concerning assistance for buying maternity wear, and the judgement in July 8, 1996; the Administrative court of appeal in Stockholm concerning particular assistance).

Q.22. D. Is a mechanism of complain for asylum seekers about quality of receptions conditions in general (even if they are not personally concerned) organised? If yes, before which authority? Is it linked to the system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions (see below question n° 39)?

In principle it is possible to make complaints concerning the quality of the assistance, since the assistance is based upon a decision taken by an authority. However, regarding benefits in the form of a certain amount the "quality" fixed in law there is no problem from a legal point of view.

Concerning for instance the quality of the food in an accommodation centre, should preliminary be a matter for the centre. However, the more general and individualized assistance referring to the Social services Act could be subject to complaints on "quality matters", for instance if a measure taken is the best measure considering a certain child's need in a specific situation.

6. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.23. Family unity of asylum seekers: define how a family is defined in relation with article 2, (d) which is a mandatory provision and explain how housing is provided to a family (see articles 8 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to member States and 14, §2, (a) which is a mandatory provision).

According to the Aliens Act Ch. 5 § 1 a residence permit should be granted to persons defined as refugees in the Geneva Convention. Under the same paragraph, persons who are not Convention refugees may also qualify for protection. This category is described as 'persons in need of protection' (skyddsbehövande). Persons in need of protection are those who have left their native country and have good reason to fear capital punishment, torture, etc., or who need protection due to an internal or external armed conflict or an environmental disaster in their native country.

No specific implementation measures have been taken on account of the Directive, article 2.d. The Aliens Act does not define who is a "family member" to an asylum seeker. However, in accordance with the Ch. 5 § 3, a residence permit might also be granted if the applicant's situation comply with any of the following conditions, stating that the foreigner[767]

- has to be married or live together with someone who has residence in Sweden or has been granted a residence permit in Sweden,
- has to be a foreign child (under the age of 18) and unmarried and either has been a child at home to someone who is a resident or has been granted residence permit for residence,
- has to be a foreign child (under the age of 18) and unmarried and who has been or is going to be adopted by someone who, at the time of the adoption, is and still is resident in Sweden or who has been granted a residence permit,
- has to be a close relative on some other ground to someone who is a resident or has been granted residence permit, if the person has been part of the houshold and there is a particular dependency relation between the relatives,
- has to be a husband, spouse or a cohabitant to someone who is a resident or has been granted residence permit, if the relationship is considered to be serious,
- has the intention to marry or cohabit with someone who is a resident or has been granted a residence permit, if the relationship is considered to be serious,
- has to be together with a child who has residence in Sweden,
- is a relative to a foreigner that is a refugee or otherwise in need of protection,
- in any other way must have a particular connection to Sweden.[768]

The Aliens Act defines relatives to persons who have been granted residence permit or a refugee status. Hence, the relatives position is basically dependent on the outcome of the asylum seekers application for asylum.

According to the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 3, the Migration Board should offer asylum seekers accommodation in an accommodation centre, which in practice will be in an apartment provided by the Migration Board. Following the same paragraph, all asylum seekers have to be registered at an accommodation centre (in practice this means that the foreigner will be registered at the application centre/office where the asylum seekers meet the Migration Board's staff), even if they arrange their own accommodation (see below Q.24). Further, in accordance with the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers § 2c, the Migration Board, when it offers accommodation, should as much as possible keep families together if the foreigners do not oppose.

Q.24. Q.24. A. How is housing of asylum seekers organised: describe the system in general and indicate in particular what is the most frequently system used (see article 14, §1 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space for Member States; distinguish between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels places or other premises).

Asylum seekers can choose to live with friends or relatives, otherwise they will be provided with a temporary housing organised by the Migration Board, either in an ordinary residential area or – which is an exception – temporarily in application housing or in other accommodations (compare the Directive, article 14.1). Approximately more than 50 percent of the asylum seekers choose the first alternative.[769] The Migration Board is obliged to offer accommodation in an accommodation centre for those who do not arrange their own living (see the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 14).

[767] The list is not complete, since it also embraces other categories not covered by the present study.
[768] The reason is subsidiary compared with the previous grounds, and further, «particular reasons» should be present. See Government's propostion 2004/05:170 Ny instans- och processordning i utlännings- och medborgarskapsärenden, pp. 183 f. and Government's proposition 1996/97:25 Svensk migrationspolitik i globalt perspektiv, pp. 113 f.

Asylum seekers who choose to live on their own may, on certain conditions, be granted a monthly housing allowance (see the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 16). The conditions, which are cumulative, are that the applicant must be granted a work permit or exempted from such a requirement, has been offered a job of at least three months duration and, as a prerequisite to take that job, has to move to a place where the Migration Board is unable to offer housing. The allowance is, as previously stated in my answer to Q.12A, 37,8 Euro (SEK 350) per month for single asylum seekers and 91,7 Euro (SEK 850) for families.

Q.24. B. What is the total number of available places for asylum seekers? Distinguish in your answer between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels or other premises.

The number of individuals staying at the Migration Board's lodging in November 2005 was 18,800. The number was almost half of the total number of asylum cases dealt with by the Board at that time (almost 33,000 applicants).[770]

Q.24. C. Is this number of places for asylum seekers sufficient in general or frequently insufficient?

Generally the number of places available for the reception of asylum seekers is considered to be sufficient, and this judgment is also the opinion of the UNHCR representatives in Sweden. Further, following the decrease in the number of asylum seekers in 2005, around 3,500 places for asylum seekers were taken away.[771]

Q.24. D. Are there special measures foreseen in urgent cases of a high number of news arrivals of asylum seekers (outside the case of application of the directive on temporary protection)?

As stated above the number of asylum seekers has decreased in 2005, Hence, the question of special measures in urgent cases is not relevant concerning Sweden. Historically the number of places has fluctuated and the organisation for the reception of asylum seekers is rather flexible on this matter.

Q.25. Accommodation centres (important note: all the following questions are about open and not closed centres where asylum seekers are detained which are covered by another question)

There are no different categories of open accommodation centres, and there are not any rules saying that asylum seekers must stay a certain period in an accommodation centre before they get access to a private house or apartment.

[769] Official report SOU 2003:89 EG-rätten och mottagandet av asylsökande, p. 141.
[770] Migrationsverket (the Migration Board), Årsredovisning 2005 (Annual report), p. 16.
[771] Migrationsverket (the Migration Board), Årsredovisning 2005 (Annual report), p. 16.

Q.25. A Are there different categories of accommodation centres, for instance depending of the stage of the procedure (admissibility and eligibility)?

There is no general regulation about the internal functioning of accommodation centres. However, according to 4 § of the Act on the reception of asylum seekers, the Migration Board can adopt rules concerning the applicants' participation in the maintenance of these centres. The Act also contains other rules as regards rights and duties of asylum seekers, for example rules about occupation and economic assistance, rules which are further elaborated in the governmental ordinance.

The rules may differ to some extent depending on whether the asylum seeker lives in an accommodation centre or in a private house or apartment. Further, in principle there is no certain time limit for accommodation in an accommodation centre beyond the time limits for dealing with applications for asylum.

Q.25. B. Is there a legal time limit for accommodation in a centre after which the asylum seekers have access to private houses or apartments or is this limit linked to a stage of the asylum procedure?

There is no general regulation about the internal functioning of accommodation centres. However, according to 4 § of the Act on the reception of asylum seekers, the Migration Board can adopt rules concerning the applicants' participation in the maintenance of these centres. The Act also contains other rules as regards rights and duties of asylum seekers, for example rules about occupation and economic assistance, rules which are further elaborated in the governmental ordinance.

The rules may differ to some extent depending on whether the asylum seeker lives in an accommodation centre or in a private house or apartment. Further, in principle there is no certain time limit for accommodation in an accommodation centre beyond the time limits for dealing with applications for asylum.

Q.25. C. Is there a general regulation about the internal functioning of those centres and the rights and duties of the asylum seekers? If yes, is this general regulation applicable to public and private centres? If not, are the centres supposed to adopt an internal regulation and does a central authority have or not a kind of control about its content?

In accordance with the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 10, an asylum seeker who without a valid reason refuses to take part in the daily work at the centre may get his or her daily allowance reduced and ultimately suspended (compare the Directive, article 16.3). However, this is not possible for persons under the age of 18. Further, from the preparatory works follow that this sanction should be reserved for exceptional cases, i.e. when the person in question systematically and regularly refuses to take part in the common activities.[772] The decision must be taken by the Migration Board. Appeal against the decision can be brought before the district Administrative Court (see of the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 22). (See also Q.21A.)

[772] Government's proposition 1993/94:94 Mottagande av asylsökande m.m., p. 49.

Q.25. D. Do the regulations foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers in case of breach of the rules? (see article 16, §3) If yes, which sanctions for which rules? Which is the competent authority to decide? How is it ensured that decisions are taken individually, objectively and in particular impartially (for instance through an independent arbitrator) as requested by §4 of article 21 which is mandatory provision? Which are the possibilities of appealing against those decisions if the system is different from the general one under question n°22? Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

There are no formal rules which give asylum seekers a right to take part in the management of accommodation centres. (Compare the Directive, article 14.6 which is an optional provision.)

Q.25. E. Are asylum seekers involved in the management of these centres? If yes, how (advisory board, appointment or election of representatives)? (see article 14, §6 which is an option provision)

See the answer on Q.25C

Q.25. F. Do specific rules exist on work of asylum seekers inside the accommodation centres different from the general ones about employment (see below)? If yes, which ones? Can working inside accommodation centres be considered as a (mandatory) contribution of the asylum seekers to the management of the centres, is it or not paid and considered as implying access to the labour market and subject to the same rules?

Section 5 in the Act on the reception of asylum seekers (1994:137) states that foreigners participating in the activities at the accommodation centres shall not be considered as employees except as provided for in certain provisions (chapter 2 sections 1-9, chapter 3 sections 1-4 and 7-13, chapter 4 section 1-4 and 8-10, chapter 5, sections 1-3 and chapter 7-9) in the Working Environment Act (1977:1160). These provisions states for example that the working environment shall be satisfactory with regard to the nature of the work and social and technical progress in the community, working conditions shall be adapted to people's differing physical and mental aptitudes, efforts shall be made to ensure that work provides opportunities of variety, social contact and co-operation, as well as coherence between different tasks etcetera (see chapter 2 section 1 in the Working Environment Act (1977:1160).

Q.26. Q.26. A. How can asylum seekers communicate with legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGOs? (see article 14, §2, (b) which is a mandatory provision).

In accordance with the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers § 2a, the Migration Board shall inform the applicants about organisations or groups of individuals who can give legal aid on matters concerning reception conditions, access to health care and medical treatment. Asylum seekers are also guaranteed legal assistance in accordance with the rules laid down in the Legal aid Act (1996:1619). (Compare the Directive, article 14.2; see also Q11.)

The UNHCR representatives have not experienced any obstacles regarding communication, although in practice you must of course agree with the person and the Migration Board about the time of meetings etc. The UNHCR also think that NGOs have good possibilities to get in contact with the asylum seekers although also here the practical aspects must be considered.

The freedom of expression, the freedom of information and freedom of assembly for asylum seekers among others are ultimately guaranteed by the Instrument of government chapter 2 Art. 22 paragraph 2 point 1.

Q.26. B. What are the rules about access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs regarding access to accommodation centres and other housing facilities (see article 14, §7 which is a mandatory provision)

There are no explicit regulations that give legal advisors, NGOs and UNHCR access to accommodation centres (compare the Directive, article 14.7). On the other hand, there are no rules that prevent access, and referring to Q.26A above, in practice this activity seems to be working well.

The freedom of expression, the freedom of information and freedom of assembly for asylum seekers is ultimately guaranteed by the Instrument of government chapter 2 art. 22 paragraph 2 point 1.

Q.26. C. Can the access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs be limited for security reasons or any other reason (see article 14, §7, last sentence)?

Practically, it might be possible to restrict access of legal advisers, but such a situation is extreme and for instance the UNHCR cannot give any example of such events in Sweden. Further, there are no certain regulations concerning restrictions on the matter.

Q.27. Q.27. A. Is a medical screening organised by the receiving State, is it mandatory or voluntary? Does it include HIV tests? (see article 9 which is an optional provision)

There are no rules requiring medical screening for asylum seekers on public health grounds, but asylum seekers are offered a voluntary medical examination. Considering HIV-test the matter has been discussed, but there are no regulations on this issue. Probably a HIV-test could be offered on a voluntary basis as part of the free health screening, but this conclusion has not been confirmed.

Q.27. B. Do the legal provisions on reception conditions ensure that asylum seekers receive at least emergency care and essential treatment of illness as requested by article 15 §1 which is a mandatory provision? Do they have a further access to health care?

Every County council district must, in accordance with the Health and Medical Service Act § 4, offer emergency care and essential treatment of illness to all persons who stay in the district, even if they are not resident. Regarding asylum seekers that obligation means a duty to provide acute health care services.[773] (Compare the Directive, article 15.) Medical treatment that is not acute, or if the risk to await treatment is considered to be moderate, should not be reimbursed by the State. A corresponding right to emergency dental care follows from the Act on dental care § 6.

In principle, asylum seekers have no right to more comprehensive health care benefits than what follows from these regulations, but there is also an agreement between the Government and the Swedish Association of Local Authorities and Regions (Svenska Kommunförbundet och Landstingsförbundet i samverkan). The agreement regulates among others State compensation for health care beyond acute treatment to asylum seekers and, further, supplementary regulation on the matter is being prepared by the Government. (See also Q.3.)

Children up to the age of 18 years are fully entitled to health, medical (mental care included) and dental care on the same conditions as other children in Sweden. These entitlements embrace children who keep away or are being kept away, and the County councils' cost should be reimbursed by the State.

However, especially concerning children's health care the NGO Save the Children Sweden is sceptical of the practice. The health and medical care could sometimes be insufficient, since the parents do not have the right to full health care services, they will not bring the children to health centres etc.; the parents do not fully realise their children's entitlements in these respects. Further, there are certain problems regarding health care and foreigners that are keeping away commented on by the NGO organisation Medecins sans Frontiers (Läkare utan gränser).[774] For instance the absence of State reimbursement for adult asylum seekers' health care means that they could be turned away and otherwise there will be trouble in the contact with the health care.

Q.27. C. What is the practice regarding access of asylum seekers to health care and how is it organised? In particular, what is the situation in accommodation centres (are doctors coming to the centres or do asylum seekers go to doctors outside)?

Asylum seekers will be sent to a County council's care centre for health screening, but, as stated before, the screening is voluntary (compare the Directive, article 9). But there are examples from for instance the application centres – that first meet the asylum seeker – that medical care is available there (at the former transit units). The UNHCR representatives refer to an example where a former Migration Board's transit unit offered medical care by a visiting nurse coming to the centre regularly for two hours per week.

[773] Compare the Ordinance (1996:1357) on State compensation for health and medical treatment to asylum seekers. Further see the National Board of Health and Welfare (Socialstyrelsen), Socialstyrelsens allmänna råd 1995:4 Hälso- och sjukvård för asylsökande och flyktingar. See also Government's proposition 1993/94:94 Mottagande av asylsökande m.m., p. 54.

[774] Medecins sans Frontiers (Läkare utan gränser), Gömda i Sverige. Utestängda från hälso- och sjukvård. Resultat från en studie av Läkare utan gränser. Stockholm 2005.

Q.28. Q.28. A. What is the length of the period determined by the concerned Member State during which asylum seekers have no access to the labour market? (see article 11 which is a mandatory provision)

Q.28. B. After that period, are asylum seekers or not obliged to obtain a work permit? In case is there a limit for the administration to deliver the permits and how quick are they delivered? What is their length?

Q.28. C. After that period, what are the conditions for access of the asylum seekers to the labour market? (in particular, are there rules concerning the maximum allowed of working hours or days per week, month or year, limits in terms of type of work or of professions authorised?

(Answer to Q.28.A,B and C)
There are no rules laying down a fixed period during which asylum seekers do not have access to the labour market. However, in accordance with the Aliens Ordinance ch. 5 § 4, if a final decision is judged not to be reached within four months from the point of time the application for asylum or international protection (referring to the Aliens Act ch. 4 §§ 1 or 2) was made, the foreigner is explicitly excepted from the demand for a work permit. Hence, the foreigner should have access to the labour market at least after four months after the application for asylum etc. was handed in. The provision in ch. 5 § 4 fulfils the requirements in article 11.1 of the Directive, and furthermore the four months period is more favourable than the one year period stipulated in article 11.2.

In accordance with the Ordinance ch. 4 § 9 the work permit should not be granted for a period beyond the time when the foreigner no longer can stay legally in Sweden. For instance, if the application for residence permit is rejected, the foreigner's work permit no longer is valid.

Further, in line with the restriction that the work permit should apply as long as the foreigner legally is staying in the country, a procedure with suspensive effect should not mean that the work permit no longer should be valid.

Q.28. D. What are the rules in terms of priorities between asylum seekers on the one hand and nationals, EU or EEE citizens and legally third-country nationals on the other?

Swedish legislation lacks rules that give priority to Swedish citizens, EEA-nationals and legally resident third-country nationals before asylum seekers as regards access to the labour market.

Q.28. E. Do asylum seekers have access to vocational training, does this or not depend of their right to access to the labour market, and in case at which conditions? (see article 12 which is optional regarding §1 and mandatory regarding § 2)

There is no explicit rules that explicitly give asylum seekers access to vocational training (compare the Directive, article 12).[775] On the other hand there are no restrictions to the asylum seeker's right to vocational training in connection with an employment contract (compare the Directive, article 12 indent 2). (Further, it could be noted that the Swedish Government has not considered article 12.2 as mandatory.)

Q.28. F. Are the rules regarding access to the labour market adopted to transpose the directive more or less generous than the ones applicable previously?

Current rules that govern access to the labour market for asylum seekers have basically not been adopted to transpose the directive, but are of an earlier date even if clarifications have been made. (In the former Aliens Ordinance 1989:547 the "four months rule" was found in ch. 4 § 3a [Ordinance 2000:391].)

Q.29. Are reception conditions subject to the fact that asylum seekers do not have sufficient resources? Are asylum seekers requested to contribute to reception conditions when they have personal resources (for instance if they work) or to refund the authorities if it appears that they have resources? (see article 13 §§ 3 and 4 which are optional provisions)

Asylum seekers are entitled to a daily allowance if they lack sufficient resources to provide for themselves (see the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 17; compare the Directive, article 13.3 and 4). For applicants who live in an accommodation centre, the allowance will be reduced if they have free meals (see § 6 of the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers). (See also Q.15 and Q.21A.)

An applicant engaged in gainful employment or who have other resources and who stays in an accommodation centre, shall pay a reasonable sum to the Migration Board for food and housing (Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 13).

There are no national rules that make it possible to reclaim money if, on some future occasion, it appears that an asylum seeker has an income or personal resources (compare the Directive, article 13.4). However, in cases of acts of deception or other criminal acts and if the State has suffered damages, the State has the possibility to start civil proceedings.

7. SPECIAL NEEDS OF PARTICULAR CATEGORIES OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.30.

Q.30.A. Which of the different categories of persons with special needs considered in the directive are taken into account in the national legislation (see article 17, §1 which is a mandatory provision): disabled people, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence? Include in your answer all other categories envisaged in national law.

[775] For an introduction of the foreigner on the labour market efforts should be made in accordance with the Agreement between different authorities on the development of the introduction of refugees and other immigrants (see Q.10), but a precondition is that a residence permit has been granted. However, already before that point of time the asylum seeker's educational background and working life experience should be mapped, in order to facilitate a coming introduction to the labour market if a residence permit should be granted.

Rules that take into account the specific situations of vulnerable persons such as minors, unaccompanied minors, disabled people, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence are to be found in different statutes (compare the Directive, article 17.1). In other words, there is no single piece of legislation transposing this part of the Directive.

The most important regulations aiming at the groups mentioned above can be found in the Social Service Act, the Health and medical services Act and several Governmental Ordinances, such as the Ordinance on state compensation for asylum seekers.

Concerning the listing of vulneable persons many of the entitlements discussed are based on regulations having a general character or more concret State authorities' guidelines. Regarding the judgement of the implementation in this context of entitlements founded on the Directive, there is also judicial practice from the ECJ to consider.[776] The entitlements based on the Health and medical services Act for instance could be regarded as to vaguely expressed for the individual concerned to understand etc. However, my impression is that the practical outcome when these many times general regulations applies – together with guidelines from State authorities – is in line with the Directive.

Q.30. B. How is their specific situation taken into account (see articles 13, §2, second indent, 16 §4 second sentence and 17 which are mandatory provisions)?

According to informants in accommodation centres there is a wide range of supporting measures, for instance apartments equipped for special purposes, for disabled people, and more. In general the informants from the Migration Board's accommodation centres express that they can offer relevant measures such as apartments especially equipped for disabled people and more.

However, in practice there are often problems to focus on, especially regarding asylum seekers suffering from psychological traumas. Although help is available a person could be judged to be healthy enough to be placed in an accommodation centre, in an apartment etc., but in fact he or she has problems that the staff thinks should be treated.

In 2006-2007 the Swedish Migration Board performed an internal investigation regarding the exercise of authority in the reception centres. The investigation concluded that there is a need for additional regulations in this area since the prevailing lack of regulation makes it difficult for an asylum seeker in need of special assistance to know what his or hers rights are. Furthermore, there is a diverging practice between different reception centres concerning the assistance given to this specific group of asylum seekers.[777]

[776] See for instance Case 29/84 ECR 1985 p. I-1681 concerning the transposition of EC directives into national law in Member States.
[777] See Översyn av myndighetsutövningen inom Migrationsverkets mottagningsverksamhet p. 12 2007-01-22 www.migrationsverket.se/swedish/press/dokument/översyn_myndighetsutovning.pdf

Q.30. C. How and when are the special needs of the concerned persons supposed to be legally identified (see article 17 § 2 which is a mandatory provision and clarify how it has been interpreted by transposition)?

The demand for providing for special needs in certain matters is legally defined in different Acts, for instance the need for social assistance in accordance with the Social services Act should be laid down in accordance with the Act. The applicant must meet the requirements stipulated in each Act respectively. (Compare the Directive, article 17.2.)

In this connection, the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 18 should be mentioned. According to this paragraph, a particular allowance can be granted to asylum seekers with special needs, and it is paid in addition to the daily allowance earlier mentioned. The special allowance is intended to cover expenses for, by example, glasses, handicap equipment and baby equipment (see also the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers § 7 and Q.12A).

Q.30. D. Is the necessary medical and other assistance provided to persons with special needs as requested by article 15, §2 which is a mandatory provision and in particular to victims of torture and violence as requested by article 20 which is a mandatory provision?

The necessary medical and other assistance to persons with special needs should be provided in accordance with the applicable Act, for instance in accordance with the Health and medical services Act or the Social services Act. (Compare the Directive, article 15.2.)

Q.31. About minors:

Q.31. A. Till which age are asylum seekers considered to be minor?

The full age legally defined in Sweden is 18 years and asylum seekers not older than 18 years are considered to be minors or children. In practice it is often a problem to fix a person's age, especially around the ages of 16–20 years. The declared age could sometimes be questioned and since most of the arriving asylum seekers cannot give proof of their identity, there could be great difficulties when taking decisions on the asylum seeker's status, entitlements and the future dealing with the case. (The examples have been discussed with the UNHCR representatives.)

Q.31. B. How is access of minor asylum seekers to the education system ensured? Is it at school or in case inside accommodation centres and can it be considered as similar to the conditions for nationals as requested by article 10, §1?

Basically the school system is regulated in the School Act, which in principal regulates all children's right to schooling. (Compare the Directive, article 10.1.) Regarding asylum seeking children's right to schooling, the children should be assigned a place in a public school. This follows from the Ordinance on education, pre-school activity and school childcare for asylum seekers. The Ordinance, which refers to the Act on the reception of asylum seekers, also embraces pre-school activities as well as the nine-year compulsory school, the upper secondary school education and more in public schools.[778]

Asylum seeking children are not embraced by the general compulsory school attendance (skolplikt), but the local authorities are in charge of offering the children a place in the public schools on the same terms as other children staying in the municipality.

Young people, who have begun an education on the upper secondary level (continuation of the nine-year compulsory school) before reaching the age of 18, should have the right to education on the upper secondary level. Further, they may participate in organised activities that are arranged for other asylum seekers.

The right to schooling will not cease if the child's application for residence permit is rejected and a decision on expulsion has been taken. In such a situation the child is still entitled to schooling until the decision is executed (the Ordinance on education, pre-school activity and school childcare for asylum seekers § 9). However, if the child is kept away so the decision cannot be executed he or she will not have the right to schooling (§ 9; amendment through SFS 2004:700). (See also comment on the matter in Q.21A.)

Further, the access to schooling is financially secured through State reimbursement for educational costs for children to asylum seekers in accordance with the Ordinance on state compensation for asylum seekers. Financial contribution could also be granted so called free-schools if the school is entitled to public subsidies, which means that the school must fulfill the requirements raised through the public curriculum for schools.

However, the NGO Save the Children Sweden has stated that especially children with special needs will not always be treated in a correct way. Even if the local authorities are compensated for children's schooling, the children with special needs will cost more money than on average, and for this reason Save the Children Sweden claims that there has been situations when the local authorities have been reluctant.[779]

Q.31. C. Is access to education ensured not later than 3 months as requested by article 10, §2 (or after maximum one year if specific education for asylum seekers is provided) and till an expulsion decision is really enforced?

In accordance with the Ordinance on education, pre-school activity and school childcare for asylum seekers § 4, the assignment to a place in a public school should be made as soon as possible, considering the child's personal circumstances, but not later than one month after the arrival to Sweden. (Compare the Directive, article 10.2.) In principle only personal circumstances such as, for instance, illness should be reason for delays.

Q.31. D. Is specific education (like language classes) available for asylum seekers, in particular to facilitate their effective access to the education system of the reception Member State (see article 10, §2 which is an optional provision)?

[778] That is special schools on the corresponding level and the Lapp school.

[779] However, in accordance with Ordinance on state compensation for asylum seekers the local authorities should be reimbursed for extraordinary costs for children with special needs. See also the Migration Board's Aliens handbook (ch. 33). (Further, see also Q31F.)

In the Ordinance on education, pre-school activity and school childcare for asylum seekers § 5, there is a regulation stipulating that the schooling should be conducted on the same terms as for other children in Sweden and the asylum seeking child's prerequisites and special needs should be considered.

For children speaking another language than Swedish or if one or two of the child's parents are speaking another language in daily life with the child, the child is entitled to education in that language in accordance with the School Act ch. 2 § 9 (compare the Directive, article 10.2).

Q.31. E. Are minors in general accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them? (see article 14, § 3)

In general minors are accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible for them in accordance with the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers 2c. (Compare the Directive, article14.3.)

Q.31. F. Do minors with special needs enumerated by article 18, §2 which is a mandatory provision, have access to appropriate mental health care and qualified counselling?

Concerning minors with special needs appropriate activities and measures should be provided for. The local authorities are compensated for certain cost for the care of children under the age of 18, in accordance with the Ordinance on state compensation for asylum seekers § 7. A precondition is that the child is embraced by the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 1. Subsidies are paid for caretaking in accordance with the Social services Act or the Act (1990:52) with particular regulations concerning the care of minors.

Asylum seeking children suffering from post-traumatic difficulties should be treated, but, as stated above, for primary medical reasons this treatment often will not start before a residence permit has been granted. However, there is a great need for child psychiatry care and psychiatrists are often referred to when the application for residence permit is tried.[780] (See also Q.31F above.)

There are also NGO activities on these matters, for instance the Swedish Red Cross runs six rehabilitation centres, and these centres are in some cases engaged and paid by a County Council for the fulfilling of that function.

Efforts have been made concerning the children concerned, but according to the UNHCR representatives there is reason to follow-up the development in this matter.

Further, reimbursements to the County councils in charge of the care etc. should be covered in accordance with the Ordinance on state compensation for health and medical treatment for asylum seekers.

[780] The National Board of Health and Welfare, Medicinskt omhändertagande av asylsökande barn i hälso- och sjukvården.

Even if the child's application for asylum is rejected, the reimbursement for the caretaking should continue to be paid until the child is leaving Sweden (the Ordinance on State compensation for asylum seekers § 7).

In 2003 the Government appointed a certain Council for migration and asylum policy concerning children. The Council should be a forum for consultation and exchange of information. Members of the Council are persons with special knowledge in these matters, for instance specialists in children's diseases, doctors, the Child ombudsman, representatives from Save the children Sweden, the Red Cross, psychologists, the Migration Board and more. During 2005 the Council had three meetings discussing the reception of unaccompanied children, childrens' reasons for seeking asylum and the meaning of what is the best for a child and more.[781]

Q.31. G. How and when is organised the representation of unaccompanied minors (guardianship, special organisation) and regularly assessed? (see article 19, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

As commented on above in Q.3, the local authority should have the responsibility for the care of unaccompanied children referring to the Social services Act and the explicitly expressed duty for the local authority to provide for persons staying in the municipality.[782]

The representation of unaccompanied minors is organised through the appointment of a guardian ("god man"), which shall see to the child's interest. The appointment is made referring to the Act (2005:429) on guardian for unaccompanied minors, which came into force in July 1, 2005 (compare the Directive, article 19.1).[783] The guardian should be appointed by the local authority when the Migration Board has made a notification on the matter in accordance with the Act on guardian for unaccompanied minors (§ 3).

A public assistant and normally, the guardian shall accompany the child to the meetings with the Migration Board.

The UNHCR and NGOs have made considerations on this and how the system with a public assistance is realised in practice. There might be problems considering the distribution of responsibility between the Board, the local authorities and the guardian, since there are many people involved. Further, the guardians need a special training and there are examples on such training performed by NGOs (see also Q.41C on the duty to professional secrecy).

Q.31. H. How is placement of unaccompanied minors organised (with adult relatives, a foster family, in special accommodation centres or other suitable accommodation)? (see article 19, §2 which is mandatory provision)

Concerning unaccompanied minors arriving in Sweden the local authorities may arrange the children's living, and the Migration Board should assign a local authority normally having an agreement with the Board to arrange the child's living (amendment of Act on the reception of asylum seekers §§ 2 and 3, made through SFS 2006:177 which came into force at July 1, 2006).

[781] Government's communication, Regeringens skrivelse 2005/06:18 Migration och asylpolitik, p. 26.
[782] Compare the Government's proposition 2005/06:46 Mottagande av ensamkommande barn.
[783] Government's proposition 2004/05:136 Stärkt skydd för ensamkommande barn. See also Official report SOU 2003:51 God man för ensamkommande flyktingbarn.

Children up to the age of 16 should be placed in group living ("grupphem") or other particular accommodations for children, including for instance a placing in family-home or with relatives (compare the Directive, article 19.2). The local Social welfare board is responsible for the offering of a suitable living for the child (the Social welfare board's duties follow from the Social services Act, ch. 6 § 1).[784]

Q.31. I. How is the tracing of the family members of the unaccompanied minors organised? Are measures taken to protect confidentiality of information when necessary? (see article 19, §3 which is a mandatory provision)

In the Ordinance on the reception on asylum seekers there is a regulation stipulating an obligation for the Migration Board to try as soon as possible to trace the family members of the unaccompanied children (§ 2d; which came into force at July 1, 2006). Further, in the Secrecy Act (1980:100) there are regulations about the confidentiality of information in these cases. Practically, the tracing of unaccompanied minors is made in different ways. Beyond the Migration Board also Swedish embassies in the country of origin are engaged as well as NGOs. For instance the Swedish Red Cross organisation can investigate a minor's background and the possibility of finding relatives to the minor (compare the Directive, article 19.3).

A practical problem when tracing a minor's relatives etc., which the Swedish UNHCR representatives called attention to, is that the dealing with this kind of matters often takes a long time. Sometimes there will even be a decision to expel the minor during the search for relatives, but a precondition for the execution is that there is a receiving person in the country of origin. The general problem with long time dealing with asylum applications also has an impact on these kinds of matters.

8. EXCEPTIONAL MODALITIES OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.32. Apart from detention covered by the next question, are there exceptional modalities for reception conditions in the following cases and if yes, which ones and for how long are they applicable, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)?

Q.32. A. Persons with specific or special needs, regarding in particular the period of assessment of those needs?

Foreigners with special needs are unaccompanied children, elderly, disabled people, pregnant women, single parents with children, persons who have been exposed to torture, rape or other forms of outrageous psychological, physical or sexual violence (the Directive Article 17).

In the Act on the reception of asylum seekers §§ 1, 2 and 3, there are certain regulations concerning children up to 18 years of age, who at the arrival in Sweden are separated from their parents or from any other person close to the children. (Amendments through SFS 2006:177.) Every year there is around two hundred unaccompanied children in this category.

[784] See the Government's proposition 2005/06:46 Mottagande av ensamkommande barn.

Unaccompanied children should be taken care of in special accommodations. Usually these children are accommodated in group housing provided by the Migration Board or stay with relatives in Sweden.[785] From July 1, 2006, the local authorities in the municipalities will be responsible for these children seeking asylum, and the group housing activity etc. will be transferred to the local authorities.[786]

Asylum seeking children are embraced by the regulation in the Health and medical treatment Act and the duty for County councils to provide treatment (§ 4). Concerning adults there are certain restrictions. However, asylum seeking children not older than 18 years are entitled to the same health, medical and dental treatment as other children living in Sweden.[787]

However, when judging the relevant treatment, it must be taken into account that it is not certain that the child will get a residence permit, and thus the consequences this could have for the treatment must be considered. For instance, in accordance with the general instructions from the National Board of Health and Welfare, a long and not acute treatment period should not start if an interruption could have negative consequences, should the asylum seeker not be granted a residence permit.[788]

Asylum seeking children suffering from post-traumatic difficulties should be treated, but, as stated above, in the main this treatment seriously will not start before a residence permit has been granted. However, there is a great need for child psychiatry care and psychiatrists are often referred to when the application for residence permit is tried.[789] (See also Q.31F above.)

During the last few years many cases of children showing serious symptoms of resignation have been observed, and there has been a debate regarding the reason for the occurrence of such physical conditions. In many cases children have been more or less force-feeded, since they have been in an apathetic mood. One reason for the situation could be the nervous tensions families and children experience waiting for a final decision concerning their application for asylum. However, experts disagree concerning the reasons behind and there is a difference between, for instance, the NGOs and the National Board's of Health and Welfare standpoints.

Q.32. B. Non availability of reception conditions in certain areas

There is no information on non availability of reception conditions in certain areas, but in general the best reception facilities in a wide range are supposed to be found in big places or cities (hospitals, specialists on different matters, doctors, psychiatry resources etc.).

---

[785] Statistics Sweden (SCB), Reception Systems, their Capacities and the Social Situation of Asylum Applicants within the Reception System in the EU Member States (Small Scale Study I), SCB, Stockholm 2005, p. 15.
[786] Government's proposition 2005/06:46 Mottagande av ensamkommande barn.
[787] See also the National Board of Health and Welfare, Allmänna råd (General instructions) 1995:4 Hälso- och sjukvård för asylsökande och flyktingar. See also the National Board of Health and Welfare, Medicinskt omhändertagande av asylsökande barn i hälso- och sjukvården.
[788] The National Board of Health and Welfare, Medicinskt omhändertagande av asylsökande barn i hälso- och sjukvården.
[789] The National Board of Health and Welfare, Medicinskt omhändertagande av asylsökande barn i hälso- och sjukvården.

Q.32. C. Temporarily exhaustion of normal housing capacities

The fluctuation in the number of asylum seekers over the years makes it difficult to foresee the need for lodging in accommodation centres etc., but generally the reception organisation is flexible on this matter (see also Q.32E).

Q.32. D. The asylum seeker is confined to a border post

If a foreigner is confined to a border post in connection with an arrival or a departure from Sweden, he or she must not be detained for investigation longer than necessary and not for more than six hours (the Aliens Act ch. 9 § 11). However, if the foreigner declares that his or her intention is to apply for asylum the person will immediately be transferred to a Migration Board application unit.

Q.32. E. All other cases not mentioned in the directive (for instance urgent situation in case of a sudden high number of applicants outside a case of application of the directive on temporary protection).

At for instance urgent situation in case of a sudden high number of applicants reception facilities should be flexible. According to an internal instruction an accommodation centre should be able to increase its capacity with up to 200 places during a two months period.[790]

However, extreme situations could occur. An example is when the crisis in former Yugoslavia developed, there were thousands of Bosnians arriving with ferries from the Continent and improvised reception conditions must be set up.[791]

Q.33. Detention of asylum seekers (we do not cover the situation of rejected asylum seekers detained for the purpose of their return) (see articles 6 §2, 7 §3, 13, §2 2nd indent and 14 §8 which implies that the directive is in principle applicable in case of detention):

Q.33. A. In which cases or circumstances and for which reasons[1] (identity verification in particular if the persons have no or false documents, protection of public order or national security, refugee status determination, way of entry into the territory, etc) can an asylum seeker be detained during the asylum procedure till his request has been finally rejected. Quote precisely in English in your answer the legal basis for detention of asylum seekers in national law.

[790] See for instance Migrationsverket (the Migration Board), Principer för kapacitetsplanering – ABO. (Administrative instruction, October 13, 2004.)

[791] However, today such a situation would be dealt with in line with the Directive on temporary protection: Council Directive 2001/55/EC of 20 July 2001 on minimum standards for giving temporary protection in the event of a mass influx of displaced persons and on measures promoting a balance of efforts between Member States in receiving such persons and bearing the consequences thereof. Official Journal L 212, 07/08/2001 P. 0012 – 0023.

[1] Please specify if article 18 §1 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Member States shall not hold a person in detention for the sole reason that he/she is an applicant for asylum" is or not respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed).

A foreigner that is at least 18 years old can be detained referring to the following conditions stipulated in the Aliens Act ch. 10 § 1:

- if the foreigner's identity is not clear at the arrival or if he or she cannot make the identity probable when applying for a residence permit,
- if it is necessary for the investigation concerning the foreigner's identity or it is probable that the foreigner will be turned away referring to certain circumstances[792], or
- If there is a decision to expel the foreigner.[793]

A general precondition is – concerning the two latter reasons – that the foreigner's personal circumstances or other circumstances give reason to assume that the foreigner will keep away. Hence, article 18.1 of the Directive 2005/85 EC which specifies that « Members states shall not hold a person in detention for the sole reason that he/she is an applicant for asylum » is respected.

Concerning children there are specific similar reasons presented in the Act ch. 10 § 2. Children cannot be subject to detention only if the reason for the measure taken is connected with expulsion. Further, beyond that a child should not be separated from his or her guardians if there are not particular reasons for the measure (§ 3).

Q.33. B. Has your member State adopted measures to transpose §3 of article 7 which is an optional provision? If yes, how has this provision been legally understood (is it a case of detention or an obligation to stay in and not leave a certain place?) and for which reasons can an asylum seeker be "confined" in such a place?

The possibility to put a foreigner under surveillance, including a requirement on daily reporting to the police or the Migration Board, in practice also could be a restriction on the foreigner's possibilities to leave a place.[794] (See below Q.33E.)

Q.33. C. Are there legally alternatives to detention, like obligation to report to the authorities, obligation to stay in a place, provision of a guarantor or of a financial guarantee?

In accordance with the Aliens Act ch. 10 §§ 6–8 it is possible – instead of keeping a foreigner in detention – to put him or her under the authorities' charge (uppsikt). This means that the foreigner is obliged to report regularly to the local police authority or the Migration Board (§ 8).

Q.33. D. Which is the competent authority to order the detention of an asylum seeker? Explain if different authorities are involved to first take and later confirm the decision.

[792] See the Aliens Act ch. 8 §§ 1, 2 or 7.
[793] Further, beside the regulation in the Aliens Act a foreigner can be expelled, taken into custody or under surveillance referring to state security, criminal activities including terrorism in accordance with the Act (1991:572) on particular control of foreigners (Lag om särskild utlänningskontroll).
[794] See also the Act (1991:572) on particular control of foreigners, and concerning surveilance especially § 8, amended through SFS 2005:720.

The competent authority to take the decision on detention of a foreigner is the authority that is dealing with the case (the Aliens Act ch. 10 § 12; see also § 14 concerning the Migration Board). Concerning asylum seekers it is the Migration Board or the Migration Court dealing with the matter that is the competent authority.

However, if there is no time for this in urgent situations the police authority could take a decision on detaining or putting a foreigner under the authority's charge (ch. 10 § 17). However, the decision should be reported to the competent authority which shall confirm the decision.

In certain matters, when a case has been transmitted to the Government, it is the Government's minister in charge that should take a decision on detention etc. (§ 15). In security matters it is the Supreme migration court that is the competent authority for dealing with the matter until the competent Ministry takes over (§ 16).

The Migration Board and not the police is the authority in charge of the execution of a decision on detention. Only on the request from the Board or a Migration Court, the police authority should give the assistance needed in order to execute a decision (§§ 18 and 19).

Q.33. E. For how long and till which stage of the asylum procedure can an asylum seeker be detained?

In accordance with the Aliens Act ch. 10 § 4 a foreigner might not be kept in custody for the purpose of an investigation for more than 48 hours. Otherwise a foreigner who is at least 18 years old, might not be kept in custody for more than two weeks, if not particular reasons are at hand. If the foreigner is a child, it must not be kept in custody for more than 72 hours or, if there are particular reasons, for another 72 hours (§ 5). (See also Q.32D and Q.33I.)

Q.33. F. In which places (can we call them "closed centres"?) are asylum seekers detained (places in a special closed centres reserved only to asylum seekers, together with returnees like illegal aliens or even in a normal prison, in case within separated areas or with the other detainees)? Indicate if a difference has to be made following the location of the "closed centres" at the border or on the territory? Which is the authority managing those places and is it the same as the one in charge of reception conditions?

The most far-reaching form of detention is to put the foreigner in custody or even in prison, although such a measure should be considered as extraordinary. Further, the Migration Board should take the decision to keep a foreigner detained in custody or a prison for security reasons or other particular circumstances (the Aliens Act ch. 10 § 20).

Q.33. G. Does UNHCR and NGOs have access to the places of detention and under which conditions?

The UNHCR and NGOs have access to places of detention (compare the Aliens Act ch. 11 § 4). A visit might be supervised for security reasons. However, the UNHCR representatives report no difficulties to get into detention places. This current state of affairs is confirmed by the NGOs in Sweden, and for instance Amnesty in Sweden reports that such visits are made regularly.

Q.33. H. What appeal(s) can asylum seekers introduce against the fact he is detained? Is article 18 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Where an applicant for asylum is held in detention, Member States shall ensure that there is a possibility of speedy judicial review" respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed)?

A decision on detention should be appealed against at a Migration Court in accordance with the Aliens Act ch. 14 § 9. If the foreigner should be held in custody, the appeal should be made in accordance with § 10. Further, in accordance with ch. 16 § 4 an appeal concerning expulsion or detention should be dealt with in a speedy manner (compare Directive 2005/85/EC, article 18[795]).

Q.33. I. Is the directive on reception conditions considered to be in principle applicable to the places where asylum seekers are detained? In particular which information do they receive about their rights, which access do they have to legal advice and health care?

In principle the regulations concerning reception conditions should apply also when the foreigner is in detention. However, the assistance should be restricted considering that the foreigner is provided with food and accommodation. Further, the entitlements regarding health care should not be restricted because of detention (see Q.33E). Concerning visits there could be restrictions, for instance for security reasons (see Q.33G).

Q.33. J. Apart from freedom of movement, what are the main differences between normal reception conditions and exceptional modalities for reception conditions in case of detention, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)? If it is about closed centres, are the regulations of those places in line with the requirements of the directive (is article 13, §2, second indent of the directive following which "Member States shall ensure that standards of living is met (…) in relation to the situation of persons who are in detention" respected?).

Concerning the main differences between normal reception conditions and the exceptional modalities in case of detention (see Q.33G, Q.33.I, Q.33.K and Q.34H).

Q.33. K. Are measures taken to avoid detention of asylum seekers with special needs (if yes, which ones?) or are special measures taken because of their needs?

In practice such considerations are made. Informants have pointed out that there is often no reason to put for instance a disabled person in detention since he or she is prevented from mobility due to the handicap. Further, a person suffering from for instance mental illness could be transferred to a clinic for psychiatric care, if that is considered necessary.

Concerning the transfer of a person for psychiatric care informants have pointed out that this possibility is sometimes abused. For instance, a person that is in custody could have a doctor's stated opinion saying that he or she is in urgent need for psychiatric care. Hence, examples have been presented by the Migration Board that the person has been taken out of custody and placed in a place for the treatment, where there has been no watch and then the person has deviated and gone into a hiding-place.

[795] Council Directive 2005/85/EC on minimum standards on procedures in Member States for granting and withdrawing refugee status. Official Journal L326 13/12/2005 P. 13–34.

Q.33. L. Can minor asylum seekers be detained together with relatives? Can unaccompanied minor asylum seekers be detained? If yes, are there special measures which take into account that children are concerned?

Children and even unaccompanied children could be detained but only in connection with decisions on expulsion. However, in practice the first step should always be to keep children under surveillance. More restricted forms for detention should be practiced only for very limited periods (compare the 72 hours rule mentioned above; Q.33E).

Q.33. M. In particular is article 10 regarding access to education of minors respected in those places?

Considering the very limited period for keeping a child in detention, the educational activities are rather reduced, even if there formally is no restriction (compare the Directive, article 10). Practically, detention could occur in very particular situations, for instance just before an expulsion will be executed.

Q.33. N. How many asylum seekers are for the moment detained in your Member State? Which proportion does this represent in comparison of the total number of asylum seekers at the same moment?

The number of foreigners kept in detention is low. At the end of 2005 the number of detention places was 125 and the number of foreigners in detention was 72 (to be compared with 202 persons on December 31, 2004).[796] However, in general most of these persons were not asylum seekers. For instance, they were in detention for other reasons such as criminality and waiting for the execution of an expulsion decision or likely.

The total number of asylum seeker at the end of 2005 was around 9,000, although the figure is not exact (see comments in footnote).[797]

9. ORGANISATION OF THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.34. Explain if the system of providing reception conditions is centralised or decentralised (which levels of government do provide practically reception conditions?) (do not confuse this question with question number 3 about the competence to make rules about reception conditions).

The Swedish system for reception of asylum seekers is centralised. There is a central State authority – the Swedish Migration Board – in charge of reception conditions. Within the Board there is a certain Head of unit in charge of asylum and reception matters. The Migration Board takes decisions on the budget and policy within the framework of regulations taken by the Riksdag and the Government.

[796] Migrationsverket (the Migration Board), Årsredovisning 2005 (Annual report), p. 17.
[797] The figure is so called «open asylum cases» that is the number of cases in the asylum procedure, however cases in the appeal procedure are not included. See Migrationsverket (the Migration Board), Årsredovisning 2005 (Annual report), p. 11.

However, concerning the practical dealing with reception conditions the Migration Board's administrative officials take decision on, for instance, the asylums seeker's living and allowances in accordance with the Act on the reception of asylum seekers.

Q.35. In case, are accommodation centres public or/and private (managed by NGOs? If yes, are the NGOs financially supported by the State?)

The accommodation (or reception) centres are public and financed by the State. Previously, for instance, the Red Cross organisation carried out reception facilities.

Q.36. In case, how many accommodation centres are there in your Member State (distinguish in your answer between public and private centres)?

Concerning the number of accommodation centres in Sweden there are no exact figures, since in practice the accommodation is in apartments and most asylum seekers arrange there own living. However, a figure on the number of what could be called accommodation centres is that there were 38 such centres.[798]

Almost half of the asylum seekers is arranging their own living, and at the end of 2005 there were 38,000 persons registered in the asylum procedure, which means that around half of the number should be accommodated by the Migration Board (the figure should not be mixed up with the number of foreigners seeking asylum in 2005; see Q.40A).

Q.37. Is there in the legislation a plan or are there rules in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory of your Member State to avoid their concentration in some areas like big cities or to share the costs of their reception between central, regional and local authorities?

There is no legislation in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory of Sweden. However, indirectly such an ambition follows from the intention that the Board should be represented all over Sweden.[799] At the same time the Board should consider the aim to run a flexible activity with a good quality and in positive cooperation with the local authorities.

This means that for instance the access to experts on different fields (health care professionals, jurists, trained social workers, administrators for the examination of the application etc.). Concerning the quality of the reception conditions also the access to schooling for children, police, public transport, public service should be considered. Further, a positive attitude from the local authority facilitates the arranging of good reception conditions.

Q.38. Does a central body representing all the actors (like NGOs) involved in reception conditions exist? Does it play a consultative role for the State authorities, a coordination role for the actors or any other role?

[798] The figure is from a draft report from the Small scale study I: «Reception systems, their capacities and the social situation of asylum applicants within the reception system in the EU Member States», (May 2006).
[799] See Migrationsverket (the Migration Board), Principer för kapacitetsplanering – ABO. (Administrative instruction, October 13, 2004.)

There is no central body representing all the actors involved in the reception of asylum seekers.[800]

Q.39. Q.39. A. Which is the body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions as requested by article 23 which is mandatory provision? Include in your answer which is the competent ministry (Interior, Social affairs, etc) for reception conditions?

The Swedish Migration Board is the authority in charge of the dealing with reception conditions concerning these matters; compare the Directive, article 23). In the Government's Office the reception conditions and migration matters belong under the Department of Justice and the minister in charge is the Migration minister. Further, the local authorities in municipalities are in charge of the care taking concerning unaccompanied children.

Concerning health care, the Ministry of Health and Social Affairs and the County councils are in charge, and the State authority in charge is the National Board of Health and Welfare. Concerning schooling the Board of Education is in charge under the Ministry of Education, Research and Culture, and on the local level the schools are under the local authorities in the municipalities.

Q.39. B. Has your Member State (like the Czech Republic did recently) approved quality standards (not necessary legally binding) for housing services (for instance about the number of persons per bedroom on the basis of its size, number of accessible toilets, bathrooms, showers and washing machines per number of persons, existence of common rooms with radio, television, newspapers, books, computers, accessibility of telephone, existence of recreative rooms for children,…) to be respected in particular in accommodation centres?

Concerning the quality standards for housing service there is no central list stipulating a certain standard, but according to officials at the Migration Board such a list probably will be worked out when the Migration Board's Aliens handbook is made up to date.[801]

At the same time informants at reception centres report that certain guidelines apply. For instance, in apartments there should be chairs, tables, beds and another guideline is that two persons should share a room. In practice the Board's staff also distribute a "package" for adults including bedclothes, kitchen equipment etc. and a corresponding "package" is available for children.

A critical remark concerning reception facilities have been made by NGOs. Sometimes there is lack of practical facilities such as saucepans and other kitchen equipment and more. Local NGO representatives have in such cases made efforts to procure the utensils that have been missing.

[800] A central organisation in Sweden for NGOs that could be mentioned is FOSIF (Frivilligorganisationernas samarbetsorgan i flykting och invandrarfrågor). However, the FOSIF is primarily dealing with matters concerning the asylum procedure and not reception matters.

[801] In accordance with the Migration Board's Aliens handbook (ch. 33.7), the Board has followed the directions for pension and camping establishments concerning the number of lavatories and showers.

Q.39. C. How is this system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions organised?

The Migration Board – as well as other State authorities – presents an annual report concerning its activities regarding migration and asylum before the Government.[802] Annually the Government presents a report – or formally a written communication – to the Riksdag concerning migration and asylum.[803]

Further, the National Swedish Audit Bureau (Riksrevisionsverket) scrutinizes the State activity in different aspects, especially regarding the effectiveness in the State sector, and also presents reports. In 2002 there was, for instance, a critical report regarding the Migration Board's dealing with asylum seekers.[804] In 2003 the State Audit Institution (Riksrevisionen) was created in Sweden replacing Riksrevisionsverket and the Parliamentary Auditors (Riksdagens revisorer). In 2006 there was a new report that again critizized the cooperation between State authorities and the integration into society of newly arrived immigrants (see above Q.10.)

Q.39. D. Does the body in charge of guidance, control and monitoring produce reports about the level of reception conditions? If yes, how frequently and are they public?

Concerning the level of reception conditions there are figures presented by the Migration Board in the annual reports. However, for instance the level of the daily allowance granted to asylum seekers, is stipulated by the Government through the Ordinance on the reception of asylum seekers (see Q.12A).

Q.40. Q.40. A. What is the total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions for the last year for which figures are available (see article 22 obliging Member States to calculate those statistics about which we also asked the Commission to require them from Member States for mid June)?

The total number of asylum seekers to Sweden in 2005 was 17,530 persons.[805] (The figure should not be mixed up with the figures concerning how many persons are there registered in the asylum procedure at the Migration Board.)

Q.40. B. What is the total budget of reception conditions in euro for the last year for which figures are available?

The total cost for reception conditions in 2005 was 388,573,000 Euro (SEK 3,603,781 000).[806]

Q.40. C. What is the average cost of reception conditions in euro per asylum seeker for the last year for which figures are available?

---

[802] See for instance Migrationsverket (the Migration Board), Årsredovisning 2005 (Annual report´).
[803] Regeringens skrivelse 2005/06:18 Migration och asylpolitik.
[804] See for instance Riksrevisionsverket, Hur mottas de asylsökande? - Den organiserade verksamheten för asylsökande inom Migrationsverket, Report RRV 2002:19 (presented in September 2002). The report, which was rather critical, is available on website http://www.riksrevisionen.se/templates/PublikationDokument.aspx?id=2132&pubid=499&type=Sökresultat
[805] More detailed statistical figures on asylum seekers to Sweden in 2005 are available at the Migration Board's website http://www.migrationsverket.se/pdffiler/statistik/statistik_1_2005.pdf
[806] Migrationsverket (the Migration Board), Årsredovisning 2005 (Annual report), p.16.

The average cost for reception conditions for twenty-four hours to an individual in 2005 was 28,4 Euro (SEK 263).[807] From this amount the cost for an individual for a one year period should be around 10,353 Euro (SEK 96,000) per year.

Q.40. D Are the costs of reception conditions of asylum seekers supported by the central/federal or federated government or are they shared with regional and/or local authorities?

The costs mentioned are supported by the Migration Board, and the costs for local authorities dealing with asylum seekers paid by the Migration Board are included.[808] For instance, the Board's reimbursement in 2005 to County councils and local authorities was 125,861,029 Euro (SEK 1,167,050,000).[809] In February 2006 the Government decided to contribute additional money, 5,391,181 Euro, for assistance to children on the local authority level.[810]

Q.40. E. Is article 24 § 2 of the directive following which "Member States shall allocate the necessary resources in connection with the nationals provisions enacted to implement this directive" respected?

Concerning the Directive, article 24.2, and the allocations of resources to reception conditions, a conclusion is that the Swedish State fulfils the commitment.

Q.41. Q.41. A. What is the total number of persons working for reception conditions?

The total number of employees in the Migration Board in May 31, 2006, was 2,992 persons. The number working with asylum matters was 1,961 persons, including 947 persons directly involved in the reception of asylum seekers.[811]

Q.41. B. How is the training of persons working in accommodation centres organised? Does it take into account specific needs of unaccompanied minors when relevant as well as the gender dimension? (see article 14 §5, 19 § 4 and also 24 §1 which are mandatory provisions)?

All staff in accommodation centres dealing with the reception of asylum seekers shall have a general introduction course. Furthermore, there is an educational programme called the "migration programme" divided into a basic part and two more specialised parts (Step II and IIII). (On these matters, compare the Directive, article 14.5, 19.4.) The specialised parts are given in different directions such as "asylum and reception" depending on the individual's tasks.

In Step II and III there are modules on different subjects such as human rights, migration policy, cultural patterns, secrecy, working together with an interpreter, conversation

[807] Migrationsverket (the Migration Board), Årsredovisning 2005 (Annual report), p.16.
[808] Migrationsverket (the Migration Board), Årsredovisning 2005 (Annual report), p.16.
[809] Migrationsverket (the Migration Board), Årsredovisning 2005 (Annual report), p.16.
[810] The Migration Board's website (pressrelease). See also Migrationsverket, PM 2006-05-04 Utbetalning av ersättning för sociala insatser till asylsökande barn.
[811] The share of women working with reception conditions is 64.8 percent. Source: the Migration Board.

technique, legislation concerning asylum seekers, effects from torture, working with families and children, aspects on sexual orientation and more. Each module comprises 1–2 days.

Concerning unaccompanied children there is certain education especially for staff working with this category. Finally, there are courses concerning asylum seekers with a gender perspective (compare the Directive, article 24.1).

In 2005 totally 6,517 workdays were applied for personnel education activities at the Migration Board.

Q.41. C. Are there rules about the deontology of persons working in accommodation centres, in particular on confidentiality?

Concerning the deontology of persons working in accommodation centres there are certain regulations on confidentiality. In general the Official secrets Act (1980:100) should apply to activities in the public sector and in ch. 7 there are restrictions concerning individual circumstances. Beyond that there is a regulation in the Act on the reception of asylum seekers § 24 stipulating that staff in accommodation centres or the corresponding (including private actors) are obliged to observe professional secrecy.

Staff at the Migration Board, in the health care service and local authorities' social welfare services have a duty to observe professional secrecy, and, for instance, staff at accommodation centres sign a document on the matter (compare the Directive, article 14.5). Further, NGOs have pointed out that a guardian (god man) appointed in accordance with the Act on guardian for unaccompanied minors does not formally have a duty to observe professional secrecy.

10. IMPACT OF THE DIRECTIVE

Legal impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.42. Specify if there are or not big problems with the translation of the directive in the official language of your Member State and give in case a list of the worst examples of provisions which have been badly translated? (please note that this question has in particular been added to the questionnaire concerning the new Member States)

Concerning the translation of the Directive into Swedish there has not been any big problems. However, regarding the term "legal assistance" in article 21.2 (in Swedish "juridisk rådgivning") there were some considerations in the public investigation that was presented in 2003.[812]

Q.43. Where there precise legal rules on reception conditions for asylum seekers before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the directive (if yes, specify what the nature of those rules was (legislation, regulation, administrative instructions,…)?

[812] Official report SOU 2003:89 EG-rätten och mottagandet av asylsökande.

Before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the Directive there were already Acts, Ordinances and State authority instructions concerning asylum seekers.

Q.44. Did the legal rules applicable to reception conditions become more clear, precise, coherent or detailed with the adoption of the transposition norms (for instance do you now have after the transposition one basic text dealing with reception conditions instead of numerous different texts in the past?

In fact, the Directive did not impose much amendments beyond certain clarifications dealt with above.

Q.45. Did the transposition of the directive imply important changes in national law or were the changes of minor importance? In case, list the most important changes that have been introduced.

The amendments referring to the Directive are considered to be of minor importance, for instance concerning the right to information, which before the transposition was practiced but now is explicitly regulated.

Political impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.46. Explain briefly if there has been an important debate about the transposition of the directive (in particular in the Parliament, but possibly also in the government, between political parties, including in medias, etc; underline in case the main points which have been discussed or have created difficulties)

The transposition of the Directive was not preceded by any extensive debate. One reason is that the impact from the Directive was rather moderate, although for instance NGOs were critical concerning the asylum system, but the criticism was not based on the new Directive.

Q.47. Did the transposition of the directive contribute to make the internal rules stricter or more generous? In particular, did your Member State use the occasion of the transposition to abolish more favourable provisions of national law? Does your Member State still have rules more favourable than the provisions of the directive (if yes, try to give the more important examples).

The impact from the Directive on Swedish regulations concerning asylum seekers was insignificant. Further, there was no deterioration concerning the reception of asylum seekers referring to the Directive. There is still more favourable regulation from the asylum seeker's perspective. For instance, children should be assigned schooling within one month (the Directive stipulates three months) and the right to free movement on Swedish territory has not been restricted even if such restrictions should be acceptable referring to the Directive.

11. ANY OTHER INTERESTING ELEMENT

Q.48. What are in your view the weaknesses and strengths of the system of reception conditions in your Member State?

The legal structure of reception conditions in Sweden could be difficult to grasp. There is a lot of Acts, Ordinances and regulations on the matter, and many State authorities are involved covering different aspects of an asylum seeker's existence, although the Migration Board is the authority mainly in charge of the reception conditions. For instance, health care entitlements are dealt with by the County councils and local authorities are in charge of unaccompanied children's living in accordance with the new order that came into force in 2006. Sometimes the situation is characterised by certain indistinctness regarding the responsibility for the asylum seeker and a more distinct regulation on these matters has been asked for by many informants in the study.

An example is discussed above in Q.16 and the situation that may occur in case of a successive application. The asylum seeker risks to lose his or her benefits founded on the Social services Act, for instance the right to housing supplementary allowance, since he or she now is covered by the Act on the reception of asylum seekers, and then the asylum seeker could fall between the two Acts with serious consequences for the individual.

Further, the Migration Board is in charge of both the reception in general, the assistance to asylum seekers as well as the exercising of public authority by taking decisions concerning expulsion and more. Hence, the Board is in charge of measures that sometimes put the staff in a role conflict vis-à-vis the asylum seeker. However, the new procedural order with particular Migration Courts that came into force in 2006 will contribute to the separation of at least some aspects.

A problem currently discussed concerning reception conditions in Sweden is that the dealing with applications for asylum takes a long time. In 2005 the average time for dealing with an application, including dealing with appeals was 244 days (compared with 291 days in 2004).[813] Even if there are efforts to cut down the time dealing with cases it is still not satisfying.

Further, even if the information provided to asylum seekers on reception conditions are made in accordance with regulations, many informants have claimed that the information must be improved. The asylum seekers are not familiar with Sweden and there are often misunderstandings etc.

However, disregarding these remarks there are also positive aspects to consider. The involvement of many actors in the care of the asylum seeker also means a step towards integration in society. The local society must take responsibility for the asylum seekers, which is positive, although there are also many times the asylum seeker's needs are not fulfilled in accordance with the political goals.

Q.49. Mention any good practice in your Member State which could be promoted in other Member States

No further comments.

Q.50. Please add here any other interesting element about reception conditions in your Member State which you did not had the occasion to mention in your previous answer.

No further information.

[813] Migrationsverket (the Migration Board), Årsredovisning 2005 (Annual report), p. 10.

REFERENCES

Government's proposition 1993/94:94 Mottagande av asylsökande m.m.

Government's proposition 1996/97:25 Svensk migrationspolitik i globalt perspektiv.

Government's proposition 2004/05:136 Stärkt skydd för ensamkommande barn.

Government's proposition 2004/05:170 Ny instans- och processordning i utlännings- och medborgarskapsärenden.

Government's proposition 2005/06:1 Budgetpropositionen för 2006 Bilaga 11.

Government's proposition 2005/06:6 Flyktingskap och förföljelse pga. kön eller sexuell läggning.

Government's communication, Regeringens skrivelse 2005/06:18 Migration och asylpolitik.

Government's proposition 2005/06:46 Mottagande av ensamkommande barn.

Integrationsverket (the Swedish Integration Board), Integrationsverkets rapport 2000:5 Integrationsverkets kartläggning av kommunernas introduktionsverksamhet. Norrköping 2005.

Läkare utan gränser (Medecins sans Frontiers), Gömda i Sverige. Utestängda från hälso- och sjukvård. Resultat från en studie av Läkare utan gränser. Stockholm 2005.

Migrationsverket (the Swedish Migration Board), The Migration Board's Aliens handbook. (Current updates.)

Migrationsverket, Principer för kapacitetsplanering – ABO. (Administrative instruction, October 13, 2004.)

Migrationsverket, PM 2006-05-04 Utbetalning av ersättning för sociala insatser till asylsökande barn.

Migrationsverket, Reception of asylum seekers in Sweden. (Fact sheet).

Migrationsverket, Årsredovisning 2005. (Annual report.)

Migrationsverket, Översyn av myndighetsutövningen inom Migrationsverkets mottagningsverksamhet 2007-01-22, www.migrationsverket.se/swedish/press/dokument/översyn_myndighetsutovning.pdf

Official report SOU 2003:51 God man för ensamkommande flyktingbarn.

Official report SOU 2003:89 EG-rätten och mottagandet av asylsökande.[814]

Official report SOU 2004:31 Flyktingskap och könsrelaterad förföljelse.

[814] Available on the Government's website: http://www.regeringen.se/sb/d/108/a/1429

Official report SOU 2006:6 Skyddsgrundsdirektivet och svensk rätt.

Riksrevisionen (the State Audit Institution), Statliga insatser för nyanlända invandrare, RiR 2006:19, Stockholm 2006.

Riksrevisionsverket (the National Swedish Audit Bureau), Hur mottas de asylsökande? Den organiserade verksamheten för asylsökande inom Migrationsverket, Report RRV 2002:19.

Socialstyrelsen (the National Board of Health and Welfare), Medicinskt omhändertagande av asylsökande barn i hälso- och sjukvården.

Socialstyrelsen, Socialstyrelsens allmänna råd 1995:4 Hälso- och sjukvård för asylsökande och flyktingar.

Statistics Sweden (SCB), Reception Systems, their Capacities and the Social Situation of Asylum Applicants within the Reception System in the EU Member States (Small Scale Study I), SCB, Stockholm 2005.

The Riksdag's standing committee on social questions (Socialförsäkringsutskottet) 2005/06:SfU5 Ny prövning av avvisnings- och utvisningsbeslut.

Utrikesdepartementet, Sverige, Underrättelse om nationella åtgärder för att uppfylla Sveriges förpliktelser i Europeiska unionen, bilaga 15. (Communication from the Swedish Foreign Ministry to the European Comission [regarding the transposing of Directive 2003/9/EC], Attachment 15.)

Överenskommelse mellan regeringen och Svenska Kommunförbundet och Landstingsförbundet i samverkan om ersättning för hälso- och sjukvård till asylsökande. (In force at July 1, 2006.)

APPENDIX I

Web links to Acts and Ordinances in Sweden

General Acts

The Aliens Act: Utlänningslag (2005:716)

The Aliens Ordinance: Utlänningsförordning (2006:97)

The Ordinance (2001:720) on treatment of personal particulars in activities referring to acts on aliens law and citizenship: Förordning (2001:720) om behandling av personuppgifter i verksamhet enligt utlännings- och medborgarskapslagstiftningen

The Act (2005:429) on guardian for unaccompanied minors: http://62.95.69.15/

The Act (1991:572) on particular control of foreigners: Lag (1991:572) om särskild utlänningskontroll

Asylum and reception

The Act (1994:137) on the reception on asylum seekers: Lag (1994:137) om mottagande av asylsökande m.fl.

The Ordinance (1994:361) on the reception of asylum seekers: http://62.95.69.15/

The Ordinance (2002:1118) on state compensation for asylum seekers: Förordning (2002:1118) om statlig ersättning för asylsökande m.fl.

MIGRFS 07/2005 The Migration Board's instruction on Temporary LMA-card for foreigners in Sweden and a document showing that the holder is an asylum seeker: http://www.migrationsverket.se/ (search for: 07/2005)

Health care

The Social services Act (2001:453): http://62.95.69.15/

The Health and medical treatment Act (1982:763): http://62.95.69.15/

The Ordinance (1994:362) on charge for nursing care for certain foreigners: Förordning (1994:362) om vårdavgifter m.m. för vissa utlänningar

The Ordinance (1996:1357) on state compensation for health and medical treatment for asylum seekers: Förordning (1996:1357) om statlig ersättning för hälso- och sjukvård till asylsökande

The Dental service Act (1985:125): http://62.95.69.15/

Schooling

The School Act (1985:1100): http://62.95.69.15/

The Ordinance (2001:976) on education, pre-school activity and school childcare for asylum seekers: Förordning (2001:976) om utbildning, förskoleverksamhet och skolbarnsomsorg för asylsökande barn m.fl.

QUESTIONNAIRE FOR THE NATIONAL REPORT ON THE IMPLEMENTATION OF THE DIRECTIVE : RECEPTION CONDITIONS OF 27 JANUARY 2003

IN: UNITED KINGDOM

by Anneliese Baldaccini
abalda@gmx.net

30/05/07

1. NORMS OF TRANSPOSITION

Q.1. Identify the main norm of transposition (indicate the title, date, number, date of entry into force and references of publication into the official journal) and indicate its legal nature (legislative, regulatory, administrative); indicate in your answer if this norm was only devoted to the directive or if it has been included in a more general text and indicate in that case by quoting precisely the numbers of the provisions adopted to transpose the directive.

Transposition in the UK has involved amending the following rules and regulations:
Statement of Changes to the Immigration Rules HC 194 – January 2005: laid amendments to the Immigration Rules (HC 395) to create a new section (Part 11B) dealing with:

- the duty to provide written information to applicants ;
- the duty to provide applicants with a document certifying their status as an applicant for asylum;
- arrangements for an applicant to apply for permission to work after 12 months;
- the duty on applicants to notify the Home Office of their current address.

http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/lawandpolicy/immigrationrules/change194

Asylum Support (Amendment) Regulations 2005, SI 2005 No.11: laid amendments to the Asylum Support Regulations 2000 (ASR) in order to bring them into line with the directive's provisions on discontinuation, withdrawal or reduction of support.
http://www.opsi.gov.uk/si/si2005/20050011.htm

Asylum Seekers (Reception Conditions) Regulations 2005, SI 2005 No.7: new set of regulations to deal with family unity, unaccompanied asylum-seeking children, and vulnerable persons.
http://www.opsi.gov.uk/si/si2005/20050007.htm

These changes came into force on 5 February 2005.

Q.2. List by order of importance by using numbers (1, 2, 3) the others norms of transposition if there are more than one (indicate for each norm the title, date, number and references of publication into the official journal; include in your answer the administrative measures taken to ensure implementation of the directive and of the transposition norms like regulations, administrative circulars, special instructions,…)

Norms of transposition are listed at Q1. There has been very little in terms of instructions given to immigration staff on how to apply the new rules. In fact, the only guidance appears to be a general instruction to Immigration Service staff alerting them to the new duty to provide information within a given timeframe and providing a revised information leaflet; and to the duty to issue a document confirming status within three days in order to ensure compliance with the directive.

Furthermore, in April 2005, the former Home Office agency responsible for asylum support (National Asylum Support Service – NASS) issued casework instructions about the amended regulations and how they should apply (Policy Bulletin 83 - Duty to offer support, family unity, vulnerable persons, withdrawing support, available at: http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/6353/12358/pb83.pdf).

Q.3. Explain which level of government is competent to adopt the legal norms on reception conditions for asylum seekers (specify in particular in case of a federal or regional State, if it is the federal/central power or the components; in case, specify below when it is impossible for you to answer a question because it is about the competence of the components and it is impossible for you to gather reliable information about all of them)

The central government department responsible for adopting transposition norms is the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) of the Home Office. As from 2 April 2007, a new executive Agency of the Home Office, the Border and Immigration Agency, has assumed the responsibilities of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND).

Q.4. Explain the legal technical choices done to transpose the directive (comment on the nature and level of the norms used to do the transposition: legislative, regulatory, administrative like instructions, etc). Add any other element about the technique of transposition of the directive which is interesting for the implementation of Community law.

Transposition was effected through secondary legislation. The new/amended Regulations were laid before Parliament and adopted by negative resolution procedure (i.e. Parliament cannot amend but only recommend that it be vetoed within a 40-day period). Instructions as to transposition of EC directives are set out in the Cabinet Office transposition guide (Transposition Guide - how to implement European directives effectively: www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/regulation/documents/pdf/tpguide.pdf). This recommends a timely implementation, which achieves the objectives of the European measure, while also being in accordance with other national policy goals. It recommends avoiding over-implementation of directives unless the benefits of exceeding the minimum standard are clearly grater than the associated costs.

Q.5. Mention if there is a general tendency to just copy the provisions of the directive into national legislation without redrafting or adaptation them to national circumstances? If yes, give some of the worst examples and explain if there is a risk that those provisions remain unapplied or will create difficulties of implementation in the future.

New rules and regulations essentially 'copy out' the directive, i.e. they adopt the same language without attempting to elaborate on the meaning of the provisions in the national context. For instance, the provisions on special needs of individuals belonging to vulnerable groups may not be applied in the absence of a clear understanding of vulnerabilities and of a clear legal obligation to identify people with special needs. Furthermore, the UK has transposed the 'best interests of the child' requirement of the directive although its reservation to the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child operates specifically to exclude the consideration of 'best interests' when immigration decisions, including relevant to support, are made about asylum seeking children.

Q.6. Have all the texts necessary to ensure the effective implementation of the new rules of transposition been adopted, prepared or at least foreseen in the future (for example a regulation completing a new law and the necessary instructions telling the administration how to apply the new rules)?

The UK believes that all necessary implementing measures have been adopted. However, this is disputed by practitioners who argue that some provisions have not been implemented at all while others have not been properly implemented.

2. BIBLIOGRAPHY

Q.7. Has an in-depth preparatory study been made public about the changes at the occasion of the transposition? If yes, thanks for trying to provide us a copy (please contact to answer this question adequately the body and person who was responsible for the preparation of the transposition of the directive in the public administration).

The Home Office has issued a public consultation document on implementation of the Reception Directive on 10 September 2004. Responses were invited by 3 December 2004 and an analysis of responses was published on 14 January 2005.

Consultation document:
http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/6353/6356/17715/closedconsultationscouncild2.pdf

Responses to Consultation:
http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/6353/6356/17715/closedconsultationscouncild3.pdf

Q.8. Quote any recent scientific book or article published about the directive, the transposition rules or the question of reception conditions for asylum seekers in general (answer even if this literature is only available in your language and provide the complete title in your language (without translation) with all references; indicate author, title, in case name of periodical, year and place of publication).

House of Lords and House of Commons, Joint Committee on Human Rights, The Treatment of Asylum Seekers, Tenth Report of Session 2006-07, London, 30 March 2007

Valsamis Mitsilegas, 'The Directive on the Reception of Asylum Seekers and its implementation in the UK', Immigration Asylum and Nationality Law (IANL), Vol. 20, No.1, 2006

Anneliese Baldaccini, 'Asylum support: new rights under EC law', Legal Action, February 2006

Anneliese Baldaccini, 'Asylum Support and EU Obligations: implementation of the EU Reception Directive in the UK', Immigration Asylum and Nationality Law (IANL), Vol. 19, No.3, 2005

Anneliese Baldaccini, Asylum Support: A practitioners' guide to the EU Reception Directive, JUSTICE, November 2005.

Sue Willman, Stephen Knafler, Stephen Pierce, Support for Asylum-seekers: a guide to legal and welfare rights, LAG, 2004 (2nd ed).

Q.9. Quote any interesting decision of jurisprudence based on the implementation of the new rules of transposition of the directive (indicate references of publication if any)?

Cases relevant for interpretation of Article 16(2) Directive:

R (Limbuela, Tesema, Adam and others) v Secretary of State for the Home Department [2004] EWCA Civ 540.

R v Secretary of State for the Home Department, ex parte Adam and Others [2005] UKHL 66.

The House of Lords confirmed the Court of Appeal judgement in the case of Limbuela, Tesema, Adam and Others, which had found that support must be provided to asylum seekers verging on destitution, who have not claimed asylum as soon as reasonable practicable after entering the UK, to avoid a breach of their Article 3 rights.

In addition, the directive is now quoted in certain ASA (Asylum Support Adjudicators) decisions. These cases may not be high profile ones but nevertheless it is still an interesting development.

Thus for example in paragraph 25 in a decision from July 2005 the ASA stated that:

> In making the decision to discontinue support, the respondent appears to have overlooked Regulation 20(3) of the [Asylum Support] Regulations:
> "Any decision to discontinue support in the circumstances referred to in paragraph (1) above shall be taken individually, objectively and impartially and reasons shall be given. Decisions will be based on the particular situation of the persons concerned and particular regard shall had to whether he is a vulnerable person as described by Article 17 of Council Directive 2003/9/EC of 27 January 2003 laying down the minimum standards for the reception of asylum seekers."

For the full decision: http://www.asylum-support-adjudicators.org.uk/decisions/pdf/9550.pdf

Also see paragraph 6 of another ASA decision with regard to vulnerable individuals:

On the subject of vulnerability, I have a letter dated 27 July 2005 from a Doctor with the Medical Foundation. He confirms that the appellant was tortured and is still suffering from the psychological effects of prolonged mistreatment. I therefore consider that he is a vulnerable person as described by Article 17 of Council Directive 2003/9/EC of 27 January 2003 laying down minimum standards for the reception of asylum seekers.

For the full decision : http://www.asylum-support-adjudicators.org.uk/decisions/pdf/9766.pdf

3. GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

The purpose of the following two questions is to help the reader to understand easily and quickly the system of reception conditions in your Member State and also to avoid that you have to repeat general elements in other parts of the questionnaire. Please do not write more than one or maximum two pages and do not include large historical developments.

Q.10. Describe in general the system of reception conditions in your Member State (in particular which are the main actors in charge of reception conditions?)

In the UK, asylum applicants may initially on entry be held for short periods (normally up to five days, but as far as possible asylum applicants are moved after one day, either to a removal centre or granted temporary release) at a Short Term Holding Facility (STHF), which are located in or near the ports of entry, or placed in an Induction Centres or Initial Accommodation for up to two weeks. The provision of Initial Accommodation is a temporary arrangement for asylum seekers who would otherwise be destitute and are awaiting a decision on whether they qualify for support under section 95 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 (dispersal accommodation and/or subsistence) or qualify for support under section 95 but are awaiting transfer to their dispersal accommodation.

At the Induction Centres, as well as being provided with bed and board, asylum seekers are given an overview of their rights and responsibilities, a description of the asylum process itself, and details of voluntary return programmes. After this initial placement, asylum applicants may choose private accommodation with family or friends (and may receive subsistence payments for essential living needs at the level indicated in the regulations), or move on to accommodation, on a "no-choice" basis, which the Home Office has contracted with the public and private sector and registered social landlords normally in a designated dispersal area away from London and the South East.

The National Asylum Support Service (NASS) no longer formally exists and support issues are instead be dealt with by New Asylum Model (NAM) caseworkers. For those within the NAM, all decisions on eligibility, payment and cessation of asylum support are now made by a single dedicated case owner.
Initial Accommodation (IA) is no longer managed by voluntary sector but by private accommodation providers sub-contracted by the Home Office. There are large IA centres in each NAM region (London, Liverpool, Leeds, Cardiff, Glasgow, Solihull). NGOs provide wraparound advice services in some but not all areas, but no longer manage the accommodation.

Registered Social Landlords (RSLs) are contracted by NASS to provide housing in the same way as other public/private suppliers. Such contracts do not generally include the provision of food. RSLs are independent housing organisations registered with the Housing Corporation under the Housing Act 1996 to provide social housing. As the council has a limited supply of council housing, councils work closely with RSLs to provide additional housing

A minority of asylum applicants (up to 30% according to the government target set out in the Five Year Strategy on Immigration and Asylum – see link below) may be detained in one of the 10 removal centres if the Immigration Officers believes that there is a risk of absconding, if they are from so-called safe countries to which the non-suspensive appeals provisions (NSA) apply, or if it is expected that their application can be quickly dealt with and, in case of rejection, they can subsequently be returned to their country of origin. Those who require higher levels of security and control may be detained in a number of prison establishments. In Northern Ireland, as there are no dedicated detention facilities, asylum seekers are detained in prisons.

Q.11. Q11. A. Explain if you have different types and levels of reception conditions following the different stages of the asylum procedure (this implies that you have to give briefly the necessary explanations about the asylum procedure). Make if relevant for reception conditions a distinction between the following procedural stages: determination of the responsible Member State on the basis of the Dublin II regulation, special procedures at the border (including transit zones in airports), accelerated procedures, admissibility procedures, eligibility procedures and the different possibilities of appeals (suspensive or not) against a refusal of the asylum request. Indicate what the main differences of reception conditions are between the different stages (if necessary by detailing between the different elements of reception conditions, in particular housing) and explain what the evolution of reception conditions is following the different stages of the procedure.

There are in the UK no procedural stages with different reception conditions as such. The main difference in treatment is between asylum seekers who are detained and those who are not detained. Everyone making an asylum application undergoes a screening interview either at the port of entry or at the Asylum Screening Unit (ASU) in either Croydon or Liverpool. At the screening interview, the immigration officer will consider whether (i) another Member State is responsible for considering the application under Dublin II or similar third country arrangements; (ii) the application could be dealt with quickly at one of the fast-track detention centres in Oakington, Harmondsworth or Yarl's Wood.

Depending on the outcome of the screening, and assuming the UK is responsible for processing the claim, applicants may either find their own accommodation with family or friends, enter an induction centre or be detained at one of the removal centres. At least 10 days after the screening (but less so in fast-track detention centres), applicants will be invited to attend a substantive asylum interview. After the interview, the immigration authorities may detain the applicant, or recommend continuation of detention if they feel the case can be decided quickly or if they feel the applicant will not stay in touch, or given temporary admission to the UK, usually with reporting requirements, whilst they wait for a decision to be made on their case.

As part of the Home Office Five Year Strategy on Immigration and Asylum a New Asylum Model (NAM) was launched in January 2006 and rolled out March 2007. NAM is based on the reorganisation of asylum processing in three ways. The first involves segmentation: during the screening interview, Immigration Officers will assign the case to 'segments' which will then determine processing, management and support pathways for each case. The five segments which have been defined are: third country cases; cases involving accompanied or unaccompanied children; cases that can potentially attract non-suspensive appeals; so-called late or opportunistic claims; and general casework. Whatever segment a person is placed will determine the speed at which the case is processed, the timing of the initial interview, assistance in obtaining access to legal advice, the type of accommodation, and reporting conditions.

Fast track processing is the second and 'case ownership' the third element of NAM. The idea is to have a single owner who is responsible for an asylum seeker throughout the process – from application to the granting of status or removal.

For the government's Five Year Strategy for Asylum and Immigration, see http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/6353/aboutus/fiveyearstrategy.pdf

From 5th March all new asylum applicants have come within the NAM. Any case not formally within the NAM by that date is dealt with by a separate Legacy Directorate. The asylum process is now divided in five segments, with processing times as follows (in working days):

Segment	Screened	First Reporting	Asylum Interview	Decision served	Appeal	Removal
1. Third Country	1	N/A	N/A	N/A	N/A	N/A
2. Minors	1	10	25	35	35-115	N/A
3. NSA detained	1	1	2-3	3-4	Post removal
NSA non detained	1	2	5	11	Post removal
4.Late/Opportunistic Detained	1	1	2-3	3-4	9-10	After 10
Late/Opportunistic Non detained	1	2	5	11	11-91	After 91
5.General Casework	1	3	8-12	20	20-100	After 100

Under the NAM programme, people who need accommodation and support stay overnight for 1 night in accommodation near the ASUs (where people claim asylum). They are taken, usually the following day, to Initial Accommodation in one of six NAM areas, after which they are usually dispersed to more long term accommodation within the same region. The timescales have increased – people now tend to spend between 1 week and 3 months in IA and are then moved to dispersal accommodation.

Q 11. B. Indicate precisely for which stage(s) of the asylum procedure the answers on reception conditions you give below are valid.

The answers below are valid for the general system of reception in both detained and non-detained cases, with the exception of the NAM as this is still in the process of being rolled out.

The general system of reception is now the one provided under the NAM system. Those outside the NAM are known as Legacy Cases and are being dealt with by a separate Legacy Directorate. Most of these are cases of those who have exhausted their appeal rights but who remain in the UK. The aim is to resolve all legacy cases by June 2011.

4. GENERAL RULES ON RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.12. Q 12. A. Are material reception conditions provided in kind, in money or in vouchers or in a combination of these elements (see article 13, §5 which is an optional provision)? Distinguish between the different elements (housing, food, clothes, health, transportation, pocket money,…). If reception conditions are provided in money (in general or in some cases, for instance when no places are anymore available in accommodation centres), indicate the precise amount given to the asylum seekers. Indicate in your answer what is provided in general and if there are exceptional cases. Specify in your answer if reception conditions are different from the general system of social aid for nationals or aliens and if yes, if and when (which stage of the asylum procedure) can asylum seekers have access to the general system of social aid?

Material reception conditions are provided in kind (i.e. accommodation and services) and/or money (subsistence payments). From 10 April 2006, the weekly subsistence rates are (see The Asylum Support (Amendment) Regulations 2006, SI No.733):

Single person aged 18 – 24	£31.85 (€46.66)
Single person aged 25 or over	£40.22 (€58.91)
Lone parent aged 18 or over	£40.22 (€58.91)
Qualifying couple	£63.07 (€92.40)
Person aged at least 16 but under 18 (except a member of a qualifying couple)	£34.60 (€50.69)
Person aged under 16	£45.58 (€66.77)

Pregnant women and those with children under 3 years can apply for additional payments each week (£5 per week if baby is under 1 year old, £3 per week if between 1 and 3 yrs old). There is a maternity grant of £300 (€439.48) available to those whose support has been approved – this must be claimed within tight timescales just before or after the birth.

Weekly income increased as of 9th April 07 (see The Asylum Support (Amendment) Regulations 2007, SI No.863). The new rates are:

Single person aged 18 – 24	£32.80 (€48.07)
Single person aged 25 or over	£41.41 (€60.69)
Lone parent aged 18 or over	£41.41 (€60.69)
Qualifying couple	£64.96 (€95.21)
Person aged at least 16 but under 18 (except a member of a qualifying couple)	£35.65 (€52.25)
Person aged under 16	£47.45 (€69.54)

Subsistence payments are available both for those who need accommodation and those who are accommodated with friends and family. To qualify for such payments the case owner must ascertain whether a person is destitute or likely to become so, taking income or assets as defined under the regulations into account (see reg6 of the Asylum Support Regulations 2002 (http://www.opsi.gov.uk/si/si2000/20000704.htm#3 which lists as assets: cash, savings, investments, land, cars, goods etc). The whole household's income and assets are taken into account in assessing the level of support. Therefore, an asylum seeker with other resources may receive a lower rate of support.

At the Induction Centre/Initial Accommodation, asylum seekers are provided with bed and board. There is generally no cash payment. Some Initial Accommodation is not full board and cash is provided.

There is no cash payment for asylum seekers in detention.

Q 12. B. Can the reception conditions in kind, money or vouchers be considered as sufficient "to ensure a standard of living adequate for the health of applicants and capable of ensuring their subsistence" as requested by article 13, §2 of the directive (which is a mandatory provision but leaves a certain space to Member States)? In order to help to assess the respect of this rule when reception conditions are provided in money, include if necessary in your answer points of comparison with the minimum amount of social aid guaranteed for nationals in your Member State.

The amounts are generally not considered sufficient by stakeholders as they equate to only 70% of the subsistence payment to indigenous welfare recipients. However, the government disputes this arguing that although monetary support is set at 70% of the universal level of Income Support which is said to maintain an individual or a family immediately above the 'poverty line', support in kind creates a degree of parity in so far as indigenous persons in receipt of Income Support must provide for their services (i.e. gas/electricity and water) from their Income Support while these are included in the support and accommodation package for asylum seekers.

Nationals on Income Support may be eligible to Housing Benefit (Housing Benefit is available to help people who are on benefits or who have low incomes to pay their rent. It is paid by local councils). Housing Benefit is only available to those on the mainstream welfare system. Asylum seekers receiving support do not pay for the cost of Home Office-contracted accommodation with private/public suppliers.

Children under 16 receive 100% equivalent of income support but their parents still receive a reduced amount and are ineligible for other valuable mainstream financial entitlements such as child benefits, working family and child tax credits. This increases the disparity between asylum and mainstream welfare support levels.

In general, where such level of support and accommodation is provided for a limited period it may be argued to be "sufficient". Conditions become intolerable for those who are in receipt of limited support for a long period of time. This assumption is based on the government's own stated policy for introducing lower levels of cash payments. The UK first justified lower levels of basic cash payment to asylum seekers on the basis that the asylum support system was a safety-net arrangement on which people were intended to live for only a short time (see Home Secretary's statement in Hansard, 15 June 1999, Vol.333, col.475). However, particularly in the early years in which NASS was established (from 2000 onwards) a large number of asylum seekers were living on NASS support for a considerable time. The hardship of those living on NASS support was documented by Oxfam and the Refugee Council in their report Poverty and Asylum in the UK, 2002, which compared mainstream welfare benefits with the package of support given by NASS. The report showed that it was particularly the most vulnerable who were losing out: pregnant women, mother with babies, the elderly and people with disabilities and ill-health, because they could not benefit from a range of additional payments that are designed to enable income support recipients to deal with extra essential costs, hardships and special needs.

It may be argued that that the level of support is sufficient for applicants who have a final decision, up to and including appeal, determined within 6 months (which is the government target). This was the case of 67% of applications received in 2004/05.

Agencies working in the voluntary sector further highlight that asylum seekers who have made their own accommodation arrangements and apply for subsistence payments only, may not receive anything for several weeks while their application is assessed. They do not believe that this is sufficient to ensure they are capable of ensuring their subsistence.

Another circumstance where the adequacy of support is disputed concerns asylum seekers who make a fresh claim for asylum after a first claim has been disposed of at appeal. According to section 5(v) of Asylum Policy Bulletin 71, issued on 31 March 2005 (available at: http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/6353/12358/pb71.pdf), a person who made further representations to the Home Office seeking a fresh claim for asylum will be entitled for support under section 4 of the 1999 Act (hard case support). Support in these circumstances is provided in the form of self-catering accommodation with vouchers to the value of £35 (52 Euro) per week to purchase food and essential toiletries. In some cases, full board accommodation may be provided depending on availability. This is below the support provided to those who are claiming asylum on the first occasion. For details on section 4 support see http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/6353/12358/QandA.doc.

For domestic rules regarding successive applications see Q.16.

5. PROCEDURAL ASPECTS

Q.13. Q 13. A. Does the national legislation specifically provide that a request for international protection is presumed to be under the Geneva Convention unless explicitly requested otherwise? (see article 2, b which is a mandatory provision)

No, domestic rules do not mention requests for 'international protection' but requests for asylum. The asylum process does, however, distinguish between refugee status and subsidiary protection status (ie humanitarian protection and discretionary leave) with clearly less rights attached to the latter (thus underlining the primacy of the Geneva Convention). However, until the determination of the status, support provisions are the same for all applicants and all applications are treated as 'applications for asylum'.

The Asylum Seekers (Reception Conditions) Regulations 2005, reg.2(c) define a 'claim for asylum' "a claim made by a third country national or a stateless person that to remove him or require to leave the United Kingdom would be contrary to the United Kingdoms obligations under the [Geneva Convention] and its Protocol."

Q. 13. B. Explain if the scope of application of reception conditions is extended to other asylum seekers than refugees in the sense of the Geneva Convention, in particular to persons asking for subsidiary protection or to other forms of protection like humanitarian statuses (see article 3, § 4 which is an optional provision)? If not, explain briefly which the differences between these special regimes and the directive are.

In the consultation document, the Home Office stated that it would not extend the provisions of the directive to other asylum seekers than refugees in the sense of the Refugee Convention and has accordingly restricted the scope of the implementing legislation to claims made under the Refugee Convention (see above the definition of asylum claim in the RCR). However, in practice, for persons who are making their first asylum application the Home Office are not making technical distinctions between an asylum application made under the Refugee Convention and an asylum application made under Article 3 ECHR only, even though the EU Reception Directive allows then to make such a distinction. This is consistent with the single procedure in the UK, where human rights issues can be raised alongside an asylum claim or are inherent in that claim.

Q. 13. C. Are there specific provisions in national law for reception conditions in case of diplomatic or territorial asylum requests submitted through a diplomatic or consular representation (see article 3, §2 which is an optional provision)?

There is no provision in the UK Immigration Rules allowing applications for asylum through diplomatic or consular representations.

Q.14. Are reception conditions available as from the moment one asylum application is introduced? How is article 13, §1 which is mandatory legally understood? Do asylum seekers have to satisfy any other condition in order to get reception conditions?

Under domestic provisions entitlement to support starts when a claim for asylum is recorded and notified to the Home Office in person. In practice, therefore, asylum seekers who fulfil the eligibility criteria may be left without support because of delays in recording a claim or where it is disputed that a claim has been brought.

It is arguable that the practice of 'recording' a claim under domestic law makes various benefits under the directive subject to an additional requirement, which may result in asylum seekers being denied the rights to which they are entitled.

Q.15. Explain when reception conditions end, for instance after refusal of the asylum request (include in your answer the link with the right of appeal against a decision of refusal of the status, in particular the question of its suspensive effect)

In line with Regulation 2(2A) of the Asylum Support Regulations 2000, if a person is granted refugee status, support will be terminated 28 days from the day on which the Home Office notifies the claimant of their decision. This person will from that moment onwards enter the mainstream benefit system. If a person's application for asylum is rejected, or his appeal is dismissed, support will cease 21 days after the Home Office notified him or her of the decision or after the notification about the dismissal of the appeal.

Q.16 Are there special rules or practices regarding reception conditions in case of successive applications for asylum introduced by the same person?

Asylum seekers who make a fresh claim for asylum after a first claim has been disposed of at appeal, may receive basic (hard case) support under section 4 1999 Act pending consideration of these further representations, if the asylum support caseworker considers that there is substance in these representations. His application will then be passed for consideration to the asylum caseworker who will determine under rule 353 of the Immigration Rules whether the further representations constitute a fresh claim for asylum. There are then 3 possibilities: (1) the asylum caseworker considers that the further representations amount to a fresh claim for asylum and makes a decision to grant asylum - the applicant will then become eligible for mainstream benefits as a refugee. (2) The asylum caseworker decides that the further representations do amount to a fresh claim but decides to reject the claim. This carries a right of appeal and the applicant will be entitled to apply for asylum support under section 95 of the 1999 Act if he chooses to appeal the decision and pending a final outcome. (3) The asylum caseworker decides that the further representations do not amount to a fresh claim for asylum and rejects them. This carries no right of appeal. The applicant would no longer be eligible for support under section 4, unless he brought himself under one of the other criteria for support, for example that he was taking steps to leave the UK.

Q.17. Information of asylum seekers about their rights and obligations in terms of reception conditions, in particular about established benefits (see article 5 which is too large extend a mandatory provision; do not confuse this question with the information to be provided to asylum seekers about the asylum procedure):

Q. 17. A. Are asylum seekers informed, and if yes about what precisely?

Information about rights and obligations is provided to everyone who claims asylum even if they make no application for asylum support. Central government funds six agencies to provide orientation briefings to newly arrived asylum seekers, all of which are also responsible for the information provided through the formal induction processes.

Orientation briefings include an explanation of the support system, requirements in order to continue to access this support (eg what constitutes a breach of conditions etc), the Accommodation Provider's role, how to access legal advice, reporting requirements, health care, how to complain etc.

Q. 17. B. Is the information provided in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

It is given orally, accompanied by written information for example a list of local solicitors and a Welcome Pack including information on local services. New asylum claimants are also shown a Home Office DVD outlining the Home Office's approach to the asylum process.

Briefings and DVDs for asylum seekers and induction staff have are being updated in order to reflect the changes that have been introduced to the decision making and support arrangements under the NAM

Q.17. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify the list of languages in which it is available

Orientation briefings are centrally controlled and provided on DVD in 15 languages (Arabic, Dari, English, Farsi, French, Kurdish Sorani, Mandarin, Pashtu, Russian, Somali, Spanish, Swahili, Turkish, Urdu and Vietnamese). Asylum seekers whose language is not covered by this list receive a briefing given by an interpreter from a script.

Q. 17. D. Is the deadline of maximum 15 days respected?

The 15 days deadline has been transposed in the Immigration Rules Part 11B para. 358. In the large majority of cases delivery of information is usually completed within 15 days.

Q.18. Information of asylum seekers about the existence of organisations or groups promoting their interest and defending their rights (see article 5 which is to a large extend a mandatory provision):

Q. 18. A. Is there a list of organisations dressed by the authorities and if yes is it comprehensive? Is this in particular the case about the possibilities to get legal assistance and health care?

There is no central list of organisations dressed by the authorities. When a person claims asylum there are usually signposted to the local One Stop Service where further information on specific needs (list of local solicitors, GPs etc) is given.

One Stop Services are a network of advice centres which are managed by NGOs but receive funding from central government to provide services to asylum seekers.

Q. 18. B. Is the information provided to the asylum seekers, and if yes, in writing or, when appropriate, orally?

Asylum seekers may be given a leaflet containing the address of the local One Stop Service but, quite often this information is given orally.

Q. 18. C. Is that information in general provided in a language understood by asylum seekers? Specify if possible the list of languages in which it is available.

Where leaflets are provided they are given in English. Each One Stop Service also produces a "service description" leaflet which may be translated into languages which are needed locally.

Q. 18. D. How many organisations are active in that field in your Member State?

This is extremely difficult to quantify. There are a range of organisations active in the UK. These include Refugee Community Organisations, charitable, voluntary sector and faith organisations. They range in size and capacity and their number is believed to run in the hundreds if not thousands.

Q.19. Documentation of asylum seekers (see article 6):

Q.19. A. What kind of document is delivered to the asylum seeker? Explain the legal value of this document (just a certification of the status as asylum seeker or also prove of identity?) (see §1 of article 6 which is a mandatory provision)

Asylum seekers are issued an Asylum Registration Card (ARC). The ARC provides prove of identity and gives asylum seekers access to services provided for them within the UK. The ARC is a credit card-sized plastic card issued as an acknowledgement of an Asylum or Article 3 application made to IND. It contains information about the identity and immigration status of the holder (as recorded by IND when the card was created) in visible form and/or stored on a magnetic chip that can be read in specially programmed "QuickCheck" card readers. As well as the inclusion of the holder's personal details, the card contains a number of security features including the inclusion on the face of the card of two digital images of the holder, the holder's fingerprint details on the chip and optically variable printing. On all ARCs issued from mid-January 2005 the card shows on the reverse whether or not the holder is an asylum claimant.
The ARC has been defined in section 26A of the 1971 Immigration Act, as amended by section 148 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 (the NIA Act) in connection with certain offences as:
(1) ..."a document which-
(a) carries information about a person (whether or not wholly or partially electronically), and
(b) is issued by the Secretary of State to the person wholly or partly in connection with a claim for asylum (whether or not made by that person)."

Q.19. B. Are there situations or specific cases in which another equivalent document or even no document is issued? (in particular is there an exception for "procedures to decide on the right of the applicant legally to enter the territory" as made possible by §2 of article 6)?

A Standard Acknowledgement Letter (SAL) is provided if an ARC cannot be issued.
A SAL is a double-sided A4-sized document printed on special security paper and containing a unique number. It is used to acknowledge a claim for asylum in circumstances where it is not possible to issue an ARC within 3 days of the claim being lodged. A SAL displays the name, date of birth and nationality of the claimant and any dependants, the date of arrival (if known), the date of application, their address in the UK and HO reference. Photographs of the claimant and any dependants are also attached. Following changes introduced on 17

December 2004, SALs issued are now normally valid for just 2 months from date of issue (known as a time-limited SAL). The time limiting is to enable arrangements to be made for the claimant and any dependants to attend and be issued an ARC, and to encourage attendance at such an event.
Very rarely, where for wholly exceptional reasons (such as severe physical disability making the taking of fingerprints impossible) it is not possible to issue an ARC, a SAL valid until the claim has been finally decided will be issued to a claimant instead of an ARC. Such a SAL will be withdrawn when the claim is finally decided or the claimant leaves the UK.

Q.19. C. For how long is this document in principle valid and is it necessary to renew it after a certain period?

There is no expiry date on the ARC card and there is no requirement for renewal.

Policy instructions state that the ARC, once issued, is valid for as long as the asylum claimant is authorised to remain in the UK while their application is pending or being examined.

A sample of ARC is available at: http://www.bba.org.uk/pdf/Asylumcard.pdf

Q.19. D. What is the deadline for the delivery of that document? Is the mandatory deadline of 3 days set by article 6, §1 respected[815]?

The Home Office usually issue either a SAL or an ARC card within 3 days. The duty to issue a status document within three days is now a requirement under the Immigration Rules (rule 359), which have been amended to implement the Directive.

Delays to issuing an ARC occur on account of the fact that the Rules subject this requirement to an asylum application being recorded, rather than made. Those who make a fresh claim for asylum after a first claim has been disposed of at appeal are rarely documented within three days because of delays in recording a fresh claim.

Q.19. E. Is it possible for an asylum seeker to get a travel document for serious humanitarian reasons (see §5 of article 6 which is an optional provision)?

The UK has not transposed this optional provision. The qualifying criteria set out in the instructions are limited to people granted limited leave to remain (humanitarian protection or discretionary leave), who wish to apply for travel documents on compassionate grounds, such as for serious illness or the funeral of a close relative, or to receive medical treatment. The instructions do not explicitly include those awaiting a decision on their claim.

Q.19. F. Is there a central system of registration of asylum seekers and is it or not separate from the registration of aliens? If yes, describe it briefly (content) and indicate in particular if it is an electronic database.

There are various enabled sites were asylum seekers are registered and issued with an Asylum Registration Card. These are located at airports, at the Asylum Screening Units in Croydon and Liverpool, at Reporting Centres and at Oakington Detention Centre. Fingerprints taken from applicants as part of the registration process are examined and retained in the central Immigration Fingerprint Bureau (IFB).

The system is separate from the registration of aliens.

Q.20. Residence of asylum seekers :

Q.20. A. Is in principle an asylum seeker free to move on the entire territory of your Member State or only to a limited part of it and in case, which part? (see article 7, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

There is no rule explicitly restricting freedom of movement but conditions which may be imposed upon asylum seekers (such as reporting requirements under paragraph 21 of Schedule 2 to the Immigration Act 1971, as amended) may restrict this freedom in practice.

Q.20. B. About the place of residence (see §2 of article 7): explain to which extend the person is free to choose her residence and if this depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance processing of application, attribution of reception conditions,…).

UK policy makes it a condition of support that an asylum seeker lives at 'the authorised address'. An 'authorised address' is either the accommodation provided to the applicant and his or her dependants (if any) by way of asylum support (generally in a dispersal area) or the address notified by the supported person to the Home Secretary in his or her application for asylum support.

Q.20. C. About the place of reception (meaning where the asylum seeker has to stay to benefit from reception conditions) (see § 4 of article 7): explain which are the general rules about the determination of this place (to which extend are the decisions determining the place taken individually and do they take into account the personal situation of the asylum seeker?) and to which extend the person is free to choose it and if it depends of the stage of the asylum procedure (for instance before and after admissibility); if there are constraints limiting the choice, explain which ones and their reasons (for instance attribution of reception conditions, processing of the application,…).

If asylum seekers apply for the 'accommodation and support' package, accommodation will be provided on a no-choice basis. The policy is to disperse asylum seekers around the UK, to areas outside London and the southeast where accommodation is more readily available. The Home Office makes arrangements for accommodation in hotels, flats or houses through contracts with public, private and/or voluntary sector suppliers.

In determining the nature and location of accommodation, the case owner must take into account circumstances such as the location of other family members, education, medical or other social welfare needs (see Asylum Policy Bulletin 31 - Dispersal Guidelines, available at: http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/6353/12358/pb31.pdf).

Q.20. D. If all asylum seekers are not placed in accommodation centres because of capacity limits, explain how the persons are distributed between accommodation centres and other accommodation facilities (which authority takes the decisions, on the basis of which elements, can that decision be appealed by the asylum seeker,…)

Not applicable in UK context.

The Secretary of State has a statutory power to set up 'accommodation centres', in which supported asylum seeker households would live and be educated and which would include the provision of facilities for determining asylum claims and appeals (Part II Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002). This provision was to be implemented on a pilot basis but this has proved difficult due to planning objections from district councils. The government has recently stated that it will not proceed with the building of accommodation centres.

Q.20. E. How can an asylum seeker ask to leave temporarily the place of residence or of reception or an assigned area? How is the individual AND impartial character of the decision ensured? (see §5 of article 7 which is a mandatory provision)

Requirements on notifying IND of any temporary absences from accommodation are set out in the NASS Agreement. Asylum seekers have also an obligation to notify the authorities of any change of address, i.e. when they permanently leave the place of residence (Immigration Rules, Part.11B rule 358B).

Q.21. Q.21. A. Do rules on reduction or withdrawal of reception conditions exist in internal legislation and if yes in which cases (mention in particular if there are cases not foreseen by article 16, § 1 and 2 which are optional provisions)? Distinguish in your answer between cases of reduction and withdrawal and explain which conditions can be reduced and if access to emergency health care is always ensured as requested by article 16, §4, last sentence.

The UK has transposed Article 16 by adding provisions in domestic regulations where asylum support is terminated. Reg 20(1) of the Asylum Support Regulations (ASR), as amended, now sets out the same set of circumstances in which support can be suspended or discontinued as those specified in the directive. In addition, support can be discontinued for failure, without reasonable excuse, to comply with a relevant condition (reg 20(1)(k)). A relevant condition is a condition subject to which asylum support is being provided (reg 19(2)). These may include living at 'the authorised address' and the duty to notify a change of circumstances as specified by the regulations (reg 15 ASR).

Access to emergency health care is always ensured. The National Health Service (Charges to Overseas Visitors) Regulations and Health Service Circular HSC 1999/018 Overseas visitors' eligibility to receive free primary care, state that no charge shall be made in respect of any services forming part of the health service in respect of those who have made a formal application for asylum.

Q.21. B. Has article 16, §2 dealing with refusal of reception conditions for unreasonably late applications for asylum been transposed by your Member State (or was this case already applicable before transposition)? Are there cases in practice?

A provision allowing support to be refused, where the asylum seeker failed to demonstrate that his or her asylum claim was made as soon as reasonable practicable after arrival, existed in the UK (in section 55 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002) prior to adoption and transposition of the Directive and has been applied in practice since January 2003. In fact, the wording of Article 16(2) of the directive follows closely the wording of section 55.

Further to a Court of Appeal judgement in R (Limbuela, Tesema, Adam and others) v Secretary of State for the Home Department [2004] EWCA Civ 540 – see Q9 above), the Home Office has revised guidance on section 55 to the effect that the government must provide support unless it is positively satisfied that the individual concerned has some alternative form of support available to meet his or her need for housing, food and washing facilities. The case was examined by the House of Lords, which reached a similar judgement to that of the Court of Appeal (R v Secretary of State for the Home Department, ex parte Adam and Others – see Q9 above). The Courts clarification on the interpretation of Article 3 ECHR in the context of section 55 has led to the number of section 55 refusals decreasing significantly ever since this provision entered into force in January 2003. Home Office statistics show that in 2003, of 14,760 cases referred to NASS, 9,410 were refused support under section 55. In 2004, section 55 refusals were 1,360 out of 10,570 cases referred to NASS. In 2005, section 55 refusals were 340 out of 3,780 cases referred to NASS. Finally, there were 450 section 55 refusals in the first 2 quarters of 2006 (January to June) out of 2,515 applications for support.

During 2006, there were still 895 people who were refused support under section 55.

Q.21. C. How is it ensured that decisions of reduction or withdrawal are taken individually, objectively AND in particular impartially (for instance through and independent arbitrator) (see article 16, §4 which is a mandatory provision)?

Article 16(4) of the Directive has been transposed in reg 20(3) ASR, and requires, in similar terms, that decisions to discontinue support take into account the particular circumstances of the person concerned. Asylum policy instructions (see Policy Bulletin 83) do not provide any further guidance as to how this requirement is to be ensured in practice.

Q.21. D. Is statement 14/03 adopted by the Council at the same moment as the directive respected (see the document attached to our sending)?

Yes, as a matter of policy, since the Court of Appeal judgement in the case of Limbuela and the Home Office's decision to review application of section 55. See revised guidance in Asylum Policy Bulletin 75(V5) – Section 55 (late claims) 2002 Act guidance: http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/6353/12358/pb75.pdf

There is no specific guidance as to how decisions to discontinue support (other than in section 55 cases) are to take account of the situation of the persons concerned, particularly those of vulnerable people, nor is there any litigation readily traceable on the subject. I cannot say whether this statement is respected in practice.

Q.21. E. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements on cases of reduction, withdrawal or refusal which have been taken, and if yes, what has been the outcome?

Section 55, allowing support to be refused where the asylum seeker failed to demonstrate that his or her asylum claim was made as soon as reasonable practicable after arrival, has been subject to extensive litigation in the UK and to an unprecedented number of applications for interim relief. The issue was finally settled in final instance by the House of Lords, which found that the Home Office must provide support to asylum seekers verging on destitution, who have not claimed asylum as soon as reasonably practicable after entering the UK, to avoid a breach of their Article 3 ECHR rights.

Q.22. Q.22. A. Appeal against a negative decision relating to the granting of benefits or based on article 7 (see article 21 which is a mandatory provision): indicate against which decision an appeal can be introduced, describe the system of appeal in general and include in particular in your answer the information given to asylum seekers about possibilities of appealing, deadline for appealing, if the appeal has or not a suspensive effect, if there are different steps (for instance first an administrative appeal and in particular if the guarantee of an appeal before a judicial body in the last instance is respected)?

Appeals against support decision are heard by the Asylum Support Adjudicator (ASA). However, ASA's jurisdiction is limited. For example, there is no right to appeal as to the location, nature or standard of support. The only way of challenging all such decisions is by way of judicial review. Asylum Policy Bulletin 23 explains the process of asylum support appeals (see http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/6353/12358/pb23.pdf).

Furthermore, ASA appeals lack suspensive effect, i.e. they do not allow the continuation of support while the appeal is being decided. This makes interim relief in the courts the only possible remedy, but this remedy is not a practical one and, therefore, in most cases interim relief will not be a viable option.

Under section 103 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999, a right of appeal exists only against the Secretary of State's decision that an applicant does not qualify for support, and the Secretary of State's decision to stop providing that support before that support would otherwise have come to an end.

In the context of Article 7, there is no appeal against the decision in respect of the 'assigned' dispersal accommodation. A decision to detain, on the other hand, can be challenged as explained in Q.33H.

Where an asylum seeker is notified of a decision against which they may appeal, he will be sent a notice of appeal with two copies of the decision letter. The asylum seeker will have been deemed to have received the decision on the second working day after it was sent, unless the contrary is proven. The asylum seeker then has three working days in which to submit an appeal to the Asylum Support Adjudicators.

The Asylum Support Adjudicators have discretion to extend the time limit for receiving the notice of appeal if it is in the interests of justice, and if they are satisfied that the appellant or his representative was prevented from complying with the three working days' time limit by circumstances beyond his control.

After receipt of an appeal by the ASA, if there is no oral hearing, the appeal must be determined on consideration day (day 4) or as soon as possible thereafter, and in any event not later than 5 days after the consideration day – ie day 9. If there is an oral hearing, the reasons statement will be sent to appellant or representative, and Secretary of State by day 11.

Q.22. B. Explain which are the possibilities for asylum seekers to benefit from legal assistance when they introduce such an appeal (see article 21, §2 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to Member States)?

There is very limited, voluntary, assistance available at ASA hearings. The lack of a proper system of legal assistance before ASA (other than on an exceptional funding basis which, if granted, is invariably ex post facto) represents a serious obstacle to asylum seekers wishing to exercise their appeal rights or be represented before the ASA.

Q.22. C. Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

See Q. 9 above.

Q.22. D. Is a mechanism of complain for asylum seekers about quality of receptions conditions in general (even if they are not personally concerned) organised? If yes, before which authority? Is it linked to the system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions (see below question n° 39)?

Asylum seekers can lodge a complaint both in relation to the treatment of their claim and the support they receive.

The Home Office Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND) has a complaints procedure for responding to complaints about its services and staff. The IND Complaints Unit deals with all complaints about IND service delivery. It can only accept complaints in English and in writing and reserves the right not to respond to complaints that it consider abusive. IND also permits complaints lodged on behalf of another person. The IND Complaints Unit can accept complaints on another person's behalf such as spouse or partner, or the legal representative. People can also involve their Member of Parliament (MP) in raising their complaint with IND.

When the investigation of a formal complaint is complete and the unit has sent their response to the complainant with its findings, the complaint file is audited by the Complaints Audit Committee (CAC). The CAC is an independent panel set up to oversee the investigation of formal complaints. The CAC are not part of the investigation process for complaints and do not enter into correspondence about individual cases. They report directly to the Home Secretary and make recommendations from their findings to improve the complaints service.

An 'informal complaints' procedure has only recently been implemented by the Home Office and only at the insistence of the Complaints Audit Commission (CAC). The CAC (reports readily available) has also recently raised concerns about the manner in which complaints are investigated. The CAC were critical of the Home Office's complaints procedures generally.

In addition to the informal and formal complaints procedures all asylum seekers have access to the UK's Parliamentary Ombudsman scheme if they are dissatisfied with the outcome of any complaint. Access to the Ombudsman is available only after other internal processes have been exhausted although delay in dealing with a complaint can amount to maladministration. Complaints to the Ombudsman must be made via a constituency MP. The scheme is not well publicised to asylum seekers and is under use.

6. RIGHTS AND OBLIGATIONS OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.23. Family unity of asylum seekers: define how a family is defined in relation with article 2, (d) which is a mandatory provision and explain how housing is provided to a family (see articles 8 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space to member States and 14, §2, (a) which is a mandatory provision).

There a two definitions of 'family' in UK Regulations : The Reception Conditions Regulations (RCR), which provide a duty to have regard to family unity when provisions of support are made, use the directive's definition of family members ; The Asylum Support Regulations (ASR) use a much wider concept of family by defining a 'dependant' in relation to an asylum seeker or supported person as being:

(a) the spouse;
(b) the child of the applicant or the applicant's spouse and dependent on the applicant;
(c) the minor who is a member of the close family of the applicant or the applicant's spouse;
(d) the minor who has been living as part of the household since birth or for six of the 12 months before the application for support;
(e) the disabled family member who is in need of care and attention and fulfils the conditions in (c) or (d);
(f) the unmarried partner who has been living with the applicant for two of the three years before the application for support was made.

While the Asylum Seekers (Reception Conditions) Regulations (reg.3) places a new obligation on the Secretary of State to accommodate members of a family together as defined in the directive, the government maintains a discretion to accommodate with the family other dependants, as defined in the ASR. The implications of not exercising this discretion properly are significant in the context of the UK's dispersal policy. If a family member is not treated as a dependant he or she could be dispersed to a different part of the UK from the other relatives claiming support.

Q.24. Q.24. A. How is housing of asylum seekers organised: describe the system in general and indicate in particular what is the most frequently system used (see article 14, §1 which is a mandatory provision but leaves space for Member States; distinguish between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels places or other premises).

Where asylum seekers apply for accommodation and support (rather than support only), the Home Office makes arrangements for accommodation in hotels, flats or houses through contracts with public, private and/or voluntary sector suppliers.

The Asylum Seekers (Reception Conditions) Regulations now establish that the Secretary of State has a duty (rather than a discretion) to provide support to eligible asylum seekers (reg.5). Under section 95 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999, support is provided to asylum seekers who do not have adequate accommodation or any means of obtaining it (whether or not his other essential living needs are met). Such support may take the form of adequate accommodation. Under the provisions of section 97 the caseworkers must have regard to the desirability, in general, of providing accommodation in areas in which there is a ready supply of accommodation. Casework instructions (Policy Bulletin 31) specify that careful consideration must be given to the individual circumstances of each case and when deciding whether it is reasonable to allocate dispersed accommodation particular attention should be given to the following:
Medical treatment
Family ties Education
Ethnic group Religion Employment
Legal advice
Special needs

The UK does not have accommodation centres as such (a statutory provision allowing for such centres to be established has never been implemented – see Q.20D above). The UK has a small network of "Induction Centres" (or Initial Accommodation) which are facilities that provide short term accommodation to people who have made an asylum application and who are waiting for an application for support to be considered. These are not accommodation centres as defined by the directive, being based upon hotel or other accommodation.

Q.24. B. What is the total number of available places for asylum seekers? Distinguish in your answer between accommodation centres, private houses and apartments, hotels or other premises.

There is no fixed number of dispersal beds available for asylum seekers. There are approximately 1700 bedspaces available in the initial accommodation estate (where people may stay on arrival), however this too can be increased upon negotiation with the accommodation provider. There are regions in which asylum seekers may be dispersed. There are agreed percentages of the overall total of asylum seekers which each region agrees to accommodate. It is then up to the contracted accommodation provider to provide the accommodation in that region.

Q.24. C. Is this number of places for asylum seekers sufficient in general or frequently insufficient?

The number of dispersal places for asylum seekers is generally sufficient. According to responses from the non-governmental sector initial accommodation less so.

Q.24. D. Are there special measures foreseen in urgent cases of a high number of news arrivals of asylum seekers (outside the case of application of the directive on temporary protection)?

None.

Q.25. Accommodation centres (important note: all the following questions are about open and not closed centres where asylum seekers are detained which are covered by another question)

Q.25. A Are there different categories of accommodation centres, for instance depending of the stage of the procedure (admissibility and eligibility)?

As mentioned above, there are no accommodation centres in the UK as defined in the directive. The questions will therefore be answered, in so far as relevant, with regard to Induction Centres (or Initial Accommodation) where asylum seekers are housed for the time necessary to assess their application for support and organise their dispersal.

Q.25. B. Is there a legal time limit for accommodation in a centre after which the asylum seekers have access to private houses or apartments or is this limit linked to a stage of the asylum procedure?

There is no time limit for accommodation in an Induction Centre. The Home Office aims to move all asylum seekers who are in Induction Centres to more permanent accommodation as soon as possible. The Government states that this is usually carried out in two weeks.

Unless accommodation in an Induction Centre proves unsuitable for medical reasons then asylum seekers will be accommodated until their application for asylum support is considered. A positive asylum support decision will result in transferral to dispersal accommodation while a negative asylum support decision will mean no support is forthcoming. However, an asylum seeker whose application for asylum support is refused will have the opportunity to appeal against that decision to the ASA.

Q.25. C. Is there a general regulation about the internal functioning of those centres and the rights and duties of the asylum seekers? If yes, is this general regulation applicable to public and private centres? If not, are the centres supposed to adopt an internal regulation and does a central authority have or not a kind of control about its content?

There is a general regulation about the internal functioning and the rights and duties of asylum seekers in Induction Centres. Each asylum seeker resident in the Centre receives a briefing on rights and responsibilities as part of their introduction to the UK (this briefing is centrally managed and controlled). Each Induction Centre also briefs its residents on the house rules of the centre.

Q.25. D. Do the regulations foresee the possibility of sanctions against asylum seekers in case of breach of the rules? (see article 16, §3) If yes, which sanctions for which rules? Which is the competent authority to decide? How is it ensured that decisions are taken individually, objectively and in particular impartially (for instance through an independent arbitrator) as requested by §4 of article 21 which is mandatory provision*?* Which are the possibilities of appealing against those decisions if the system is different from the general one under question n°22? Are there already administrative appeal decisions or judgements which have been taken and if yes, which are the main important ones?

Each organisation managing an Induction Centre has a system of house rules which are explained to residents on arrival. If these rules are breached it is dealt with on a case by case basis. For example, one organisation requires residents to sign a register each day. If one day is missed then a warning is given, on the second occasion a final warning is given and if a third signing is missed then the organisation will seek to move the asylum seeker to alternative accommodation which will involve a further briefing session on rights and responsibilities. Serious breaches of rules may be dealt with by the police where necessary, for instance fighting or criminal damage although organisations try to minimise potential incidents where at all possible.

The UK has, moreover, amended the Regulations so that support may be suspended or discontinued if the case owner has reasonable grounds for believing that the asylum seeker or a dependant has committed a serious breach of the rules of collective accommodation or committed an act of seriously violent behaviour anywhere (new reg 20(1)(a)), and has defined 'collective accommodation' to include shared accommodation or accommodation with shared facilities (such as kitchen or common area). According to the directive, support can only be withdrawn for breach of an occupancy agreement if the perpetrator is in an accommodation centre – not dispersal accommodation. In dispersal accommodation, support can be withdrawn if the applicant has demonstrated seriously violent behaviour (new reg 20(1)(b)) .
Decision to suspend or discontinue support under these regulations can be appealed to the ASA.

Q.25. E. Are asylum seekers involved in the management of these centres? If yes, how (advisory board, appointment or election of representatives)? (see article 14, §6 which is an option provision)

Asylum seekers are not involved in the management of Induction Centres. One NGO which manages two induction centres is planning to introduce client forums where residents can make suggestions on ways to improve the Centre. This work is outside the current contract specification for Induction Centres and is not something that the State has requested.

Q.25. F. Do specific rules exist on work of asylum seekers inside the accommodation centres different from the general ones about employment (see below)? If yes, which ones? Can working inside accommodation centres be considered as a (mandatory) contribution of the asylum seekers to the management of the centres, is it or not paid and considered as implying access to the labour market and subject to the same rules?

Asylum seekers resident in Induction Centres are not required to work or to make a contribution to the management of the centre.

Q.26. Q.26. A. How can asylum seekers communicate with legal advisers, representatives of UNHCR and NGOs? (see article 14, §2, (b) which is a mandatory provision).

The referral system for communication with NGOs, legal advisers and UNHCR is set up in practice. There is no norm of transposition or pre-existing provision in either regulations or rules.

Q.26. B. What are the rules about access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs regarding access to accommodation centres and other housing facilities (see article 14, §7 which is a mandatory provision)

Some of the six Induction Centres have a referral system to legal advisers such as the Refugee Legal Centre or the Immigration Advisory Service. Where such a referral service exists asylum seekers may of course exercise their right to seek advice from any other adviser of their choice. Generally, asylum seekers go to the legal advisers rather than advisers entering the centre.

As part of the NAM process, those who request support and accommodation are usually allocated a solicitor on a rota basis. In many ways this is a very positive step forward as individuals found it difficult on occasion to find a solicitor previously. In some cases however the applicant is not given an appointment before the substantive asylum interview. Those applying only for cash-support must still find their own solicitor.

Asylum seekers who are resident in dispersal accommodation may contact a One Stop Service for information on how to find legal advice. All access to publicly funded legal advice on asylum and immigration is strictly controlled.

Q.26. C. Can the access of legal advisers, UNHCR and NGOs be limited for security reasons or any other reason (see article 14, §7, last sentence)?

No.

Q.27. Q.27. A. Is a medical screening organised by the receiving State, is it mandatory or voluntary? Does it include HIV tests? (see article 9 which is an optional provision)

A voluntary medical screening is available to all asylum seekers. It does not include HIV test. Under the NAM, the Home Office intend a general 15 minute medical check up to be available to every individual requesting accommodation and support. This happens in some regions but not in others. Screening is voluntary.

Q.27. B. Do the legal provisions on reception conditions ensure that asylum seekers receive at least emergency care and essential treatment of illness as requested by article 15 §1 which is a mandatory provision? Do they have a further access to health care?

National Health Services Regulations, as amended, entitle asylum seekers to access to the National Health Service, nationally on the same basis as the indigenous population.

Section 1 of the National Health Service Act 1977 requires the Government to provide comprehensive health service so as to secure an improvement in the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of illness. In 1989, the Government introduced regulations requiring NHS Trusts to charge "overseas visitors" for secondary care (hospital treatment), subject to various exemptions (National Health Service (Charges to Overseas Visitors) Regulations 1989). Asylum seekers and failed asylum seekers who had been in the UK for 12 months were unaffected at that time. In 2004, the regulations were amended again so that more overseas visitors, including failed asylum seekers, became liable for hospital charges (2004 Charging Regulations and Department of Health guidance Implementing the Overseas Hospital Charging Regulations). The current system is that a person who has formally applied for asylum is entitled to NHS routine hospital treatment without charge for as long as his application (including any appeal) is under consideration.

Q.27. C. What is the practice regarding access of asylum seekers to health care and how is it organised? In particular, what is the situation in accommodation centres (are doctors coming to the centres or do asylum seekers go to doctors outside)?

The policy is set out at http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/6353/12358/pb85.pdf.

Asylum seekers who are resident in Induction Centres have access to medical services. In some centres medical services are provided at the centre but the majority of asylum seekers go outside the centre and use the same facilities as the indigenous population.

Health care via an initial assessment is not universal throughout the Initial Accommodation Network and therefore, while there are examples of good practice (e.g. Initial Accommodation at Dover and Ashford), no health care assessments and therefore, potentially no prompt access to primary health care is available in other parts of the Network.

Furthermore, when asylum seekers are 'onward dispersed' from Initial Accommodation to their 'final dispersal destination' access to primary health care is not universal. For example, although the Home Office has arranged with the accommodation providers with which it contracts for them to facilitate the registration of asylum seekers with primary health care providers, this does not generally take place until after the individual has left her/his Initial Accommodation which may be 15 days or more after an asylum application has been made. Also, doctors in primary health care remain confused as to the definition of an asylum seekers and are therefore tempted to evade their responsibility to register asylum seekers with their practices on the basis that they may be or may become failed asylum seekers who have diminished entitlement to primary and secondary health care.

Procedures exist, in principle, to ensure that all asylum seekers are registered with GPs for primary health care in accordance with their entitlements under the UK's regulations and the directive. However, there is anecdotal evidence that those procedures may not be fully effective.

The recent parliamentary by the Joint Committee on Human Rights inquiry into the treatment of asylum seekers reported about considerable difficulties experienced by asylum seekers in registering with a GP.

Q.28. Q.28. A. What is the length of the period determined by the concerned Member State during which asylum seekers have no access to the labour market? (see article 11 which is a mandatory provision)

Applicants for asylum are allowed to apply for permission to take up employment if a decision at first instance has not been made within one year of the date on which it was recorded (the policy is set out in Asylum Policy Bulletin http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/6353/12358/pb72.pdf).

Q.28. B. After that period, are asylum seekers or not obliged to obtain a work permit? In case is there a limit for the administration to deliver the permits and how quick are they delivered? What is their length?

No, they don't require a work permit but must obtain written permission from the Home Office before taking employment (if successful, this permission will be endorsed on the holder's ARC). Employment is granted only until such time as his or her asylum application has been finally determined The Immigration Rules do not transpose Article 11(3), which prohibits withdrawal of permission to work while an appeal or further appeal is pending (where such an appeal has suspensive effect). There is no fixed period within which written permission must be given.

The Home Office does not automatically inform asylum seekers that they have the right to apply for permission to work after one year without an initial decision, or when the year has passed. If an asylum seeker applies to the Home Office after a year, waiting times vary greatly with some receiving no reply. Asylum seekers informed that they have been granted permission to work then have to arrange an interview for a new Asylum Registration Card (ARC) which will state *employment permitted.

Q.28. C. After that period, what are the conditions for access of the asylum seekers to the labour market? (in particular, are there rules concerning the maximum allowed of working hours or days per week, month or year, limits in terms of type of work or of professions authorised?

The Immigration Rules explicitly exclude the entitlement to become self-employed or engage in a business or professional activity.

Q.28. D. What are the rules in terms of priorities between asylum seekers on the one hand and nationals, EU or EEE citizens and legally third-country nationals on the other?

The normal labour market tests apply.

Q.28. E. Do asylum seekers have access to vocational training, does this or not depend of their right to access to the labour market, and in case at which conditions? (see article 12 which is optional regarding §1 and mandatory regarding § 2)

The UK has not transposed this provision. However any applicants who have access to the labour market in line with Article 11 would be able to participate in vocational training funded by their employer.

Q.28. F. Are the rules regarding access to the labour market adopted to transpose the directive more or less generous than the ones applicable previously?

Prior to transposition, there was no entitlement for asylum seekers to access the labour market. Ministers retained discretion to allow asylum seekers to work in exceptional circumstances. An exceptional circumstance might have arisen where an application for asylum remained outstanding for longer than 12 months without a decision being made on it, providing the reason for the delay was not attributable to the applicant.

Q.29. Are reception conditions subject to the fact that asylum seekers do not have sufficient resources? Are asylum seekers requested to contribute to reception conditions when they have personal resources (for instance if they work) or to refund the authorities if it appears that they have resources? (see article 13 §§ 3 and 4 which are optional provisions)

Any government-funded reception support is only available to those who can prove they are destitute. Most asylum seekers are not allowed to work. However, if they have any savings/ other forms of income, they are required to report it to Home Office, and it is usually deducted from their payments, or payments stop altogether. If the Home Office become aware of any income the applicant has not reported, they can request a refund, or prosecute the individual.

There is updated guidance for caseowners on determining destitution: see Asylum Support Policy Bulletin 4, Determining whether persons who apply for asylum support are destitute. It includes a destitution threshold table to determine whether a person is destitute.

7. SPECIAL NEEDS OF PARTICULAR CATEGORIES OF ASYLUM SEEKERS

Q.30.

Q.30.A. Which of the different categories of persons with special needs considered in the directive are taken into account in the national legislation (see article 17, §1 which is a mandatory provision): disabled people, elderly people, pregnant women, single parents with minor children, persons who have been tortured, raped or victims of serious physical or psychological violence? Include in your answer all other categories envisaged in national law.

Article 17(1) has been transposed in identical terms in the Reception Conditions Regulations (RCR) which define a vulnerable person by reference to the list contained in Article 17.

Q.30. B. How is their specific situation taken into account (see articles 13, §2, second indent, 16 §4 second sentence and 17 which are mandatory provisions)?

Provided people with special needs are identified, upon arrival or in their dispersal area, they will be referred to a GP for assessment and/or their Local Authority for additional support. However, the Asylum Seekers (Reception Conditions) Regulations 2005 establish that there is no duty on the Home Office to carry out or arrange for the carrying out of an individual evaluation of a vulnerable person's situation to determine whether he or she has special needs. It is up to applicants to disclose details of special needs they may have in writing to the Home Office or to health care professionals. Hence, there is no assurance under domestic regulations that such persons will be identified and their specific situation taken into account when provisions for their support and health care are made.

Q.30. C. How and when are the special needs of the concerned persons supposed to be legally identified (see article 17 § 2 which is a mandatory provision and clarify how it has been interpreted by transposition)?

Under the National Health Service and Community Care Act 1990 a person can request an assessment from the Local Authority if they think they have a need for community services. If they are found to have such a need then they will be able to access specialist care facilities. An asylum seeker with a disability can also request an assessment under Section 3 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986.

As stated above, while there is a duty on local authorities to assess special needs for asylum seekers who need community care services, there is no corresponding duty to assess special needs where this is only relevant for support provided by the Home Office. Policy instructions simply state that the Home Office must take into account any evidence of an individual evaluation supplied that confirms that a vulnerable person has special needs (Asylum Policy Bulletin 83). Examples of individual evaluations which the Home Office will accept include an assessment from the Medical Foundation for the Care of Victims of Torture confirming that an asylum-seeker has been accepted for further treatment, or a community care assessment undertaken by a social services department.

Q.30. D. Is the necessary medical and other assistance provided to persons with special needs as requested by article 15, §2 which is a mandatory provision and in particular to victims of torture and violence as requested by article 20 which is a mandatory provision?

This is contingent upon their needs being recognised and appropriately assessed and supported. There is limited capacity for such screening, assessment and support outside of London where few asylum seekers are now dispersed.

There has been no transposition of these provisions. The UK believes they are complied with under existing regulations giving asylum applicants access to free NHS medical services. Decisions as to what health services should be provided for an individual, including mental health provision and treatment for victims of torture and violence, is a matter of clinical judgment made within the policies of the particular NHS Trust or Primary Care Trust. Clinical information is assessed by NASS and the medical advisor, who have to ensure that asylum seekers are linked to the health care services they need in the areas to which they are to be dispersed. A review undertaken in 2004 of how NASS meets the health care needs of people seeking asylum has found that NASS is not consistent in considering and acting upon evidence of the applicant's health care needs and that staff making these assessments are sometimes not equipped for the task.

Q.31. About minors:

Q.31. A. Till which age are asylum seekers considered to be minor?

A child, whether unaccompanied or accompanied, is defined in the Immigration Rules (paragraph 349 of HC395 as amended) as a person under eighteen years of age or who, in the absence of documentary evidence establishing age, appears to be under that age.

Q.31. B. How is access of minor asylum seekers to the education system ensured? Is it at school or in case inside accommodation centres and can it be considered as similar to the conditions for nationals as requested by article 10, §1?

Asylum seekers' children of school age are entitled to primary and secondary education under section 16 Education Act 1996, which places a duty on local education authorities to secure places in primary and secondary schools for children residing temporarily or permanently in their area. The duty covers education appropriate to the age, aptitude, abilities and special educational needs they may have up to the age of 16. In addition, there is a power in the regulations to make provision for services to asylum seekers in the form of education, including English language classes and 'developmental activities'. This power has never been used.

Q.31. C. Is access to education ensured not later than 3 months as requested by article 10, §2 (or after maximum one year if specific education for asylum seekers is provided) and till an expulsion decision is really enforced?

There is an expectation that unaccompanied asylum seeking children in public care are found a full-time education placement in a school within a time limit of 20 days. (Guidance on the Education of Children and Young People in Public Care, May 2000). However in practice this often takes much longer due to limited resources.
There is only guidance as to this matter and only for children in public care.

Q.31. D. Is specific education (like language classes) available for asylum seekers, in particular to facilitate their effective access to the education system of the reception Member State (see article 10, §2 which is an optional provision)?

Theoretically yes but in reality this depends entirely on where the minor is supported and resources of their local authority to meet this need.

Q.31. E. Are minors in general accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible of them? (see article 14, § 3)

Minors are always accommodated with their parents or with the person responsible for them unless there are child protection concerns (see sections 17 and 20 of the Children Act 1989).

Q.31. F. Do minors with special needs enumerated by article 18, §2 which is a mandatory provision, have access to appropriate mental health care and qualified counselling?

Sections 1 and 3 of the National Health Service Act 1977 provide for this care. Children have access to mental health care and qualified counselling via Local Authority children's social services and Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services (CAMHS) teams, but in practice this depends on how a child gains access to the statutory assessment process (there are major differences for children in families and for separated/unaccompanied children), the quality of the assessment of the child's needs and the availability of resources within the area of accommodation. For all (non-age disputed) unaccompanied children the Children Act 1989 section 17 needs assessment process should, if carried out properly, identify mental health needs and provide the vehicle to refer to all necessary services. Age disputed children deemed to be over 18 can however be excluded from children's services by taking the age assessment as a preliminary issue prior to a full needs assessment and as a result may be treated as adults, referred to the adult support scheme and never receive a proper needs assessment or referral for treatment/counselling.

Asylum Policy Bulletin 82 (http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/6353/12358/pb82.pdf) contains detailed guidance on dispersing asylum seekers with special needs. However, it focuses on recognition of "clear and urgent" cases and only uses "obvious" examples of often extreme physical/mental characteristics in guidance to its staff. This militates against caseworkers correctly identifying the mental and other health needs of children and their families and leaves too much scope for these needs to be overlooked or delayed in being treated.

Q.31. G. How and when is organised the representation of unaccompanied minors (guardianship, special organisation) and regularly assessed? (see article 19, §1 which is a mandatory provision)

The UK considers that its obligations under Article 19 are met by reference to the Children Act 1989 duties upon social services departments to look after children in need in their area, under the safeguarding provisions of the Children Act 2004 and the Home Office's contractual arrangement with the Refugee Council establishing a Children Panel of Advisers. All unaccompanied minors arriving in the UK should be referred to the Refugee Children's Panel (RCP), based at the Refugee Council, where a named adviser is meant to be allocated to them to provide guidance and support and ensure that they are aware of their rights and the services to which they are entitled. However, there is no guarantee that a child, who has been referred, will be taken on by the RCP. Furthermore, the Children's Panel Adviser has no legal responsibility for the child and no rights with regard to their care.

The panel has an advisory function, adivors on the panel provide short-term support to children who have claimed or are about to claim asylum in their own right. This includes: assisting child in accessing quality legal representation; guiding the child through the complexities of the asylum procedure; if necessary, accompanying the child to asylum interviews, tribunal and appeal hearings, magistrates and crown court appointments; building up a support network for the child involving a range of statutory and non-statutory service providers; supporting the child during appointments with GPs, hospitals, social service or other service providers. The Panel does not provide a guardianship type role for unaccompanied children in the UK.

The Panel is only able to meet some of the needs, for some of its clients, some of the time. For example, in 2004 the Panel received 3,868 referrals and of those, 990 were allocated a named adviser. Although the Panel saw many more children through drop-in and surgery work, it does not have the capacity to provide named advisers to all children throughout the process. Moreover the role of the Panel is not a statutory one and, although the Home Office funds it, there is no obligation on Social Services Departments to work together with the Panel's advisers or vice versa. It does not act as an 'appropriate adult' or litigation friend in legal proceedings. At the same time the Children's Panel has limited capacity to follow up the referrals that it makes and no powers to ensure that the wide range of bodies in contact with a child act in his or her best interests.

The Policy Instructions to case-workers only say that:
Panel of Advisers
The Refugee Council will represent a child in his/her dealings with the Home Office and other agencies for the duration of the asylum claim. IND should notify the Panel of Advisers as soon as a claim for asylum is made by, or on behalf, of a child. The Panel of Advisers should also be notified of all age dispute cases. The legal role is limited to advising the child on her or his options and acting on the instructions, to the extent that the young person is capable of giving them.

The Home Office has commissioned a review of the RCP, to focus on, amongst other issues, whether the RCP arrangements meet the Home Office's obligations to unaccompanied minors under the directive. The findings are not yet publicly available

Q.31. H. How is placement of unaccompanied minors organised (with adult relatives, a foster family, in special accommodation centres or other suitable accommodation)? (see article 19, §2 which is mandatory provision)

Unaccompanied minors are the responsibility of the local authority social service department and are provided with housing and support under the Children Act 1989, until he or she reaches the age of 18. They should, on arrival, be referred immediately to the social services department for an assessment and for the immediate provision of assistance. Assistance ranges from accommodation and food to foster carers, language help and trauma counselling.

Q.31. I. How is the tracing of the family members of the unaccompanied minors organised? Are measures taken to protect confidentiality of information when necessary? (see article 19, §3 which is a mandatory provision)

This provision has been transposed in the regulations (reg 6 RCR) and underpins current domestic arrangements that link unaccompanied minors with the family tracing service provided by the Red Cross. The Home Office considers it to be in the best interests of the child to remove an unaccompanied minor where it is possible to put in place acceptable reception and care arrangements in their country of origin. This is for example due to take place shortly to return minors to Vietnam, in disregard of their vulnerability as children who have very likely been trafficked to the UK. It is arguable whether this policy protects the unaccompanied minor's best interests.

8. EXCEPTIONAL MODALITIES OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.32. Apart from detention covered by the next question, are there exceptional modalities for reception conditions in the following cases and if yes, which ones and for how long are they applicable, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)?

Q.32. A. Persons with specific or special needs, regarding in particular the period of assessment of those needs?

Q.32. B. Non availability of reception conditions in certain areas

Q.32. C. Temporarily exhaustion of normal housing capacities

Q.32. D. The asylum seeker is confined to a border post

Q.32. E. All other cases not mentioned in the directive (for instance urgent situation in case of a sudden high number of applicants outside a case of application of the directive on temporary protection).

Confinement to a border post should be considered to be detention – Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Prisons (HMIP) has produced several recent reports on conditions in "short term holding facilities" – e.g Heathrow October 2005 and Calais/Les Coquelles January 2005 juxtaposed border controls – August 2005 and found that facilities, procedures and staffing were insufficient.

Q.33. Detention of asylum seekers (we do not cover the situation of rejected asylum seekers detained for the purpose of their return) (see articles 6 §2, 7 §3, 13, §2 2nd indent and 14 §8 which implies that the directive is in principle applicable in case of detention):

Q.33. A. In which cases or circumstances and for which reasons[1] (identity verification in particular if the persons have no or false documents, protection of public order or national security, refugee status determination, way of entry into the territory, etc) can an asylum seeker be detained during the asylum procedure till his request has been finally rejected. Quote precisely in English in your answer the legal basis for detention of asylum seekers in national law.

All asylum seekers are liable to detention under the Immigration Act 1971 and could be detained. In practice, however, only a proportion of them are (what this proportion is we do not know but the target set by the government in their Five Year Strategy is 30%).

[1] Please specify if article 18 §1 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Member States shall not hold a person in detention for the sole reason that he/she is an applicant for asylum" is or not respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed).

The power to detain an illegal entrant, seaman deserter, person liable to administrative removal (or someone suspected to be such a person) is in paragraph 16(2) of Schedule 2 to the 1971 Act as amended by section 140(1) of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 and section 73(5) of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002. Paragraph 16(2) states: "If there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that a person is someone in respect of whom directions may be given under any of paragraphs 8 to 10 or 12 to 14, that person may be detained under the authority of an immigration officer pending a) a decision whether or not to give such directions; b) his removal in pursuance of such directions".
Section 62 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 introduced a free-standing power for the Secretary of State (i.e. an official acting on his behalf) to authorise detention in cases where he has the power to set removal directions.

The government's criteria with regard to detention are outlined in chapter 38 of the Operational Enforcement Manual (OEM). The OEM states that 'detention must be used sparingly and for the shortest period necessary'. Section 38.3 cites factors that should be taken in consideration when deciding whether or not to detain an individual. The following factors must be taken into account when considering the need for initial or continued detention.
♦ what is the likelihood of the person being removed and, if so, after what timescale?
♦ is there any evidence of previous absconding?
♦ is there any evidence of a previous failure to comply with conditions of temporary release or bail?
♦ has the subject taken part in a determined attempt to breach the immigration laws? (e.g. entry in breach of a deportation order, attempted or actual clandestine entry)
♦ is there a previous history of complying with the requirements of immigration control? (e.g. by applying for a visa, further leave, etc)
♦ what are the person's ties with the United Kingdom? Are there close relatives (including dependants) here? Does anyone rely on the person for support? Does the person have a settled address/employment?
♦ what are the individual's expectations about the outcome of the case? Are there factors such as an outstanding appeal, an application for judicial review or representations which afford incentive to keep in touch?
The three factors mentioned against detention (put in a form of questing the case worker needs to consider) are: 'is the subject under 18?' 'Has the subject a history of torture?' 'Has the subject history of physical or mental ill health?' Section 38.10 identifies persons considered unsuitable for detention. Section 38.4 identifies persons considered unsuitable for detention under the Fast Track procedure.
Since March 2000 asylum applicants have been detained at Oakington where it appears that their claims are capable of being decided quickly. Detention for this purpose is commonly referred to as being under the 'Oakington criteria' although it is now set out under the title "Detained Fast Track Processes Suitability List".
In addition, since 10 April 2003 there has been a Detained Fast Track process at Harmondsworth which includes an expedited in-country appeals procedure for male claimants. In May 2005, the Detained Fast Track was expanded to include the processing of female claimants at Yarl's Wood.
The policy in relation to detention for Fast Track processes was updated in February 2006.
When officers come across a person who makes an application for asylum, they should consider whether he or she meets the Detained Fast Track Suitability List criteria. All potentially suitable applicants must be referred to the National Intake Unit (NIU) Oakington co-ordinator who will confirm if they are accepted into either the process at Oakington, Harmondsworth or Yarl's Wood. The use of detention to Fast Track suitable claims under these processes is necessary to achieve the objective of delivering decisions quickly.

Any claim may be referred to the Detained Fast Track, whatever the nationality or country of origin of the applicant, where it appears after screening to be one that may be decided quickly. To assist staff in making referrals, the 'Detained Fast Track Processes Suitability List', includes a list of countries which may well give rise to claims which may be decided quickly, within the indicative timescales for the Detained Fast Track. Generally speaking, any asylum claim from a national of the countries listed on the Detained Fast Track Suitability List should be referred to the NIU unless the claimant falls within one of the excluded categories.

The OEM was revised in 2005 though the nature of the changes introduced is not clear.
http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/documents/oemsectiond/chapter38?view=Binary

The OEM seems to allow wide scope for discretion in individual decisions to detain. Practitioners and stakeholders raise concerns stating that the Home Office decision to detain is often arbitrary and that caseworkers do not give appropriate consideration to the specific circumstances of the individual's case. See, for instance, Amnesty's report from June 2005 commenting on the detention policy of the UK government:
http://web.amnesty.org/library/Index/ENGEUR450192005?open&of=ENG-2EU

Amnesty's report, United Kingdom, Detenion of People who have sought asylum, highlights how individuals are often taken into detention on the basis that a bed is available within the detention estate, rather than on considerations of necessity, proportionality and appropriateness. They found that authorities are using the risk of absconding as justification for detention without a detailed and meaningful assessment of the risk, if any, posed by each individual. In short, Amnesty International considers that detention is not being carried out according to international standards, is arbitrary and serves little if any purpose at all in the majority of cases where measures short of detention would suffice.

Q.33. B. Has your member State adopted measures to transpose §3 of article 7 which is an optional provision? If yes, how has this provision been legally understood (is it a case of detention or an obligation to stay in and not leave a certain place?) and for which reasons can an asylum seeker be "confined" in such a place?

This measure was not transposed. Indeed, the UK government considers that the directive is not relevant to detention and therefore does not have any impact on its detention practice.

Q.33. C. Are there legally alternatives to detention, like obligation to report to the authorities, obligation to stay in a place, provision of a guarantor or of a financial guarantee?

Contingent on an immigration service assessment, a person may be required to report regularly. This may involve an electronic tag or voice recognition technology or physically attending a reporting centre.

Q.33. D. Which is the competent authority to order the detention of an asylum seeker? Explain if different authorities are involved to first take and later confirm the decision.

Chief immigration officers acting under the authority of the Secretary of State.

Q.33. E. For how long and till which stage of the asylum procedure can an asylum seeker be detained?

People can be detained at any stage of their application for asylum. There is no maximum period of detention.

Q.33. F. In which places (can we call them "closed centres"?) are asylum seekers detained (places in a special closed centres reserved only to asylum seekers, together with returnees like illegal aliens or even in a normal prison, in case within separated areas or with the other detainees)? Indicate if a difference has to be made following the location of the "closed centres" at the border or on the territory? Which is the authority managing those places and is it the same as the one in charge of reception conditions?

There are 10 immigration removal centres (IRCs) in the UK. Most are run by private companies contracted to the Immigration and Nationality Directorate (IND), however, 3 centres are run by the Prison Service.
There are 'short term holding facilities' at Manchester, Dover, Harwich and Colnbrook.

Q.33. G. Does UNHCR and NGOs have access to the places of detention and under which conditions?

UNHCR and NGOs may access immigration detention. Particularly important is the work carried out by AVID (Association of Visitors to Immigration Detainees), the national umbrella charity for groups visiting immigration detainees, in supporting individuals and groups of visitors to detainees, and collating and communicating information in order to help define and implement best practice.

Within the framework of exercising its supervisory function under Article 8 of its Statute and Article 35 of the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees, UNHCR engages in a monitoring role of detention policy and practice in the United Kingdom. As such, UNHCR London is granted unhindered access (including to detainee persons of concern) to places of detention throughout the UK upon notification to the relevant authorities. While unannounced 'spot visits' are not carried out, a high level of cooperation on the part of the authorities is exercised. UNHCR conducts regular visits to detention centres and may bring concerns to the attention of the authorities including interventions on individual cases where deemed necessary and appropriate in extending protection to persons of concern to UNHCR.

Q.33. H. What appeal(s) can asylum seekers introduce against the fact he is detained? Is article 18 of the directive on asylum procedures of 1 December 2005 following which "Where an applicant for asylum is held in detention, Member States shall ensure that there is a possibility of speedy judicial review" respected (even if it has not yet to be transposed)?

Ways of challenging detention are :
- Bring a bail application to an Immigration Court (the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal or AIT) where an independent Immigration Judge makes a decision on whether released should be allowed. The case is presented by a legal representative and opposed by a Home Office Presenting Officer, who is a representative of the Home Office and Immigration Service. If bail is refused, the detainee has the right to apply for bail again. If bail is granted there will normally be certain conditions attached.

- The legal representative can also make an application for 'CIO (Chief Immigration Officer) Bail'. Normally this involves two people offering a large amount of money (often more than £2,000 each although it can be much less) to obtain release.
- The detainee's legal representative can make an application for 'Temporary Admission.' If successful the Immigration Service will usually release with very few conditions - normally a condition to live at a particular address and report to the Immigration Service on a particular date.
- In addition, legal representative can go to the High Court in a 'Judicial review' or 'Habeas Corpus' procedures.

Bail applications are lodged with the AIT by completing a given form B1. The AIT must list the hearing within three days of receiving the application.

Habeas corpus is only appropriate where it is asserted that there is no power to detain. There are procedural advantages to habeas corpus: habeas corpus writs are issued as of right (there is no discretion to withhold relief as there is in judicial review); habeas corpus applications are given high priority; there is no permission procedure and there is no time limit on applications However, the Courts have cautioned against using habeas corpus.

Judicial review affords greater flexibility. Judicial review should be used in detention cases where:
a) the real challenge is to the administrative decision underlying the decision to detain (such as the issuing of a deportation order);
b) the challenge is to a refusal by an immigration judge to grant bail;
c) the challenge is brought on the basis that the detention was not in accordance with Home Office policy; or
d) the challenge does not concern the power to detain but about whether the exercise of the power was reasonable or proportionate
Where the claimant is still detained at the time that the judicial review is lodged, bail can be sought from the High Court.
The claimant (or his representative) must serve notice on IND within 7 days that they have filed a claim for JR and must disclose the grounds on which his claim relies. Once notice is served and the grounds disclosed, a summary defence must be submitted within 21 days. If permission is granted, IND then has 35 days to submit a full defence. Expedited consideration of the claim for judicial review can be sought by lodging an application for urgent consideration in addition to the standard judicial review claim form.

Q.33. I. Is the directive on reception conditions considered to be in principle applicable to the places where asylum seekers are detained? In particular which information do they receive about their rights, which access do they have to legal advice and health care?

The UK government considers that the directive is not relevant to detention.

Q.33. J. Apart from freedom of movement, what are the main differences between normal reception conditions and exceptional modalities for reception conditions in case of detention, knowing that they should be "as short as possible" (see article 14, §8)? If it is about closed centres, are the regulations of those places in line with the requirements of the directive (is article 13, §2, second indent of the directive following which "Member States shall ensure that standards of living is met (…) in relation to the situation of persons who are in detention" respected?).

The Detention Centre Rules 2001 provide for the regulation and management of these centres, underpinned by a comprehensive set of Operating Standards.

Independent inspections by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons and Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Education have highlighted concerns about the welfare and development of children within a locked-in custodial setting, where there is a high level of insecurity, and without the freedom to engage with wider society and establish other social and cultural relationships. "It remains our view that, however conscientiously and humanely children in detention are dealt with, it is not possible to meet the full range of their developmental needs. We therefore remain of the view that the detention of children should be an exceptional course, and only for a very short period – no more than a matter of days. We also believe that the guiding principles that underlie international and domestic law on children should be brought into decisions to detain, and to continue to detain, children and families" (HMIP Report on Dungavel Published August 2003, p45)

As at 30 December 2006, 45 people detained solely under Immigration Act powers were recorded as being less than 18 years old. 25 of these had been in detention for less than one month, 15 for between 1 and 2 months, and the remainder between two and three months.

Q.33. K. Are measures taken to avoid detention of asylum seekers with special needs (if yes, which ones?) or are special measures taken because of their needs?

With regard to detention of individuals with special needs, section 38.1 of the OEM states that people suffering from serious medical conditions or the mentally ill should not be detained. With regard to possible victims of torture, the policy stases that there should be 'independent evidence that they have been tortured' to prevent detention. The question remains whether the screening procedure is efficient enough to identify such cases as the onus appears to be on the person with special needs to draw these to the attention of the Home Office.

Q.33. L. Can minor asylum seekers be detained together with relatives? Can unaccompanied minor asylum seekers be detained? If yes, are there special measures which take into account that children are concerned?

Children can be lawfully detained as part of a family group. Continued detention is subject to Ministerial review but only after 28 days. The Ministerial review is considered an inadequate safeguard against inappropriate detention and is currently subject to pending legal challenge. The process provides for a statutory child in need assessment only at day 21 of the detention.

Immigration instructions clearly provide that unaccompanied children should not be detained except in exceptional circumstances and for the shortest possible period and that measures are followed to minimise the risk of children being detained as adults by mistake. The current guidance on detained fast-track processes gives clear unequivocal advice to immigration personnel on how to reduce the risk of detention on account of age dispute. Despite these instructions, children continue to be detained as adults whilst awaiting age assessment to be carried out rather than being released pending the outcome of an age assessment.

There is growing concern among practitioners and stakeholders that use of detention for children contravenes a range of international human rights standards relating to the treatment of children, and impacts negatively on already vulnerable children. Save The Children has recently produced a report, No Place for a Child, which sets out to analyse current UK detention policy and practice, its impact on children, and to offer viable alternatives to the immigration detention of children. The report is available at:
http://www.savethechildren.org.uk/scuk_cache/scuk/cache/cmsattach/2414_no_place_for_a_child.pdf

The UK's reservation to the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) operates specifically to exclude the consideration of 'best interests' when immigration decisions are being made about foreign children, including asylum seekers, as is apparent in the current policy to detain families with children or unaccompanied minors whose age is disputed by the Home Office or social services departments.

It is clear that this approach is at odds with the CRC's best interest of the child principle in article 18(1) of the directive and that significant changes will have to be made for the UK effectively to implement that the best interests of asylum seeking children should be a primary consideration for Member States in operating reception facilities and making decisions about reception arrangements.

The exclusion of immigration agencies, including the Immigration Removal Centres, from section 11 of the Children Act 2004 is illustrative of this wider failure to treat children seeking asylum as children first and foremost. Section 11 imposes a duty on public bodies to have regard to the need to safeguard and promote the welfare of children in discharging their normal functions and to ensure that their services are provided with regard to that need.
The recent report by the Joint Committee on Human Rights is very critical of the UK Government's continued reservation to the CRC and insists that the reservation should be withdrawn.

Q.33. M. In particular is article 10 regarding access to education of minors respected in those places?

Education in detention centres is ensured as a matter of practice but independent inspections have found that educational provisions are deficient in detention centres. While schoolrooms are provided within the detention facilities, at present, it does not appear that funds have been made available, and processes put in place, to make education in any real sense meaningful. A recent inspection of one immigration detention centre with dedicated family units has highlighted cases of children whose education had been severely damaged by their detention (HM Chief Inspector of Prisons, Report on an announced inspection of Yarl's Wood Immigration Removal Centre, 28 February-4 March 2005).

Q.33. N. How many asylum seekers are for the moment detained in your Member State? Which proportion does this represent in comparison of the total number of asylum seekers at the same moment?

At 30 December 2006, 1285 asylum seekers were detained in Immigration Removal Centres, and 30 at Immigration Short Term Holding Facilities. This excludes persons detained in police cells and those detained under both criminal and immigration powers. The number of people detained in prison facilities and in police cells is not given in the latest statistics.

It is not possible to know exactly what proportion of all asylum seekers this represents as the UK government does not collate the relevant information.
The most recent bulletin (Home Office, Asylum Statistics: 4th Quarter 2006) includes statistics on the number of asylum seekers leaving detention during the quarter. A total of 3,740 people left detention in the 3rd quarter of 2006, 1970 (53%) were removed from the UK, 1545 (41%) were granted temporary admission/release and 215 (6%) were bailed. These statistics however exclude persons detained at Oakington Reception Centre, Harwich and prison establishments.

9. ORGANISATION OF THE SYSTEM OF RECEPTION CONDITIONS

Q.34. Explain if the system of providing reception conditions is centralised or decentralised (which levels of government do provide practically reception conditions?) (do not confuse this question with question number 3 about the competence to make rules about reception conditions).

The system is centralised but in the process of being regionalised. NASS is the overall government body with responsibility for supporting asylum seekers, although service delivery is mostly run by voluntary sector agencies with the assistance of NASS. Many of the detention centres are managed by private companies, contracted by the Home Office.

With the New Asylum Model (NAM) complete, responsibility for all new asylum claims falls to one of six regions across the UK: Scotland and Northern Ireland; North West; North East, Yorkshire and Humberside; Midlands and East of England; London and South East; and Wales and South West. Six new Regional Directors will be in post in the next few months. They are responsible for managing all aspects of Agency business in their regions, except ports and detention centres.

Q.35. In case, are accommodation centres public or/and private (managed by NGOs? If yes, are the NGOs financially supported by the State?)

Initial accommodation is managed by NGOs and public organisations. Dispersal accommodation is managed by public and private providers. They are all funded by the State to deliver this support.

Both initial and dispersal accommodation is managed by public or private providers contracted by the Home Office.

Q.36. In case, how many accommodation centres are there in your Member State (distinguish in your answer between public and private centres)?

There are six Induction Centres in the UK. Induction Centres are where asylum seekers may be accommodated while there asylum claim is registered and while their application for support is decided. Four of the centres are run by NGOs and the other two are run by Local Authorities.

NGOs no longer deliver Initial Accommodation. Instead, the Home Office runs mainly large IA centres in each NAM region (London, Liverpool, Leeds, Cardiff, Glasgow, Solihull).

Q.37. Is there in the legislation a plan or are there rules in order to spread the asylum seekers all over the territory of your Member State to avoid their concentration in some areas like big cities or to share the costs of their reception between central, regional and local authorities?

Under the 1999 Act, the UK government has the power to "disperse" asylum seekers around the country. There are currently 34,220 dispersed asylum seekers living in accommodation provided by the National Asylum Support Service (end of March 2006). The idea behind the law is to move asylum seekers away from London and the South East of England where they have historically resided.

Dispersal is divided into a dozen cluster areas in the UK. Within each cluster area NASS proposes to form smaller clusters of asylum seekers based on language. For an area to be considered suitable to house asylum seekers it must have available affordable accommodation, a multi-cultural environment and a support infrastructure.
There are additional guidelines on cluster areas. They should:

- Have unemployment levels at, or below, the national average.
- Be within 1 - 1.5 miles of further or adult education college.
- Be within 3 miles of a district general hospital.
- Be adequate number of health centres in the locality.
- Be sufficient primary schools with gaps on rolls.

Q.38. Does a central body representing all the actors (like NGOs) involved in reception conditions exist? Does it play a consultative role for the State authorities, a coordination role for the actors or any other role?

There is no central body representing all the actors involved in reception conditions. There is a National Asylum Support Forum which is co-ordinated by the Home Office and holds quarterly meetings. Membership is individual not organisational. It is an advisory body for the Immigration Minister and has no statutory powers and there is no obligation to follow its advice.

The six agencies involved in providing initial accommodation are co-ordinated by a central body – the Inter-Agency Co-ordination Team. They meet regularly together to share good practice, and with the Home Office, to raise difficulties or discuss issues relating to reception conditions.

The Home Office intends to develop regional stakeholder groups to reflect devolution of responsibility to the regional NAM centres.

Q.39. Q.39. A. Which is the body in charge of guidance, monitoring and controlling the system of reception conditions as requested by article 23 which is mandatory provision? Include in your answer which is the competent ministry (Interior, Social affairs, etc) for reception conditions?

The Immigration and Nationality Directorate of the Home Office is overall in charge for the system of reception.
There is no system of orientation, guidance and control in place, nor has one been set up further to the directive. The only control, monitoring and guidance that takes place is, with regard to housing, in respect of arrangements for accommodation under target contracts. Target contracts set out performance standards, which those contracted by the the government to provide accommodation to asylum seekers must respect. While this guidance is very detailed (see http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/6353/12358/schedule3tothetargetcontract.pdf) it concerns only housing and there is no public account of how/how often the contract standards are monitored by government officials and requirements respected by housing providers.

The system of guidance, control and monitoring of the level of reception conditions cannot be deemed to be sufficient as it does not concern all asylum seekers (but only those housed under the target contracts above), relates only to standards of accommodation, and is not made public.

Q.39. B. Has your Member State (like the Czech Republic did recently) approved quality standards (not necessary legally binding) for housing services (for instance about the number of persons per bedroom on the basis of its size, number of accessible toilets, bathrooms, showers and washing machines per number of persons, existence of common rooms with radio, television, newspapers, books, computers, accessibility of telephone, existence of recreative rooms for children,…) to be respected in particular in accommodation centres?

The National Asylum Support Service has introduced (in April 2006) quality standards for housing services. These are known as "Target Contracts" and were introduced following a large tendering exercise. The Statements of Requirements for Accommodation providers can be found at http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/6353/12358/schedule3tothetargetcontract.pdf.
While the contract specifications are more prescriptive than the previous specifications, NGOs working with asylum seekers accommodated by the Home Office find that they are still difficult to enforce and that standards still vary widely.

Q.39. C. How is this system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions organised?

There is no organised system of guidance, control and monitoring of reception conditions. The Home Office undertakes inspections of dispersal accommodation and plans are being developed to undertake inspections of Initial Accommodation. Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Prisons (HMIP), and independent body, inspects removal centres on a regular basis.

Q.39. D. Does the body in charge of guidance, control and monitoring produce reports about the level of reception conditions? If yes, how frequently and are they public?

No.

Q.40. Q.40. A. What is the total number of asylum seekers covered by reception conditions for the last year for which figures are available (see article 22 obliging Member States to calculate those statistics about which we also asked the Commission to require them from Member States for mid June)?

At the end of 2006, 49295 asylum seekers (including dependants) were being supported. 36420 asylum seekers (including dependants) were being supported in dispersed accommodation, 11355 were receiving subsistence only support and 1525 were supported in initial accommodation.

Q.40. B. What is the total budget of reception conditions in euro for the last year for which figures are available?

Costs estimates for asylum support for 2005-06 are around £170 million (€250 million). (See NASS evidence to House of Lords 32nd Report of Session 2005-06, p.52)

Q.40. C. What is the average cost of reception conditions in euro per asylum seeker for the last year for which figures are available?

The cost of accommodation and cash support per person in dispersed accommodation is £610 (€ 900) per month. The cost of cash support for those requiring "subsistence only" support is £170 (€250) per month (see NASS evidence to House of Lords 32nd Report of Session 2005-06, p.52).

Q.40. D Are the costs of reception conditions of asylum seekers supported by the central/federal or federated government or are they shared with regional and/or local authorities?

All costs are supported by central government.

Q.40. E. Is article 24 § 2 of the directive following which "Member States shall allocate the necessary resources in connection with the nationals provisions enacted to implement this directive" respected?

The problem is not so much the lack of central government resources but the lack of local resources and the political control of those resources which creates a failure to provide consistent services and support. Stakeholders and legal practitioners point out the following areas where more resources are needed to meet obligations under the directive:
- There remains no structured legal guardianship or representation arrangements as required by Article 18. It is legally possible for an asylum seeking child to be appointed a children's guardian within the asylum process through the Children and Family Courts Advisory and Support Service (CAFCASS) but practically remote. The government presumption is that local social services departments act as an adequate "corporate parent" for the purpose of Article 18 of the directive – in practice there is a real lack of genuine independence of social services due to financial pressures and relationships and information sharing practices between Home Office and social services for purposes not necessarily connected with the best interests and welfare of the child. This compromises the independence needed to ensure that legal guardianship or representation properly maintains a child's best interests and for the child to be confident that their views, wishes and feelings at all stages of the asylum and support process are taken into account and reflected in the decision making process.

- The lack of a proper system of legal assistance before Asylum Appeals Adjudicators (ASA) represents a serious obstacle to asylum-seekers wishing to be represented before the ASA and exercise their appeal rights under Article 21 of the directive.

Q.41. Q.41. A. What is the total number of persons working for reception conditions?

According to the section about NASS in the IND website, NASS employs approximately 900 staff. About half of them are based in the 11 regional offices and the other half in Croydon.
http://www.ind.homeoffice.gov.uk/applyin/nass/claimingsupport/aboutus
However, this is a fraction of the numbers involved as there are others working in providing health care, education, detention services etc.

Under the New Asylum Model (NAM), around 300 case owners have been recruited to staff 25 teams in the six regions across the UK. In addition, some 1,000 staff comprises the Legacy Team.

Q.41. B. How is the training of persons working in accommodation centres organised? Does it take into account specific needs of unaccompanied minors when relevant as well as the gender dimension? (see article 14 §5, 19 § 4 and also 24 §1 which are mandatory provisions)?

The UK contracts out the provision of accommodation. For staff working in Initial Accommodation, a job description details their individual roles and responsibilities.

Case owners who have been recruited to work in the New Asylum Model (NAM) have to complete a 55-day training programme.

Q.41. C. Are there rules about the deontology of persons working in accommodation centres, in particular on confidentiality?

There generic contracts in place between the Government and its contractors include clauses relating to confidentiality.

10. IMPACT OF THE DIRECTIVE

Legal impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.42. Specify if there are or not big problems with the translation of the directive in the official language of your Member State and give in case a list of the worst examples of provisions which have been badly translated? (please note that this question has in particular been added to the questionnaire concerning the new Member States)

None in the UK.

Q.43. Where there precise legal rules on reception conditions for asylum seekers before the adoption of the norms of transposition of the directive (if yes, specify what the nature of those rules was (legislation, regulation, administrative instructions,…)?

The UK government considered that many elements of the Directive did not require implementation as equivalent provision already existed in UK law. The main Acts covering reception conditions, which predate transposition of the Directive, are:

Immigration and Asylum Act 1999
Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002
Asylum and Immigration (Treatment of Claimants, etc.) Act 2004

Q.44. Did the legal rules applicable to reception conditions become more clear, precise, coherent or detailed with the adoption of the transposition norms (for instance do you now have after the transposition one basic text dealing with reception conditions instead of numerous different texts in the past?

Rules relating to asylum support did, if anything, become more confused and scattered. Implementation of the directive has further complicated the legislative asylum reception framework by adding/amending regulations and immigration rules against which various statutory provisions (i.e. primary legislation) have to be read to understand what exactly rights and obligations in the system of asylum support are.

Q.45. Did the transposition of the directive imply important changes in national law or were the changes of minor importance? In case, list the most important changes that have been introduced.

The changes were of minor importance. The government stated that that they did not need to make any changes with regard to several sections of the directive. Voluntary sector organisations agreed with this in some cases – for example the UK government have always, on the whole, attempted to house families together where possible. In other cases, voluntary sector organisations felt that the government would need to make modifications in order to meet the directive's requirements – for example reviewing the level of support that is currently 30% below income support.

Of the changes the government did intent to make, very few have been carried out. For example, they noted that they would need to provide information on voluntary organisations and legal representatives to new asylum applicants. This has not become standard policy. The Home Office policy is instead to fund the voluntary sector to provide further information.

Because very little appears to have changed in terms of government policy or procedure, implementation of the directive has not affected voluntary sector service to asylum seekers very much. However, the directive has been a useful tool on a broader policy level, when debating the need for increased protection or more detailed standards for newly arrived asylum seekers.

Political impact of the transposition of the directive:

Q.46. Explain briefly if there has been an important debate about the transposition of the directive (in particular in the Parliament, but possibly also in the government, between political parties, including in medias, etc; underline in case the main points which have been discussed or have created difficulties)

None to my knowledge.

Q.47. Did the transposition of the directive contribute to make the internal rules stricter or more generous? In particular, did your Member State use the occasion of the transposition to abolish more favourable provisions of national law? Does your Member State still have rules more favourable than the provisions of the directive (if yes, try to give the more important examples).

Transposition transformed some discretionary powers with regard to reception in a legal duty without however making a difference in practice. Some rules, such as those on reduction and withdrawal of support, have become stricter further to transposition.

11. ANY OTHER INTERESTING ELEMENT

Q.48. What are in your view the weaknesses and strengths of the system of reception conditions in your Member State?

Weaknesses:

- Increasing reliance on detention (see IND's Five Year Strategy: Home Office, Controlling our Borders: Making Migration Work for Britain, 2005)
- Use of support as a tool of coercion throughout the system
- UK reservation to the CRC which has a negative impact on the way in which asylum seeking children and young people in public care are dealt with, despite the same care duties as for indigenous children being enshrined in primary legislation
- Lack of definition of 'vulnerable' individuals who should receive additional and tailored support and lack of agreement between NASS and Social Services around who should support those with less clear care needs

Strengths:

- Eligibility for support for all destitute asylum seekers after lodging their claim
- Families are on the whole housed together and NASS has in practice kept its broader definition of a family
- Independent advice on support is available from contracted voluntary agencies
- Independent adjudication body for negative support decisions.
- Minors entitled to the same support and education as other children in UK
- Free access to primary and secondary health care until appeal stage.

Q.49. Mention any good practice in your Member State which could be promoted in other Member States

- Consultation with relevant stakeholders on implementing legislation
- Commitment to working with stakeholders

- Funding for voluntary sector agencies which play a role in advice and delivering support services while preserving their right to advocate against government policy
- Accommodation within indigenous UK communities rather than in institutionalised accommodation centres

Q.50. Please add here any other interesting element about reception conditions in your Member State which you did not had the occasion to mention in your previous answer.

Stakeholders and practitioners question the desirability of maintaining a separate housing and social security system for asylum seekers. It would arguably be more equitable and cost-effective to revert to delivering welfare support to destitute asylum seekers through the mainstream welfare system. At a minimum, they consider that the provision of support to asylum seekers by a dedicated agency (such as, at present, NASS) should be made independent of the Home Office, so as to insulate it from Home Office policies that are driven by a culture of deterrence and restriction, rather than designed to meet asylum seekers' needs.

Another major, negative, impact on asylum seekers' reception conditions are the frequent and rapid changed to the support system which leave asylum seekers between regimes. An example is the situation of asylum seekers supported by local authorities under Interim Provisions, which in the course of the last year have been transferred to NASS support on a phased basis. Disbenefited cases have also been transferred to direct NASS support. A 'disbenefited' asylum seeker is one whose claim for asylum was refused on or after 25 September 2000 and who was previously in receipt of income support. NASS has agreed special arrangements to fund local authorities to continue providing necessary accommodation for them. Between 5,000 and 6,000 interim cases and up to 350 disbenefited cases were caught under this change of policy. It is thought that the majority of people involved will have had to move in line with NASS's dispersal policies, although they will normally have been accommodated since at least 2000.

The UK parliamentary Joint Committee on Human Rights has recently conducted an inquiry into the treatment of asylum seekers (see Q7 bibliography) and concluded that: "In the Committee's view, the current system is overly complex, poorly administered, offers inadequate information and advice to ensure that people receive the support to which they are entitled and in some cases denies any support at all to those who are destitute."